

WE TRIED

SS-CLASS HUNTER WHO DIES TO LIVE

FANTASY NOVEL BY SINNOA

SSS-Class Hunter who Dies to Live

SSS-Class Suicide Hunter

(SSS급 자살헌터)

by

Shin Noah

(신노아)

Synopsis

SSS-Class Suicide Hunter (SSS급 자살헌터) is a novel written by Shin Noah (신노아), it covers action, adventure, and comedy genres. It was first published in Munpia on November 20, 2018 and was also serviced on Naver Series, Kakao Page, and RidiBooks. It was completed with a total of 400 chapters on May 7, 2020.

On April 27, 2021, J Plus Media had announced that SSS-Class Suicide Hunter will change to SSS-Class Hunter Who Lives To Die starting from that day on.

I want an S-Rank skill too! I want it so badly, I could die for it!

[You have awakened an S-Rank skill.]

[But it only works when you die.]

Eh !? What is the point of getting one if I Die !?

Disclaimer

- This ebook is a fan compilation and is not officially authorized, endorsed, or affiliated with the original creators, publishers, or copyright holders.
- The content within this ebook is intended for informational and entertainment purposes only, and no profit is being made from its distribution.
- The compiler of this ebook makes no claims to the ownership of the original content and does not guarantee the accuracy, completeness, or reliability of the information presented. All copyrights and trademarks belong to their respective owners.
- By accessing this ebook, you acknowledge that the compiler holds no responsibility or obligation for any errors, omissions, or consequences arising from its use. This ebook is provided "as is," without any warranties or guarantees of any kind, express or implied.
- If you are the rightful owner of any content included in this ebook and wish for it to be removed or amended, please contact the compiler directly, and appropriate actions will be taken promptly.

- This book is a work of fiction. Names, characters, places, and incidents either are products of the author's imagination or are used fictitiously. Any resemblance to actual persons, living or dead, events, or locales is entirely coincidental.

Credits

This ebook was translated by @Ryuu (WE TRIED). To support their work and learn more about their projects, please visit their website at WE TRIED TRANSLATIONS.

Your support helps them continue bringing more great works to a wider audience. Thank you!

ePub conversion by @Kanteika

Table of Contents

1. Cover
2. SSS-Class Suicide Hunter
3. Synopsis
4. Disclaimer
5. Table of Contents
6. Volume 1 – Chapters 1-24
 1. Chapter 1: Unprecedented Envy
 2. Chapter 2: However, You will Die! \(1\)
 3. Chapter 3: However, You will Die! \(2\)
 4. Chapter 4: Hero Hunting \(1\)

5. Chapter 5: Hero Hunting \(2\)
6. Chapter 6: Hero Hunting \(3\)
7. Chapter 7: The Identity of the Soliloquy \(1\)
8. Chapter 8: The Identity of the Soliloquy \(2\)
9. Chapter 9: The Identity of the Soliloquy \(3\)
10. Chapter 10: Starting Alone \(1\)
11. Chapter 11: Starting Alone \(2\)
12. Chapter 12: Starting Alone \(3\)
13. Chapter 13: Do you have skills, too? \(1\)
14. Chapter 14: Do you have skills, too? \(2\)
15. Chapter 15: Do you have skills, too? \(3\)

16. Chapter 16: Trauma Penalty (1)
17. Chapter 17: Trauma Penalty (2)
18. Chapter 18: Trauma Penalty (3)
19. Chapter 19: A Moment of Leisure with a Cup of Coffee (1)
20. Chapter 20: A Moment of Leisure with a Cup of Coffee (2)
21. Chapter 21: A Moment of Leisure with a Cup of Coffee (3)
22. Chapter 22: Welcome, Warriors! (1)
23. Chapter 23: Welcome, Warriors! (2)
24. Chapter 24: Welcome, Warriors! (3)

7. Volume 2 – Chapters 25-49

1. Chapter 25: The Chosen Ones \(1\)
2. Chapter 26: The Chosen Ones \(2\)
3. Chapter 27: The Chosen Ones \(3\)
4. Chapter 28: Autumn Rain of Blood \(1\)
5. Chapter 29: Autumn Rain of Blood \(2\)
6. Chapter 30: Autumn Rain of Blood \(3\)
7. Chapter 31: Bloodied Sword \(1\)
8. Chapter 32: Bloodied Sword \(2\)
9. Chapter 33: Bloodied Sword \(3\)
10. Chapter 34: My Death \(1\)
11. Chapter 35: My Death \(2\)
12. Chapter 36: My Death \(3\)

13. Chapter 37: The Alias of the Hero \(1\)
14. Chapter 38: The Alias of the Hero \(2\)
15. Chapter 39: The Alias of the Hero \(3\)
16. Chapter 40: His Time \(1\)
17. Chapter 41: His Time \(2\)
18. Chapter 42: His Time \(3\)
19. Chapter 43: His Time \(4\)
20. Chapter 44: The Demon King's Name \(1\)
21. Chapter 45: The Demon King's Name \(2\)
22. Chapter 46: The Demon King's Name \(3\)
23. Chapter 47: How to Confront the World \(1\)

24. Chapter 48: How to Confront the World (2)

25. Chapter 49: How to Confront the World (3)

8. Volume 3 – Chapters 50-74

1. Chapter 50: Paradise After the Ending (1)

2. Chapter 51: Paradise After the Ending (2)

3. Chapter 52: Paradise After the Ending (3)

4. Chapter 53: The Ultimate Fanboy (1)

5. Chapter 54: The Ultimate Fanboy (2)

6. Chapter 55: The Ultimate Fanboy (3)

7. Chapter 56: Bibliomania (1)

8. Chapter 57: Bibliomania \(2\)
9. Chapter 58: Bibliomania \(3\)
10. Chapter 59: The World Without a Constellation \(1\)
11. Chapter 60: The World Without a Constellation \(2\)
12. Chapter 61: The World Without a Constellation \(3\)
13. Chapter 62: The Great War of Good and Evil \(1\)
14. Chapter 63: The Great War of Good and Evil \(2\)
15. Chapter 64: The Great War of Good and Evil \(3\)
16. Chapter 65: The Great War of Good and Evil \(4\)
17. Chapter 66: The Heavenly Demon \(1\)

18. Chapter 67: The Heavenly Demon \(2\)
19. Chapter 68: The Heavenly Demon \(3\)
20. Chapter 69: A World Where Constellations Died \(1\)
21. Chapter 70: A World Where Constellations Died \(2\)
22. Chapter 71: A World Where Constellations Died \(1\)
23. Chapter 72: The Reaper of Death. \(1\)
24. Chapter 73: The Reaper of Death. \(2\)
25. Chapter 74: The Reaper of Death. \(3\)

9. Volume 4 – Chapters 75-99

1. Chapter 75: Song of Light and Shadow \(1\)

2. Chapter 76: Song of Light and Shadow \(2\)
3. Chapter 77: Song of Light and Shadow \(3\)
4. Chapter 78: The Scent of Snow \(1\)
5. Chapter 79: The Scent of Snow \(2\)
6. Chapter 80: The Scent of Snow \(3\)
7. Chapter 81: The Humblest in the World \(1\)
8. Chapter 82: The Humblest in the World \(2\)
9. Chapter 83: Sword Dance \(1\)
10. Chapter 84: Sword Dance \(2\)
11. Chapter 85: The Reader's Heart \(1\)
12. Chapter 86: The Reader's Heart \(2\)

13. Chapter 87: The Reader's Heart \(3\)
14. Chapter 88: Dead Ends are the Norm \(1\)
15. Chapter 89: Dead Ends are the Norm \(2\)
16. Chapter 90: Dead Ends are the Norm \(3\)
17. Chapter 91: Falling \(1\)
18. Chapter 92: Falling \(2\)
19. Chapter 93: Falling \(3\)
20. Chapter 94: The Villainess \(1\)
21. Chapter 95: The Villainess \(2\)
22. Chapter 96: The Villainess \(3\)
23. Chapter 97: Your Heart \(1\)

24. Chapter 98: Your Heart \(2\)

25. Chapter 99: Your Heart \(3\)

10. Volume 5 – Chapters 100-125

1. Chapter 100: Drama \(1\)

2. Chapter 101: Drama \(2\)

3. Chapter 102: Drama \(3\)

4. Chapter 103: His Way of Loving \(1\)

5. Chapter 104: His Way of Loving \(2\)

6. Chapter 105: His Way of Loving \(3\)

7. Chapter 106: 1 DAYS \(1\)

8. Chapter 107: 1 DAYS \(2\)

9. Chapter 108: 1 DAYS \(3\)

10. Chapter 109: Her Way of Loving \(1\)
11. Chapter 110: Her Way of Loving \(2\)
12. Chapter 111: Her Way of Loving \(3\)
13. Chapter 112: Holy War \(1\)
14. Chapter 113: Holy War \(2\)
15. Chapter 114: Holy War \(3\)
16. Chapter 115: The Black Wedding \(1\)
17. Chapter 116: The Black Wedding \(2\)
18. Chapter 117: The Black Wedding \(3\)
19. Chapter 118: The Black Wedding \(4\)
20. Chapter 119: Hero \(1\)
21. Chapter 120: Hero \(2\)

- 22. Chapter 121: Hero \(3\)
- 23. Chapter 122: Utopia \(1\)
- 24. Chapter 123: Utopia \(2\)
- 25. Chapter 124: Utopia \(3\)
- 26. Chapter 125: Demonic Realm \(1\)

11. Volume 6 – Chapters 126-149

- 1. Chapter 126: Demonic Realm \(2\)
- 2. Chapter 127: Demonic Realm \(3\)
- 3. Chapter 128: Compatriots \(1\)
- 4. Chapter 129: Compatriots \(2\)
- 5. Chapter 130: Compatriots \(3\)

6. Chapter 131: The Wasteland \(1\)
7. Chapter 132: The Wasteland \(2\)
8. Chapter 133: ■■ \(1\)
9. Chapter 134: ■■ \(2\)
10. Chapter 135: ■■ \(3\)
11. Chapter 136: Surviving \(1\)
12. Chapter 137: Surviving \(2\)
13. Chapter 138: Surviving \(3\)
14. Chapter 139: Latecomer \(1\)
15. Chapter 140: Latecomer \(2\)
16. Chapter 141: Latecomer \(3\)
17. Chapter 142: The Rooftop \(1\)

18. Chapter 143: The Rooftop \(2\)

19. Chapter 144: The Rooftop \(3\)

20. Chapter 145: Friend \(1\)

21. Chapter 146: Friend \(2\)

22. Chapter 147: Friend \(3\)

23. Chapter 148: Prologue \(1\)

24. Chapter 149: Prologue \(2\)

12. Volume 7 – Chapters 150-174

1. Chapter 150: Prologue \(3\)

2. Chapter 151: Prologue \(4\)

3. Chapter 152: Surging to the Top \(1\)

4. Chapter 153: Surging to the Top \(2\)

5. Chapter 154: Surging to the Top \(3\)
6. Chapter 155: Becoming God \(1\)
7. Chapter 156: Becoming God \(2\)
8. Chapter 157: Becoming God \(3\)
9. Chapter 158: Great Snail Empire \(1\)
10. Chapter 159: Great Snail Empire \(2\)
11. Chapter 160: Great Snail Empire \(3\)
12. Chapter 161: Cave Fire \(1\)
13. Chapter 162: Cave Fire \(2\)
14. Chapter 163: Cave Fire \(3\)
15. Chapter 164: Rain, Mud and Fire \(1\)
16. Chapter 165: Rain, Mud and Fire \(2\)

17. Chapter 166: Rain, Mud and Fire \(3\)
18. Chapter 167: Rain, Mud and Fire \(4\)
19. Chapter 168: Between a Master and a Friend \(1\)
20. Chapter 169: Between a Master and a Friend \(2\)
21. Chapter 170: Between a Master and a Friend \(3\)
22. Chapter 171: Battle for the Holy Land \(1\)
23. Chapter 172: Battle for the Holy Land \(2\)
24. Chapter 173: Battle for the Holy Land \(3\)
25. Chapter 174: My Son is Too Strong \(1\)

1. Chapter 175: My Son is Too Strong \(2\)
2. Chapter 176: My Son is Too Strong \(3\)
3. Chapter 177: The Giant's Legacy \(1\)
4. Chapter 178: The Giant's Legacy \(2\)
5. Chapter 179: The Giant's Legacy \(3\)
6. Chapter 180: Our Children Changed \(1\)
7. Chapter 181: Our Children Changed \(2\)
8. Chapter 182: Our Children Changed \(3\)
9. Chapter 183: Rookie Actor \(1\)
10. Chapter 184: Rookie Actor \(2\)
11. Chapter 185: Rookie Actor \(3\)
12. Chapter 186: Flame \(1\)

13. Chapter 187: Flame \(2\)
14. Chapter 188: Flame \(3\)
15. Chapter 189: Prima Donna \(1\)
16. Chapter 190: Prima Donna \(2\)
17. Chapter 191: Prima Donna \(3\)
18. Chapter 192: Prima Donna \(4\)
19. Chapter 193: Unintentional Act \(1\)
20. Chapter 194: Unintentional Act \(2\)
21. Chapter 195: Unintentional Act \(3\)
22. Chapter 196: Erosion \(1\)
23. Chapter 197: Erosion \(2\)
24. Chapter 198: Erosion \(3\)

14. Volume 9 – Chapters 199-222

1. Chapter 199: The Mirror Reflected in a Mirror (1)
2. Chapter 200: The Mirror Reflected in a Mirror (2)
3. Chapter 201: The Mirror Reflected in a Mirror (3)
4. Chapter 202: Black Dragon (1)
5. Chapter 203: Black Dragon (2)
6. Chapter 204: Black Dragon (3)
7. Chapter 205: Easter Egg (1)
8. Chapter 206: Easter Egg (2)
9. Chapter 207: Easter Egg (3)

10. Chapter 208: Cheat \(1\)
11. Chapter 209: Cheat \(2\)
12. Chapter 210: Cheat \(3\)
13. Chapter 211: That God's Possession \(1\)
14. Chapter 212: That God's Possession \(2\)
15. Chapter 213: That God's Possession \(3\)
16. Chapter 214: Someone's Master \(1\)
17. Chapter 215: Someone's Master \(2\)
18. Chapter 216: Someone's Master \(3\)
19. Chapter 217: Golden Rule \(1\)
20. Chapter 218: Golden Rule \(2\)
21. Chapter 219: Golden Rule \(3\)

22. Chapter 220: Golden Rule \(4\)

23. Chapter 221: The God in the Square \(1\)

24. Chapter 222: The God in the Square \(2\)

15. Volume 10 – Chapters 223-248

1. Chapter 223: If \(1\)

2. Chapter 224: If \(2\)

3. Chapter 225: If \(3\)

4. Chapter 226: If \(4\)

5. Chapter 227: If \(5\)

6. Chapter 228: Hatred \(1\)

7. Chapter 229: Hatred \(2\)

8. Chapter 230: Hatred \(3\)

9. Chapter 231: My Legion \(1\)
10. Chapter 232: My Legion \(2\)
11. Chapter 233: My Legion \(3\)
12. Chapter 234: King of Death \(1\)
13. Chapter 235: King of Death \(2\)
14. Chapter 236: King of Death \(3\)
15. Chapter 237: King of Death's Family \(1\)
16. Chapter 238: King of Death's Family \(2\)
17. Chapter 239: King of Death's Family \(3\)
18. Chapter 240: We were sitting on an Old City's Wooden Floor \(1\)
19. Chapter 241: We were sitting on an Old City's Wooden Floor \(2\)

20. Chapter 242: We were sitting on an Old City's Wooden Floor \(3\)
21. Chapter 243: Era of the Heroes \(1\)
22. Chapter 244: Era of the Heroes \(2\)
23. Chapter 245: Era of the Heroes \(3\)
24. Chapter 246: The Celestial Martial Guild Master \(1\)
25. Chapter 247: The Celestial Martial Guild Master \(2\)
26. Chapter 248: The Celestial Martial Guild Master \(3\)

16. Volume 11 – Chapters 249-273

1. Chapter 249: Reversal \(1\)
2. Chapter 250: Reversal \(2\)

3. Chapter 251: Reversal (3)
4. Chapter 252: Independence (1)
5. Chapter 253: Independence (2)
6. Chapter 254: Independence (3)
7. Chapter 255: One Who Did Not Clear the Stage (1)
8. Chapter 256: One Who Did Not Clear the Stage (2)
9. Chapter 257: One Who Did Not Clear the Stage (3)
10. Chapter 258: Sealing the Dragon (1)
11. Chapter 259: Sealing the Dragon (2)
12. Chapter 260: Sealing the Dragon (3)
13. Chapter 261: Idol Destruction (1)

14. Chapter 262: Idol Destruction \(2\)
15. Chapter 263: Idol Destruction \(3\)
16. Chapter 264: Family Interview \(1\)
17. Chapter 265: Family Interview \(2\)
18. Chapter 266: Family Interview \(3\)
19. Chapter 267: Family Interview \(4\)
20. Chapter 268: White Lion Faith \(1\)
21. Chapter 269: White Lion Faith \(2\)
22. Chapter 270: White Lion Faith \(3\)
23. Chapter 271: Epilogue \(1\)
24. Chapter 272: Epilogue \(2\)
25. Chapter 273: Epilogue \(3\)

17. Volume 12 – Chapters 274-298

1. Chapter 274: Swordsman (1)
2. Chapter 275: Swordsman (2)
3. Chapter 276: Orthodox Faction (1)
4. Chapter 277: Orthodox Faction (2)
5. Chapter 278: Orthodox Faction (3)
6. Chapter 279: Orthodox Faction (4)
7. Chapter 280: Final Vote (1)
8. Chapter 281: Final Vote (2)
9. Chapter 282: Final Vote (3)
10. Chapter 283: Final Vote (4)
11. Chapter 284: Final Vote (5)

12. Chapter 285: Final Vote \(6\)
13. Chapter 286: Final Vote \(7\) \(Part 1 Complete\)
14. Chapter 287: 50th Floor \(1\)
15. Chapter 288: 50th Floor \(2\)
16. Chapter 289: 50th Floor \(3\)
17. Chapter 290: Forsaken Believers \(1\)
18. Chapter 291: Forsaken Believers \(2\)
19. Chapter 292: Forsaken Believers \(3\)
20. Chapter 293: Sword Emperor's Return \(1\)
21. Chapter 294: Sword Emperor's Return \(2\)
22. Chapter 295: Sword Emperor's Return

(3)

23. Chapter 296: The Legend Himself (1)

24. Chapter 297: The Legend Himself (2)

25. Chapter 298: The Legend Himself (3)

18. Volume 13 – Chapters 299-324

1. Chapter 299: Grand Campaign (1)

2. Chapter 300: Grand Campaign (2)

3. Chapter 301: Grand Campaign (3)

4. Chapter 302: The Grey Spider (1)

5. Chapter 303: The Grey Spider (2)

6. Chapter 304: The Grey Spider (3)

7. Chapter 305: Reunion (1)

8. Chapter 306: Reunion \(2\)
9. Chapter 307: Reunion \(3\)
10. Chapter 308: Floor by Floor \(1\)
11. Chapter 309: Floor by Floor \(2\)
12. Chapter 310: Floor by Floor \(3\)
13. Chapter 311: The Next World \(1\)
14. Chapter 312: The Next World \(2\)
15. Chapter 313: The Next World \(3\)
16. Chapter 314: I'm a Fan \(1\)
17. Chapter 315: I'm a Fan \(2\)
18. Chapter 316: I'm a Fan \(3\)
19. Chapter 317: Me and You, on the

Frontlines of Time (1)

20. Chapter 318: Me and You, on the Frontlines of Time (2)
21. Chapter 319: On the Path of Endless Strife (1)
22. Chapter 320: On the Path of Endless Strife (2)
23. Chapter 321: On the Path of Endless Strife (3)
24. Chapter 322: ■■■■■■ ■■■■■■ for You, and Only You (1)
25. Chapter 323: ■■■■■■ ■■■■■■ for You, and Only You (2)
26. Chapter 324: A Music Box Just for You, and Only You (3)

1. Chapter 325: The God and the King \(1\)
2. Chapter 326: The God and the King \(2\)
3. Chapter 327: The God and the King \(3\)
4. Chapter 328: Starlight \(1\)
5. Chapter 329: Starlight \(2\)
6. Chapter 330: Starlight \(3\)
7. Chapter 331: Glass Palace \(1\)
8. Chapter 332: Glass Palace \(2\)
9. Chapter 333: Glass Palace \(3\)
10. Chapter 334: The Constellations' Auction \(1\)
11. Chapter 335: The Constellations' Auction \(2\)

12. Chapter 336: The Constellations' Auction \(3\)
13. Chapter 337: Blood and Wine \(1\)
14. Chapter 338: Blood and Wine \(2\)
15. Chapter 339: Blood and Wine \(3\)
16. Chapter 340: Absolute Music \(1\)
17. Chapter 341: Absolute Music \(2\)
18. Chapter 342: Absolute Music \(3\)
19. Chapter 343: Absolute Music \(4\)
20. Chapter 344: The Voyage of the Full Moon \(1\)
21. Chapter 345: The Voyage of the Full Moon \(2\)
22. Chapter 346: The Voyage of the Full Moon \(3\)

23. Chapter 347: The Voyage of the Full Moon \(4\)
24. Chapter 348: The Voyage of the Full Moon \(5\)
25. Chapter 349: The Voyage of the Full Moon \(6\)

20. Volume 15 – Chapters 350-375

1. Chapter 350: The White Ending \(1\)
2. Chapter 351: The White Ending \(2\)
3. Chapter 352: The White Ending \(3\)
4. Chapter 353: The White Ending \(4\)
5. Chapter 354: The White Ending \(5\)
6. Chapter 355: The White Ending \(6\)
7. Chapter 356: Return to the Origin \(1\)

8. Chapter 357: Return to the Origin \(2\)
9. Chapter 358: Return to the Origin \(3\)
10. Chapter 359: The Heaven that Gathers Wails \(1\)
11. Chapter 360: The Heaven that Gathers Wails \(2\)
12. Chapter 361: The Heaven that Gathers Wails \(3\)
13. Chapter 362: The Heaven that Gathers Wails \(4\)
14. Chapter 363: The Heaven that Gathers Wails \(5\)
15. Chapter 364: The 1st Floor \(1\)
16. Chapter 365: The 1st Floor \(2\)
17. Chapter 366: The 1st Floor \(3\)

18. Chapter 367: Taboo \(1\)
19. Chapter 368: Taboo \(2\)
20. Chapter 369: Taboo \(3\)
21. Chapter 370: Taboo \(4\)
22. Chapter 371: Home Sweet Home \(1\)
23. Chapter 372: Home Sweet Home \(2\)
24. Chapter 373: Blue Blood \(1\)
25. Chapter 374: Blue Blood \(2\)
26. Chapter 375: Blue Blood \(3\)

21. Volume 16 – Chapters 376-400

1. Chapter 376: The Place Called a Sanctuary \(1\)

2. Chapter 377: The Place Called a Sanctuary \(2\)
3. Chapter 378: The Place Called a Sanctuary \(3\)
4. Chapter 379: The Gardener of the Withered Flowers \(1\)
5. Chapter 380: The Gardener of the Withered Flowers \(2\)
6. Chapter 381: The Gardener of the Withered Flowers \(3\)
7. Chapter 382: The Gardener of the Withered Flowers \(4\)
8. Chapter 383: Nine Keys \(1\)
9. Chapter 384: Nine Keys \(2\)
10. Chapter 385: The Garden of Time \(1\)
11. Chapter 386: The Garden of Time \(2\)

12. Chapter 387: The Garden of Time \(3\)
13. Chapter 388: The Time He Waited, The Time He Walked \(1\)
14. Chapter 389: The Time He Waited, The Time He Walked \(2\)
15. Chapter 390: The Time He Waited, The Time He Walked \(3\)
16. Chapter 391: The Time He Waited, The Time He Walked \(4\)
17. Chapter 392: The Time He Waited, The Time He Walked \(5\)
18. Chapter 393: The Time He Waited, The Time He Walked \(6\)
19. Chapter 394: The Time He Waited, The Time He Walked \(7\)
20. Chapter 395: The Time He Waited, The Time He Walked \(8\)
21. Chapter 396: Our World \(1\)

- 22. Chapter 397: Our World \(2\)
- 23. Chapter 398: Our World \(3\)
- 24. Chapter 399: SSS-Class Hunter who Lives to Die \(1\)
- 25. Chapter 400: SSS-Class Hunter who Lives to Die \(2\) \(End\)
- 26. Afterword

22. Glossary

- 1. Tower
- 2. Timeline
- 3. Translator's Note

Landmarks

1. Table of Contents
2. Cover

Volume 1 – Chapters 1-24

Chapter 1:

Unprecedented Envy

-Breaking news!

-The Black Dragon Guild has once again returned empty-handed, despite their confidence in conquering the 40th floor of the Tower.

-Number one in the Hunter rankings!

-Flame Emperor has once again soloed the boss!

I'm envious.

I thought blankly as I watched the TV.

So envious. Insanely envious.

-Good day to you, Flame Emperor!

-Ah. Yes. Good day...

On the screen, the man frowned.

Somehow, even his frowning eyebrows looked good.

-Today you've set another record by soloing a boss monster. You're the only one to have done so, Flame Emperor. Could we hear your thoughts on this?

-I'd prefer it if you stopped using that damn nickname.

-Excuse me?

-Flame Emperor. Why use such a shitty nickname when I have a perfectly good name? It's embarrassing. Why not just call me Flame Retard while you're at it? I'm going to find and beat up the motherfucker that came up with this nickname.

-Uh, uh...

The reporter stammered, overwhelmed. But that was it. He couldn't actually respond to the man.

That's because the man was a legendary hero of this era.

And I was nothing more than an extra, not even worthy of a supporting role.

“Ah...”

I muttered.

“I'm so envious.”

How great must it feel?

To live a life where you can say whatever you want on TV.

I fiddled with my smartphone and entered an online Hunter community forum. I was curious about people's reactions to the interview.

-Yeah, the Flame Emperor is being a Flame Retard again!

2 minutes ago | Report

Reply ▼

-That guy's always on TV complaining.

2 minutes ago | Report

Reply ▼

As expected, the forum was ablaze.

People were fuming after watching the interview.

-Can't he watch his words in front of a global audience?

1 minute ago | Report

Replies 5 ▲

It's not his first or second time, you know.

1 minute ago | Report

It's the broadcaster's fault, really. They know what he's like.

56 seconds ago | Report

Seriously... They're just trying to stir up controversy for ratings...

44 seconds ago | Report

This place is overrun by Flame Emperor fanatics.

Disgusting.

37 seconds ago | Report

I wish I could be like the Flame Emperor.

1 second ago | Edit

Supporters and critics of the Flame Emperor.

The internet was divided like the Red Sea.

-I wish the Flame Emperor, with all his skills, would also become a national representative with a good character. It's embarrassing as a citizen when his interviews get translated and spreads abroad...

1 minute ago | Report

Replies 5 ▲

It's 'translated and spread,' not 'translated and spreads.' Love your own language before worrying about foreign languages. And in the Tower, nationality doesn't matter.

1 minute ago | Report

So it's okay for your idol to curse in Korean? Shameful.

50 seconds ago | Report

They just corrected a typo; why the insult? Twisted personality.

38 seconds ago | Report

What's twisted is not my character, but your life lololol

23 seconds ago | Report

I wish I could be like the Flame Emperor.

1 second ago | Edit

The community was in an uproar.

Not just here, but everywhere that discussed Hunters.

-Flame Emperor's got a girlfriend! He's dating the Saintess!

1 minute ago | Report

Replies 4 ▲

The Saintess? Really?

48 seconds ago | Report

My friend, who's a Hunter, said they saw Flame Emperor and the Saintess together.

39 seconds ago | Report

My friend is the Saintess, and she says it's not true.

27 seconds ago | Report

I wish I could be like the Flame Emperor.

1 second ago | Edit

Some places were even buzzing about who the man was dating.

The Saintess was one of the most popular Hunters, along with the Flame Emperor. The post was accompanied by a photo, called the 'life shot' of the Saintess, famous for her beauty and good nature.

So, he's dating this Saintess.

“Ugh.”

Finally, I put down my phone and grabbed my head in frustration.

By the way,

-I wish I could be like the Flame Emperor.

All those comments were written by me.

I had just browsed through the posts and written the comments. I always leave such comments on any post I see.

Why the same comment over and over?

"Envious! So envious! I want to be successful too!"

Because I'm envious.

That's truly how I feel.

I can say this honestly because I'm alone in my single-room apartment.

Anyone who saw my room would be shocked. It's covered in magazines and newspaper clippings. All about the world's number one, the Flame Emperor.

"Flame Emperor solos floor 39!"

"Solo play conquers floor 38! Another legend of the Flame Emperor!"

"Hunter Yoo Soo-Ha. First Korean to reach world rank 1."

...

...

...

"Who will claim the throne of Rank 1 with Sword Saint gone? Foreign experts say 'Korean Yoo Soo-Ha is the most likely.'"

"The enigmatic hero breaks through floor 10. Who is this hero?"

"Sword Saint missing for 22 days. Is this the worst turmoil for the Hunter industry?"

From the most recent newspaper articles to those over ten years old.

The walls were filled with clippings. Some papers were fresh, others yellowed with age. A history. The history of the Flame Emperor. No, it's a history that dates back even before Hunter Yoo Soo-Ha became known as the Flame Emperor.

Ah.

"I wish I could be successful like the Flame Emperor..."

To be so successful that others envy me. To succeed and show those who looked down on me or didn't respect me. And after showing them, to forgive them generously and be praised as a broad-minded man...

Yes, I was envious of the hero on TV.

-Flame Emperor.

-Wow. Can't you just call me by my name instead of that nickname? Do you lose your hearing along with your brains when you do journalism?

-I'm s-sorry. Could you please say a few words to our viewers?

-Sigh. What should I say?

-Many aspiring Hunters look up to you, Flame Emperor Yoo Soo-Ha. You entered the Tower in your early twenties and awakened instantly! You defeated a boss monster within a month! Please, give them a piece of advice for success!

The Flame Emperor let out a hollow laugh.

-If someone's going to succeed, they'll succeed no matter what I say. What difference does it make whether I give advice or not?

-But please, just a few words!

-Ah, these damn broadcasters... Fine, just a few words then.

The Flame Emperor scratched his head. His hairstyle, with the front hair pulled back and tied with a rubber band, was called a ponytail, right? His long black hair, like a horse's tail, swayed slightly.

-If you're destined to succeed, you'll succeed.

The Flame Emperor glared directly at the camera.

-But even if you succeed, don't get cocky with me. You'll die.

-Excuse me?

-That's it. I have nothing more to say, so don't follow me.

That was the end. The Flame Emperor left the camera behind and walked away alone. The reporter, in a panic, shouted, "Flame Emperor! Flame Emperor! What did you mean by what you just said?" but was completely ignored.

I silently watched the Flame Emperor's receding figure.

“Sigh...”

I was furious.

It should be the reporter who felt ignored. Yet, for some reason, I felt like I was the one being snubbed.

I was truly angry.

"If only I had one good skill..."

In reality, I was an F-class, low-tier Hunter.

To have interviews that heat up the internet in real-time.

To have people interested even in the minor details of your private life.

Above all, to succeed on your own merits... and become wealthy.

That kind of successful life was far from mine.

"I want to succeed... I wish I had an S-class skill... Ugh. Not just for the money, but just so I can succeed. How great would it be if I had the Flame Emperor's skill?"

If anyone saw me now, they'd think I was crazy.

Muttering to myself, shamelessly exposing my desires.

But again, I'm alone in my single-room apartment. Muttering to myself in a place where no one can hear is my way of relieving stress.

It might look pathetic, but what does it matter?

Better than causing a scene outside and being a nuisance.

After all, no one's listening.

“...Huh?”

But it seems I was wrong.

As if someone heard me, a golden light flashed before my eyes.

“No, could it be?”

A scene I had only seen in videos. I clicked the replay button hundreds, thousands of times. I watched it every morning to fuel my envy.

The light that appears when a Hunter awakens a skill.

“Golden color!?”

And it was the golden light that only appears for S-class skills or higher!

My heart pounded wildly.

Soon, the golden light gathered into the shape of a card.

[An unprecedentedly ugly envy!]

[The Tower is appalled by your vile envy and throws a skill at you.]

Huh?

This doesn't sound like the skill awakenings I've heard about.

Usually, when awakening a skill, you hear things like, 'The Tower is moved by your will', 'The Tower rewards your earnest training', 'The Tower sends its accolades for your achievements'.

But appalled by ugly envy and throwing a skill?

It's as if they're giving me alms or something.

'No, no. It's an S-class skill. What does the tone matter?'

I ignored the unsettling feeling.

I'd been waiting for this moment. No need for ominous thoughts.

[Creating skill card.]

Whoosh!

Finally, with another burst of light, a golden card was created.

I grabbed the card with trembling hands.

I WANT TO BECOME JUST LIKE YOU

*Activates automatically upon death.
After dying to the enemy, you can copy
one of their skills and make it yours.*

You cannot copy a skill from targets that have already killed you previously.

Skills are randomly copied.

However, you die!

(SKILL GRANTED BY THE TOWER)

+

[I Want to Become Just Like You]

Rank: S+

Effect: Automatically activated when killed by an enemy. You copy one of the skills of the enemy that killed you and make it yours. You may not copy from an opponent you've already copied from. The copied skill is selected randomly.

*However, you will die!

+

"Wow! Wow, oh... Oh... Huh?"

As time passed, my voice naturally became puzzled.

I blinked my eyes.

"Huh?"

For a moment, I thought I had read something wrong.

I read the sentence at the bottom of the card again, slowly.

*However, you will die!

It was indeed written like that.

Using this skill meant dying.

"....."

I stared blankly at the card.

Wind blew through the window, rustling the newspaper clippings plastered on the walls. After a while, a scream echoed in my single-room apartment.

"Damn it, what is this? How am I supposed to use this skill!?"

That day, I acquired a legendary skill.

A legendarily crappy skill.

Chapter 2:

However, You will Die! (1)

Skills.

A word that has made countless hunters weep.

The condition for awakening a skill differs for each person.

-I whacked a scarecrow in the training ground 10,000 times.
Then, it just appeared on its own?

-One day, suddenly, I heard the voice of a god!

-Magic? When I entered the tower, it just happened.

There were hunters who had both integrity and perseverance but lacked the talent, struggling at the bottom. On the other hand, there were those with terrible personalities who lived off their natural talent.

A prime example was the Rank 1 Flame Emperor.

If life were compared to a game, the Flame Emperor's life would probably be a godly game of skill, right? Anything desired could be obtained through sheer ability.

My life, on the other hand... was just an ordinary game of lousy luck.

"Uwaaaaack!"

How long had I been wandering aimlessly after leaving the bar?

In a deserted alleyway, I finally threw up everything.

"If you're going to be unlucky, damn it... might as well not have anything at all."

When is the biggest moment of despair in gaming?

Anyone who's played pay-to-win mobile games would know.

It's not when you keep spinning the gacha and don't get a 5-star... It's when you do get a 5-star, but it's the worst one possible. Like a 5-star that's worse than a 3-star.

And my 5-star was even worse than a 1-star.

I WANT TO BECOME JUST LIKE YOU

*Activates automatically upon death.
After dying to the enemy, you can copy
one of their skills and make it yours.*

You cannot copy a skill from targets that have already killed you previously.

Skills are randomly copied.

However, you die!

(SKILL GRANTED BY THE TOWER)

[I Want to Become Just Like You]

Rank: S+

Effect: Automatically activated when killed by an enemy. You copy one of the skills of the enemy that killed you and make it yours. You may not copy from an opponent you've already copied from. The copied skill is selected randomly.

*However, you will die!

+

"Heh. Damn..."

Right. My life was indeed a game of lousy luck.

Normally, upon awakening a skill, one should report to the Hunter Association. But I didn't. It was too unfair. I was too embarrassed to show off this as my skill.

- "Hello, Hunter. How did you awaken your skill?"

- "I was jealous of the Rank 1."

- "Pardon?"

- "I was so jealous and envious that I was going crazy, then this skill appeared, as if to mock me. I'm the most enviously petty human ever. Haha."

How could I say something like that!

In the end, I just got drunk and staggered in a secluded alley.

'...Where is this?'

But even that, I couldn't do well. Before I knew it, I had wandered into a completely unfamiliar alley. I had no recollection of where it was or how I ended up there.

Could I end up sleeping on the alley floor like this?

'Ah. How pitiful.'

Just as I swallowed my tears.

From the other end of the alley, a faint scream reached my ears.

".....Please, no! Why all of a sudden.....!"

The drowsiness instantly vanished. It was too vivid to be a hallucination induced by rice wine. I didn't know who it was, but it was a real scream of someone whose life was in danger.

'What's that?'

I silenced my footsteps. Instinctively, I even held my breath. One step. Another step. I quietly walked towards the alley where the scream came from. The closer I got, the clearer the voice became.

This was...

"Fl-Flame Emperor. Why are you doing this to me all of a sudden..."

"...It's useless. Anyway, no one's around here..."

This was the second stupid thing I did today.

The first mistake was... obviously, drinking enough to break my mental fuse. I had never been blackout drunk in my entire life. But today was an exception. Angered that the only skill I finally awakened was an S-rank trash, I guzzled down rice wine like water.

The second mistake was not running away as soon as I heard the scream.

"I had already poisoned the cup you drank from."

"Poison? What are you talking about, Flame Emperor?"

"Oh, nice acting. If someone saw you, they'd think you really didn't know."

At the dead end of the alley.

In a place so dark that there wasn't even a street lamp, there was a man and a woman. Perhaps it's strange to simply say 'there was'. The man was threatening the woman, and the woman was being threatened by the man.

"Basilisk's gastric juice. Originally, it was the poison you put in my drink. Wow. If it weren't for my skill, I would've been in real trouble. Why that look? Your face's gone pale, Saintess."

"Could it be... Perfect Poison Immunity...? No, it can't be. You don't have such a skill."

"I don't."

The man's laughter echoed softly.

"But I do have a skill a little better than Perfect Poison Immunity."

And then, I recognized the man. No matter how dark the alley was, I couldn't fail to recognize the man's back... the swaying ponytail tied back. I had seen the exact same back on TV just last night.

'It's really the Flame Emperor!'

The Rank 1 hunter. The hero of this era. An idol revered by all. And thus, the target of envy and jealousy by many... especially mine.

Moreover.

'That woman is the Saintess!'

I covered my mouth to stop my breath. The Saintess. The world Rank 9 hunter selected by the Association, recently embroiled in a scandal with the Flame Emperor for dating rumors. There she was, the unparalleled beauty I had only seen in videos and photos on the internet.

"But the joke's over now. You've crossed me, now you must pay the price."

Not just there, but being threatened.

"Wait, please, Flame Emperor. There's some misunderstanding... I only wanted to team up with you to conquer the tower!"

"I thought so too, but no, it wasn't like that."

I was shocked.

'Those two. They're not... dating?'

The internet was abuzz with their relationship. TV shows covered the romance of the two heroes. Yet, the scene unfolding before my eyes lacked any trace of romance. It was hard to call it a lovers' quarrel, even as a joke.

Killing intent.

I only saw someone trying to kill and someone trying not to be killed.

"Let's talk, please! We can clear up the misunderstanding through conversation."

"Talk? Ah, talk. Sure. Let's be gentlemanly."

Flame Emperor - Yoo Soo-Ha - grabbed Saintess - Isabelle's - throat.

"Kuk...!?"

"But I set the rules for the conversation."

The Saintess struggled, gasping for breath. Was she suffocating? The more she struggled, the more my hidden breath also choked. My God. An unthinkable event was unfolding right before my eyes.

"I'll ask the questions. You just answer. Ah, you don't need to speak. If my question is correct, nod your head; if it's wrong, shake it. That's all."

"Hic, Huk...! Cough..."

"If you sincerely participate in the conversation, I'll spare your life. I'll even give you an antidote. But if you ignore my gentlemanly consideration even once... Well, you know what will happen, right? You're from Oxford, after all. Use that smart brain."

Saintess, a renowned healer, desperately hit the arm of Flame Emperor holding her throat. Thud! Thud! But nothing changed. It was impossible for her to overpower Flame Emperor with brute force.

"Actually, there's only one thing I'm curious about."

"Uh, Cough. Huhuh..."

"Who ordered to kill me? Just answer that. Is it the Black Dragon Witch's doing?"

The Saintess stopped struggling.

"Think carefully before answering. I may not have Perfect Poison Immunity, but I do have a skill for detecting lies. If I catch you lying, I'll burn you to the bone."

"....."

The Saintess seemed to hesitate for a moment. In the pitch-dark alley, her face wasn't visible, but her silence was palpable. Under the Flame Emperor's watch, she slowly nodded.

"I knew it."

A faint laugh echoed.

"Farewell, Saintess Isabelle."

Flames erupted.

The fire engulfed the dead-end alley. From Flame Emperor's grasp to Saintess's neck, then her entire body. Engulfed in flames, Saintess began to thrash. A desperate struggle for life. But no matter how much she writhed, Flame Emperor remained unmoved.

He just watched the burning Saintess expressionlessly.

"Hmm."

Even amidst the blazing flames, Flame Emperor was calm, never letting go of Saintess's neck until the end. Saintess flailed her arms, scratched and clawed at Flame Emperor's wrist, and finally reached towards the night sky... but soon, she stopped.

She went limp.

She moved no more.

'Insane...!'

She died right before my eyes. A hero of humanity.

Perhaps it's odd to simply say 'died'. No, Saintess didn't just die. She was murdered. By Flame Emperor, who was equally revered as a hero of humanity.

'A madman.'

Saintess was already reduced to a charred corpse. Yet, the flames didn't stop. Flame Emperor himself, didn't stop. Until Saintess's flesh and bones melted into ash and soot, he burned her with an expressionless face.

'He's out of his mind.'

I stepped back.

'I need to run away.'

And then, I committed my third and last mistake of the day.

Crack-.

It was a small sound. Not a can, but the noise of glass being stepped on. Maybe it was a glass shard from a broken soju bottle. Or perhaps a glass carried by the wind... I didn't know. Nor did I need to know.

What I really needed to understand was something else.

I had just made a foolish mistake.

"...Hoo."

And the Flame Emperor was not the kind of hunter who would miss another person's mistake.

"I thought I got rid of all the rats nearby, but there was one left over?"

"Ugh!"

As soon as our eyes met, I ran.

I ran without looking back. Those eyes were the eyes of a murderer. Not someone who had killed one or two people, but dozens, or perhaps even more. That devil was now trying to kill me.

"Ha, kid. Cute?"

It was the moment the Flame Emperor scoffed. Suddenly, I felt a burning sensation around my ankle, and the next moment, I was rolling on the ground. I couldn't understand why I fell at first.

Not until I saw my feet on the ground.

"Hi, Ik...!?"

My feet were severed. Both my right and left feet, shoes and all.

The logo of a famous brand on the side of my sneakers was particularly white.

"Please, spare me! Please!"

"Why did you run? Scared the shit out of me."

The Flame Emperor bent down. He had picked up my feet. He toyed with them, tossing and catching like a baseball. Thump. Thump.

"Hey. Did you see?"

"I-I didn't see anything!"

The Flame Emperor approached.

"What didn't you see?"

"I don't know anything! Uh, please. I really don't know anything..."

"What don't you know?"

"Please... Flame Emperor, please... spare me. I won't say anything. I won't talk anywhere..."

I felt his presence over my head.

The Flame Emperor was looking down at me, kneeling.

"Wow. So you did see that I'm the Flame Emperor, and you know who I am. That's enough to know everything."

"Please..."

"Hey, are you making me feel slighted? Why play dumb when you know?"

Flame Emperor fiddled with my severed feet.

"Tell me. Who sent you? Black Dragon again?"

"I... really don't know anything..."

"You were watching me and the Saintess from there, quietly like a rat? Oh, you're quite credible. I'd have believed you if I were a little more of a fool."

The Flame Emperor smiled slyly.

"But I'm not a fool, you bastard."

Flames arose before my eyes. Whoosh! The fire from the Flame Emperor's hand burned my feet. Completely gone. The famous brand's logo, the shoes I wore for a long time, and the feet that were part of my body for even longer.

All vanished.

"Next is your head. Answer correctly."

My mind went blank.

This devil... he's insane.

A madman. A psychopath who kills even innocent people. A bastard who thinks he's always right, and only his opinion matters.

How could a person, ranked number 1, do this?

Were people... and I, ever slightly idolizing this person? Praising him for his honesty? For his refreshing personality? This madman?

"Lies..."

"What?"

"Lie Detection Skill... You have the Lie Detection Skill."

I desperately continued.

"You said it to the Saintess. You could tell if she lied. So answer correctly.

"....."

"Test it with that. You'll know my words are true. Flame Emperor. I just... I really just happened to pass by. Please believe me!"

The Flame Emperor's expression became peculiar.

"That's a lie, though?"

Chapter 3:

However, You will Die! (2)

"Excuse me?"

"It was a bluff. Bluffing. Don't you know?"

Flame Emperor - Yoo Soo-Ha - chuckled.

"I don't have a skill to detect lies. It was just a bluff to test the Saintess. Wow, both the Saintess and you. You're really naive. Do you believe everything I say?"

"That... then."

My lips trembled. I was in shock.

"Did you kill the Saintess without any real certainty?"

Rank 9 hero, the Saintess. Unlike the psychopath before me, she was a hunter who donated most of her earnings to orphanages and had her character intact. And she was killed just because she seemed a bit suspicious?

'If that's the case...'

This guy wasn't just a top-ranked hunter; he was a top-ranked psychopath.

"Hey. How can you say such harsh things? Of course, I was certain. The Saintess really tried to kill me. If I didn't kill her first, she would have poisoned me tomorrow."

The Flame Emperor spat on the ground.

"Damn it! Thinking about it now pisses me off."

"How did you know...?"

"I just know."

He replied as if it were obvious.

"I just know. There's a way to know everything."

"....."

I was at a loss for words.

Not just because the Flame Emperor was outrageously confident. There was some kind of certainty in his eyes. A certainty that he had a reason to kill the Saintess. At least, that's how it seemed to me.

"Well, since you mentioned Lie Detection, it seems you're really innocent."

"Ah..."

"But you know I'm the Flame Emperor. And you saw that the Saintess was killed by me."

He patted my head.

"So I need you to die."

His hand slowed as he patted.

"My name is Yoo Soo-Ha. Farewell."

That was the moment. My head felt hot. No, it was my brain that was hot. At first, it felt like my scalp was touching a frying pan. But soon, my brain began to burn intensely. Sizzling.

My skull boiled like an oil drum.

"...Uk,!?"

I couldn't speak. Couldn't even scream. True pain silences human screams.

'To die at the hands of this madman...'

'To die like this. Me.'

Kim Gong-Ja.

The name given by the orphanage director, meaning to be as great as Confucius, led to a life far from Confucian and an equally unremarkable death.

I was sad.

'Ah.'

If life were a game, it was a failed game.

Simply put, it was a failed life.

A life destroyed and lost.

[You have died.]

I hated it.

[The condition for your skill has been fulfilled by your death.]

Why should I die like this?

No, why did I have to live like this?

I felt wronged. Angry. Everything was unjust. I could have lived a little better. I had the right to live better. Just a mistake. Today, I made three mistakes. Died because of a mistake. Lived a life of mistakes. Born a mistake.

Was my very birth a mistake?

[Randomly copying Hunter 'Yoo Soo-Ha's' skills.]

[Creating skill cards.]

I heard nothing. Saw nothing.

But a faint light shimmered. It seemed like fireflies were flickering before my eyes. Some fireflies were bronze-colored. Some were silver. And some... were golden.

It was fast.

The golden firefly fluttered swiftly. Too quick to catch. There were many bronze fireflies. Easy to catch. Silver ones were numerous too. But there was only one firefly flickering in the color of the sun – golden.

[Please select a skill card.]

I reached out for the one and only golden light.

[Selection complete.]

Caught it.

[Copying skill.]

And then I died.

•

•

•

•

•

•

•

•

•

•

-

-

Activating skill.

I WANT TO BECOME JUST LIKE YOU

*Activates automatically upon death.
After dying to the enemy, you can copy
one of their skills and make it yours.*

You cannot copy a skill from targets that have already killed you previously.

Skills are randomly copied.

However, you die!

(SKILL GRANTED BY THE TOWER)

Name, I Want to Become Just Like You.

Rank, S+.

Rule one.

Automatically activated when killed by an enemy.

Rule two.

Copy one skill from the enemy that killed you, making it yours.

Rule three.

You cannot copy from an opponent you've already copied from.

Rule four.

Which skill to copy is randomly determined.

However, you will die.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

•

•

•

Do you know what hell looks like?

Let me tell you.

Firstly, there was no hellfire. Not even a normal fire. There was a gas range, but it lacked the power to create hellfire. Ah. Surprisingly, there was also a small fridge in hell. A narrow bed... And a second-hand TV.

"Uh."

In other words, it looked exactly like my studio apartment.

No, it was my studio apartment.

No matter how I looked, it wasn't hell. It was my modest 3.5 pyeong (approx. 115 sq ft) studio, attractive for its affordable rent.

"Uh, huh... uh?"

I ran my hand through my hair. It was intact. Just to be sure, I checked my reflection in the smartphone screen. A face like an unfinished sculpture of Apollo. In other words, moderately handsome and moderately unattractive.

There were no burn marks anywhere.

"What's going on? What happened?"

Really, what had happened?

'Did Flame Emperor - Yoo Soo-Ha - heal me and leave me here?'

It was a ridiculous thought.

But... I couldn't think of any other explanation for my current situation. Maybe Flame Emperor was nicer than I thought. Despite being insane, maybe he wasn't a complete psychopath and pretended to kill me but actually spared my life.

- Breaking news.

Did he also leave the TV on?

-The Black Dragon Guild has once again returned empty-handed, despite their confidence in conquering the 40th floor of the Tower.

But no.

Flame Emperor wasn't in my tiny 3.5 pyeong (approx. 115 sq ft) studio. He hadn't just stepped out for a moment.

Instead.

-Number one in the Hunter rankings!

-Flame Emperor has once again soloed the boss!

Instead, Flame Emperor was on the TV screen, frowning.

-Good day to you, Flame Emperor!

-Ah. Yes. Good day...

-Today you've set another record by soloing a boss monster. You're the only one to have done so, Flame Emperor. Could we hear your thoughts on this?

The corner of the broadcast screen read 'LIVE' in big letters.

I blankly stared at the old TV.

-I'd prefer it if you stopped using that damn nickname.

-Excuse me?

-Flame Emperor. Why use such a shitty nickname when I have a perfectly good name? It's embarrassing. Why not just call me Flame Retard while you're at it? I'm going to find and beat up the motherfucker that came up with this nickname.

Yoo Soo-Ha.

The world's Rank 1 hunter. The hero of this era. The hero I had envied was there. Perhaps it's inappropriate to simply say 'he was there.'

He had killed me, and I had died by his hand.

"This makes no sense."

As I said this aloud, my hand was already checking my smartphone. I checked the date. It was yesterday's date.

My hands trembled.

I browsed internet communities.

-Yeah, the Flame Emperor is being a Flame Retard again!

2 minutes ago | Report

Reply ▼

Here too.

-Can't he watch his words in front of a global audience?

1 minute ago | Report

Replies 5 ▲

There too.

-Flame Emperor's got a girlfriend! He's dating the Saintess!

1 minute ago | Report

Replies 4 ▲

This site too. That community too. Social media too.

Everything was the same. The same posts I had read yesterday were being uploaded live. Even though I had seen them yesterday, others were reacting as if they were new.

"Ha..."

Yet, there was one change.

└ I want to become like the Flame Emperor.

1 second ago | Edit

My comment was missing.

Of course. Normally at this time yesterday, I would have been actively commenting, but now I was just staring blankly.

I had really returned to yesterday.

"...Skill card. Open."

Whoosh!

A golden card flared up before my eyes.

[I Want to Become Just Like You (S+)]

The skill I had memorized after checking several times since yesterday. An S-rank skill, but one I could never use. The skill whose use meant my death, the worst skill ever.

But that wasn't all.

"My goodness."

Two.

There were two flames burning before me.

[I Want to Become Just Like You (S+)]

[Returner's Winding Clock (EX)]

Two golden cards floated in front of me.

'How?'

My heart raced.

Returner's Winding Clock. A skill I had never seen before. It wasn't there when I checked yesterday, nor before the Flame Emperor killed me. There was only a useless skill I couldn't use, not a skill with that name... especially not a golden one.

'How did this happen?'

I didn't know.

How this skill became mine, how it came to be. I didn't understand yet.

But...

'It's mine.'

I knew this card was mine.

'Mine.'

And perhaps a card that could change my life.

I reached out and grasped the card.

Flipped it.

+

[Returner's Winding Clock]

Rank: EX

Effect: Activated automatically on death. You will return 24 hours back in time from the moment of your death. Your memories and stats are preserved while returning.

*However, there is a greater penalty the higher your rank.

*Skill copied from Yoo Soo-Ha

+

‘Return’.

If I die, I go back 24 hours.

"Ah..."

My head trembled as if struck by lightning. My heart pounded.

I realized.

"This is, the Flame Emperor's secret..."

How the Flame Emperor became the world's Rank 1.

How he soloed the invincible boss of the 10th floor of the Tower.

And lastly, why he was so sure that 'the Saintess would kill him.'

I finally understood.

- "The Saintess really tried to kill me."

- "If I didn't kill her first, she would have poisoned me tomorrow."

The Flame Emperor had said.

- "I just know."

- "I just know. There's a way to know everything."

- "You don't need to know how."

He had actually died at the hands of the Saintess.

As he said, poisoned and killed. But since he died, he returned 24 hours back. And then, with grinding teeth, he got his revenge on the Saintess.

For revenge.

'And he killed me too.'

I clenched my fist.

'An innocent me! Just because I was an annoyance!'

He cut off my feet. Burned my head. Killed me. Played with me like a bug.

The cheap TV was still broadcasting the interview.

-So, sorry. Could you please say a few words to our viewers?

-Sigh. What should I say?

Flame Emperor scratched the back of his head in response to the journalist's question.

Yesterday, I saw a hero in him. Now, I saw a psychopath. It didn't matter that he was the world's Rank 1. It didn't matter that he was hailed as a hero by many. He was my enemy.

Flame Emperor glared directly into the camera.

-If you're destined to succeed, you'll succeed.

I glared back at him.

-But even if you succeed, don't get cocky with me.

I gripped the golden card tightly. The same card that man had. The skill I had copied from Flame Emperor. He was Rank 1, and I wasn't even ranked, but at this moment, we were on the same starting line.

-You'll die.

Now it was my turn for revenge.

Chapter 4: Hero Hunting (1)

'I can't beat the Flame Emperor - Yoo Soo-Ha - through ordinary means.'

My heart thudded violently. I tried to stay calm, but it wasn't easy. Perhaps it was understandable? Just moments ago, I had died, burned from the head down.

The pain of my bones and flesh burning alive was... truly horrific.

"Damn, that bastard."

I glared at the newspaper scraps stuck to the wall.

The history of the Flame Emperor. From his days as an unknown rookie to reaching the world's Rank 1, numerous interviews and articles were plastered there.

Of course, the Flame Emperor's photos were also there. I wanted to tear them up so badly.

"Tch. But even if he dies, he returns 24 hours back."

Killing him was impossible.

That was the big problem.

'It's like an invincible cheat code, isn't it?'

Even without that, the gap in abilities between Flame Emperor and me was as vast as between the sun and a firefly. He was the world's Rank 1. I was unranked. My jealousy might be top class, even for the Tower, but that doesn't make me more powerful.

Even if miracles upon miracles happened, it would be hard to kill the Flame Emperor.

'But even if I successfully kill him, there's a problem.'

What would happen if I killed the Flame Emperor?

He would just return 24 hours back. And that's it. The Flame Emperor would ruthlessly try to kill me, and the moment he realized he couldn't, he'd probably imprison me forever.

Like building a prison in a basement and throwing me in.

With Flame Emperor's power and capabilities, it would be easy to subdue me. And I would spend my life forever trapped in a prison.

Kim Gong-Ja's life's bad ending number two. A glamorous imprisonment ending.

"Damn it..."

Killing him was a problem. Even if killed, still a problem.

How am I supposed to get revenge on this psychopath?

'What should I do?'

'How can I take down the world's Rank 1?'

One day.

I spent over 24 hours holed up in my room, thinking.

I stared at the newspaper articles on the wall, pondering. All of the Flame Emperor's information was there. Maybe I'd get a hint by looking at them.

"Flame Emperor solos floor 39!"

"Solo play conquers floor 38! Another legend of the Flame Emperor!"

"Hunter Yoo Soo-Ha. First Korean to reach world rank 1."

•

•

•

"Who will claim the throne of rank 1 with Sword Saint gone? Foreign experts say 'Korean Yoo Soo-Ha is the most likely.'"

"The enigmatic hero breaks through floor 10. Who is this hero?"

"Sword Saint missing for 22 days. Is this the worst turmoil for the Hunter industry?"

"....."

That was the moment.

"Huh?"

A shiver ran through my head.

"Wait. Look at this?"

I muttered, touching a newspaper scrap. It was an interview with Flame Emperor from a magazine. Originally an online article, but I had printed it out and stuck it there.

+

Q: How old were you when you first awakened, Mr. Yoo Soo-Ha?

A: It was the summer when I was 21. So, it's been 11 years.

Q: You remember the season so clearly. You must have an excellent memory.

A: I've never thought I had a good memory. It's just that the day I awakened happened to be my birthday. 11 years ago, June 7th. That's why I remember it.

Q: Your awakening happened on your birthday. What happened then?

A: I was on the 1st floor of the Tower. That's all I'll say. It's private.

+

At first glance, a routine interview.

But... to me, it was an invaluable clue.

"Wow, wait. Really? Can this really work?"

There was a way. A way to kill the world's Rank 1 hunter.

Not easy, and others would call me crazy if they heard it. But at the same time, it was the only method I thought of to eliminate the Flame Emperor. Even a lowly F-rank hunter like me could do it.

'I can really get revenge!'

That's when it happened.

"Fire!"

There was commotion outside the window. Curious, I opened the window to look. Thick red smoke was billowing from the other side of the neighborhood. Residents were coming out into the alleys, making a racket.

"Oh my, what do we do, oh my!"

"Stop standing here and put out the fire!"

"Let's do it!"

The residents here were different from the 'outside world.' People who had set foot in the Tower to become hunters. A city formed by such residents, the 1st floor of the Tower.

The city had various names. Some called it Babylon, others called it the Abyss. Some simply called it the 'Floor 1 City', while others more elegantly named it the City of Ascension.

It was because people of various races from all over the world gathered here.

Most residents here were hunters. They had experienced life-threatening crises, willing or not. When a crisis hit, they moved more quickly than humans in the outside world.

I hurriedly left my studio and joined the residents in the firefighting effort.

'Crazy.'

I checked the time on my smartphone. It was the 24th hour since I returned from being killed by the Flame Emperor. The exact time when the Flame Emperor had murdered the Saintess.

Meaning...

'Damn it! Flame Emperor set the fire! To destroy the evidence!'

Yoo Soo-Ha.

He truly was a devil.

The vigilante corps had already arrived at the scene. Hunters from major guilds were also arriving. Normally at odds, they united in the face of the fire disaster.

"Water ability users, don't use your skills alone!"

"Right, time it together! Right!"

"The Black Dragon Guild will temporarily take command here! Please follow Black Dragon's orders for a moment, everyone!"

Normally, these hunters were hard to even see outside of newspapers. The top rankers, including a few in the top five, showed their faces. I helped other residents while secretly observing the rankers.

"We've secured the area for now. The problem is whether there are any survivors inside... We need to send a rescue team quickly."

Rank 5. Guild leader of the Healer and Pharmacist Guild, Master Alchemist.

"It's okay. This place used to be a slum. For the past five years, it's been uninhabited and entry was prohibited. It's a stroke of luck that the fire broke out here."

Rank 10. Leader of the City's Vigilante Corps, Paladin.

Truly hunters renowned for helping others. Even among the top rankers, they weren't loners. They arrived first and were commanding the scene.

'Normally, the Saintess would be among them...'

But the Saintess was nowhere to be seen.

Of course. She had been murdered by the most insolent loner of them all.

Only the Flame Emperor and I knew this fact. A truth that even the top rankers didn't know yet... No, a truth they might never know.

Master Alchemist looked around.

"It's strange. Why hasn't the Saintess arrived yet...?"

"She mentioned she had something tonight. I don't know exactly, but maybe a date."

Rank 10 Hunter, Paladin, chuckled.

"Recently, she's been spending more time with the Flame Emperor."

"...I don't like that Flame Emperor."

Master Alchemist shrugged.

"It might be a bit rude to gossip here... But I think Saintess should meet someone better."

"You're too picky. Who's better than Rank 1? That's why you're still single."

"I-it doesn't matter... I'm still safe in my late thirties..."

Speak of the devil.

"Flame Emperor!"

Those helping with the fire halted momentarily. The top rankers turned their heads. There was Flame Emperor, strolling casually, dressed in a hoodie and sweatpants. He looked extremely bothered.

"Who the hell started playing with fire without my permission?"

That insane psychopath.

"Welcome, Flame Emperor."

"Oh, big bro, welcome."

"Can you help us? As you see, there's an arson in the old slum area. Could you lend a hand?"

Paladin politely asked. However, the Flame Emperor was indifferent.

"What do I get out of helping?"

"You get the satisfaction of having helped many people for free."

"Ah, cut the crap. Tell me what I get."

"Tomorrow, headlines across the world will read, 'Flame Emperor, the hero who extinguished the fire.' It'll be a fresh shock to the public and improve your image."

"Pfft."

The Flame Emperor stuffed his hands in his pockets and scoffed.

"Have I ever cared about what the media thinks?"

He was truly a lunatic.

Residents were already filming Flame Emperor with their phones. His expression and words were probably being broadcast worldwide. The internet would be heatedly divided between those defending and those cursing Flame Emperor.

What would Flame Emperor's defenders say?

- "Exactly. You have to look out for your own interests."

- "Helping others for free is for fools."

- "I like that he's still honest even after becoming a hero."

My head spun.

'No one knows.'

A chill ran down my spine.

"He's not just being honest. That guy is... he's just crazy. He's not in his right mind."

Despite the nearby flames flickering, my heart felt cold. This fire, this arson, this disaster — it was all caused by the Flame Emperor - Yoo Soo-Ha. Yet, he returned with a nonchalant face, asking "What's in it for me?"

It was then I was certain.

"I need to kill him."

A monster.

Not just for my revenge, but for humanity. For the honor of all hunters, this monster must be obliterated. A monster is a monster. And isn't it our duty as hunters to eliminate monsters?

"I must kill him by any means necessary."

In this tower, there lived a monster who played with fire. Yes, that's true. But simply saying 'he lived' was an understatement. He was grossly inappropriate.

That monster was my prey.

"Even if it costs me my life."

I started walking.

Thud.

Past the heroes pondering post-mortem strategies. Past ordinary people struggling with the fire. Towards the ceaselessly soaring flames, towards the inferno that resembled hell, I walked.

"Wait! Where are you going?"

I kept walking.

"Hey, mister! You shouldn't get too close!"

I continued.

"Oh my! That person must be crazy!"

"Someone stop him!"

"Damn, what a lunatic!"

And then I ran.

People behind me were in a frenzy. Some stamped their feet in panic. Others stopped their firefighting efforts to shout. I ignored them all and kept running.

"It's hot."

It was no different from hell. Flames leapt up everywhere like red tongues of fire.

"It hurts!"

With every step, my flesh seemed to melt. My eyeballs felt as though they were being scorched.

"But it's better than being tormented by the Flame Emperor!"

This was the only way to kill him.

How long did I run? It felt like a while, but perhaps only a minute had passed. My throat choked with smoke, and when I stopped coughing, I heard a voice.

[You have died.]

Yes.

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

It was my second death.

As I plunged into the flames, people thought I had gone mad.

Of course, I hadn't. On the contrary, I was very lucid about the situation.

"...I'm back."

My hell. My tiny 3.5 pyeong studio.

The walls were plastered with interview articles, and the TV was broadcasting a live news report. A broadcast I was listening to for the third time.

- Breaking news. The Black Dragon Guild has once again returned empty-handed...

I had returned to yesterday again.

"Good. The skill works properly."

Unlike before, I didn't pay attention to the TV. It was unnecessary. What mattered was that the skill to return 24 hours back worked correctly.

With this skill, I can kill the Flame Emperor.

[You are currently an F-Rank Hunter.]

[There is no penalty for the skill usage.]

"Just as I thought."

I muttered.

'Returner's Winding Clock. The penalty gets stronger the higher the hunter rank.'

Conversely, if the hunter rank is at the bottom, there's hardly any penalty.

'I have a chance now.'

While I'm still an F-rank.

The only opportunity to hunt the Flame Emperor.

'This is my last chance.'

I took out a knife from my backpack.

An old knife. A dagger I've kept since I started being a hunter. It was no longer suitable for hunting monsters... but sharp enough to kill a person.

'How do I kill the Flame Emperor?'

I pondered continuously.

'Do I cooperate with the Saintess, who hasn't been killed yet? Do I reveal my abilities to Black Dragon Guild and plot to imprison Flame Emperor forever? Or do I secretly film Flame Emperor killing the Saintess and leak it to the media?'

Any method was fine.

But fine was all they were. There was no 100% certainty of sending the Flame Emperor to his doom.

'I lack the track record to convince the Saintess.'

I had no achievements.

'I lack the power to avoid being betrayed by the guild.'

I had no strength.

'I lack the confidence to successfully film Flame Emperor.'

I had no confidence.

'But...'

There was something I had.

'I can return 24 hours back when I die.'

The skill.

Returner's Winding Clock, copied from Flame Emperor.

'Yes. I have a skill.'

'Don't worry, Kim Gong-Ja. You can do this.'

I gulped and looked at the wall one last time. The interview with Flame Emperor - Yoo Soo-Ha - was there in black and white.

+

Q: How old were you when you first awakened, Mr. Yoo Soo-Ha?

A: It was the summer when I was 21. So, it's been 11 years.

Q: You remember the season so clearly. You must have an excellent memory.

A: I've never thought I had a good memory. It's just that the day I awakened happened to be my birthday. 11 years ago, June 7th. That's why I remember it.

+

'11 years.'

11 years ago, June 7th, summer.

Counting backwards from today.

'4050 days.'

Yes.

'I need to die 4050 times.'

That was the only way to kill the Flame Emperor.

'Yoo Soo-Ha.'

'If you are a monster that can't die even if killed.'

I raised the knife high.

'I'll kill you before you become a monster!'

And I stabbed myself in the throat.

To return to the past.

To June 7th, 11 years ago, the summer when Flame Emperor - Yoo Soo-Ha - hadn't yet awakened his skills. Before he had the power to return 24 hours back upon death.

To a past where I could still kill the Flame Emperor!

"Ugh...!"

It was hot. It hurt. My heart throbbed violently. Every nerve in my body screamed in pain. I couldn't see or feel anything.

But I heard a voice.

[You have died.]

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

I returned to one day earlier.

There, I was lying on the bed. The TV was off. But the articles plastered on the wall were still there. I couldn't erase Flame Emperor's history, his insane legend, with just one more day of regression.

I glared at Yoo Soo-Ha's picture.

'It doesn't matter.'

If a day is not enough, then a week. If a week is not enough, then a month. If a month is not enough, then a year. If a year is still not enough, then...

"Alright."

I took out the dagger again.

"Just 4049 days left."

And I stabbed myself.

Chapter 5: Hero Hunting (2)

4048 days.

[You have died.]

4047 days.

[You have died.]

4046 days.

[You have died.]

It was a process of erasing one's history, of wiping away a legend that seemed forever etched in the tower's memory. Just as Rome wasn't built in a day, Flame Emperor's legend wasn't created in a few days either. Naturally, it was difficult.

But it wasn't impossible.

"Damn it...!"

I cursed as I killed myself.

When I felt like giving up, I remembered the pain when the Flame Emperor set my body on fire, the sense of injustice, the rage. His face, when he returned nonchalantly after burning down the village and asked, "What's in it for me?"

His expression as he looked down on me like an insect.

'I'll kill you!'

Thump!

I bit down hard and stabbed the knife into my neck.

'I'll kill you, Yoo Soo-Ha!'

It was a task of killing myself.

But more so, it was about killing the Flame Emperor.

[You have died.]

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

4040 days.

4039 days.

4038 days.

4037 days...

...

...

...

How many times did I kill myself?

Like an endless hourglass, my task seemed to never end. Flame Emperor's achievements appeared as indestructible as a pyramid.

Then, cracks began to appear in that pyramid.

"Flame Emperor solos floor 39!"

"Solo play conquers floor 38! Another legend of the Flame Emperor!"

"Hunter Yoo Soo-Ha. First Korean to reach world rank 1."

...

"Who will claim the throne of rank 1 with Sword Saint gone? Foreign experts say 'Korean Yoo Soo-Ha is the most likely.'"

"The enigmatic hero breaks through floor 10. Who is this hero?"

"Sword Saint missing for 22 days. Is this the worst turmoil for the Hunter industry?"

...

One by one, the newspaper clippings on my room wall that showcased Flame Emperor's history disappeared.

One by one.

"Unbreakable 10th Floor Conquered. Who is this Mysterious Hero?"

"Sword Saint missing for 22 days. Is this the worst turmoil for the Hunter industry?"

They Disappeared.

'I can see it!'

The end was in sight.

Still a long way to go, but... it's okay. I can endure. The once-seemingly immortal and indestructible Flame Emperor is neither eternal nor invincible. Just being sure of this fact is enough for me.

'I can do the impossible!'

I swung the knife.

Swinging it, I killed the time when the Flame Emperor conquered the 37th floor.

"Hunter Yoo Soo-Ha. First Korean to reach world rank 1."

"Who will claim the throne of rank 1 with Sword Saint gone? Foreign experts say 'Korean Yoo Soo-Ha is the most likely.'"

"The enigmatic hero breaks through floor 10. Who is this hero?"

"Sword Saint missing for 22 days. Is this the worst turmoil for the Hunter industry?"

I swung the knife again.

Swinging it, I killed the time when the Flame Emperor reached the pinnacle of the world.

"Who will claim the throne of rank 1 with Sword Saint gone? Foreign experts say 'Korean Yoo Soo-Ha is the most likely.'"

"The enigmatic hero breaks through floor 10. Who is this hero?"

"Sword Saint missing for 22 days. Is this the worst turmoil for the Hunter industry?"

I killed it.

"The enigmatic hero breaks through floor 10. Who is this hero?"

"Sword Saint missing for 22 days. Is this the worst turmoil for the Hunter industry?"

I killed it.

"Sword Saint missing for 22 days. Is this the worst turmoil for the Hunter industry?"

Finally,

[You have died.]

My old knife now gleamed as if new.

My hands had fewer wrinkles. My room had become smaller due to frequent moves. As I regressed to my younger days, life became poorer. Occasionally, when I went to the bathroom to take a break, I could see my much younger face in the mirror.

And then.

"Ah..."

They were gone.

Nothing was there on my wall.

The numerous newspaper articles and magazine interviews had vanished. There were no scraps of paper on the walls of my room.

A void.

I had erased the history named Flame Emperor.

"I did it."

I murmured unconsciously.

"I'm back..."

May 6th, 11 years ago.

One month before Flame Emperor - Yoo Soo-Ha's awakening.

I had regressed.

'There's no need to hesitate.'

I was dressed in shabby clothes.

'No need to wait.'

In a plain hoodie and sweatpants, everything I owned in my early twenties. I ventured out, armored in my meager belongings.

The thrill of being in the past... was absent.

'Yoo Soo-Ha.'

Until I killed him.

'I won't be complacent.'

4090 times.

That's how many times I died to return to today.

More than the 4050 times I initially calculated. Counting the time spent on thousands of suicides and breaks, it added up to that.

But that wasn't all.

I gathered everything about Yoo Soo-Ha, every bit of information.

I repeated today, May 6th, 10 times.

'11 AM.'

Yoo Soo-Ha almost always wakes up at 11 AM. On May 6th, he awoke at the same time, grimacing, perhaps because of the four beers he downed the night before.

'2 PM.'

Yoo Soo-Ha left the rental studio he lived in for hunting grounds. A place where F-rank Hunters often stayed. Taking advantage of the fact that they often died while hunting, the landlord set low rents but demanded high security deposits. Shrewd business.

'3 PM.'

Yoo Soo-Ha hunted slimes on the 2nd floor of the tower. But slimes alone didn't make for a good day's earnings. At 3:11 PM, Yoo Soo-Ha grumbled to himself,

"Ah, damn. When will I be rolling in dough like the Sword Saint?"

Four minutes later, at 3:15 PM, he muttered,

"Wow, hunting slimes is so boring."

A typical F-rank Hunter.

Living life waiting for a golden ticket.

That was 21-year-old Yoo Soo-Ha, not the 32-year-old Flame Emperor.

"If only I could win the lottery..."

Soon after, 21-year-old Yoo Soo-Ha would realize this wish.

Upon gaining the Returner's skill, Yoo Soo-Ha used it to win the lottery.

The Merchant Union, known as Sang-Ryun, issued lottery tickets weekly, the only guild in the tower to do so. And among the recorded winners was the young man who would later be known as the Flame Emperor.

Twice in a row, he hit the jackpot.

'That's three and four weeks from today.'

But...

The 21-year-old Yoo Soo-Ha I was looking at would not have that future.

'You die here today.'

May 6th, 5:31 PM.

Yoo Soo-Ha left the 2nd-floor hunting grounds, perhaps thinking he couldn't make it in life just hunting slimes. He moved to a more challenging area, less frequented by novice Hunters.

A remote and dangerous place.

'...He's here.'

I was waiting there.

'That's him.'

Yoo Soo-Ha, yawning and sauntering along. I recognized him instantly, even though it had been 11 years. Not because I was particularly perceptive. Simply because Yoo Soo-Ha looked much the same then as he would 11 years later.

'Probably gorged himself on some Elixir of Fire later.'

Thanks.

For being such a greed-driven pig!

'Come on.'

My heart pounded wildly.

I swallowed my nerves and called out.

"Ex-excuse me, Hunter! Please save me..."

"What?"

Yoo Soo-Ha looked my way.

"I was attacked by wolves... Please, save me. Give me a potion..."

I was covered in blood. Not mine, but from monsters I'd hunted earlier. To anyone else, I looked like a novice Hunter, inches from death.

"Ah, damn. What's this?"

Yoo Soo-Ha probably saw me just like that.

"Did you already mess with the monsters here? Damn it. My hunt's ruined for today."

"Please... a potion..."

"What potion? I'm not gonna give my expensive potion to a stranger for free. That'd be insane."

Yoo Soo-Ha took out a plastic bottle, shaking it in front of me. The liquid inside, as red as blood, sloshed around. It was a recovery potion from Alchemy Castle, costing 20 gold at the store.

"I'll give you... twenty gold... for it..."

"Wow. You're really greedy, aren't you?"

Yoo Soo-Ha crouched down to my eye level.

"Don't you get it? You're about to die. And you want to save your life with just 20 gold? Isn't your life worth more than that?"

"Uh..."

"Think about it. If I leave right now, you're dead. If you don't want to die, you should be willing to pay the right price for your life."

"..."

Alright.

I knew it.

"I'll give you... forty gold..."

"Forget it. Just give me everything you have."

I knew he was this kind of guy.

"Ah, right. You want to give more, but you can't even move your hands, right? Don't worry. I'll collect it for you. I'm that generous."

Yoo Soo-Ha rummaged through my pockets. My shirt, inside my hoodie, and my pants. He finally found my leather wallet and smirked.

"Let's see. 1 gold, 2 gold, 3 gold... Hmm. About 60 gold? Why are you so poor? Carry more money on you."

"Uh, that's... all I have..."

"Don't worry. I'll spend it well."

Yoo Soo-Ha pocketed my wallet and patted my head.

Just like he did 4050 days later, when he burned me alive.

"Life's like that, isn't it?"

He reached into his pocket, not for the promised recovery potion, but something else. Instead, he drew out a knife.

A sword.

Not a lifesaving tool, but a deadly weapon.

'Hah.'

I looked up at Yoo Soo-Ha. It wasn't out of anger, just disbelief. But perhaps interpreting my look differently, Yoo Soo-Ha shrugged.

"Hey, don't look at me like that. I thought about giving you the potion, but what if you seek revenge later? Can't have that. Gotta live without future troubles. Since you've seen my face..."

Yoo Soo-Ha was smiling.

"You've gotta die."

The Hunter I had only seen from behind on TV. The one I admired as a hero for ten years, envying his success.

The true face of the hero was hideous.

Much more than I had imagined.

'Good.'

I quietly watched Yoo Soo-Ha grip the knife.

'I'll live without future troubles.'

He slowly raised the knife.

And then.

I kicked his groin with my right foot.

"Argh!?"

Staggering, Yoo Soo-Ha's posture faltered for a brief moment. But that was all I needed. I narrowly dodged the trajectory of his knife and,

"Huh?"

I stabbed his throat with my sword.

"..., ...!"

I wasn't like Yoo Soo-Ha. Facing my prey, my target for elimination, I didn't waste time with pointless chatter. Immediately after stabbing him in the neck, I twisted the sword, slicing under his jaw.

"Krh, huuh...!"

A fountain of blood erupted. My hands quickly soaked. Yoo

Soo-Ha writhed in pain on the ground, then let out a scream.

"Aaaaaah!"

But it was brief. Soon, his throat was clogged with blood foam.

"Good."

I stepped on Yoo Soo-Ha's throat.

"..."

His eyes widened. Why? How? Such questions and anger were visible in his gaze. A gaze that would soon fade. I had no obligation to answer.

"Think of it as a valuable experience."

I grabbed the dagger.

The dagger that had killed me 4090 times.

And swung it.

To kill the monster.

Chapter 6: Hero Hunting (3)

"Uuuk, Gag...!"

The brink of death can awaken latent powers.

This adage has long circulated in the Hunter community: face death to awaken your skill. Perhaps it wasn't just a saying, but actual truth. At least it seemed more plausible than awakening skills through sheer envy, no matter how extreme.

Thus, I did not let my guard down.

Without complacency, I swung my dagger directly.

"Hah!"

To ensure the psychopath before me wouldn't awaken his powers by chance.

"Agh....."

Die.

"Groan..."

What enraged me the most wasn't just that this psychopath had burned me alive without a second thought, nor the pain and injustice of it. There was something else that infuriated me more.

'He said his name.'

Before I returned to the past.

Before the Flame Emperor burned my head to a crisp, he smiled and said:

- But you know I'm the Flame Emperor. You saw me kill the Saintess.

- So, you must die.

- My name is Yoo Soo-Ha. Farewell.

It all sounded like the ramblings of a madman. But there was one truly strange part that I couldn't bear.

'The last thing he said.'

Why did he reveal his name while killing me?

Did he think I didn't know who the Flame Emperor was?

No, that wasn't it.

'He was showing off.'

The Flame Emperor.

That murderer... was posturing.

As if it was a sacred duel where warriors reveal their names. In his mind, as he killed me, the Flame Emperor must have thought:

- I, at least, reveal who I am as I kill.

- Thus, I am honorable.

How dare.

"A monster like you..."

How dare a psychopath like you.

"A bastard like you, doing such things...!"

A man who casually murdered a bystander. Who set a locality ablaze and then shamelessly returned as if he did nothing wrong. Such an inhuman creature, worse than a beast, a devil.

Pretending to be noble.

"Don't make me laugh!"

Thrust!

My sword pierced Yoo Soo-Ha's neck.

"..."

Yoo Soo-Ha was already silent. No screams, no groans. In a secluded hunting ground, where no one else passed by, Yoo Soo-Ha lay on the ground, his eyes lifelessly gazing at the sky.

He was dead.

"Haa, huff... Haa..."

Perhaps 'dead' was an understatement. He wasn't just any hunter, and his death was far from ordinary.

A man who would have become the Flame Emperor. A legend who would have reached the world's top rank. The one who would have single-handedly conquered the untamed 10th floor of the tower.

Was killed by me.

"Sigh."

I exhaled deeply.

"Finally, some sanity returns..."

I was about to remark on my return when I stopped. Were they attracted by the smell of blood? Wolves. Large wolves, their dark fur marked as if tattooed by human hands. Known as prairie wolves, the more complex their patterns, the stronger they were.

These wolves were simple-patterned, but...

"..."

First, I retrieved the wallet Yoo Soo-Ha had stolen from me.

Cautiously, I stepped back.

"You want this corpse, don't you?"

Pointing to the body, I spoke.

"I don't need it. Take it."

I retreated.

-Awoooo.

The wolves approached the corpse. Rip! Their teeth tore through the clothing. As one wolf bit in, others joined. Rip, tearing... Soon, the body was hidden beneath their massive forms.

"Eat well."

I quickly retreated.

'Is it over?'

I buried the bloodied clothes. Deep in a hole I had dug earlier. I washed off the blood with water I brought in plastic bottles. Changing into fresh clothes from my backpack, I still couldn't quite believe it.

'Is it really over?'

If my new clothes looked too clean, it might raise suspicions. I deliberately rolled in the dirt. When they seemed dirty enough, I returned to Babylon, the city on the 1st floor of the tower. A Vigilante Corps member was on guard but merely glanced at me before yawning and looking away.

'Ah.'

No one knew.

'It's over.'

I went to a pub and ordered a beer. Even after finishing one and ordering another, no one paid me any attention. No one knew what I had done.

The pub's TV showed only old news.

-Today, another attempt to conquer the 10th floor was thwarted.

-Despite the participation of rankers from 2nd to 7th...

-There's growing criticism of the Sword Saint, ranked 1st but not participating in the raids...

There was no breaking news about 'Hunter missing on 2nd floor hunting grounds.'

It was expected. The loss of a novice Hunter's life was a daily occurrence. Just as no one paid attention to me, nobody cared about the disappearance of an unknown Hunter.

So.

'It's over!'

Yes.

I had successfully hunted down the monster.

I raised my empty glass high.

"One more beer, please!"

"You're drinking a lot today. Did the hunt go well?"

"Yes, very well. Extremely well!"

I couldn't have felt more relieved.

For a few hours, I filled my heart, now light and breezy, with beer. It wasn't until the sun began to set outside the pub that I slowly started to think about reality.

'What do I do now?'

There was much to do.

'I could win the lottery. I could sell unknown top-floor strategies for money. Wow, my life has opened up. It's wide open!'

I looked up at my ability window.

The ability window, visible only to the Hunter themselves.

+

Name: Kim Gong-Ja

Rank: F-Rank

Skills (2/4)

1. [I Want to Become Just Like You] (S+): Passive

2. [Returner's Winding Clock] (EX): Passive

3. None

4. None

+

"Wow, who needs side dishes?"

My ability window was like the most delicious side dish in the world. An S-Rank skill and an unheard-of EX-Rank skill. It's like adding caviar to a steak dinner.

'Wanting more would be greedy. Yeah.'

But the satisfied smile on my face was short-lived.

"...But I have no combat skills."

Ah.

Is this how human nature is?

I slowly started noticing what I lacked.

"No matter how much money I make, a Hunter needs to be a Hunter... Having money without power, I'll be robbed eventually..."

The society within the tower was even more brutal than the outside world.

Elegantly put, it was a survival of the fittest world. Simply put, the law of the jungle.

If only I could just run away to the outside world...

'Once you enter the tower, you can never leave.'

That was the rule.

Even an S-Rank Hunter with spatial movement abilities couldn't leave the tower. It was simply impossible.

The only person who could interact with the outside world from Babylon was the leader of the Sang-Ryun (Merchants Union), the Hunter known as "Countess."

'She can send and receive items outside, but can't physically leave the tower herself...'

In other words, entry was at one's discretion, but exit was not.

Only those ready to abandon everything in the outside world could become true Hunters.

Wealth, relationships, status, nationality, everything.

Maybe... even their humanity.

"Right."

Of course, I was no different.

"Whether it's death or booze, I have to succeed in the tower."

Buoyed by the alcohol, I murmured. Success. I desperately wanted to succeed.

Why did I idolize the Flame Emperor in the first place? Because of his character? Did he have any character to speak of? The reason was much simpler.

I envied the Flame Emperor's dazzling achievements and success.

"Let's succeed, Kim Gong-Ja. Yeah. After dying 4090 times, what can't I do? I must succeed..."

Then.

-Jingle.

The pub's front door chimed.

At first, I didn't care who entered.

How impressive could a Hunter be who starts drinking in the early evening?

But soon, other drunkards began to whisper.

"Hey, isn't that person over there...?"

"Huh? Seems like it."

"Why here...?"

The pub quieted oddly. Everyone held their breath. Now curious, I couldn't help but look.

A well-dressed elderly man in a black suit stood there.

"Hmm."

Dressed as if he was about to head to the office, with a plain, bright red tie. He looked like an ordinary businessman, enough to make you wonder, 'Did I accidentally return to the outside world?'

Except, his shoes were red sneakers, not formal shoes.

'Wow. What kind of fashion sense is that?'

It was extremely unbalanced.

But the oddity wasn't just his attire.

"Milk."

"Yes?"

"Warm milk mixed with a bit of vodka and sugar. Honey would be better than sugar."

Faced with the bizarre order, even the pub owner seemed baffled.

"Uh... Sir, I'm not a bartender, so..."

"Don't worry, I'll pay properly."

The pub owner reluctantly nodded. The other patrons continued to sneak glances at the suit-clad elderly man. He seemed quite famous.

'Who is he?'

I frowned slightly.

'It's strange. I know most of the famous Hunters.'

It wasn't bragging, but there was no one who envied top Hunters as much as I did. I knew everyone from the Flame Emperor to the top 100 rankers. They were all objects of my jealousy.

But this strangely dressed elderly man was unfamiliar.

'Where have I seen him? Where?'

It took a while before I remembered.

'Ah!'

Not other than in my own room.

Among the myriad of newspaper clippings stuck on my wall.

「Sword Saint missing for 22 days. Is this the worst turmoil for the Hunter industry?」

'It's the Sword Saint!'

That's right. Before Yoo Soo-Ha rose to fame as the Flame Emperor, this man was the most famous.

I had simply forgotten him, a Hunter who had been active over ten years ago. After all, it's not easy to immediately recognize a Hunter who's been inactive for so long.

Someone who, for some reason, would soon disappear.

'Ah, right... It's 11 years ago.'

I suddenly felt the reality of having returned to the past.

'In this era, it's not the Flame Emperor, but this elderly man who's the strongest in the world...'

It was intriguing.

Despite knowing it was rude, I couldn't help but steal glances at the Sword Saint's side profile. How should I describe it? Like seeing a great figure who had died long ago, right in front of me. It was an odd sensation.

'Wow. That old man probably has an S-Rank skill too, right?'

I smirked, sipping my beer.

'Not a weird skill like mine, but a proper combat skill...'

That's when it happened.

"Huh?"

My hand froze unknowingly.

Suddenly, my S-Rank skill flashed in my mind.

+

[I Want to Become Just Like You]

Rank: S+

Effect: Automatically activated when killed by an enemy. You copy one of the skills of the enemy that killed you and make it yours. You may not copy from an opponent you've already copied from. The copied skill is selected randomly.

*However, you will die!

+

'Wait a minute.'

It was as if lightning struck my brain, illuminating everything.

The same sensation I had when I thought of a way to kill the Flame Emperor engulfed me.

[I Want to Become Just Like You]. It's a great skill. If I wanted, I could die to any Hunter and copy their skill. The downside, of course, is that I have to die.

But.

'I don't die anymore, do I?'

Because I now have another skill.

+

[Returner's Winding Clock]

Rank: EX

Effect: Activated automatically on death. You will return 24 hours back in time from the moment of your death. Your memories and stats are preserved while returning.

*However, there is a greater penalty the higher your rank.

*Skill copied from Yoo Soo-Ha

+

'So.'

A chilling current ran up my spine.

'Can I just copy them all? Just choose any Hunter, die, and that's it?'

The most obvious fact. Yet, due to the tension and pressure of needing to kill the Flame Emperor, I hadn't realized it until now.

'...Even the current world's top-ranked Sword Saint?'

Gulp. I swallowed the remaining beer.

The Flame Emperor, who would become the top ranker in the future, possessed the cheat ability of regression. Then, what about the Sword Saint, who reigned over this era? What kind of ability might he possess?

'If I can copy that...'

I gazed at the elderly man's back.

'This is huge.'

Apparently.

My hunt wasn't over yet.

Chapter 7: The Identity of the Soliloquy (1)

I immediately searched for information about the Sword Saint on my smartphone.

-He was originally from a Nordic conglomerate family.

-Real name: Marcus Callenbury. A big shot who abandoned his family, connections, and wealth to enter the tower alone.

-Exactly what skills he possesses is unknown to everyone.

-It is said that he often mutters to himself.

I clicked my tongue in frustration.

"Not much helpful information."

I searched for interview videos or anything similar, but found nothing. It seemed that this elder, unlike the Flame Emperor, had a completely opposite personality. The Flame Emperor, although rude to journalists, was essentially an attention-seeker and frequently appeared in the media.

In contrast, the Sword Saint was utterly enigmatic.

As a result, the information available on the internet was quite vague. 'It is said' he was from a conglomerate family, 'it is said' he entered the tower alone, 'it is said' he had a habit of muttering to himself. All speculative information.

'Well....'

I turned my head.

In a secluded corner table.

There sat the Sword Saint, drinking his milk-vodka alone.

'At least the information about his frequent muttering seems accurate.'

The elder was unusual from his fashion sense to his choice of drink. He was continuously muttering to himself without any side dishes, just sipping his drink.

"...Shut up. Don't be noisy. You've always been..."

Muttering.

I couldn't make out exactly what he was saying, but every time he tilted his glass, he would definitely mutter something, frowning deeply. Honestly, it was a bit scary.

'Could he have some kind of mental illness?'

A mentally ill Hunter as the top ranker was a terrifying thought, like a ticking time bomb.

'...But then again, the Flame Emperor was a psychopath.'

Maybe being mentally disturbed is a prerequisite for becoming the top ranker.

'Anyway, the top rankers are almost all crazy.'

I shook my head, continuing my search on the smartphone. As expected, it was all speculative information, but one post caught my eye.

-[Caution] Words you should never say in front of the Sword Saint!

"Hmm?"

It was an interesting title. The post was in a Hunter-specific community, a place where you could only join with a Hunter's license issued by the Hunter Association.

An anonymous post was there.

-I witnessed it myself. There are certain taboo words you should never say to the Sword Saint. If you don't want to die, never mention these words to him. Seriously, you'll die.

What are they?

Grandchildren. A few days ago, some high-ranking Hunters provoked the Sword Saint on Floor 9. One of them said,

‘Looking at what you're doing, I can see what kind of people your grandchildren must be.’

‘They must be living arrogantly, just like you.’

‘How embarrassed your grandchildren must be seeing you like this.’

-Then he killed him.

Killed him?

Yeah. Really killed him. In fact, when he said, ‘How embarrassed your grandchildren must be...’ his head flew off. No one could react, you know? The head and body were separated in the blink of an eye.

After that, the post was flooded with comments.

-Don't make stuff up.

-This is just another rumor spread by a major guild.

-As usual, those who are a bit successful step on others.

Most responses were incredulous.

But the anonymous poster stubbornly defended their claim.

-Believe it or not, it's up to you! I just thought you should know.

-I don't think the Sword Saint was wrong. It was the fault of those who brought up his family. But because of this incident, the top rankers are definitely angry. You can tell by how the media criticizes the Sword Saint lately.

-Anyway, be careful around the Sword Saint. Good luck.

That was the end of the poster's comments.

As if there was nothing more to say.

"....."

I looked at my smartphone, pondering.

'A taboo word you should never say.'

I glanced at the pub corner. The elderly man was still sitting there.

"...Too noisy. I'll take care of it, just leave me alone..."

He was still muttering to himself.

Looking at him again, he still seemed mentally disturbed. However, being mentally ill or not, he was still the top ranker. The fact that he might possess unimaginable skills remained unchanged.

'Good.'

And that fact alone was enough for me.

'It's worth a try.'

"Thanks for the drink."

"Ah, goodbye!"

The Sword Saint finished his drink and left. As soon as he was gone, the previously silent drunkards let out a sigh.

"Finally, he's gone."

"He must have dementia, muttering like that."

"You never know. Anyway, he ruined the mood..."

It seemed like everyone in the pub had been waiting for the Sword Saint to leave. I felt the same way.

But for a slightly different reason.

"Here's the bill."

I quickly got up and paid the owner as planned. There was no time to waste.

"Ah, thank you. Come again!"

"Thanks, keep up the good work."

Ding-.

The bell on the door rang.

Late at night, darkness had fallen on the streets.

'Where?'

I looked around. The street crowded with pubs also gathered a lot of people. Dozens of people laughed and exhaled alcohol-warmed breath into the night sky.

'Where did the top ranker go?'

Fortunately, I soon spotted the back I was looking for.

'Found him!'

His distinctive attire was a big help. In Babylon, he was the only one in a suit on this wide street.

I quickly silenced my steps and followed the elder.

'What kind of skill could he have?'

My heart raced.

'The Flame Emperor had a regression skill, an EX-rank skill. What about the Sword Saint, who succeeded a generation earlier than the Flame Emperor? Wouldn't he have an even more cheat-like skill?'

That was soon to be mine. If I was lucky.

.

.

.

.

.

.

How long had I followed him?

Leaving the bustling area, we turned into an alley. Walking further, we left even the alley behind. The outskirts of the outskirts. An empty field with no buildings. The Sword Saint walked steadily into that desolate field.

"Hmm."

He walked, then stopped.

"This should be far enough."

The Sword Saint turned around, the faint starlight illuminating his figure.

"Enough hiding. Come out, young man."

"....."

"There's nobody around here to witness whatever happens."

He was staring right at the tree where I was hiding.

I sighed internally.

'I was caught, after all.'

It was foolish to think I could tail the top ranker without being noticed. Resigned to my own incompetence, I stepped out from behind the tree.

"I apologize for the intrusion. I desperately needed to ask something of you, Sword Saint."

I tried to speak as politely as possible. Yet, for some reason, the Sword Saint scoffed.

"Hmph. Didn't you purposely make noise to get noticed? I don't understand why you're threatening an old man like me."

"....."

Huh?

Somehow, he seemed to misunderstand that I had intentionally made noise. Moreover, without any aggressive action on my part, he was already gripping the hilt of his sword, ready for battle.

'Wait, why?'

Of course, this was actually good for me. My goal was to get killed by the Sword Saint.

'But I haven't done anything except tail him...?'

Whether he knew my thoughts or not, the Sword Saint's expression turned even more fierce, almost spitting out killing intent.

"...Impressive acting. Fitting for a top assassin."

"Excuse me?"

"Don't play dumb. You can fool other hunters, but not my eyes. Did you think I wouldn't know that you're a top-grade assassin sent by the Black Dragon?"

Uhh...

The old man was making a huge mistake.

'Is this good or bad?'

In any case, this was favorable. Even without mentioning his grandchildren, he seemed ready to kill me.

But how did he mistake me, a mere F-rank Hunter, for a top-grade assassin? I was completely baffled.

"Oh! How despicable to pretend and act all innocent!"

Swoosh.

The Sword Saint drew his sword.

"I possess many skills. Among them is a skill that lets me see how many people you've killed. Thanks to this skill, I've survived many crises."

".....?"

I was utterly confused.

'Ah.'

Then it hit me.

'I killed Yoo Soo-Ha.'

That's right.

Today, I had hunted Yoo Soo-Ha. I knew what kind of monster he would become, but to the people of this era, that was unknown. To them, I was just a murderer.

'But murder is still murder.'

So, to the Sword Saint, there was probably a [1] floating above my head, signifying Yoo Soo-Ha's death.

It made sense why he was so wary of me.

"Yes, I understand, Sword Saint."

"Hmm."

"I have no words to counter your caution. But please, think of this as an excuse. I had a truly significant reason, and though I can't fully explain, I swear to the heavens it was crucial."

I was sincere.

But things turned strange. Hearing my sincerity, the Sword Saint's face contorted even more.

"Disgusting."

"Excuse me?"

"How dare a murderer like you speak such words. I haven't led a perfectly clean life myself, but I never indiscriminately massacred people like you!"

Things were getting out of hand.

I was genuinely perplexed.

"No, wait a minute, sir. Massacre? I've only killed one person in my entire life."

"Shameless liar!"

Shiiing.

The Sword Saint pointed his sword at me.

And said,

"I can clearly see the number [4091] floating above your head!"

I was dumbfounded.

"What nonsense are you..."

I was about to retort when my mouth clamped shut. I realized where the number 4091 had come from.

'Ah.'

Killing Yoo Soo-Ha, one.

And...

'My suicides.'

4090 times.

The number of times I had killed myself matched exactly.

"Brace yourself, demon!"

So...

"The Black Dragon Witch or whoever hired you, I'll kill you with all my might!"

To the Sword Saint, I must appear as a mass murderer of 4091 people, a heinous killer whose mere existence was abhorrent. A virus that needed to be eradicated from this world as soon as possible.

"Wait!"

I reached out my hand.

"Just give me a moment to explain!"

At that moment.

The Sword Saint's sword lunged towards me.

Chapter 8: The Identity of the Soliloquy (2)

Luck.

It was purely luck that I dodged Sword Saint's strike.

"Uh!?"

Sword Saint's eyes widened in surprise. He must have thought I was an incredibly skilled master. He might have been prepared for a master to counterattack or dodge his strike... but he surely hadn't expected me to awkwardly roll on the ground.

"Sword Saint, please wait a moment. Hear me out!"

Dying was not a concern for me; I had followed him intending to die. However, I wanted to clear up his misunderstanding before dying, if possible. It would help avoid unnecessary conflicts in the next loop.

"I'm just a worthless F-Rank Hunter..."

"You managed to dodge my sword. You're definitely a top-class assassin!"

"Ah, is this old man deaf!? This is serious trouble."

The misunderstanding was getting deeper instead of being resolved.

Dodging his attack earlier was purely coincidental. I hadn't even seen where or how the blade was coming. The old man's skill was far beyond my cognitive abilities.

'If he attacks again, there's no way I can dodge it!'

Was I left with no choice but to give up on persuading him?

I braced for death and watched Sword Saint slowly approach.

"....."

Suddenly, Sword Saint hesitated for a moment. His steps halted.

At first, I thought:

'Oh? Is he considering listening to me?'

But that wasn't the case. Sword Saint wasn't looking at me. The white-haired old man was frowning at the empty air. I glanced over, thinking maybe a mosquito was flying around, but of course, there was nothing.

"...I said I would handle it myself. Do I really need to keep such a demon alive for interrogation..."

He was talking to himself again.

'What's going on?'

Sword Saint, who seemed ready to strike me down at any moment, had inexplicably stopped his attack. Instead, he started muttering to himself non-stop. The imminent crisis was momentarily deferred.

I narrowed my eyes in thought.

'Could his soliloquy be a skill?'

That's a possibility.

In the tavern, I had assumed the old man was suffering from a mental illness. But watching him talk to himself up close, it seemed different. It was too sophisticated for a mental illness. The old man looked like he was really having a conversation with someone.

'Telepathy skill?'

A hypothesis suddenly came to mind. Telepathy or transmitted voice – a technique to freely converse with people far away. I knew such skills really existed.

'So, he's relaying information about me to others?'

A chill ran down my spine.

'Like broadcasting that he found someone who massacred 4091 people?'

A bounty order.

The Hunter Association rarely issues a bounty order. It's essentially a death warrant. The person becomes an enemy of the major guilds and is hunted by top-rank hunters.

Until they're publicly executed in Babylon's main square of the first floor of the Tower.

'That cannot happen.'

I clenched my teeth.

'I need to die now!'

To prevent a bounty order from being issued at any cost. To return to 24 hours before and erase everything that happened.

I had to die immediately.

I glared straight ahead.

"...It's decided. Despite being my teacher... I must..."

The old man continued his one-sided conversation. Whether he was merely an old man with a mental illness or actually communicating with someone, I couldn't be 100% sure. But regardless of my certainty, to prevent the worst-case scenario, I opened my mouth.

"How are your grandchildren doing?"

Sword Saint abruptly stopped his soliloquy.

He slowly turned his head towards me.

"I've heard that the outside world is quite dangerous nowadays. As Sword Saint's grandchildren, they must be quite lovely. You must be very worried."

"....."

Deep blue eyes.

His eyes resembled the scales of the deep sea, making it somewhat understandable why the old man was called the Sword Saint.

"I heard that you're originally from North Europe. Criminal organizations there are really rampant, aren't there?. Maybe without your knowledge, your grandchildren have already suffered a lot?."

Slash.

'Huh.'

It was a sound as clear as an apple being sliced.

'Huh...'

Initially, I couldn't tell what had happened. I'd been watching the gramps this entire time and I hadn't seen him move. Not even his lips.

So where did that sound come from?

The strangeness didn't end there though. Originally, the Sword Saint was standing on the ground right in front of me.

But...

It started feeling as if the ground was slowly turning around.

The horizon started tilting and the moon in the sky flipped over. High up in the sky filled with stars, the first quarter's moon tilted and became the last quarter's moon. The only thing on the horizon was an upside-down gramps.

“ ... ”

The old man's blue eyes just stared at me and I couldn't help but think that they truly resembled the starry sky. I could see why he was called the Sword Saint*.

*The hanja for the Sword Saint's name actually refers to 'Star' instead of 'Saint'. But for the sake of audience familiarity and convenience, I will keep using Sword Saint, even though 'Sword Star' is a more accurate translation.

Then I realized.

'Ah.'

And then I realized.

'Ah.'

It wasn't the ground that had flipped.

My head had been severed and was falling upside down.

A single strike.

'Beautiful.'

I couldn't perceive the strike from Sword Saint. However, I could see the world after the strike had cleaved through. Seeing it, I couldn't help but think it was beautiful.

Shortly after, I felt a collision. My head felt numb. My ears were muffled. I couldn't hear anything. It took me a moment to realize my head had hit the ground.

By the time I realized it... my vision had gone completely dark.

[You have died.]

What kind of skill did he have?

How long must one train to reach such a level?

[The condition for your skill has been fulfilled by your death.]

I was engulfed in an emotion completely opposite to what I felt when Flame Emperor Yoo Soo-Ha had killed me. With him, I felt betrayed. I wanted revenge.

But with Sword Saint, it was different.

'I want to be like him.'

I was simply envious.

'I want that strike.'

Just like the feelings I had before I knew the true nature of Flame Emperor Yoo Soo-Ha.

'I want it too!'

Jealousy. Desire. Admiration.

Once again, a burning desire enveloped my heart.

And there was a response to my burning desire.

[Randomly copying a skill from Hunter Marcus Callenbury.]

In the darkened world, cards appeared.

[Creating skill cards.]

The cards showed only their backs. Perhaps to hide which card contained what skill?

'At least the card colors are more distinct than when I died from Flame Emperor.'

Maybe I had already gotten used to death. 4090 times. Just as Sword Saint's [Kill Count Skill] had proven, I had experienced thousands of deaths.

No hunter was more accustomed to death than me.

'Not something to brag about, though.'

I wanted to smile bitterly at that moment.

[Please select a skill card.]

The cards that were floating in the air started moving rapidly.

'Wow!'

I was startled by the suddenness, but I quickly focused on the cards.

'I don't need anything else. Golden! I must choose a golden card.'

They were fast. It seemed impossible to follow with consciousness.

'Incredible.'

Had I really picked a golden card from the rapidly flying cards when Flame Emperor killed me? How did I manage that? In hindsight, I was incredibly lucky back then.

'There's no rule saying I can't be lucky again! Come on, gold. Where are you, gold?'

But then.

Something was off.

'Huh?'

No matter how carefully I looked, I couldn't see it.

'The golden card... seems to be missing?'

I focused several times, but if it wasn't there, it wasn't there.

There was only one possibility.

'No, can it be?'

I was shocked.

'Is it really... not there?'

From the beginning...

The Sword Saint never had an S-Rank skill.

"It's unbelievable!"

I felt like screaming in disbelief.

"The hunter who reigned as number one in the rankings! The legend who dominated before the appearance of the Flame Emperor, without a single S-Rank skill!?"

It was hard to believe. But it was the truth. My skill clearly proved it. Marcus Callenbury, the Sword Saint, had reached the pinnacle alone, without any S-Rank skills.

It was a shocking and horrifying revelation.

"No, this can't be!"

I was in denial, facing shock and horror.

"There must be some overpowered skill among the silver cards!"

Whether this was a desperate hope or just pathetic, I was desperate. With all my might, I focused on the cards.

"Three brown cards. Four silver cards."

Seven cards in total flew chaotically around.

"I'll completely ignore the brown cards."

It was a logical choice.

Now, the problem was which silver card to choose!

Probably one of them contained the [Kill Count Skill], and another, some mysterious overpowered skill.

Of course, I was aiming for a skill as powerful as the Returner's Winding Clock, not a subtle one like the Kill Count.

"A one in four chance!"

It was a gamble based purely on luck.

"Please, let it be!"

I reached out and grabbed a silver card.

[Selection complete. Copying skill.]

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

"Ugh!"

I let out a groan and sat up abruptly.

The cramped room.

My tiny studio, filled with the musty smell of unwashed bedding, welcomed me back. Sadly, I didn't have the luxury to enjoy the familiarity of my room.

"Did it... work!?"

I immediately checked my status window.

To see if I succeeded or failed in the one in four chance gamble!

Name: Kim Gong-Ja

Rank: F

Skills (3/4)

1. I Want to Become Just Like You (S+): Passive

2. Returner's Winding Clock (EX): Passive

3. Sword Constellation (A+): Passive

4. None

"Ah..."

I sighed, a mix of astonishment and disappointment.

"Thankfully, I got an A+ class skill..."

First, the relief.

While not reaching S-Class, I was relieved to have drawn the best option available. It was fortunate not to end up with a subtle skill like the Kill Count.

"...Another passive skill."

Then, the frustration.

My initial goal was a combat skill. Some rare martial art, swordsmanship, or a skill that awakens aura. Such abilities were usually active skills.

Meaning, I failed to obtain a top-notch combat skill.

"Ha."

I sighed again.

"No, when I think about it, this is just being greedy..."

If any of the numerous low-tier hunters heard my complaint, they would go berserk. How dare I grumble after obtaining an A+ rank skill?

Right.

I decided to think positively. I would focus on the skill in front of me.

"Open skill card."

The cards, visible only to the hunter, appeared.

[I want to become just like you (S+)]

[Returner's Winding Clock (EX)]

[Sword Constellation (A+)]

Sword Constellation. Just by the name, I couldn't guess what kind of skill it was.

"Well, 'I Want to Become Just Like You' is also a weird name."

It was hard to judge whether a skill was a hit or a miss just by its name.

Maybe it was an incredible skill.

Comforting myself with that thought, I grabbed the silver card.

- Ah, why is it so noisy?

A voice that shouldn't be heard suddenly spoke.

- Gramps. I've told you this before. Go outside if you want to train in the middle of the night.

"....."

- I automatically float and follow you around. There's no need to wake me up. Let's respect each other, okay?

Slowly.

Very slowly, I looked towards the direction the voice came from.

My bed. In the tiny space barely enough for me, something was there. Faint but unmistakably present. That something was lying down like a bull, with its back towards me.

"Excuse me."

I felt chills.

"Who... are you?"

- Eh?

Then, I found myself face-to-face with the unknown entity.

A ghost. A spirit.

Something an alive human couldn't normally see.

- Eh?

The ghost looked fierce. If it wasn't for the clothes, I might have mistaken it for a gorilla. With a bulky figure and a scowling face, it could star in a horror movie.

- Hey, who are you?

"...I wanted to ask that. Who are you?"

- You can see me?

I nodded hesitantly.

"Yes."

- And hear me too?

"Yes. Considering we are communicating... I suppose so."

What was happening?

Was I actually having a conversation with a ghost?

I expected a ghost to be consumed by grudges from its lifetime, wandering like a monster. But this one was different. Apart from being faint, it spoke just like a human.

- Huh, this is strange. This shouldn't be happening.

The ghost seemed just as puzzled about the situation as I was.

- Where is this? Why is it so cramped like a doghouse? Where did that old man Marcus go, and why are you here instead of him?

Finally, a statement from the ghost I could understand.

"Oh. Marcus? Marcus Callenbury? Are you talking about Sword Saint?"

- Tsk. It's too much for a rookie like him to be called Sword Saint.

The ghost seemed displeased, clicking its tongue.

- Anyway, yes, that old man. Where did he go? He should be around here.

I was dumbfounded.

'Sword Saint, a rookie?'

The current number one hunter. The legend who, until Yoo Soo-Ha's future demise, will likely remain at the top.

Who exactly was this ghost, calling such a figure a mere rookie? And why could I suddenly see and communicate with a ghost?

"....."

To solve these questions, I flipped over the silver card.

And read the skill description.

[Sword Constellation]

Rank: A+

Effect: From another world, he cleared his world's tower up to floor 99 but failed on the 100th. Unsatisfied, he was unable to give up on his earthly desires, and has become a spirit.

He cannot physically affect anything in this world, but is able to communicate with the holder of this skill.

Be awestruck by his skill and experience, and ask him for guidance!

*Only the holder of this skill is able to feel his presence.

*Skill copied from Marcus Calenbury.

I was at a loss for words.

- Hey, where did the old man go? Are you ignoring me? Sigh. Hey. Hey! I used to be quite something back in the day! Warriors would shiver at the blink of an eye, and you dare ignore me?

Incredible.

It seemed I had accidentally copied Sword Saint's Guardian Spirit.

Chapter 9: The Identity of the Soliloquy (3)

"Can't you send me back to the old man right now!?"

The Guardian Spirit was furiously agitated.

In my already cramped studio apartment, barely humane for one person, the presence of a ghost flitting about made it feel like a complete violation of human rights. Imagine a giant 3-meter mosquito buzzing around - could you relate?

"Ah, seriously! Even if I wanted to send you back, I can't!"

-You copied me with your skill, didn't you? Then you should be able to cancel it! What about a refund, huh? Don't you know what era it is? No refunds!?

"There's no way to cancel it!"

I explained how I inadvertently copied the Guardian Spirit, but even after my explanation, the ghost was stubborn. Continuously demanding to be sent back to Sword Saint.

-Wahhh. Old man Marcus! My disciple! Your teacher has been kidnapped! Your only teacher has been kidnapped by some loser!

To make matters worse, the ghost began to wail, turning upside down in mid-air.

-Alas, my incompetent disciple. This is all because Marcus neglected and scorned his teacher! I always told him to revere his teacher like heaven.

"Excuse me..."

I was fed up. The initial fear of encountering a ghost for the first time had evaporated. Fear? What's that? Even the scariest-looking ghost would just give you a headache if it's this noisy.

"Can we please be quiet? Please?"

-I'm dead! How can I be quiet?

"Ah, then please die quietly."

-What? You've seen such a wretched person! To a ghost already suffering from death, you tell him to die again. People, look at this kid! He has no manners, even on the first meeting!

"Wow."

My jaw dropped. A ghost this much of a talker... No, a freaking talker, was something I had never encountered before.

And then it clicked. The reason Sword Saint kept mumbling to himself in the bar. Of course, looking back, his soliloquies were rather monotonous.

"Shut up."

"Don't be noisy."

"Too noisy. Leave me alone to deal with it."

99% of his soliloquies were about something being noisy.

To an outsider, it would seem like he was constantly muttering to himself like someone with a mental illness...

"If a ghost like this was attached to him..."

-What? Did you just talk behind my back? How old are you? Daring to blatantly gossip about an elder!

"Damn it."

I slumped my shoulders in defeat. My future seemed utterly bleak.

"I'll have to avoid Sword Saint for the rest of my life. Why does it always have to be a ghost whenever I get a skill?"

-What? Avoid the old man? What nonsense is that?

The Guardian Spirit tilted its head in confusion.

-Marcus is one of the kindest hunters out there. Although he's my disciple, he's a real stickler. But never, ever bring up his grandchildren, okay? He's usually calm, but he loses it when it comes to the little ones.

"I'm well aware of that."

I sighed.

"About that skill Sword Saint has. What's it called? The one that shows how many people you've killed."

-Ah, Eyes of a Detective? Such a trash skill.

The Guardian Spirit immediately responded. So, the official name of the Kill Count skill was [Eyes of a Detective]. The ghost seemed to know all about Sword Saint's skills.

-So? It's only useful for determining if someone's an assassin or not. And a high kill count doesn't guarantee they are an assassin.

"4091."

-Hm?

"That's the kill count above my head. 4091."

The Guardian Spirit looked incredulous, furrowing its brow. Even in death, it seemed ghosts had more expressive faces than living people.

-What? You're insane?

"If I spend another day with you, I just might become insane. You're so loud."

-No... You're a total rookie.

The ghost's expression turned serious.

-A rookie among rookies. You don't even seem to have awakened your aura. How could someone like you have killed 4091 people? Even in my lifetime, conquering up to the 99th floor of the tower, I didn't kill that many.

"Because I didn't kill 4091 people."

-Huh?

I shrugged nonchalantly.

And explained everything.

"How it all happened is that I actually only hunted one really bad guy who would later be called the Flame Emperor..."

That I was killed by the Flame Emperor.

That I was fortunate enough to copy the return skill.

That I couldn't get revenge on the Flame Emperor if I just stayed put.

-.....

For more than 4000 days, I decided to return.

And I executed that decision.

-...What?

The Guardian Spirit's mouth dropped open.

-You killed yourself over 4000 times to get revenge on him?

"Yes."

-.....

The Guardian Spirit fell silent. Earlier, it had an expression of disbelief, but now it was different. It stared at me, deep in thought, a stark contrast to its previous loud and boisterous behavior.

-Hey, rookie.

It floated right in front of my nose.

"Yes?"

-What's your name?

"Kim Gong-Ja."

The ghost hummed thoughtfully.

-Gong-Ja. Why did you choose the old man Marcus right after finishing your revenge against the Flame Emperor?

"Excuse me?"

-Why did you decide to copy his skill right after defeating the Flame Emperor?

"That's... obvious, isn't it?"

I was baffled by the question.

"He's currently the top-ranked hunter of this era. You have to start with the strongest person's skill."

-So you can become strong as quickly as possible?

"Yes."

-...The reason you're being honest is probably because you know there's no risk of the information leaking. According to the skill card, no one but you can perceive me. Completely foolproof, right?

"Of course."

Silence settled in the tiny room again.

-Hmm.

Float, float.

The Guardian Spirit circled around me. It glanced at my face from the left, measured my height from the right, all with a very serious expression. I grimaced, wondering what this strange spectacle was all about.

-Let's see. Hm. Your physique isn't bad if you train a bit. You have remarkable tenacity and a fair amount of ambition. You're sane enough to think things through... Huh, indeed. With a body like this...

The Guardian Spirit mumbled to itself.

-What's he saying?

Seems like the ghost, who was apparently Sword Saint's teacher, was also a master of soliloquy.

-Hey, Kim Gong-Ja.

The Guardian Spirit hovered in front of me again.

"Yes?"

-Show me how you hunt monsters.

I hunted a few minor monsters.

"Is that enough?"

Having nothing better to do cooped up in my tiny room, I headed to the hunting grounds as soon as day broke. Since I had returned to one day prior after being killed by Sword Saint, I needed to hunt the Flame Emperor again today. There were several reasons to go out.

-As I thought...

The Guardian Spirit nodded.

-My prediction was correct.

"Prediction?"

-In my lifetime, I was known as the Sword Emperor.

It was early dawn, and the hunting grounds were deserted and quiet, making it the perfect place for the Guardian Spirit's soft voice.

-I'm not from this world. In my world, a tower similar to this one appeared, and I conquered it faster than any other hunter.

"You mean to brag about yourself?"

-Well, yes.

The Guardian Spirit smirked.

-Though I failed to surpass the 100th floor in our world. Isn't that written on your card?

Indeed, it was.

[Sword Constellation]

Rank: A+

Effect: From another world, he cleared his world's tower up to floor 99 but failed on the 100th. Unsatisfied, he was unable to give up on his earthly desires, and has become a spirit.

He cannot physically affect anything in this world, but is able to communicate with the holder of this skill.

Be awestruck by his skill and experience, and ask him for guidance!

*Only the holder of this skill is able to feel his presence.

*Skill copied from Marcus Calenbury.

+

'That's actually quite impressive.'

Before my return, the Flame Emperor, who had conquered up to the 40th floor, was revered as a legend.

But reaching the 99th floor? This ghost had truly achieved a feat no one else had.

-I could tell right away. I know when a hunter has potential, whether they're a jackpot or a dud. That's why I asked you to show me hunting monsters.

"Ah, I see."

I couldn't help but chuckle at the Guardian Spirit's words.

"Were you checking to see if I had any talent in swordsmanship?"

Such stories are not uncommon, where someone suddenly realizes their true power after meeting a master or facing a life-threatening situation.

A fortuitous encounter.

"Too bad for you."

Unfortunately, I had no such luck.

"I have absolutely no talent in combat. A complete dud, really. That's why I'm desperate to copy other hunters' skills. If I had any talent, I wouldn't still be at F-rank. I wouldn't have lived like that."

The Guardian Spirit frowned.

-What nonsense. You have talent.

"Excuse me?"

-And an extraordinary one at that.

That was unexpected.

"Really? You're joking, right? You're just trying to tease me?"

-I don't joke about these things.

The Sword Emperor shook his head quietly.

-Of course, you have no talent in martial arts. Your movements are clumsy, and your physique is mediocre. It will take you a long time to awaken your aura using ordinary methods. But, irrelevant to all that, you have a rare talent.

His gaze was serious.

-You have no fear of death.

"....."

-Completely absent. Shockingly so.

The Guardian Spirit stroked its chin.

-You probably lost the fear of death naturally after dying over 4000 times. This was part of my prediction. You might not realize it, but you're recklessly fearless when attacking monsters. Normally, people hold back a little for fear of death or injury. But you, you don't have that.

"Is that really a talent?"

-Of course.

The answer was immediate.

-Talent isn't only innate. People can awaken talents as they live. Overcoming the fear of death is one of the hardest to develop, and you've already mastered it.

"....."

-That's remarkable.

I was a bit taken aback.

No one had ever told me anything like that in my entire life, not even myself. I had just been so enraged by the Flame Emperor treating me like an insect... so angry that I leaped over 4000 deaths without a second thought.

The thought of dying.

That it was my talent.

-Let me ask you one thing.

"...What is it?"

-You said you were killed by the old man Marcus. What did you think at that moment?

I recalled my last death. It wasn't long ago, so the memory and emotions were still vivid.

The night sky and the moon.

The silent, peaceful strike.

"...I thought it was beautiful."

That's when it happened.

-Hahahahaha!

The Sword Emperor threw his head back in laughter. The laughter was so loud and wild, it filled the early dawn plains, echoing in the stillness.

After a while, he stopped laughing.

-Interesting.

His eyes sparkled.

-You copy skills, not steal them. Meaning, there's [another me] attached to the old man Marcus as his Guardian Spirit. Now I'm curious to see who will become a greater hunter between Marcus and you.

"....."

-I'll help you.

Sword Constellation. The ghost, once a Sword Emperor who conquered up to the 99th floor, looked straight at me.

-Make you as strong as, or even stronger than, the old man!

And he extended his hand.

-Let's conquer the tower!

It was the moment I gained a partner.

Chapter 10:

Starting Alone (1)

What's the most annoying thing when you wake up in the morning? The smartphone alarm ringing too loudly from last night's setting? Your hair being sticky with greasy oil from last night? Or just the fact that you have to work another day?

-Wake up! Can't you hear me?

"Oh, please just stop..."

-From now on, I'll sing a song popular in my homeland every morning. You know, back in my days, I was skilled in Sound Martial Arts. A single verse from me, and thirty minions' heads would burst!

None of these compare to the worst situation: having a restless, unascended ghost nagging at you.

-Do you even know what time it is to still be in bed!?

"What time is it anyway?"

I glanced at my smartphone.

The lock screen displayed "AM 4:01" in a stylish font.

"It's only four in the morning, you maniac!"

-Ha! At four in the morning, even the bugs are stirring. You're weaker than bugs, so you need to wake up earlier.

"It's just because you can't sleep and you're bored, right?"

-I don't understand what you're saying.

The Guardian Spirit turned its head slightly, as if caught off guard.

"Wow, so that's why Sword Saint gets up at four every morning for training. Not out of diligence, but because you're too noisy!"

-Yeah, I woke him up because I was bored. Happy now? It's all for the best. Now, bow down and thank me.

"I just want to kill you..."

-Heh, I'm already dead. Too bad for you! Oh, but you're like a zombie, you can't die either. From now on, your name isn't Kim Gong-Ja, it's Kim Zombie.

"Damn it."

I reluctantly got dressed in workout clothes. The 3-pyeong room was unbearable with the ghost incessantly talking.

For my mental health, I stepped outside and jogged under the still dark morning sky.

"Huff, huff..."

-Listen, Kim Zombie. Aside from your stubbornness, you have no talent.

The Guardian Spirit floated beside me.

-I prefer to teach from the ground up. But you, you're beneath the bottom. The very bottom.

Since copying the [Sword Constellation] skill from Sword Saint, it's been three days.

During this time, I hunted the Flame Emperor again and carefully avoided encountering Sword Saint. I've been training according to the schedule set by the Guardian Spirit.

-Talent-wise, you have what's called a 'deep talent.' Impressive! I'm jealous!

"Huff... Please don't bother... me while I'm running...!"

-Well, you need special tutoring. And for that, you need to prepare a hefty tuition fee.

The Guardian Spirit grinned wickedly.

-Time to go win the lottery, Zombie.

There's a guild known as Sang-Ryun, also known as the Merchants Union. The guild leader, ranked 3rd among hunters, is known as the 'Countess'.

As I mentioned before, the Countess is the only one who can send goods out of and bring them into the outside world. Essentially a walking corporation, thanks to her overpowered skill, Sang-Ryun monopolizes the tower's economy.

Which means...

"Excuse me."

"Yes, how can I help you?"

"I'm here to collect my lottery winnings."

In Babylon, the city on the first floor of the tower, Sang-Ryun is the sole issuer of lottery tickets.

"Ah, you've won our Sang-Ryun Happiness Lottery! Congratulations!"

"Yes, well."

"Congratulations!"

The clerk, wearing a cat-ear hat, bowed deeply. His salesperson smile was like a bright sunflower.

-Every time I see that, I wonder why they wear cat-ear hats.

‘The guild leader is a cat lover.’

-No matter how much someone likes cats, making sane people wear cat ears? They’re definitely a pervert. I’m sure of it.

‘Is that really important right now?’

Of course, the clerk probably thought the cat-ear hat was ridiculous too. But as an employee, he had no choice but to wear whatever the guild leader dictated, be it cat ears or cockroach antennae.

And just to note, the clerk was a man.

A unisex uniform.

"Just to be sure, have you checked the date of your ticket? Tickets over two years old are ineligible for prize collection."

"It's fine. It's from last week."

"Great!"

The ticket was bought immediately after I was possessed by the Guardian Spirit. I needed to win at least once, and the Guardian Spirit kept insisting, "You need moolah!"

"What prize rank did you win?"

"First prize."

"Excuse me?"

"First prize."

"....."

"Here, check the number."

Above the clerk's head hung a display board. Like a slot machine in a casino, the accumulated amount for the [Sang-Ryun Happiness Lottery First Prize] blinked.

53,000 gold.

About 5.5 billion in my homeland's currency.

-Earning money is so easy, right?

The silence around us was filled with the Guardian Spirit's casual remarks.

-Kim Zombie, have you thought this through? You might get stabbed in a dark alley with all this money.

"I have my plans."

I shrugged.

"It's not like hiding it will make it disappear."

Every hunter who wins the lottery gets recorded. The same went for the Flame Emperor. That's how I knew he won the first prize twice in the past.

‘It's safer to be open about it.’

Winning the lottery and getting assassinated right after would be a PR disaster for Sang-Ryun, who needs to sell tickets.

Soon after.

"You've been waiting a long time, Mr. Kim Gong-Ja. My name is Arthur Taylor, your contact for this matter."

A man, more polished than the clerk, approached and bowed. He was also wearing a cat-ear hat.

"I'm known as 'The Banker'. Feel free to use my alias."

"Kim Gong-Ja. Your alias suits your guild quite well."

"Ha, I often hear that. Shall we go upstairs?"

The Banker smiled amiably.

Despite being just a rank F, he was very courteous to me.

-Of course, he's catering to a customer worth 53,000 gold.

The ghost chimed in again.

-Kim Zombie, I've been thinking. You've never been treated well in life, so you're easily moved. Remember a few days ago, when I complimented your talent for dying and you looked so touched? It's pitiful, really.

‘Ah. Just shut up, please.’

-Humans shouldn't be so easily manipulated, kiddo. You should think like me. Everyone in this world exists to adore and worship me.

I'm determined never to take after Yoo Soo-Ha or you, no matter how desperate I am.

Coincidentally, Yoo Soo-Ha and this ghost share similar aliases. Flame Emperor and Sword Emperor. Maybe anyone whose title ends in 'Emperor' is a complete lunatic?

"Excuse me, Mr. Kim Gong-Ja. Is there anything wrong...?"

The Banker inquired as he guided me upstairs, his face clouded with concern. Worried I might look like a madman, I quickly responded.

"No, it's nothing. Just lost in thought for a moment."

"Ah, that's a relief."

The Banker sighed, relieved.

"I was worried I might have inadvertently offended you since you looked a bit unwell. Haha. Glad to hear that's not the case..."

What's with this guy? Is he an angel, maybe?

-Tsk tsk. People are so gullible.

I ignored the psychopathic ghost's gibberish.

We entered the VIP meeting room. The table was already laden with a pile of gold coins, apparently prepared in advance by another clerk.

The Banker smiled broadly.

"This is the total amount for Mr. Kim Gong-Ja."

"...Impressive."

There were over 50,000 gold coins!

Bathed in the spotlight, the room shone brilliantly. The sight alone made my heart race. Whether it was a show or not, the effect was certainly overwhelming.

"You may take all this gold with you, or you can open an account with us at Sang-Ryun and deposit it there. How would you like to proceed?"

"Um."

I tried to regain my composure.

'The allure of money truly is powerful.'

I was honestly tempted.

But my goal is to reach the top, to become an envied and accomplished Hunter. Money is merely a means to that end.

'I should be a man who wields money, not one controlled by it.'

Regaining my composure, I slowly nodded.

"I'll deposit it in the Sang-Ryun vault."

"Ah, such a wise choice, Mr. Customer!"

The Banker was visibly pleased.

"I always advise our winners that while I fully understand their desire to take the money with them, it's generally safer to store it with us. You know, there are always those with ill intentions..."

"And also."

I continued.

"I would like to purchase a position as an honorary guild member of Sang-Ryun."

"Pardon?"

"The cost for a second-class honorary membership is 10,000 gold, right?"

I approached the table and placed my hand on the pile of gold. The golden glow was enchanting. Yet, I was already familiar with a much more captivating flame.

My future.

For the sake of my future, I was willing to invest any amount of this gold.

"I'll pay in full."

"....."

The Banker paused, looking at me intently.

"Mr. Kim Gong-Ja, you don't belong to any guild yet, do you?"

"No."

A guild.

Joining a guild for a Hunter isn't just about socializing. The most significant aspect is the protection it offers.

Even though there's the Hunter Association and Vigilante Corps...

'You never know when you might be attacked.'

Both Yoo Soo-Ha and the Sword Saint had managed to kill me, as I learned firsthand.

A lawless land. Compared to the developed world outside, this place is brutally savage.

'I must not foolishly follow in the Flame Emperor's footsteps.'

Yoo Soo-Ha lived for himself, arrogantly.

Even after winning the lottery twice, he never paid any 'protection fees'. He must've lived carelessly, thinking all the money was his to enjoy.

'And that's why he was later assassinated and poisoned.'

How pitiful.

Why would I need to antagonize the major guilds unnecessarily?

"...Understood."

The Banker jotted something down in his notebook.

"Anyone who pays the set price can become an honorary member of our guild. I'll have a staff member issue your second-class honorary member card right away."

"Ah, and one more thing."

I added a few more requests.

"I'm currently living in a cheap studio. I'd be grateful if Sang-Ryun could recommend a place for me to stay for the time being. Of course, I'll pay properly."

"....."

"And, the press will probably try to find out who the lottery winner is. When that happens, it's okay if you don't reveal my real name, but please let the journalist know that I'm an honorary member of Sang-Ryun."

The Banker paused briefly, pen in hand, momentarily lost in thought.

"Very thorough, Mr. Customer."

"Ah, well. You have to be prepared in today's world, right?"

"...You're absolutely right."

The Banker agreed as the Sword Emperor laughed uproariously behind him.

-Hey. He thought you were an easy target, but you caught him off guard. This is priceless. That's why I love teasing these elites.

'Oh, come on. You were the one calling people gullible. What a hypocrite.'

-Did I say that? I don't remember. If I don't recall, it probably wasn't me.

Unbelievable. Even if your personality is filthy, this is just too much.

I must never become like him.

-Well, anyway, you're managing quite well on your own.

The Sword Emperor smirked.

-I was worried I'd have to babysit you, changing your diapers and everything. But looking at you now, I think you'll be fine.

'If only you were mute, you wouldn't be so detestable...'

-Ah, kiddo. You seem to be in a good mood, too.

Indeed.

Despite my inner grumbling, a smile crept onto my face.

'Of course. It's just the beginning.'

4000 deaths and 4000 days of regression.

The privilege of regression I couldn't properly use while seeking revenge on the Flame Emperor.

Now, it's time to fully enjoy that privilege.

Chapter 11: Starting Alone (2)

-Zombie, do you know what's the most important thing for taking private lessons?

"I wish you would stop calling me a zombie."

-It's the tuition fee.

Having completed our business at the Sang-Ryun headquarters, we left the building.

The streets were bustling as lunchtime approached. Retired hunters operated restaurants and general stores, energetically attracting customers.

Of course, many shops were less successful, with owners sitting idly by the door. It was a brutal but unchanged truth, both in the outside world and in Babylon: some succeed, some don't.

-And you've just secured your tuition fee. So, what's next?

"Maybe a skilled private tutor?"

-Ah, but you've already got one right in front of you.

The Sword Emperor said this shamelessly, without a change in expression.

-What you need now is a good reference book! A textbook to accelerate your growth.

"A textbook..."

-Yes. Scrolls or elixirs. But reading a scroll at your current level wouldn't be much use. The only option left is to collect some damn expensive elixirs.

He always manages to say even the right things in the most annoying way.

-By the way, I don't deal with cheap elixirs. What's it called, the Alchemy Castle? That guild of doctors and pharmacists? Just get the highest quality elixirs made by the best artisans there.

"Yikes."

-I know where the store is, don't worry. Marcus usually visits a place there. If you go and sweep up their elixirs...

"Wait, just hold on a second."

-Hmm? Why?

I lowered my voice as passersby walked nearby.

"...Aren't those elixirs insanely expensive?"

-Of course, they're ridiculously expensive. They're worth their weight in gold. You'll probably gasp at the price.

The Sword Emperor chuckled slyly.

-Want me to give you a ballpark figure?

"...Let's hear it."

He whispered the price in my ear, and I opened my eyes wide in shock. The amount was beyond imagination.

"I can only afford about four with all my remaining money!?"

-Hehe. If you buy them in bulk, you might get a discount and manage about five. Those doctors know how to do business. That's why you should never mess with money-minded doctors.

"Too expensive..."

It seemed like I was going to be broke again. I thought I'd be living comfortably after winning the lottery.

-Well, it might seem painful to spend all that hard-earned money, but what can you do? This tragedy arises from your lack of talent. Just think of it as your fate... Hmm!

The Sword Emperor suddenly tensed up.

-Gong-Ja, hide.

"What?"

-Quickly.

His tone was serious. Reflexively, I hid behind a nearby metal trash can. It stank of rotten and sour garbage, probably from a restaurant's food waste. I cringed.

"What's going on? Why are we hiding?"

-Be careful. It's Marcus.

"....."

I held my breath and cautiously peeped over the trash can. An old man with white hair tied back was walking in the distance. It was the Sword Saint, the current top-ranked hunter with [Eyes of a Detective].

'I'm in trouble if he spots me.'

My heart pounded. Did he sense my tension? The Sword Emperor, usually a loudmouth, stayed silent for a change. We both hid behind the trash can, tracking Marcus.

"...It's noisy again."

Thankfully, Marcus didn't seem to notice us. As usual, he mumbled to himself and walked away.

-Damn it.

After Marcus entered a building, the Sword Emperor grimaced.

-Shoot! That's the best shop.

"The best shop?"

-For elixirs. The best alchemist around has their shop there. Ah, really! Everyone else is just a quack. We should've bought from there...

The Sword Emperor stomped his feet in frustration. It was the first time I'd seen him genuinely upset. I contemplated deeply beside him.

'It's too risky to use the same shop as Marcus. But, a highly skilled alchemist...'

I searched my smartphone for top-ranked hunters.

The list started from the first rank and scrolled down.

+

1st Rank: Sword Saint / No affiliation.

2nd Rank: Black Witch / Affiliation: Black Dragon (Guild Leader).

3rd Rank: Countess / Affiliation: Merchants Union (Guild Leader).

4th Rank: Heretic Inquisitor / Affiliation: Temple of the Omnipotent God (Guild Leader).

5th Rank: Viper - Celestial Clan Master / Affiliation: Chun-Moon Guild (Guild Leader).

6th Rank: Babel's Linguist / Affiliation: Manhak (Deputy Guild Leader).

7th Rank: Wide-Area Communicator / Affiliation: Summons Times (Deputy Guild Leader).

8th Rank: Paladin / Affiliation: Vigilante Corps (Deputy Guild Leader).

.

.

.

+

"It's missing."

I muttered.

The Sword Emperor, who had been fidgeting, responded to my murmur.

-Huh? What's missing? Your luck?

"No, the opposite."

Far from lacking luck, I had more than enough.

"I might not have to spend much after all."

-What?

"I know an incredibly talented alchemist."

I grinned.

"One with extraordinary talent, not just ordinary skill."

We left the bustling area and entered a shady alley.

A poor neighborhood, where people struggling for money had no choice but to live in deteriorated conditions. It was akin to the slums. Hunters with ominous gazes stared at us from the dark alleys.

-Really? A top-notch alchemist lives here?

The Sword Emperor was clearly skeptical.

"Just any good alchemist won't do. We're talking about one with an extraordinary level of talent."

-Stop lying. Why would someone with such talent live in a place like this?

"Ah, if you don't want to believe it, that's up to you."

From down the alley, I could hear tsking sounds. The hunters who had been watching us turned away, probably thinking I was a lunatic. In such a lawless area, people usually didn't mess with those who seemed mentally unstable.

I smirked to myself.

'Wonder what they would do if they knew my wallet was filled with gold coins?'

The answer was obvious. They would pounce like beasts.

Of course, I had no obligation to kindly inform them about my financial situation. Moving deeper into the alley, where the stench of rotting corpses hung in the air, a strangled voice caught my attention.

"Please, just don't touch my research tools!"

A young voice, followed by rough responses.

"How many times have we heard that nonsense!"

"You've missed the deadline by half a year. It's time to pay the price."

I headed towards the source of the commotion. At a crossroads of alleys, a shabby shop stood amidst them. The dispute was happening right there.

"If you take all my tools... I really won't have a way to live..."

"Enough of this. Take everything!"

Burly thugs were loading machinery onto a handcart. A woman, probably in her late twenties and seemingly the owner of the shop, desperately clung to the cart.

"Just give me one more week, no, five more days..."

"Wasn't it you who turned that week into half a year!"

Thud. The thugs pushed the cart away, and the woman, unable to resist, fell to the ground. Even with scraped knees, she reached out towards the cart.

"My potion, it's still incomplete..."

"Damn, got stuck dealing with a crazy alchemist. Lady, I'm telling you, never dabble in potion-making again!"

The cart creaked away, disappearing down the alley.

Left behind was the despondent shop owner and onlookers, including myself, who had come to see the commotion. The spectators murmured among themselves.

"Tsk, knew that shop was doomed."

"Her potions are too expensive. Who pays 40 gold for a stamina potion?"

"Too young and naïve to handle business..."

Perhaps overhearing them, the shop owner suddenly snapped her head up.

"Expensive? I barely make a profit!"

Her appearance was rather pitiful. With greasy hair and old glasses, she looked more like a relic than a living person. Her voice was more like the shattering of jade than its rolling.

"I provide the best potions in Babylon for such prices! I should be thanked for opening a shop in such a rundown area!"

"Yeah, right. Dream on, girl."

"Acting all high and mighty..."

The onlookers shook their heads and dispersed.

Disgust!

It seemed impossible to feel any fondness for the shop owner.

"Wait, please! At least buy one stamina potion... My special potion can revive a dying hunter."

"No thanks, we're not buying!"

The shop owner's belated attempt to retain customers was futile. The crowd quickly vanished.

"It really works... It's not a lie..."

She eventually collapsed to the ground.

-Hey.

Having observed the whole spectacle, the Sword Emperor muttered.

-Don't tell me the 'extraordinary alchemist' you mentioned... is that loser?

"If I said yes, what would you do?"

-I'd seriously start worrying about your mental state. I'd think, 'He's died over 4000 times, now his brain's gone too.' Then, I'd recommend the best psychiatrist in Babylon for you.

I scoffed.

"I should have been concerned about my mental state the moment I started seeing ghosts. That shop owner, she's indeed an extraordinary alchemist."

-Not an extraordinary alchemist, more like an extraordinary loser! You're insane!

The Sword Emperor ranted, but I ignored him. I approached the shop owner, who was still sitting on the ground.

"Excuse me."

"Uh...?"

She looked up at me. Up close, she appeared even more downtrodden. Wearing mismatched, oversized clothes, only her white lab coat hinted she wasn't a beggar.

"Miss, are you still open for business?"

Of course, she was no beggar.

Nor was she just an ordinary alchemist.

"If you're still open, I'd like to order some potions."

Master Alchemist.

The alchemist who would eventually rise to the 5th rank.

Currently unranked, but destined for greatness.

"It's a bit pricey. Is that alright?"

"Yes, yes! Of course! I can make anything you need!"

Her face brightened. What a relief for her – just when her shop seemed doomed, a customer willing to pay for expensive potions appeared.

"So, how expensive are we talking...?"

"Well."

She might have been untouchable in the future due to her high prices, but not this time.

"I was thinking of ordering about 20,000 gold worth."

"..."

She was speechless.

So what if she looked a bit wretched? To me, she was a goose that laid golden eggs – pure gold, 100%!

I smiled.

"What are you waiting for? Take my order, Miss."

I was ready to become her most loyal customer.

Chapter 12:

Starting Alone (3)

"The place is a bit run-down... but please, come in."

The alchemist hesitantly led me inside.

The shop looked like it had been hit by a storm.

"Really, it's quite shabby..."

It was no exaggeration.

Broken glass bottles littered the floor, bookshelves had toppled over, scattering books everywhere, and dust fluttered in the air as a bonus.

Complete chaos.

-Wow.

The Sword Emperor was astonished.

-I've been told I was disorganized, but this young lady takes it to another level. Such a sanitary place. Do you really want elixirs made by her?

"Are you really going to place an order worth 20,000 gold with me...?"

The alchemist and Sword Emperor asked simultaneously.

I smirked.

"Should I pay in advance if that makes it more believable?"

"No, there's no need for that, but..."

The alchemist hesitated, then abruptly stopped.

"...Actually, yes, if possible, I would prefer an upfront payment."

Her face turned completely red, seemingly embarrassed by her own request. As expected, her financial situation must be quite dire.

"Take whatever amount you need from my vault at Sang-Ryun. I'll let them know in advance."

"As much as needed..."

The alchemist mumbled to herself.

"Yes. Of course, my wealth isn't unlimited. If you could keep the budget within 20,000 gold, I'd appreciate it."

"What kind of potion would you like to order?"

The alchemist seemed overwhelmed by the budget yet relieved.

"I'm sorry, but I cannot produce narcotics. I refuse to make any drug-related potions due to my personal beliefs. If your order is about that, I must decline..."

"Oh."

I internally agreed.

'She seems naive, but she's destined to become the Master Alchemist.'

It's rare to find someone who can firmly decline such a lucrative offer, especially after facing the downfall of their shop. Yet, she adamantly refused to make narcotics.

This alchemist, while seemingly weak, had a strong sense of pride.

"Haha, don't worry, it's nothing like narcotics."

"Ah. Then what specific potion are you looking to order?"

"Um..."

I looked at the Sword Emperor, who had been silent since entering the shop. He finally sighed after noticing my glance.

-Alright. I'll tell you the recipe, though I still can't believe she's capable.

About time.

-Listen. The liver of a rabbit-pig, eyes of a balloon cat, skin of a giant desert worm...

"I will now list the ingredients. The liver of a rabbit-pig, eyes of a balloon cat, and so on..."

I recited the ingredients as told by the Sword Emperor.

"Wait! Please, let me write it down!"

The alchemist hurriedly scribbled down the recipe. A total of 23 ingredients. As the list grew, so did her seriousness.

-That should be enough for the ingredients. The rest depends on the alchemist's skill.

"That's all for the ingredients."

"..."

The alchemist quietly stared at her notebook, biting her nails.

"If these are combined... they would greatly enhance reflexes. Not relaxation but more like stimulation. No, upon further consideration, it's more about awakening than tension."

-Huh?

The Sword Emperor looked at her in surprise.

Continuing, the alchemist elaborated on the intricate combination of ingredients, demonstrating a deep understanding.

-That's my concoction. The ultimate elixir, developed after consuming various poisons myself. It's a precious potion that's hard to come by in your world!

I chuckled.

"Even she praises it as a highly sophisticated combination."

-.....

"Recognizing the value of a combination after just one look. Trust her. Despite appearances, she will be the highest-ranking individual in the Alchemy Castle in 10 years."

The Sword Emperor remained silent, his expression turning grim. He looked exactly like a disgruntled toad.

-You just insulted me in your thoughts, didn't you?

"I'm dealing with a ghost who's after the living now."

I played dumb.

Always too perceptive for his own good.

Four days passed quickly.

The alchemist used quite a bit of money from my vault. Someone from Sang-Ryun even came to confirm if it was okay, but I told them to let it be.

No matter the cost, getting potions from the future Master Alchemist was a bargain.

-How about a bet, Zombie?

"What now?"

-That girl will run off with your money. I can tell. She has the look of a grand thief! Go ahead, commit suicide, Kim Zombie! Die four times and return four days back!

Obviously, ghosts have no knack for judging people.

On the exact fourth day at noon.

The alchemist personally arrived at my lodging, carrying bundles of elixirs.

"I'm sorry for the delay. I wanted to deliver them sooner, but the combination took longer than expected..."

"No problem. You promised to deliver within four days, so it's fine."

The elixirs she brought were in three boxes.

Considering three doses a day, it amounted to a 30-day supply.

Had I used the store the Sword Emperor knew, I could have only secured a two-day supply. The efficiency here boasted a whopping 15 times more.

'And the effects are likely to be even better.'

This is how money should be spent.

My lips curled into a pleased smile.

"Excuse me..."

"Yes?"

"Why did you entrust such a costly order to an unknown alchemist like me?"

The alchemist fidgeted with her fingers.

"I have confidence in my skills. The recipe you provided, only about two people in Babylon could comprehend and make it... But people only treat me as a weirdo..."

"Hmm."

The reason for entrusting her with the elixir production was clear: she was a prodigious genius, destined to be the Guild Master of the Alchemy Castle. I wanted to build a connection with her, anticipating her eventual rise.

But it wasn't just that.

Before my 4000-day leap back in time, during the slum fire caused by the Flame Emperor, this woman, despite being a top ranker, was one of the first on the scene, commanding the firefighting efforts.

While helping, the future Master Alchemist murmured:

-...I don't like that Flame Emperor.

-It might be a bit rude to gossip here... But I think Saintess should meet someone better.

The one who recognized the true nature of the Flame Emperor.

'Probably guessed it purely on intuition, without evidence.'

Still, it showed her exceptional insight.

She was skilled, rushed to trouble spots, refused to make narcotics, and had the insight to recognize a psychopath. Wouldn't it be a loss not to befriend such a person?

I spoke up.

"Because you seemed kind."

"What?"

"I helped because you seemed kind. Even if I hadn't, you would have succeeded on your own. Like us kind hunters, we should help each other rise, right?"

"No way can we just let crazy psychopaths be the only ones to succeed. It's infuriating. Let's both fight hard, Ms. Alchemist."

I was brutally honest. It was the best I could do. How she took my words was up to her.

The alchemist stared at me intently, then spoke.

"...Right. We need to succeed to change the world."

Her tone implied determination.

"Thank you! I'll work hard too!"

She clenched her fist.

"Contact me anytime for more orders! I'll always prioritize your requests!"

"Thank you."

We shook hands and parted with smiling faces.

Unfortunately, my smile didn't last long.

-Oh boy. Hearing someone call themselves a 'kind hunter' and the other person actually believing it. You guys are nuts. Absolutely insane.

"...I feel embarrassed about what I just said. Let's just go train."

The next day.

We headed for the hunting grounds, backpacks filled with sleeping bags and elixirs.

The only difference from usual was that we were at the 3rd floor hunting ground, not the 2nd.

Here, tougher monsters like goblin groups and orcs loomed around.

I gazed at them from afar and asked.

"What should we do now?"

-Start by drinking the elixir.

I nodded and gulped down the elixir from my thermos without any doubt.

"Hmm."

It tasted ordinary.

Even pleasantly lemony with a hint of honey.

As I was relieved it wasn't bitter like ginseng extract, suddenly...

"Uh...!?"

Thump.

My heart beat fiercely.

At first, I thought it was an illusion, but it wasn't. Sweat streamed down my back. Surprisingly, I could distinctly feel each drop.

'What's happening?'

Thump.

Not just the sweat, but the sensation of air around my fingers, the pressure, the texture of the ground under my feet, even the time it took to blink felt incredibly slow, as if 30 seconds long.

"This is..."

-The effect of the elixir.

Only the Sword Emperor's voice remained normal amid the slowdown.

-It drastically slows down your perception of events. Think of it as extending time indefinitely. As much as I hate to admit, that girl has decent elixir-making skills.

It was terrible.

Every hair, every follicle felt vividly alive. I could even sense my eyeballs' blood vessels. If I hadn't known, I'd have mistaken it for poison.

-Do you feel it?

"What do... you mean?"

-The wriggling in your heart.

Thump.

There was something. No, something was flowing. It wasn't blood.

It was softer than blood, finer than blood vessels. But something definitely flowed through my body, emanating from my heart.

Something I never distinctly felt before.

-That's Aura.

The Sword Emperor explained.

-Every hunter who enters the Tower has Aura. It's just that they live unaware of it. How consciously you can use this Aura, how freely you can draw it out, that's what decides the battle.

The Sword Emperor chuckled.

His laugh echoed in my head for over 20 seconds. What should have been a fleeting moment, my mind perceived as 20 seconds long.

The fatigue was overwhelming.

-Normally, you'd practice quietly alone or sit in meditation to get used to the Aura flow. But...

Then, something massive approached me.

-That would take too long, wouldn't it?

Boom.

Footsteps.

Like the laughter, the footsteps resonated long. Barely lifting my head, I saw a large orc approaching me.

-If you lack talent, you suffer.

Damn.

-Alright, Zombie! If you don't want to get hurt, use your Aura! You need hands-on training! Even if you die, you won't really die, so what's the harm?

"This ghost... really...!"

-Huh? Can't hear you. Are you mumbling because you can't use Aura?

Again, the Sword Emperor burst into laughter.

-In pain? Then kill yourself. Oh, then your kill count will go up again. That would make Sword Saint even nicer to you, right?

Ah.

My partner was indeed a terrible being.

Chapter 13: Do you have skills, too? (1)

-GRROOOAAAR!

The orc bellowed.

It might have been just a growl, but to me, it sounded like a prolonged outcry, echoing in my ears for nearly 50 seconds.

"Cr-, ugh...!"

I felt a splitting headache.

-Concentrate.

In the endlessly slowed time, the Sword Emperor urged me.

-Don't get intimidated by a lowly creature like an orc! Their attacks are simple and predictable. Once you know where it's going to hit, it's easy to dodge and counterattack. They're ridiculously easy.

"That's... easier said than... done!"

-Here it comes.

WHOOM!

The orc swung its club. No, it was swinging it, slowly but surely targeting my head. I had to move, or my skull would be smashed in less than 20 seconds.

"Damn, legs!"

I attempted to jump aside with all my might, but my body didn't respond as expected.

'So slow!'

Just one step would have been enough to dodge the orc's strike, but that single step felt excruciatingly slow. It was frustrating. I knew where the attack was coming and that it was avoidable!

-You can dodge it. Don't give up.

The Sword Emperor spoke softly.

-Concentrate Aura on your feet. Enhance your kinetic force! Imagine the flow in your heart moving to your right foot, hurry!

Damn it.

'A ghost who's only good with words!'

It was my first time feeling Aura. How could I focus it on my legs? It sounded so simple.

But I had no other choice. As much as I was fearless of death, I didn't want my head to explode under an orc's club!

'Move!'

The flow from my heart felt cool and clean, like clear stream water. I focused on this sensation, trying to guide it to my right leg.

A twitch.

There was some success as the Aura stirred in my heart, but...

-It's hard, isn't it?

It was challenging.

-You don't have pathways for Aura flow yet. It's like your body is a narrow trail in deep woods. To use Aura efficiently, you need highways. Right now, your body is like a path overgrown with weeds.

"Gr-, ugh...!"

Despite the Sword Emperor's rambling, I kept focusing on my right leg. If the heart was a clogged faucet, then my right leg was a cup placed beneath it. Drip by drip, Aura trickled down, but it was far from enough.

'It's frustrating, but he's right.'

A secluded trail in the wilderness.

A fitting description for my current state.

What would happen if I could break free from this level?

"How do I... do it!"

-Huh.

The Sword Emperor chuckled.

-Remember how you were killed by the Sword Saint?
Without being able to do anything?

Yes, I remembered that scene under the crescent moon.

His words sank into my mind.

-That was like a clean, lined avenue.

"..."

A lined avenue.

Such a beautiful strike was just an avenue.

-The Sword Saint still has a long way to go. And you're not even worth mentioning. Zombie, I'm not harassing you for fun, it's because you deserve it. Chuckle.

Crack.

I clenched my teeth.

-Hmm?

Determination surged within me.

"Huff...!"

I threw my upper body forward.

WHOOOSH!

The orc's club passed just above me, creating a whirlwind. A split-second difference, and I would have been shattered.

"How did I..."

Before I could relax from dodging the first attack.

"Can I...?"

The orc snorted in frustration. Probably irritated that a seemingly weak prey dodged its attack. It immediately raised its club again.

-GRRRR!

This time, a horizontal swipe aimed to slice my waist.

There was no time to rest.

I focused Aura on my upper body.

-What? How's that going?

"I'm trying to... make a path... like a highway...!"

It was still hard. The heart's faucet remained clogged. No sign of a free-flowing stream. Despite my thirst, the Aura dripped only a drop at a time.

'Frustrating, but his words ring true.'

A secluded trail.

A fitting analogy for my current state.

So, I wondered.

What if I could break free from this level?

"How does it... work!"

-Hmm.

But I wasn't about to let the third attack come.

-Ah?

I gathered strength in my knees.

-What's this?

And concentrated Aura on my feet, not just gathering it, but trying to coil it like a spring. 5 seconds... 3 seconds... 1 second... It was clumsy, but when I felt enough Aura had gathered, I leaped with all my might.

I raised my sword.

Aiming for the orc's throat!

-GROO?

The monster looked down at me in confusion. My reflection in its eyes, along with my sword's tip, grew larger. In a moment, my sword pierced its throat, contorting its face in pain.

-GRAAAA!

A scream echoed across the hunting ground in the evening sky.

When I thought it was over.

-Don't let your guard down to the end!

The Sword Emperor shouted.

-Ork skin is thick! Focus Aura on the tip of your sword! No, that's too hard. Just pour it all in!

I did exactly that.

-GRAAAAA!

The orc's screams intensified. I wrung every last drop of Aura from my heart, pouring it all into the sword. With each drop of Aura, the monster's agony deepened.

-GRO, GA... GRRR...!

Blood splattered. The orc's blood slowly covered my face like slow motion. I didn't avoid it. Instead, I struggled to load even a single drop of Aura onto the blade.

"Die, now...!"

In a brief moment, I felt my sword pierce through the orc's neck to the other side.

-GRROOOOO... R...

The orc staggered.

Even its staggering seemed prolonged. Gradually, the orc fell backwards. THUD! Since I didn't let go of my sword's hilt, I fell along with the collapsing monster.

"Hu-...uck, ugh! Huhuk...!"

I gazed down at the orc's corpse, struggling to breathe.

The struggle wasn't just with my breath.

Throb. A wave of pain belatedly surged through my body. My vision spun. It felt as if my bones were shattering and my veins bursting.

"Ugh...!?"

-Does it hurt? Must be excruciating, right? Yeah. That's what you get.

The Sword Emperor hovered around me, snickering.

-You recklessly used Aura without proper pathways. Your frail body couldn't endure it! Serves you right.

"You... evil...!"

-But, you did well at the end, coiling Aura like a spring. That deserves praise. Always remember, creativity is key in using Aura. People often misunderstand, but those with sharp minds are better in combat.

I wasn't interested in that right now.

"Hi-, huk...! Kuhuk...!"

This pain!

A torment as if my bones were crushed and veins burst. How could I alleviate this agony? Normally, pain fades over time, but with the time dilation from the Elixir, there was no relief. It just hurt, continuously.

I felt like I was dying.

-Does it feel like dying?

"You wouldn't... know..."

-Then, just die. It'll be fine.

What?

-If you forcibly open Aura pathways, you become half-paralyzed. No potion can cure that. It's a permanent scar. So, you basically crippled yourself fighting that orc.

"What... are... you..."

-Didn't I tell you, Zombie? If you didn't have the Return skill, I wouldn't have suggested such a harsh training method. Even the Sword Saint takes elixirs, but he just meditates. He doesn't recklessly charge at monsters like you.

This damn ghost!

-But you can return from death. It's amazing! Even if you train aggressively, you remain unscathed. I'm envious. How great it would have been if I had a Return skill too!

Wow.

How can someone be so irritating?

Could he have a passive skill like [Snarkiness] or [Lack of Tact]? Otherwise, there's no explaining his rotten character.

-Zombie. But if you commit suicide, your kill count increases.

"So what... about it...?"

-It's unnecessary to increase the kill count here. It's dangerous to attract the Sword Saint's attention.

KUOONG.

An ominous sound echoed from behind. A sound I'd heard recently. Turning around, my bad premonition was confirmed. Another orc, identical to the one I'd just felled, stood drooling.

"Dam... n it..."

The monster looked the same, but my condition was far from it. As the Sword Emperor pointed out, I was practically paralyzed. My entire body was in agony, unable to move a finger.

-It's okay! Many hunters never grasp Aura in their lifetime, but you got the hang of it with just one elixir. Keep up this momentum, and maybe after dying 100 times, you'll have enough experience. Every journey begins with a single step, and mastering Aura starts with one death.

The Sword Emperor grinned.

-Let's go for the first death!

Simultaneously, the orc's club began descending. Slowly. Precisely targeting my skull.

I looked up at the club nearing my face and muttered.

"Ah... Li... fe... su... cks..."

WHACK!

Ever felt your nose break, skull shatter, and brain explode?

Probably not. And thankfully so. It's a terrible sensation.

But at least there was some solace. As my brain burst, a voice echoed.

[You have died.]

Time returned to normal.

Or more accurately, my sense of time returned.

'Sigh...'

A pitch-black space.

A brief stopover after death and before returning.

I'd grown somewhat accustomed to this place... though I wished I hadn't.

And there, floating idly, was someone I didn't want to be familiar with.

-Huh?

It was the Sword Emperor.

-What's this now?

'...This is where I linger briefly after dying, before returning. I encountered it when I was killed by the Flame Emperor and the Sword Saint. I've been calling it a temporary Netherworld.'

-So fascinating.

The Sword Emperor gazed around the dark expanse.

-But, Zombie. Why am I here too?

'Maybe because you're attached to me?'

"Just wait, and soon a voice will announce the return to 24 hours ago. By the way, I'm curious if you'll return with me or not..."

Just as I was about to express my curiosity, an announcement interrupted.

[The condition for your skill has been fulfilled by your death.]

[Randomly copying a skill from the monster orc.]

"...What?"

-What?

Both the Sword Emperor and I were startled. We turned to look at each other, both wearing faces of disbelief.

[Creating skill cards.]

In the darkness, two identical cards appeared.

I stared at them, muttering in confusion.

"...Monsters have skills too?"

And the Sword Emperor exclaimed in shock.

-What is this? That's ridiculous!

Chapter 14: Do you have skills, too? (2)

Regardless of the Sword Emperor's complaints, the voice continued to instruct me.

[Please select a skill card.]

This was undoubtedly reality!

Two bronze-colored cards began to whirl about rapidly. Their quick movement was dizzying, but what truly astounded me was something else.

-Ah, this is absurd! How can this be fair? Being able to copy skills from monsters too is just too much. Hey, who's managing this tower? Why give such a skill to this nobody when there are capable hunters like me?

"Ah, please, can you just be quiet?"

-What? This is invalid! Ah, I'm so angry right now!

The Sword Emperor flailed about in frustration, looking utterly ridiculous. It was like watching a child throw a tantrum over not getting candy. I couldn't help but think how pathetic it looked for an adult to behave this way.

"I need to focus on these cards."

I scrutinized the two bronze cards floating in the air.

"Neither looks promising, being bronze-colored and all..."

Still, I couldn't help but feel excited. To share a skill with a monster felt like a secret mischief. It was thrilling.

"I'm curious."

I slowly reached out my hand.

"Let's just pick one and see!"

Just as I was about to randomly select a card,

-Oh? You're choosing that one?

The Sword Emperor couldn't help but interject, instantly cooling my excitement. His talent for ruining the mood was unparalleled.

"Yes, it doesn't matter which one I choose."

-Why wouldn't it matter?

The Sword Emperor peeked from behind the card.

"You should aim for the better skill if you have the chance."

"But how can I know which card has the better skill? They're both the same color, and only the backs are visible. There's no way to distinguish them."

Then, the Sword Emperor tilted his head.

-I can see the front of the cards.

"What?"

-Yeah, I can see what's written on them.

The Sword Emperor nonchalantly claimed to see the other side of the cards, which baffled me.

"That makes no sense..."

Just as I was about to retort, it dawned on me: perspective! From my position, I could only see the backs of the cards. But the Sword Emperor, freely moving around in this dark space, had a different vantage point.

"Eureka!"

-Shit, what now? Why are you yelling?

Startled by my outburst, the Sword Emperor paid no mind.

"Eureka! Eureka! EUREKA!"

Ecstatic about this newfound realization, I ignored the Sword Emperor's puzzled look.

-This zombie's brain must be rotting like a true zombie. Tsk tsk...

The Sword Emperor's insight into the cards was like this:

[Blessing of Reproduction]

Rank: E

Effect: Nature gives us a home but also challenges. The orc race has maximized its breeding to overcome nature. Killed an orc? Don't worry. Nine more are hiding somewhere!

*However, you will be in heat all year.

[Tchweek, Tchwik]

Rank: F

Effect: "We always end our sentences with 'chweek.' No idea why, chweek! Try a sip of this, chweek." The orc gives a thumbs up. "You'll never escape the joy of 'tchwik' once you start, chweek!"

※However, tchweek tchwik.

"Wow..."

Truly garbage skills. I was astounded by their ridiculousness.

-How about it? If I hadn't stopped you, you would've chosen [Tchweek, Tchwik]. As a man, you should at least have the strength of an orc. Thank me now. Go on!

The Sword Emperor's nonsense was equally absurd.

"Hmm."

I ignored him and pondered my options.

"If I must choose, [Tchweek, Tchwik] seems better."

-What? Are you crazy?

"No. I think I'm right."

I nodded confidently, my decision made.

"Regardless of how you look at it, [Tchweek, Tchwik] is far more useful than the [Blessing of Reproduction]."

-Hey, hey! Wait! Just think a little more. Consider it calmly...!

I smirked as the Sword Emperor fumbled in panic.

"It seems like you're thinking the same as me."

Before the Sword Emperor could protest further, I swiftly snatched the brown-colored card. The cards flew around rapidly, but it wasn't a big issue. It might have been a problem if there were many, but there were only two at the moment.

[Selection complete. Copying skill.]

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

-No, don't do it!

"Let's do it!"

Our shouts echoed together like a chorus.

[You are currently an F-Rank Hunter.]

[There is no penalty for the skill usage.]

With that, the dark world brightened.

•

•

•

•

•

•

Flash. I opened my eyes.

"Hmm!"

My mind felt refreshed.

"Ah, that's good. Indeed, a comfortable sleep is the best cure for fatigue."

This place was no longer the tiny 2-pyeong room. It was an accommodation I had arranged through Sang-Ryun. Though not spacious, it was a hotel room ample enough for one person. After winning the first prize in the lottery, I decided to stay here for a while.

Meanwhile.

-Damn it! I thought I could fool you, but you're just too cunning!

"Hehe."

The Sword Emperor was floating in the air, kicking at nothingness. It seemed quite frustrated at not being able to trick me. Hmm. Just watching it was calming, almost like a beautiful landscape painting.

"Alright, let's gather the elixir again... and check the status window."

There was no reason to waste time here. I checked my status window as I headed to the hunting grounds.

+

Name: Kim Gong-Ja

Rank: F

Skills (4/4)

1. I Want to Become Just Like You (S+): Passive

2. Returner's Winding Clock (EX): Passive

3. Sword Constellation (A+): Passive

4. Tchweek, Tchwik (F): Active

+

"Good. No problem."

The skill slots were full, but it was okay. When the time came to acquire a new skill, I could just overwrite [Tchweek, Tchwik].

I will use it to my heart's content until then.

-Gong-Ja. I've thought about it... Maybe we should just meditate peacefully in a lotus position. Why suffer and die during training? Meditation. Mental cultivation. Isn't that wonderful?

"Hoo."

I arrived at the 3rd floor hunting ground.

In the distance, an orc was wandering around.

-Tchweek... Tchwik.

I took note of the orcs' positions and pulled out the elixir. The steaming thermos. I one-shotted the elixir it contained.

-Hey, Gong-Ja? Are you not listening to me? Let's train peacefully in meditation. I can help you master the aura within half a year. What does it matter how we train, right? Just trust me.

"Kheh! Tastes good."

This was my second time drinking it, but it already seemed addictive. The Apothecary must have paid attention to its taste while making it.

I waited for the effect of the medicine, then spoke.

"Sword Emperor, do you know something?"

-Huh? What? Are you going to meditate?

"When it's advantageous for you, you call me a zombie, but when it's not, you call me Gong-Ja. And you've been calling me Gong-Ja, not a zombie, just now."

Thump.

"I'm kindly informing you to change your habit."

As soon as I finished speaking, the world in front of me seemed to slow down.

My heart throbbed. Along with the pounding heart, I felt a faint flow again.

Aura!

There was definitely an effect in the training method devised by the Sword Emperor. Unlike the previous loop, I could clearly sense the aura this time.

"Hu, uuh... Hoo..."

I approached quietly, steadying my breath. The orc's ears twitched at the faint sound. To this massive green monster, it must have been bewildering to see prey walking towards it.

-Grrrrr!

The orc, deciding to humbly accept this fortune, raised its club high.

The moment I inwardly smiled was then.

[Activating skill.]

I opened my mouth.

"Tchweek...! Tchwik...!"

Hesitation. The orc's eyes widened even more. Its club, which had been cutting through the air, stopped midway.

-Tchweek... Tchweek? Tch...week?

The orc tilted its head, puzzled over how a mere prey managed to learn the language of its kin.

Of course, given the orc's limited IQ, understanding the current situation was impossible, and I was not lacking enough IQ to miss this perfect opportunity.

"Tchweek!"

Perfect Orcish flowed from my mouth.

A level of proficiency comparable to a native speaker!

-Krr? Tch...week?

The monster in front of me was even more bewildered. It was clearly confused and unsure of what to do. Even as I charged, the orc failed to put up any proper resistance.

Swish!

My blade smoothly slit the orc's throat. I carefully controlled it, allowing just a drop of aura to flow into the tip of my blade. Boom! A fountain of blood erupted as the orc's hefty body fell.

-Tch...week...? Grr... Tchwik...

As if lamenting something unjust, it grumbled.

Perhaps, in human terms, it was a dying cry like 'Et tu, Brute?'

"Tchweek."

I smiled victoriously. Using the aura forcefully made my body ache, but I was in much better shape compared to the last loop. It was fine. Using just this much aura wouldn't pose a problem.

-You sneaky bastard! I knew it would be like this!

The Sword Emperor trembled with rage.

-How does it feel to deceive a good orc like that! Huh!? Have you ever thought about how the orcs feel, you filthy human? It's because of humans like you that the pure orcs of this world suffer!

I didn't retort with 'Didn't you say there's no high or low in training methods?'

Instead, I just gave back a mocking laugh.

"Tchweek!"

-Aaargh! I'm angry! I'm annoyed! Why did the tower give such a trickster a cheat-like skill!?

A week later.

I had breached up to the 5th floor hunting ground.

Chapter 15: Do you have skills, too? (3)

A week had passed.

-Grrrr...

The monster stumbled with a sound like a boiling pot. The Great Goblin. Almost the boss of the 5th floor hunting grounds, it eventually collapsed with its throat cut.

I looked down solemnly at the corpse of the Great Goblin.

"Gorr."

This monster was the toughest opponent I had faced in the past week. Ah, how many times had I died to defeat this beast? I felt like an honorable warrior bidding farewell to a rival as I stared at the Great Goblin...

-You're talking nonsense. Like a crazy zombie.

"Ah. Come on. It took me 6 coins to finally hunt it down. Can't I indulge in my thoughts for a moment?"

6 coins meant I had risked my life six times. This being the sixth coin meant I had died five times while trying to defeat the Great Goblin.

The Sword Emperor snorted disdainfully.

-Getting sentimental over killing a monster is the definition of insanity. I only state the facts.

"Wow, that's how you are. Our Sword Emperor really has a great personality."

As already evident from my free conversation with the Sword Emperor, I had become accustomed to using aura. Even now, under the effect of the elixir, time flowed sluggishly around me.

But I was speaking 'much faster' than usual because I was focusing aura on my tongue.

"Gorr."

Even if it wasn't a fair fight but a trick.

I pulled out a brown-colored card and checked it.

+

[Goblin High Society]

Rank: F

Effect: The Great Goblin pondered deeply. 'Our goblin culture is too lowly. Every language ending in Kerk or Keruk. How can I, the boss, shine with such a language!' Then, a stroke of genius hit him. 'That's it! From now on, I will not say Keruk, but Gorr. Gorr! A pronunciation befitting my refined sensibilities.'

*However, this causes internal conflict within the tribe.

*Skill copied from the monster Great Goblin.

+

I clicked my tongue.

"Goblins worry about such pointless things. Keruk or Gorr, it's all the same."

-That's why they're goblins. Humans aren't much different, though.

"What?"

-Nothing, just talking to myself.

Just as I was about to ask what he meant, a voice echoed in my head.

[Your existence becomes better defined.]

A sound I had never heard before.

But I knew what it meant. Many hunters had testified in interviews, and some even showed it in personal videos.

"At last!"

Level up!

[Hunter Kim Gong-Ja is leveling up.]

"Ah..."

It was exhilarating. I had lived my whole life as an F-rank hunter, worried I might remain so forever. But after acquiring the clone and return skills, and overcoming countless pains... finally, my moment to level up had come.

[Your skill slots have expanded!]

[You are now an E-Rank hunter!]

Even though it was still just E-rank.

[May fortune be with you.]

Whoosh!

Red aura burst from beneath my feet. Flames or maybe just a stream of red fluid – it enveloped my body for a moment before flowing down and disappearing.

-...Flames, perhaps?

The Sword Emperor narrowed its eyes.

-No, blood? Tch. It's confusing. Looks like flames or blood...

"That was the level-up effect, right?"

-It's not just an effect to look cool.

The Sword Emperor scratched its head.

-It's a kind of hint.

"A hint?"

-Yeah. The type of effect shown during a level-up determines the [Shape of Aura]. Take that Yoo Soo-Ha guy you killed, for example. His aura's shape was undoubtedly [Fire].

"Flames."

I recalled the memory. The scene where Yoo Soo-Ha burned Saintess in a slum alley. An unpleasant memory I didn't want to revisit... But it was certain Yoo Soo-Ha used aura in the form of flames.

-The shape of aura usually depends on the hunter's trauma.

Trauma.

-A significant event, scene, or memory that has shaped their life. It manifests as the shape of their aura. Like an unconscious image, I guess? Not necessarily a negative trauma, but mostly.

"I see."

-From what I see, you, zombie, are either flames or blood.

I got curious as I listened.

"What about Sword Saint? What shape is his aura?"

-Moonlight.

The Sword Emperor said nonchalantly.

-Marcus got lost in the mountains as a child. He climbed to the top, not wanting to die, and as he neared the summit, the leaves blocking the night sky thinned. Finally, at the peak, he saw the vast dark sky lit up by moonlight.

Moonlight.

-He thought at that moment, the moon, which does not shine by itself but reflects the sun's light, can be beautiful just by accepting. Ah. I want to shine by accepting, like the moonlight.

"..."

-He was deeply impressed and carried that memory throughout his life.

I was dumbfounded.

"He was a child at that time?"

-Yeah. He was 12 years old.

"What kind of 12-year-old thinks so deeply?"

The Sword Emperor nodded.

-That's why Marcus is a born old fogey. Tsk tsk. When I was 12, all I thought about was how to efficiently beat up the bullies in front of me.

"Well, that's also... not exactly normal..."

If Sword Saint was a born old fogey, what about the Sword Emperor in front of me? A born ruffian?

-Anyway, you've gotten used to the 5th floor. Let's move up to the 6th floor hunting ground.

"Ah, about that."

I spoke up.

"Why don't we just go straight for the 10th floor boss?"

-What?

"I can replicate monster skills now. And I'm somewhat familiar with aura. I think I'm more than capable of taking down the 10th floor boss."

The Sword Emperor fell silent for a moment.

His gaze on me was piercing.

-Kim Gong-Ja. Are you getting arrogant already?

"Absolutely not."

I answered firmly.

10th floor!

Our world hadn't conquered the 10th floor for years. It was known as an impregnable fortress. To suggest clearing such a difficult area, it was natural for the Sword Emperor to be worried.

"I really believe I can do it."

But I truly believed I could conquer it.

Actually, I was certain of it.

"If I can't defeat the 10th floor boss within 2 coins, I'll call you Master."

-What? 2 coins?

The Sword Emperor suddenly looked intrigued.

-You, who took 6 coins just to defeat a goblin leader, think you can defeat the 10th floor boss within 2 coins? Really? You know, I've never gone easy in a bet.

"But! There's a condition."

-Oh?

I raised my index finger.

"Don't hide any information about the 10th floor boss's skills from me. No lying. And no cheating with the cards."

-Hmm. Well, that's reasonable...

"And!"

I smiled slyly.

"If I win, you must call me 'Sir Gong-Ja.' With utmost politeness and manners."

-.....

"Why? Are you scared? Hey, if you're scared, just give up."

A twitch.

The phrase 'Are you scared?' is probably the most disliked by a ruffian. And the Sword Emperor was not just any ruffian. He was the strongest ruffian from another world who had conquered up to the 99th floor.

The Sword Emperor's facial muscles twitched.

-Pah, spit! How dare this thunderous brat, with just a few cheat skills, mock the great Sword Emperor? Fine, let's see about that bet!

"Deal."

-Deal! Kim Zombie, you will fail to conquer the 10th floor boss and for the rest of your life, or rather eternity since you can't die, you'll call me Master. Ah! You'll have to live forever with the word 'Master' in your mouth.

"Are you hallucinating? Better start preparing to serve 'Sir Gong-Ja.'"

-Hehehe.

"Hehehe."

We exchanged sinister laughs, staring each other down.

Hunters hunting goblins in the distance murmured.

"Hey, that guy has been mumbling to himself."

"Now he's even laughing alone. Does he have a mental issue?"

"Shh! Don't let him look this way. Act like you don't know him."

"....."

...I should probably cut down on talking to myself.

I quietly shut my mouth and headed to the 10th floor.

Unlike other hunting grounds, the 10th floor boss room had a guard standing in front.

The person dispatched from the Hunter Association frowned upon hearing my story.

"You want to challenge the boss alone?"

"Yes."

It took less than 2 seconds for the guard's expression to change to 'Who is this madman?'

"Look, I don't know if you've seen the recent news... The Black Dragon Guild sent 30 elite members and 4 top-rank hunters in an assault team and still failed. Solo hunting is suicidal."

"So what?"

I stood my ground confidently.

"It's the Hunter Association's rule to allow any hunter who wishes to challenge the boss."

"That's true, but..."

The guard looked troubled.

"No offense, but I record every hunter that enters here. If my superiors check the records later... I'll be the bad guy who let a sure-to-die hunter enter. Please consider my situation too."

"Hmm."

What should I do? I calmly stroked my chin.

-What? Hunter Association? We didn't have such nuisances in our world when conquering the tower!

Of course, I was the only one being calm.

-These guys stepping in! Creating Hunter Associations and guilds, politicking around, I've always disliked it. Wasting their energy on such things, and still they struggle at the 10th floor! Hey, Kim Zombie! Just beat up this guy and enter the boss room.

'No. Why should I hit an innocent person?'

-He's blocking our way, isn't he?

Typical of a psychopath, considering human rights as insignificant as a mosquito's.

"Guard sir."

I sighed inwardly and took out my purse.

"I can see you're always working hard. You're right, Guard sir. Going in alone is just suicidal. But... I really want to commit suicide."

"What?"

"I've been having a tough time lately..."

I put on a bitter smile.

"My lover died a year ago. Recently, Alchemy Castle diagnosed me with an incurable disease. They said I have at most half a year to live. I can't bear to live that half-year without my lover."

"Ah..."

-What?

The Sword Emperor was puzzled.

-What nonsense is this zombie spouting now?

I ignored it and continued whispering to the guardian.

"But I'm a hunter, even if just a lowly one. I don't want to end my life waiting for death in Alchemy Castle. Even if I die, I want to challenge monsters until the end."

"That's a sad story..."

The guard's expression slowly turned sympathetic. You know the kind of expression people make when they hear a stranger's tragic misfortune. That one!

"Here's the money I saved up for my treatment."

I handed the heavy purse to the guardian. It contained a hundred gold.

"It's of no use to me now... You take it, Guard sir."

"I can't accept this kind of money!"

"I want to leave this world light, without leaving anything behind. Guard sir, please don't record my entry here. It's my last request in my hunter's life..."

The guard's expression grew heavy, almost as if he was about to cry. Perhaps the weight of the purse added to that heaviness.

"...Alright. Go ahead. I didn't see anything..."

-Oh dear.

The Sword Emperor was incredulous.

-Hey, are you two shooting a movie? Is this some kind of hidden camera show?

Regardless, the guard let me pass.

I bid farewell to the guard and proceeded. A stone path led to the residence where the 10th floor boss dwelled, reminiscent of an old noble's mansion. I walked down the path leading to the mansion.

'The 10th floor was originally cleared by Flame Emperor Yoo Soo-Ha.'

I stood in front of the mansion's gate.

Slowly, I pushed the doors open with both hands.

'This time it's different. I'll replace the Flame Emperor... No.'

Creak.

The hinges trembled as the doors of the mansion opened.

'I'll write a more splendid legend than the Flame Emperor.'

I took a step forward.

And it began.

-Cackling laughter!

Laughter echoed from all directions. At the same time, the door I had opened shut behind me. Bang! The surroundings instantly darkened, and the eerie laughter intensified from the darkness.

Candles lit up one by one.

-Will you play with us?

Here and there, candles stuck to the floor lit up, untouched by anyone. Wherever a candle was lit, a doll was inevitably placed. Dolls that looked like young ladies, the kind often played with by children.

-Will you play with us?

The dolls opened their mouths.

-Freeze Tag? Rose of Sharon Blooming? Hide and Seek?

-The ice has melted. The flowers are torn. Let's play Hide and Seek!

-Yes! Play with us! Play Hide and Seek with us!

-Tehehehe!

I got into position.

"Alright. I'll play with you."

Aura, honed over the past week, blossomed from my body.

As if waiting for that response, a voice sounded in my mind.

[You have entered the boss stage.]

[Challenger: Hunter Kim Gong-Ja. Alone.]

[May fortune be with you.]

A stage that no one in humanity had yet conquered.

The so-called 'Inferno Mansion's Hide and Seek' had begun.

Chapter 16: Trauma Penalty (1)

Black Dragon.

The guild that has reigned supreme from the day the tower appeared in this world.

"We didn't fail to conquer the 10th floor because of lack of skills."

The second-ranked hunter and leader of the Black Dragon, the Black Witch, had attempted the 10th floor dozens of times. Despite failing each time, the second-ranked hunter always managed to bring back all the hunters who participated in the assault.

In an interview, the Black Witch said:

"It was just a bit of bad luck."

On the other hand, Flame Emperor single-handedly broke through the 10th floor and declared:

"Luck is also a skill, losers."

It was an interview that later came to be known as the Loser's Declaration.

Black Dragon, now labeled as a group of losers, started to see the Flame Emperor as an adversary... but well, that's not important anymore. Yoo Soo-Ha is already dead by my hand. The possibility of such an interview has disappeared.

The question is this.

'Why did other hunters fail and only the Flame Emperor managed to conquer the 10th floor?'

'Was it because the Flame Emperor was overwhelmingly strong?'

Or...

'Was there another reason?'

The answer now unfolds before my eyes.

[Initiating the boss stage.]

As the voice echoed, the scenery of the mansion transformed dramatically.

Whoosh!

Candles toppled everywhere, igniting flames. It seemed as if they had been pre-oiled. The fire demon swiftly engulfed the Western-style mansion.

-"Tehehehe!"

In the midst of the blazing flames, only the dolls remained intact.

-"You're it, Mister! We'll run away!"

- "Run, run! Let's run away from here!"

Hundreds, no, thousands of lady dolls. Just in the 1st-floor lobby alone, countless dolls were scattered. Probably, the entire mansion would be hiding tens of thousands of dolls.

'Among them, there's just one.'

Gulp. I swallowed.

'Hidden somewhere in the mansion is the [real doll].'

One in tens of thousands chance!

This was the reason behind the failure of all previous assault teams.

'While searching for the real doll, everyone burns to death. If trying to escape before dying, at best, they only have about 10 minutes to search.'

The flames burning in the mansion were not ordinary. The Fire demon. Karma fire. The so-called hellfire, a form of [aura] manifesting as flames.

In other words.

'The entire mansion is burning with aura.'

A boss monster that knows how to use aura!

All previous teams either burned to death in this aura inferno or escaped before dying, meeting one of these two ends. Some hunters risked their lives for the one in tens of thousands chance, but it was in vain. They died screaming in agony.

The impregnable inferno.

And here lies the reason why only the Flame Emperor could clear the 10th floor.

"Lucky bastard."

I muttered.

That's right. Flame Emperor and the boss monster shared the same form of aura.

To other hunters, this mansion was hellfire, but to Flame Emperor, it was as comfortable as his own living room. The karma fire of the 10th floor boss monster was also the element of Flame Emperor Yoo Soo-Ha.

"Tch."

In short, it was a perfect match.

'He must have casually wandered around until he found the real doll.'

And then he had the audacity to claim that luck is also a skill.

I really didn't like the guy.

-The one living off luck is you, zombie.

"What do you mean? I'm struggling to maintain my aura right now."

I frowned at the Sword Emperor's teasing.

A sweat droplet rolled down between my eyebrows. The intense heat! The flames were unbearably hot, much more than any sauna. If it weren't for the aura wrapped around me, I would have burned to death long ago.

-Yeah, but you'll only last another minute at most.

Annoyingly, the Sword Emperor pinpointed my condition precisely.

-By the way, Marcus could easily last 30 minutes here. Want to know why he hasn't challenged this place yet? He's waiting until he can extend that to an hour.

"Ah, yes. Thank you for reminding me of the difference in our skills."

-Hehehe.

The Sword Emperor flew freely in the flame-engulfed mansion lobby. Dolls laughing below, a ghost cackling above. It was like a haunted house.

-So? With only 2 coins left, what are you going to do now?

"What else? First, I die and see."

-Oh wow. You think your aura will suddenly increase after dying here?

The Sword Emperor scoffed.

-There are only two ways to clear this place! Either find the real doll by luck or use aura skillfully enough to withstand the flames until you find it. But you stupidly set yourself only 2 coins, didn't you? It's not going to work, probably.

"Hehe."

Despite sweating profusely, I didn't lose my smile.

"You only know one thing but not two. Or rather, you know two but not three."

-What?

"Let's see who wins after I die once."

With only 20 seconds of aura left.

I approached the nearest doll. There was no particular reason. Standing still and dying seemed boring. Maybe by a stroke of luck, the doll in front of me was the [real one].

-Will you play with us?

Creak.

The doll's head turned. Just the head. It could have been cast in a horror movie on the spot. The doll was dressed in a frilly dress, which remained unburned despite the surrounding flames.

As if it were immune to fire.

"Gotcha."

I placed my hand on the doll's head and spoke.

-Crack.

Laughter spilled from the doll's expressionless mouth.

-Ding! I'm not it!

It wasn't just laughter that flowed from the doll's mouth. Lips. Skin. Eyes. The doll's body melted like candle wax. The flames engulfed it instantly, and even as it was consumed, the doll muttered like a broken record player.

-I'm not it! I'm not it! I'm not it!

-Not it! I'm, not it. I'm... I'm... not it... I'm...

-I'm... not it...

It melted away completely.

"Wow..."

I was at a loss for words. Despite the intense heat, a chill ran down my back. The scene was more horrific than I had imagined.

"Creepy. Why do they have to make boss stages so disturbing?"

-Who knows the holy will of the tower. Even giving a cheat skill to a pansy like you is the will of the tower. If the tower had a personality, it would be a perverted psychopath.

"Really, your words..."

I couldn't complain any further.

"Argh!?"

My aura had run out.

As if waiting for this moment, the flames rushed at me. Sizzle! First, the soles of my shoes melted. Then my sleeves. And flames caught on my hair.

"Ah,"

From head to toe.

"Aaah! Aaaaaah!"

My whole body burst into flames. My flesh melted. Even as my skin flowed away, the flames did not stop. Rather, they clung more tenaciously as if they found tastier prey within my flesh. Nerves. Bones. Throat. Organs.

"Ouch, f...! Ugh, Aaaargh!"

-And you're a bigger pervert than the tower. Geez. Even though you want to become the world's best hunter, accepting burning to death so nonchalantly. I admit it, Kim Zombie! You're a real pervert!

I wanted to die.

Quickly, as soon as possible!

“Ugh...!”

I couldn't speak. The sound was muffled. My eyes and ears had been scorched.

As my mind felt like it was about to burst from overheating, the long-awaited voice finally echoed in my consciousness.

[You have died.]

Damn it.

I wish death had come a little sooner.

•

•

•

•

•

•

‘-Puhah!’

I breathed as if I had just surfaced from a deep dive underwater. Of course, it was just a feeling of exhaling, not actual breathing.

This place was the Netherworld. My bare body wandered around like a ghost in this pitch-black space.

[The condition for your skill has been fulfilled by your death.]

[Randomly copying the skill of the monster Hellfire Maiden.]

And this was also a place of opportunity for me.

[Creating skill cards.]

Cards floated in the dark void. Surprisingly, there was only one golden card despite it being a boss monster. The rest shone either silver or dung-colored.

‘You remember the promise, right?’

-I know, you rascal. Did you think I'd break a bet? Don't worry.

The Sword Emperor chuckled.

-Let's see what skills this lady had.

The Sword Emperor floated up to read the other side of the cards, keeping the promise to tell me the contents of the skills.

-Oh! Wow, this is a jackpot?

The Sword Emperor started with the golden card.

+

[Hellfire Barrier]

Rank: S-

Effect: Resentment, grudges, unfulfilled desires. Burn everything with your unresolved anger, unheeded voice, and unfulfilled wishes. 'It's hot.' Isn't it hot? Turn the world into a fiery heap. 'Feels like dying.' Kill them. If you wish, a 2km radius will be engulfed in aura inferno.

No one can leave this hell without your permission.

No one.

*However, you must also be inside the barrier.

+

It was a terrifying skill.

-This is a must. Zombie, just pick this skill without thinking.

‘.....’

-What? Hey, Kim Zombie. Why aren't you responding?

‘No, it's just...’

I frowned.

‘I don't know why, but it bothers me a bit.’

What's the matter?

It was indeed a powerful skill. Yet, something felt off. Like eating something and feeling bloated, unable to pinpoint exactly where it went wrong.

‘...Anyway, read the next skills.’

-Huh? There can't be a better skill than this. Just choose this one.

‘I have a different skill in mind. Come on, hurry up!’

-Sigh.

Despite pouting, the Sword Emperor read the cards as I requested.

-Alright, listen. [Labyrinth Architect] Rank A-, [Puppeteering] Rank B, [Remote Control] Rank B-, [Trap Setup] Rank C...

Pause.

-.....

The Sword Emperor, who was reading the cards enthusiastically, suddenly stopped. At the last skill, a silver-shining card caught his eye.

-Damn it?

I smirked.

‘As expected.’

-No, wait... just a second...

‘It's fine. I get it. No need to read it.’

I was certain.

That was the card I wanted.

[Please select a skill card.]

The cards started flying around in the air, moving quickly. But I had only had my eyes on one card from the start, so it wasn't confusing for me.

-Hey! Sir Gong-Ja! Hey! Let's not do this.

The Sword Emperor desperately yelled.

-Look at this. Wow, a golden card! Wow, an S-rank skill! Amazing! If you get this, you can create a Hellfire whenever you want. How cool is that?

‘I’m not so sure.’

-Why don't you understand! I object! If I were a woman, I'd fall head over heels for your hellfire charm! Let's go! Kim Gong-Ja's top star life, let's goooo!

I chuckled.

‘I should have sensed something was off from the start.’

There were clues.

‘Among tens of thousands of dolls, only [one real doll]. Since the real doll is the one using the skill, it obviously wouldn't get damaged by the flames.’

I reached out my hand.

‘But why didn't the fake dolls burn in the flames either?’

And I grabbed the silver card.

-Aaagh! No! No! Damn it, no!

‘There's only one answer, isn't there, Sword Emperor?’

I flipped the silver card.

+

[Only You Can Prevent Fire]

Rank: A

Effect: Ah, it's so hot! If left unchecked, this heat could burn down our house. But worry no more. Any lifeform or object you designate becomes immune to fire and will no longer burn. Free yourself from the fear of fire demons and enjoy a safe life!

*However, damage from water and ice skills increases by 300%.

+

That was it.

The 10th floor stage. Inferno Mansion's Hide and Seek.

The boss didn't just possess the ability to [burn things].

‘Aha!’

Contrarily, it also had the ability to make things [unburnable].

I clenched my fist, overwhelmed with the euphoria of victory.

‘Here I am! I saw! I conquered!’

-No... No, this is wrong... It's not supposed to be like this...

The Sword Emperor's mental state crumbled.

‘What's wrong? Now, I just need to cast fire immunity on myself with this skill. Then leisurely find the real doll. It's game over. You have to call me Sir Gong-Ja from today!’

-Damn it... Fuck... This is cheating. It's a broken game...

‘Mwahaha! Hurry up and call me Sir Gong-Ja!’

My laughter filled the dark space.

Another voice, not my own, quietly echoed.

[Selection complete. Copying skill.]

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

A celebratory announcement of my victory in our bet.

Now, I just had to return to a day earlier and challenge the 10th floor boss again.

I was on the verge of clearing it.

[You are currently an E-Rank hunter.]

But today, it didn't end there.

[You are penalized by the skill.]

-Huh?

‘Ah. Right.’

A notification I had never heard before, remaining as an F-Rank hunter.

But now, as an E-Rank hunter, I faced my first penalty.

What would the penalty be?

[Re-enacting the trauma of your killer.]

[The level of penalty is weak. Hell Realm*.]

‘Huh? Trauma?’

Confused by the unexpected term, I tilted my head.

‘What does it mean to re-enact an enemy's trauma...’

Whoosh!

Before I could finish my thought, the space before me turned white.

*Hell Realm is one of the 6 realms in buddhism. There are six Enlightened Buddhas that exist in each of the six realms. These six Buddhas have also been known as the "Six Sages." Their names are Indrasakra (Buddha in the god realm), Vemacitra (Buddha of the petty god realm), Sakyamuni (Buddha in the human realm); Sthirasimha (Buddha in the animal realm), Jvalamukha (Buddha in the hungry ghost realm), and Yama Dharmaraja (Buddha in the hot hell realm).

For more info check out:

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Saṃsāra_\(Buddhism\))

Chapter 17: Trauma Penalty (2)

[Initializing the penalty.]

[Creating the trauma of the monster Hellfire Maiden.]

In a desolate Western-style mansion.

Suddenly, I found myself there.

Or rather, it was odd to say 'I was there.' My body wasn't present. Only my consciousness floated around like a ghost, viewing the unfolding scenes in the third person.

‘What's this?’

I was perplexed.

‘What’s happening...?’

-Help, please.

A child’s voice reached me.

A young child was tied up in a corner of the mansion's first-floor lobby. At first, I thought the plea was directed at me, but it wasn't. The child was begging someone else.

-Please, I’m so hungry... I need food... please...

-Hmm.

A nobleman, dressed lavishly.

-You orphans are a plague to this kingdom.

-Food...

-Left alone, you spread disease, wandering from one town to another, not working. I am the warden and guard who isolates you from the kingdom.

Suddenly, various scenes invaded my consciousness.

In an era plagued by famine and vagrants.

The nobleman gathered orphans and confined them in the mansion, ostensibly running an orphanage. To the outside world, he was a compassionate philanthropist, a great businessman, an intellectual with a conscience.

-Others may see you as rotten from the root, but not I.

But inside this grand mansion.

-I shall educate you.

The nobleman was nothing but a tyrant.

-Being hungry doesn't justify snatching whatever food is in front of you. You might have been born like animals in the fields, but must you grow up as animals?

-I'm hungry... my stomach...

-Endure it. Even if you're hungry, endure. Become human through endurance.

The nobleman smiled benevolently while looking down at the emaciated child. He was the kind who could smile at such a scene. In some world, in some era, such behavior was considered virtuous.

-Repent!

Madness attracted more madness.

-Aaaaaah!

-Oh, children of witches! The poison of Zuraqua and the disease of our kingdom! Do not worry. God never abandons His faithful. Just as I will never abandon my lambs!

-Pain... it hurts... it hurts...

A priest of some god raised a hammer.

-Pray!

An era where madness was disguised as virtue.

The mansion never ceased to echo with screams.

-I'm hungry...

Hunger.

-No... please forgive me... why... please forgive me...

Torture.

-Thank you... kind nobleman. Kind sir... A reward for enduring pain. A promise. Thank you. Thank you, kind sir...

Brainwashing.

The orphans were dragged into the mansion like corpses and left as corpses. They never imagined the agonizing pain that awaited them between arriving and dying.

Dozens. Hundreds. Thousands of them in the mansion.

Dozens, hundreds, thousands of deaths.

‘.....’

I was stunned by the rapidly unfolding scenes before me.

‘What is all this...’

-What the hell is this?

Thankfully, the Sword Emperor snapped me out of it.

‘You saw it too? I thought you weren't there.’

-I've been watching from the start. I didn't know you were there either.

‘It seems like only our consciousnesses are floating around...’

-That doesn't matter.

The Sword Emperor said.

-What kind of lunatics are these? Educate humans? What non-human creatures think they can educate others?

‘I guess this is the origin of the 10th floor boss stage.’

Just before my consciousness arrived here, a voice had informed me.

[Re-enacting the trauma of your killer.]

The enemy that killed me this time must be the real doll hiding somewhere in the inferno mansion. Thus, the scenes unfolding before us were the doll's trauma.

‘I had no idea....’

I whispered softly.

‘That a monster was once human...’

-Monsters aren't always like that. It's mostly just the bosses. Boss monsters are based on actual events from other worlds.

The Sword Emperor scoffed.

-Beings native to other worlds, heroes who performed feats there. Such things. This tendency becomes even stronger after the 11th floor.

‘Why didn’t you tell me this before?’

-You didn’t ask.

‘.....’

I was speechless at his blatant attitude.

-But even I’ve never seen something like this.

‘Seen what?’

-The origin you mentioned. These scenes. I knew boss monsters were based on other worlds, but how could I know what they experienced? I don't have mind-reading skills...

The Sword Emperor murmured.

-This really sucks.

I agreed.

‘...Yeah.’

While such horrors are always happening somewhere in the world, worse than this, thinking about them and seeing them directly are different.

Just different.

Unfortunately, or fortunately.

-Fire!

The [trauma] soon ended.

A servant accidentally knocked over a candle. Unaware, he passed by. In the dark night, while everyone slept, the fire quietly spread. By the time someone noticed, it was too late.

-Cough, choke. Cough!

-We need to escape...

Flames surged.

The ropes and chains in the basement burned. The shackles holding the orphans burned. The brainwashed child, the tortured child, the starving child burned. It seemed the fire would consume all the brainwashing, wounds, and hunger.

-Ah...

The children opened their mouths.

Red-hot chains bound their wrists and ankles. They couldn't move, like dolls, only able to scream.

But I heard them.

-I don't want to die.

Resentment.

-I'm hungry.

-I want to live...

-Kind sir.

Hatred and grievances directly entered my consciousness.

-I did nothing wrong. I had no family. It was okay. I wanted to play more. Still...

-It's not our fault. It's unjust. I didn't do this.

-I'm hungry.

The mansion burned.

The chandelier-decorated lobby, the nobleman's bedroom, the luxurious bed, the antique curtains, the deep basement with stone stairs – all incinerated.

-I don't want to die.

Crackle.

Crackle-.

Flames leapt into the air.

All that was visible was the mansion burning in the distance.

[Trauma re-enactment complete.]

[Penalty Finalized.]

And I returned to a day earlier.

•

•

•

•

•

•

When I opened my eyes.

The Sword Emperor and I said nothing. We both sat on the bed in silence.

Not so much shocked, but unsure how to react.

-Um...

After a long time, the Sword Emperor scratched his head.

-It's a tragic and sad story. We saw it, but what can we do?

“Wow. That's the first thing you say? You're really...”

-Yeah. So? I have terrible character.

The Sword Emperor scowled. Ever seen a gorilla angry? It was remarkably similar.

-But truth is always harsh! That 10th floor boss is just a monster, and the children it originated from died long ago in some other world. An old event. You can't do anything, zombie! Even if it happened in this tower, you could die 4000 or 5000 times and return to the past. But this? It's just from another world, another era. Even I couldn't fix this! Not even if I were a Sword God, not just a Sword Emperor.

He was right.

-Kill the real doll. Clear it.

The Sword Emperor advised.

-Then climb to the 11th floor. The 20th, 30th, 40th, 50th, all the same. If you're determined to reign as a top hunter, solve these issues yourself!

Again, he was right.

Yet.

“Yoo Soo-Ha probably thought the same.”

-Huh?

“Yoo Soo-Ha. Flame Emperor. The first human I hunted.”

I got out of bed.

I packed my sleeping bag in my backpack. Put on the backpack. Strapped the sword to my waist. In other words, I was ready to climb the tower. As I left the lodging, I was equipped like a hunter, albeit clumsily.

“Did you know? Yoo Soo-Ha definitely found the real doll and crushed its head. Regardless of seeing the trauma or not. Without any hesitation.”

-So what?

“I don’t want to become like that guy.”

I climbed the tower.

As before, I deceived the administrator.

And once again, I stood before the mansion's door.

The Western-style noble mansion, just like in the trauma.

-Hey! You're not a child. You won't skip the boss just because you don't want to be like him, right? What will you do? You must defeat the boss to clear the stage, zombie!

“Who decided that?”

-What?

I placed my hands on the gate.

And murmured.

“Damn. I acted stupidly.”

-What are you saying now?

“I'm saying I was stupid! So were you. 'Not knowing the answer even when it's right in front of you' perfectly describes us right now.”

The Sword Emperor frowned.

-Are you out of your mind? Sure, your stupidity is a universal truth, but why am I stupid? I've been called a prodigy since I was young.

“The skill card.”

I muttered irritably.

“The S-rank skill card we didn't choose. Remember? Hellfire Barrier. You insisted I should choose that one.”

-Yeah? Of course, I remember.

“Say it once.”

-Sigh. You see me as something... Fine. Listen.

The Sword Emperor recited the skill details without missing a beat. Perhaps his claim of being a prodigy as a child wasn't entirely false. He remembered the skill card perfectly.

+

[Hellfire Barrier]

Rank: S-

Effect: Resentment, grudges, unfulfilled desires. Burn everything with your unresolved anger, unheeded voice, and unfulfilled wishes. 'It's hot.' Isn't it hot? Turn the world into a fiery heap. 'Feels like dying.' Kill them. If you wish, a 2km radius will be engulfed in aura inferno.

No one can leave this hell without your permission.

No one.

*However, you must also be inside the barrier.

+

I quietly listened to the skill's content and then questioned.

“Sword Emperor, don’t you find something strange?”

-You're exasperating. What exactly is strange?

“The last part.”

[No one can leave this hell without your permission.]

[No one.]

I said.

“Nobody can escape the Hellfire Barrier without the boss's permission. Not a single soul. Then how, by what means, did the hunters who attempted the 10th floor escape alive?”

-Oh?

The Sword Emperor blinked.

...What the hell?

There's a guild named Black Dragon.

A guild that has reigned supreme since the day the tower appeared in this world.

The Black Dragon, led by the second-ranked hunter, the Black Witch, attempted the 10th floor dozens of times. They always failed. The second-ranked hunter returned alive each time, saving all the participating hunters.

Everyone returned alive.

“It doesn’t make sense.”

I exerted strength in my arms.

The gate slowly began to open.

“If the boss doesn't permit it, escape is impossible. It's a skill designed that way... yet hunters have escaped without killing the boss. Everyone. It makes no sense.”

-Then... what's going on?

“It's obvious!”

Creeeak.

The gate fully opened.

“The boss allowed them to escape! Told them to run away!”

The boss of the tenth floor.

A stage that no human had ever conquered.

The blazing inferno mansion was revealed.

[You have entered the boss stage.]

[Challenger: Hunter Kim Gong-Ja. Alone.]

[May fortune be with you.]

“They allowed anyone who came to escape willingly. The boss, they, never saw the hunters as enemies from the start.”

-.....

[Initiating the boss stage.]

“They just wanted to play with those who visited.”

Candles.

Candles toppled over here and there in the mansion. Flames erupted from where they fell.

-Hahaha!

Among the flames, the dolls remained. As if tied to somewhere, the dolls couldn't move, only managing to turn their heads towards me.

-Wanna play?

The dolls opened their mouths.

-Will you play with us?

-Freeze Tag? Rose of Sharon Blooming? Hide and Seek?

-The ice has melted. The flowers are torn. Let's play Hide and Seek!

-Yes! Play with us! Play Hide and Seek with us!

-Hahaha!

Flames surged.

The lobby with the chandelier burned. The nobleman's bedroom burned. The ornate bed, the antique curtains, and the deep basement with stone stairs – all incinerated.

Yet, the children, turned into dolls, remained unburned.

“.....”

I clenched my teeth for a moment.

“Alright. I'll play.”

[Activating Skill: Only You Can Prevent Fire.]

The flame immunity skill I obtained from my last death. As soon as the skill activated, the heat enveloping my body vanished like washed away. Breathing became easier. The scenery, obscured by the hellfire, became clearer.

I saw the dolls' faces.

-Oh?

-You're not burning.

The dolls had different faces. Although expressionless, I could tell.

-Aren't you hot?

-Strange man.

-Can you play?

-Will you play with us?

I nodded again.

“Sure. Hide and seek, right? Be careful. I've never lost at hide and seek since I was a kid.”

-Hahaha! Strange man!

-Hide! Everyone, hide!

The dolls laughed. They said to hide, but none moved. They were all fixed in place. Dozens. Hundreds. Thousands of children laughed.

-Hide well, don't let your hair show. Hide well...

The game of tag began.

“...Got you.”

I wandered the mansion. As I walked, I caught each doll. As I gently stroked their heads, they would tilt their heads with a creak. Each time, the dolls opened their mouths.

-Ding! I'm not it!

The dolls disappeared, laughing.

-I'm not it!

-I'm not it!

Wherever I went, there were dolls. Many. I walked and caught each one.

-.....

One.

-Hey, this is...

Another.

-This is a soul consoling ritual.

The Sword Emperor murmured.

Consoling souls.

I silently toured the mansion. I saw the shackles that hung the orphans, the chains that bound the children. Where shackles and chains were placed, there was always a doll.

Flames surged.

-I'm not it! I'm not it! I'm not it!

-I'm not it! I am, not it. I am... I am... not it... I am...

-I am... not it...

Time passed.

Thud.

Eventually, my steps stopped in the basement. At the end of the long stone staircase. The dolls on the stairs lay fallen. As if they tried to crawl up to escape and suddenly stopped.

“.....”

After comforting all the children on the stairs, I finally stood before the last doll.

The basement.

-Will you play with us?

In the depths of the mansion, the doll leaned against something.

Around the doll lay hammers, awls, saws.

-.....

I walked slowly.

And gently stroked the hairless head of the doll.

“Caught you.”

The head of the child who created the inferno was small. Small enough to be encircled by one hand.

“...Now you're the seeker, kid.”

Silence followed.

The doll slowly raised its head. Like the others, it was expressionless. With a face devoid of expressions, the doll opened its mouth.

-Kind sir.

Not just a voice flowed from the doll's mouth. Lips. Skin. Eyes. The doll's body melted like wax. Flames instantly engulfed it, and even as it burned, the doll murmured like a broken record player.

-Thank you.

And it melted.

-Thank you so much.

The doll burned. Chains melted and flowed. Shackles, hammers, awls, saws, all burned. Hunger and traces of hunger. Like wax melting away, everything vanished.

There was no trace of death.

No trace, in the midst of the mansion's ruins, I stood.

“.....”

For years.

[Congratulations.]

A place no human had cleared for years.

[Normal Stage Cleared.]

[Hidden Stage Cleared.]

[You have cleared the boss stage.]

That day. The tenth floor of the tower was cleared.

Chapter 18: Trauma Penalty (3)

[Challenger: Hunter Kim Gong-Ja. Alone.]

[Calculating clear reward... Calculation complete.]

[The reward will be given 24 hours later, upon entering the 11th floor.]

Boss stage cleared.

An achievement no one else had achieved. And it was I, not yet ranked or known by any alias, who accomplished it. If this news spread, it would undoubtedly turn the world upside down.

“Sigh.”

Yet, my feelings were unsettled. A mix of joy and melancholy occupied my heart. Like a lonely poet, I wandered the ruins, nothing but ashes around me.

-Hey. Why the long face? You even cleared the hidden stage. Even in my lifetime, I could count on one hand how many times I tackled a hidden stage. The reward should be substantial.

“You wouldn't understand why I'm down, being a psychopath with no human emotions.”

-Hmm. I see. It's not just a long face, you're actually shitting bricks.

“.....”

It was astonishing. Sword Emperor's single remark wiped away my gloom. Right, staying sentimental around this lunatic was impossible.

“It's just that the world seems a bit messed up.”

-Oh?

Sword Emperor nodded.

-People's nature is the same everywhere.

We stood silently for a while, just absorbing the moment. The Sword Emperor shuddered suddenly.

-Enough of that. It doesn't suit me! Besides, Kim Gong-Ja, you were impressive earlier!

“Huh?”

-Your unique approach to tackling the boss. It was remarkable. I'll give you that!

I frowned. Perhaps he was trying to compliment sincerely, but it felt eerie.

“Why are you complimenting me all of a sudden?”

-What? I give credit where it's due. You overcame that challenge with your skill, not luck. Our Gong-Ja is my partner, and when there's a cause for celebration, we should celebrate together, right?

I furrowed my brows even more.

“Something's fishy...”

-Ah, stop it. Nothing's fishy. Well done, Kim Gong-Ja! Awesome, Kim Gong-Ja! Once the 11th floor opens, let's rush through and grab the number one rank! Who cares if others call it cheating? If they're jealous, let them get their cheat skills!

The Sword Emperor laughed heartily. What's with him all of a sudden? Unless the sun rises from the west or the tower collapses, the Sword Emperor acting like this is unthinkable.

Then it happened.

[This is a Public Announcement.]

[Today, the 10th floor stage has been cleared.]

A voice.

[Announcing again to everyone.]

It wasn't just for me; the voice echoed, filling the sky.

[Today.]

[The 10th floor stage has been cleared.]

An announcement declaring the dawn of a new era.

[In 24 hours, the 11th floor stage will open.]

Whoosh!

Something burst in the sky. Fireworks. First, purple fireworks exploded, followed by red, blue, yellow, and dozens of colors and thousands of streams of fireworks brilliantly bloomed.

“Ah...”

I gazed blankly at the sky. The fireworks didn't disappear after bursting. They moved on their own. Each firework, like a dragon, twisted and slowly took shape.

[24:00:00]

A clock.

[23:59:59]

And the clock in the sky began to move.

“.....”

Beside the Sword Emperor, I looked up at the celestial spectacle.

Suddenly, the Sword Emperor muttered.

-Finally, the main event begins.

I nodded.

“Indeed.”

-Once I saw a similar fireworks show in my lifetime.

“This is my second time seeing this. But.”

I clenched my fist.

“Back then, I was in a bar on the first floor. Just a spectator. Clueless about what was happening. Eventually missed the opportunity and remained a F-rank hunter for life... Damn. Thinking about it, I was foolish.”

-Haha.

The Sword Emperor laughed.

-Right. Upgrading from an extra to a protagonist, how does it feel?

I didn't respond immediately. Instead, I took out my smartphone.

I wanted to check the reaction in the hunter community.

-What's with the fireworks?

-I'm on the 1st floor watching fireworks. Is this only happening here?

-I'm at the 3rd-floor hunting ground, and there's a fireworks show going on here too.

Unsurprisingly.

The midday fireworks stirred up all the communities.

-Just heard a voice.

-Heard about the 10th floor being cleared, is it true?

-Did Black Dragon guild clear the 10th floor?

-No official announcement, what's going on?

Post after post.

-The next planned assault by the Administration is in two weeks.

-Definitely not Black Dragon! Their executives are all at a cafe near Babylon Bank on the 1st floor. Attached proof photos.

-Who cleared it then?

Another post.

-[Breaking News] 10th Floor Cleared!

-The guild that achieved the clear remains unidentified.

-[Breaking News] Black Dragon did not declare a clear.

Every second, dozens of posts poured in. Not just one place. All hunter communities were ablaze, and soon the fire spread to other communities.

The news agencies operating in Babylon frantically released brief breaking news, and the rumors turned into fuel, igniting the communities further.

-If not Black Dragon, then who?

-I'm currently praying in the Temple of the Omnipotent God, and I saw the Heretic Inquisitors suddenly gathering the clerics. It's chaos. The Temple also doesn't seem to be the clearing party.

-It's Sword Saint!

-Sword Saint cleared it alone. Definitely.

-Ah, if it's Sword Saint, that makes sense.

Initially, the flames in the communities burned separately. Some backed the Temple of the Omnipotent God guild. Others pointed to Sword Saint. Countess, Viper, Paladin, and other top-ranking hunters were all mentioned at least once.

But...

-What are you talking about? Sword Saint is drinking milk at a bar right now.

-Not Sword Saint. Attached proof photos.

-Viper is teaching students at his dojo.

-What are you saying?

-Paladin is working in Babylon Square.

-I asked directly. Sword Saint said it wasn't him.

-Just wait a minute. This doesn't make any sense logically.

-A Sang-Ryun executive here. I can't reveal my real name or alias, but it's not Sang-Ryun.

-Why hasn't any guild declared the clear yet?

-What the heck.

The separate fires of the communities soon merged into one.

-So who is it?

-Does no one know who cleared the 10th floor?

-Who is the Hunter that challenged the 10th floor?

-Who on earth could it be...

...

...

I turned off my smartphone screen.

Then, I decided to answer the question the Sword Emperor had asked earlier.

“How do I feel right now?”

Before I knew it, a smile had formed on my lips.

“To be honest, it's exhilarating.”

It was a feeling I had never experienced before. Even without being taught by anyone, I instinctively knew what this emotion was. It was the feeling of standing at the pinnacle.

“It feels like I have the world in my hands.”

-Right?

The Sword Emperor smiled mischievously.

-Of course, it's just an illusion for now. You haven't conquered the world, you've just cleared the 10th floor. But it's not entirely a delusion either. Kim Gong-Ja, you are now closer to the top than anyone else in your world.

“I know.”

I looked away.

“Now, all that's left is to truly reach the top.”

A figure was seen rushing up the stairs leading to the 10th floor – it was the guard I had deceived about my incurable disease.

“Huff, huff...! Hunter...!”

The guard was drenched in sweat, seemingly having run desperately. He stopped in front of me, catching his breath.

“Just now... Did you...?”

“I'm not sure what you're referring to.”

“The 10th floor clear!”

He shouted.

“I was in charge today... and you were the only one who challenged the 10th floor today, so... it's chaos now. The Administration keeps calling me...!”

“Hmm.”

I eyed the guard. His pocket buzzed incessantly, probably with phone calls. It seemed the tower was indeed in turmoil over the recent event.

“If I really did clear it, what would you do?”

“Uh?”

“If I'm really the Hunter who cleared the 10th floor, what would you do?”

“That, well...”

The administrator looked flustered.

“I didn't properly check your ID... I should check it now...”

“Come on, guard sir. That's a bit strange to say. You did take 100 gold from me, after all.”

“That, well...”

“Keep up the good work.”

Thump.

I gently patted his shoulder. The guard stared at me blankly as I passed by him and leisurely descended the stairs.

From behind, a desperate plea came.

“Wait, just a moment, please! Hunter! Even your alias will do! Please tell me your alias before you go! If you don't, my seniors at the Administration will have my head!”

I didn't look back but responded.

“I don't have an alias.”

“.....”

“Take care. Oh, and don't follow me. If you do, I'll really run away.”

Fortunately, the guard didn't chase after me. Even if he had, it wouldn't have been a problem. He seemed too exhausted from climbing the stairs, making it easy for me to outrun him.

-Hey. He looks utterly dumbfounded. Like he's seen a ghost.

The Sword Emperor chuckled, glancing back.

-Anyway, well done. You should always elevate your worth like that. Yep. Keep your identity hidden and make others seek you out. I don't need to teach you; you're already doing well...

“Sword Emperor.”

-Huh? Why?

I stood before the teleportation stone at the entrance to the 10th floor.

“I've realized something.”

-What did you realize?

“Why you suddenly praised me.”

As I reserved my teleportation to the 1st floor, I spoke.

“The bet.”

The Sword Emperor flinched.

“You remember, right? If I clear the boss within two coins, you have to call me 'Sir'. Oh, what a dilemma. I actually cleared the 10th floor within just two coins. Sword Emperor, you're in trouble now.”

-Hey, Gong-Ja... We're partners, after all... Isn't that a bit much?

The Sword Emperor pleaded with a crestfallen face.

-Think about it. A partnership implies equality. You and me. Equal. The conqueror of 99 floors and the future challenger of the 100th. Ah, partner! Friend! How magnificent and beautiful is that!

I gave him a bright smile.

“That's enough. From now on, address me as ‘Sir’.”

-.....

“For the rest of your life.”

The look of despair on the Sword Emperor's face was the moment of his realization.

Chapter 19: A Moment of Leisure with a Cup of Coffee (1)

Buzzing chatter.

"Who really cleared the 10th floor?"

"I've been watching the news, but there's nothing. Just rumors..."

"What if the Black Dragon Guild is hiding it on purpose? To dramatically reveal later..."

"Ah. It's definitely the Sword Saint!"

The city of Babylon on the 1st floor of the tower was abuzz.

People rejoiced that the seemingly impenetrable 10th floor had finally been conquered. They gathered in outdoor cafes, speculating about the identity of the mysterious conqueror.

What would their reaction be if they knew I, sitting right next to them, was the one who had broken through the 10th floor?

"Hmm."

"This is delicious."

I commented on my caramel macchiato. At an outdoor café across from the Sang-Ryun headquarters, this was the only Starbucks in Babylon.

Despite the fact that once you enter the tower, you can't leave, their spirit to open a branch here was admirable. There were even franchises with a red-nosed clown and a generous old man as mascots.

Ah, human desires!

"What do you think, Sword Emperor? Victory is really sweet, isn't it? I feel like even if I drank espresso right now, it would taste sweet. Right?"

-.....

"Huh. Is my earphone broken? That's strange. I can't hear any response."

I took out my earphones and tapped them. Of course, no sound came from them.

It was just a ruse.

Talking to myself without earphones would make me look crazy, so I pretended to be on a call with someone. It worked quite well. No one in the café looked at me strangely.

"Sword Emperor? Sir Sword Emperor? Hey, Psychopath Sir. Hey, Crazy Man Sir?"

...Oh.

"Ah, finally. I was worried you had gone deaf. Tsk, tsk, making a noble lord like me worry. That's not how humans should behave."

-.....

"Ah, right. You're not human, you're a ghost. I forgot because I'm a bit slow. Oh! Sword Emperor, can we drop the formalities now? It would be weird for me to use informal speech when you're addressing me as 'Sir', right?"

-Just kill me...

The Sword Emperor cried out.

-Just overwrite [Sword Constellation] with a new skill! That would kill me, you bastard! I'd rather die!

"Oh, my. You're making quite a scene. We're partners, aren't we? Lifelong friends. Best buddies! Who would kill their best friend? We're going to be together forever."

-Oh... I'm done... I won't say anything more. Marcus... I want to go back to Marcus...

Ah, sweet victory.

I sipped my coffee and looked up at the sky.

[22:32:50]

The celestial clock had already marked an hour and a half.

Just when I was thinking it was about time for them to arrive...

-Meow.

"Hmm?"

A brown-furred cat approached me. Not looking like a stray, rather well-groomed. The unique feature was that instead of a bell, it had two gold coins around its neck.

"....."

Gulp.

I considered how to react.

'The Gold Coin Cat.'

-?

'Gold Coin Cat. It's really famous... Ah, people might not know it yet.'

This cat wasn't an ordinary pet.

In about five years, it would become a widely recognized mascot.

'...I didn't expect such a big shot to come to me directly.'

I had no choice but to pretend ignorance.

I calmly looked down at the cat, managing my expression.

"Lost your way?"

-Meow.

The brown cat rubbed against my leg. It would've seemed like a genuinely friendly cat to anyone who didn't know its true identity.

"Shall we hang out until your owner comes?"

-Meow.

"Up you go."

I picked up the cat and placed it on my lap. The brown cat comfortably curled up as if it had aimed for this spot from the start. It even yawned while purring.

'Head over heels for a cat. Such incredible acting skills.'

While stroking the cat's head, a group of Hunters approached the café. One of them spoke to me first.

"Excuse me. Are you Hunter Kim Gong-Ja?"

"Hmm."

At a glance, their gear was impressive. Not just any randoms – these were at least guild executives, if not leaders. They had gathered at this outdoor café.

I pulled out my ID and showed it to them.

"I was wondering how long it would take. Exactly 1 hour and 30 minutes."

".....!"

Their eyes wavered upon seeing my ID. A ripple of disturbance spread among them. The Hunters hastily took out their phones and started contacting someone.

"Yes. I found him!"

"At the café right opposite the bank..."

"No, it's not from another guild... Yes. Yes! Understood, Colonel."

"It's alright. We won't let any other guild snatch him!"

The calm before the storm.

I watched the unfolding scene with satisfaction.

'Feels like a true VIP, doesn't it?'

-Well, most guilds will be eager to recruit you. You're the first to clear the 10th floor alone. Of course, you are a VIP.

'Hmm. Well, if I'm getting called 'Sir' by someone who cleared up to the 99th floor, it would be strange not to feel like a VIP.'

-Curse it! Curse it! Damn it!

The Hunters finished their calls one by one.

Then, one after the other, with tense faces, they turned to me.

One of the guilds was about to make the first move. A burly, blonde Hunter stepped forward.

"I'm the HR manager of the Vigilante Corps Guild. Hunter Kim Gong-Ja. As you know, the Vigilante Corps is the most honorable guild in Babylon. If you join us..."

"Wait a moment, please."

I raised my hand. The HR manager of the Vigilante Corps paused.

"Sorry to interrupt. But let's clarify two things first."

"....."

"First, don't leak it to the media yet."

I looked around at the Hunters. There was not a single one among them with a rank lower than mine. Back in the days before my regression, I wouldn't have dared to look up at these Hunters.

But I was not intimidated at all.

Achievements!

I had the feat of being the first human to conquer the 10th floor of the tower.

This was like a golden tower that no one could tarnish, regardless of their rank.

Capable Hunters valued achievements highly. If they were truly capable, they couldn't treat me lightly.

"Any guild that leaks my name to the media will never make a deal with me. I won't even consider them. Keep that in mind."

"Until when, exactly?" another Hunter asked, raising his hand.

"The journalists from Summons Times are scouring every guild as we speak... Mr. Kim Gong-Ja, even if we try to keep it secret, I honestly can't say how long we can keep this under wraps."

"Well, I'm not asking you to keep it a secret for long."

I pointed to the sky.

The Hunters also looked up.

[22:25:31]

"Just for today. Keep the embargo until that clock hits 00:00:00."

"Ah! Yes. We can manage that."

The Hunters sighed in relief.

I smiled.

"I can't be reckless with the media. I need to rush to the 11th floor as soon as it opens."

I spoke again.

"That was the first condition. Now, for the second..."

The Hunters watched me intently, tense with anticipation of another tough condition.

I grinned and gestured around.

"This is a public place, let's be considerate of other customers."

"Excuse me?"

"Can't you feel everyone looking over here? Everyone's panicked because you all suddenly crowded around."

I was right.

Other customers at the café were stealing glances our way. Whispering. Many looked at us with suspicion, some even trying to discreetly film with their phones.

"It's causing a disturbance."

"....."

"I understand you're all busy looking for me, but let's take it slow. I'm not going anywhere."

"Sorry for the inconvenience."

Realizing their oversight, the Hunters dispersed, apologizing to other customers and negotiating with the café owner for privacy.

"Let's begin the discussion. Please, state your offers."

Interestingly, the Hunters each had a coffee cup in hand.

They had ordered coffee in response to my comment about causing a disturbance. Cute.

"The Vigilante Corps offers a signing bonus of 10,000 gold."

That was the starting point.

"10,000 gold? Showing off your poverty in such a gathering? Mr. Kim Gong-Ja! Join the Adventure Guild. 20,000 gold as a signing bonus, and we'll offer you an executive position."

"Join Chun-Moon Guild. We're a specialized guild in Babylon that trains combat-focused Hunters. We'll welcome you as an instructor with a signing bonus of 25,000 gold."

"An instructor is just a nuisance. Think about it. Mr. Kim Gong-Ja! Join the Temple of the Omnipotent God. We promise you an honorary position. Honestly, we'd like you to handle external and internal promotions for the temple. 30,000 gold as a signing bonus, plus additional per project...!"

"Come to the Hunter Association! Become a promotional ambassador!"

The chaos ensued.

The HR managers desperately wooed me. I understood their position. Up until now, the top guilds had been somewhat suppressed by the name 'Sword Saint'.

A rank 1 Hunter, unaffiliated with any guild, dominating the scene!

Such a presence makes people wonder if joining a guild is really necessary. They think maybe solo play is the real answer...

'But that's just because Sword Saint is special.'

Guilds' images definitely took a hit.

'A new hero as sensational as Sword Saint has emerged?'

I smiled.

'They'll do anything to recruit me.'

For the HR managers, it must have been an order: recruit me at all costs, no matter what. It was obvious.

"Vigilante Corps can offer 36,000 gold..."

"Let the poorer guilds step back, please?"

"Are you seriously competing in thousands of gold units? Can't you read the atmosphere?"

"We at Alchemy Castle offer...!"

Then, a weighty voice resonated.

"Sang-Ryun."

"500,000 gold."

"....."

All heads turned in the direction of the voice. It was the cat on my lap. When it jumped off, it had the paws of a soft-furred animal, but by the time it landed, it had turned into human feet in shoes.

"500,000 gold as a signing bonus. And I'll offer you the position of Vice-Guild Leader of Sang-Ryun."

The Hunter ranked 3rd.

The Countess, the guild leader of the Merchant Union.

"500,000 gold and the position of Vice-Guild Leader. What do you say?"

The woman with the [Transformation] skill smiled. Over 40, but looking like she's in her 20s, she must be consuming top-grade life-extending potions daily.

Typical of the wealthiest Hunter in the tower.

"Hmm."

A person I would never have met in my previous life.

I maintained composure and smiled.

"Now, the negotiation finally feels like a negotiation."

The first phase of the negotiation for my worth was complete.

Chapter 20: A Moment of Leisure with a Cup of Coffee (2)

"Hmm, you have quite the nerve."

The Countess slightly lifted the corners of her mouth.

"Seeing a cat transform into a human and not even flinching... Not quite the reaction expected from the youth these days. Ah, that's a compliment, by the way."

"Thank you. I've always had strong nerves. Even see ghosts and all that."

"Ahaha. Even making jokes now. Impressive."

The Countess chuckled, fanning herself with a folding fan.

I meant it seriously, though.

"Uh..."

"Hmm..."

The Hunters glanced at each other. Except for the Countess, no one dared to laugh. The HR managers, previously shouting out signing bonuses, quieted down as soon as the Countess arrived.

"Excuse me, Guild Leader, but..."

The burly blond Hunter cautiously began.

"Please, go ahead."

"Is offering 500,000 gold and a vice-guild leader position not a bit excessive? Of course, the achievement of conquering the 10th floor is remarkable. However, Kim Gong-Ja Hunter's actual abilities are still... unknown..."

His voice trailed off, not from sudden aphasia, but because the Countess was glaring at him, smiling behind her fan.

"....."

The Hunter closed his mouth, realizing that nothing he said would make a difference. The Countess was a powerhouse, ranking 3rd. Simply put, they were not in the same league.

"Is that all your concerns?"

"...Yes."

"Then, before you become more discourteous, summon your superiors. I'm sorry, but I can't have a meaningful conversation with you. Ah, if anyone here can offer more than 500,000 gold, feel free to stay. Otherwise, please take a seat."

A polite way of saying 'get lost'.

Middle managers had no choice but to leave when told to do so. The HR managers left, one by one.

Ten minutes later, a new group of Hunters walked in.

"Damn Sang-Ryun! Bloodsuckers!"

Rank 5. The leader of Chun-Moon Guild, Viper.

"Hmm. We've been outmaneuvered. I must admit it was our oversight."

Rank 4. The leader of the Temple of the Omnipotent God, Heretic Inquisitor.

"Oversight is an odd word. Our task today wasn't to welcome a new hero, but to prevent existing Hunters from getting agitated. The Guild Leader went too far."

Rank 8. The vice-guild leader of the Vigilante Corps, Paladin.

"....."

And even the leader of the Black Dragon Guild, the Black Witch, ranking 2nd.

'Wow.'

I marveled inwardly.

'A total mobilization. Total.'

The scene was formidable.

The top rankers I had only seen in interviews or articles were now alive, sitting right across from me. It was a moment when I truly realized how much my value had risen.

"Please, take a seat."

The Countess smiled, resting her chin on her hand.

"Been a while since we all gathered like this. Seems like only yesterday we were together conquering the 2nd floor. Time is indeed cruel. We've grown old."

"Shut it, Sang-Ryun! Before I boil you into butterfly soup."

Viper growled.

The one-eyed Hunter of Chun-Moon Guild, known for being the first to conquer the 2nd floor, had a bandage over his face – a scar from challenging Sword Saint.

"I heard on my way here. What, 500,000 gold? Vice-guild leader? Always playing dress-up as an animal, and now you've lost your mind too? I'd expect this kind of nonsense from you, Sang-Ryun, but vice-guild leader, really? Just..."

"Let's order our coffees first!"

The Heretic Inquisitor cheerfully interrupted.

"It's rude not to do business after entering a shop. We, the leaders of the great guilds responsible for the tower, can't be like that! I'll have a café mocha. What about you all?"

"Ah, I'll have a hot Americano."

"I'm in the mood for an iced café latte."

"...Hazelnut latte. Hot. Extra shot. Grande size."

The guild leaders ordered as if they had been waiting for this.

Only Viper was left confused.

"What? Coffee? No. Hey. The 10th floor's been cleared, the world's in chaos, and you've got room in your stomachs for coffee? What, are your brains soaked in caffeine or something...?"

"Chun-Moon Guild Leader wants a rich espresso, got it."

"I swear, this religious nut..."

"Barista! Take our orders, please!"

Ignoring Viper, the Heretic Inquisitor called out. The barista, startled, trembled. Suddenly tasked with making coffee for the top rankers, the barista's face turned pale.

"Your orders, please?"

"Yes!"

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled brightly.

The young leader of the Temple of the Omnipotent God, known for his politeness even to terrorists during interrogations, ordered cheerfully.

"An iced café mocha, tall. A hot Americano, tall. An iced café latte, tall. A hot hazelnut latte with an extra shot, grande size. And a doppio espresso! That's our order!"

"Yes! Yes, yes...!"

"Oh, and-"

The Heretic Inquisitor slowly turned his head.

"What would you like to order, Hunter Kim Gong-Ja?"

Everyone's gaze turned to me. The table fell silent in an instant. Curious looks. Hostile looks. Innocent looks. Calm looks. Expressionless looks. Ten eyes from five faces watched me, testing my reaction.

-Don't flinch.

The Sword Emperor, who had been quiet until then, spoke.

-They're nothing special. Nothing at all! You've even died to Marcus, remember? None of them are better than him.

'I know.'

I was well aware.

'Just a simple test of nerves.'

And it was all an act.

I shrugged my shoulders casually.

"Barista, don't you have a menu?"

"Sorry?"

"I had a macchiato earlier, so I'm not really feeling coffee. I'd like to see the menu... No, never mind. If you have hot chocolate, just give me that."

"Okay, coming right up."

What I needed to show was composure.

'These people didn't just coincidentally gather in a group.'

When the HR managers came earlier and now, different guild Hunters arrived simultaneously.

Was this timing just a coincidence?

'Absolutely not!'

A calculated strategy.

It was all just an act.

'They're trying to unnerve me by swarming in all at once.'

A classic tactic. Similar to a gang cornering someone for intimidation.

'Well, they're a bit more intimidating than ordinary thugs, but...'

The tension in the air was like walking on thin ice.

'Compared to burning alive, it's nothing.'

In other words, it was just thin ice.

Before being killed by the Flame Emperor, I would have been shaking in fear. But now, I wasn't scared at all.

The reason was stupidly simple.

'If they're so tough, let them kill me.'

They couldn't kill me anyway!

The Sword Emperor nodded in agreement.

-Right. That's your talent and strength! Tell them to try and kill you if they dare. Stare them down. Ask them who dares to claim they're a top ranker when they can't even kill!

'Well, thanks for the support. But the punishment won't be lifted.'

-Damn it...!

The Sword Emperor held his head in despair.

"Hmm."

The Heretic Inquisitor's expression changed.

"It's fascinating. Until conquering the 10th floor, Hunter Kim Gong-Ja had no significant achievements on record. Suddenly, a complete transformation... The world is truly unpredictable!"

"It wasn't entirely without achievement."

The Countess, hiding her mouth behind her fan, gave a sly smile.

"This young man recently won our guild's lottery. Lucky indeed. He's got guts and, seeing his conquest of the 10th floor, apparently skill too. Luck, guts, skill – if a young one possesses these three, success is almost guaranteed."

"Hah... That's what I was saying."

Viper sighed from across the table.

"Should've just recruited him without the theatrics! Did you really think someone who conquered the 10th floor would be a clueless newbie? Tsk, pointless act..."

"That's not important right now."

Suddenly, the Black Witch, who had been quiet, spoke up.

"Let's stop the unrelated topics. We can talk about those at our own time."

"Cough..."

"Hunter Kim Gong-Ja."

The Witch looked at me.

"I'll ask you directly. Do you plan to join any guild?"

Her dark eyes fixed on me.

"If you plan to stay unaffiliated like Sword Saint, just let us know. We'll need to discuss how to handle the media accordingly."

"And if I am considering joining a specific guild?"

"Then a fierce bidding war will start."

The Witch spoke calmly.

"We've been stuck on the 9th floor for too long. It's been shameful, to put it mildly. It was disgraceful. But thanks to you breaking through the 10th floor, we have a new opportunity to advertise the value of the tower to the outside world."

"An opportunity."

"Yes, an opportunity. Not just for war refugees but to attract various humans from the outside world."

The barista served coffee on a tray. The guild leaders each took a cup without a word. The Witch too quietly sipped her hazelnut latte.

"Especially since opening the 10th floor will motivate the Hunters who've been lounging in the city on the 1st floor. What unknown worlds await from the 11th floor onward? Even the most pragmatic will be curious."

Indeed.

"The food shortage might get a little relief."

"....."

The Witch looked at me, somewhat surprised.

"...You catch on quickly. Right. We're struggling to meet food demands with just the items harvested from below the 9th floor."

"Even though you keep the trade route with the outside world open 24/7."

The Countess laughed.

"As I get older, it's becoming a bit more challenging. Not as spry as I used to be."

"We need new products now."

The Witch continued.

"We have to attract adventurers to worlds beyond the 10th floor. We need to find items exclusive to those regions."

"So, for an effective appeal to the outside world and the tower, we need a means to loudly proclaim [A New Era Has Begun!]. And that means you."

"Right. Precisely."

All of this was to happen in the future.

The reason why the great guilds couldn't easily manipulate someone like Flame Emperor, who lived only for himself, was this. A hero, whether liked or not, becomes an icon of a new era.

For the tower to continue growing, such a hero is essential!

'But still, the Black Dragon tried to assassinate the Flame Emperor.'

I recalled the conversation I overheard in the slum alley.

-Who ordered my assassination? Just answer that.

-Was it the Black Witch of the Black Dragon who orchestrated this?

At that time, the Saintess slowly nodded her head.

If the Saintess didn't lie, the Witch in front of me actually attempted to poison the Flame Emperor. The reason is unknown now, but...

'We'll get along just fine.'

Why?

'Anyone who hates that Flame Bastard can't be all bad!'

An enemy of an enemy is a friend, perhaps.

A sense of camaraderie seemed to arise.

"I understand what you're saying. The guild that successfully recruits me will become a symbol of the new era. The rest will inevitably end up as supporting cast."

"Yes."

"Then let me propose this..."

The Hunters focused on my words.

I pulled out a deck of playing cards from my pocket.

"...Playing cards?"

The Witch tilted her head.

"Don't tell me you want to decide which guild to join through a game? Poker?"

"Yes."

"....."

"If I win the poker game, I'll join the guild of the winner. No need for a signing bonus or a position. But!"

I grinned.

"If I win, I will [simultaneously join] all the guilds represented here."

"....."

"Ah, I mean just in name. Treat me as an equal. It's good for you to exploit my image, and it's good for me to be treated on par with the leaders of top guilds. What do you think?"

Suddenly, the guild leaders' expressions changed.

"Ahaha."

The Countess burst into laughter.

"A young man who's just conquered one floor wants to be treated the same as us?"

"Yes. If I win this card game against you."

"Interesting. I'm in."

The Countess put down her coffee cup and looked around.

"What do the rest of you say?"

"I'm fine with it, provided there's no cheating!"

The Heretic Inquisitor was the first to agree.

"...We won't use skills. Otherwise, it's too advantageous for you. If caught using a skill, that person is automatically disqualified."

Then Viper agreed.

"I'm in. We can't afford to bid anyway. If we lose, we lose nothing, but if we win, it's a jackpot."

And Paladin consented.

"....."

Finally, the Witch nodded.

"Fine. I accept your offer."

The gamble was set.

We discussed the detailed rules of poker. The rules were standard, with the top rankers meticulously checking to ensure there were no tricks or cheating involved.

'Sword Emperor.'

As the cards were dealt,

-Eh...?

'Sincerely, I really hate calling you 'Sir'.'

I called out to the still-despondent Sword Emperor.

'Let's make a deal.'

-What kind of deal...?

'Just call me 'Sir' until this game ends.'

The Sword Emperor's eyes widened.

-Really? Can I do that!?

'Yes, of course.'

I grinned.

'In return, tell me what cards these Hunters are holding.'

-Yay! Yay! Awesome!

The Sword Emperor jumped in excitement.

-That's easy! Ah, Master! You're truly magnanimous! Who else could be as generous as our Master! You want me to tell you their hands? No worries. I'll even tell you if they're cheating or not! Master!

Alright.

Let's start the game.

Chapter 21: A Moment of Leisure with a Cup of Coffee (3)

-Sir! She has a straight. Be careful.

"I fold."

-Ah. Sir, that guy is bluffing with just one pair. How pathetic. Just call and crush him.

"Call."

-Aha, you and he have the same hand, both with two pairs. But your two pairs are higher. Oh, this is going to be fun. Let's see who drops out first, Sir!

"Raise."

-Wow, this guy is aiming for a full house? Don't worry, Sir. I just peeked under the table and checked their cards. He won't make a full house even at the end. Trust me and let's go for it!

"All-in."

The poker game had gone around thirty rounds.

"....."

The man opposite me, Viper, was trembling. The one-eyed Hunter's face was turning red and blue in rage.

"Damn it! This is a scam!"

Viper stood up abruptly, shaking the table. Other Hunters, as if expecting this, lifted their coffee cups in unison, avoiding a coffee spill on the table. Impressive timing.

"It doesn't make sense! We've been playing for over 30 rounds and this guy hasn't lost once. His bluffs never fail. He's definitely using some sneaky skill! It's cheating! Cheating!"

"Do you have any evidence?"

I sipped my hot chocolate, which had now turned into a bland chocolate latte. It had its own charm.

"You're accusing me without proof. That's unfair. Please, be a little kinder, senior."

"Is this guy really registered as an F-rank Hunter!?"

Viper shouted, looking around.

"How can he be F-rank! I'd believe it if he was at least B-rank, given his sly demeanor!"

"Wow. How did you know I'm not F-rank?"

"That's right! I knew it..."

"Actually, I just advanced to E-rank yesterday. I've been too busy conquering the 10th floor to report it to the Hunter Association."

"....."

I smiled.

"Thanks for thinking highly of me. But, Viper, you're out of chips, aren't you?"

"Ugh..."

Viper turned his back and walked away with a defeated stride, joining the other eliminated players in the spectator area.

"Welcome, Viper!"

The first to be eliminated, the Heretic Inquisitor, greeted him with a bright smile.

"I thought it was about time for Viper to be out. So, I ordered another espresso for you! Don't hesitate, enjoy it."

"I hate espresso..."

"Yes! I know. You should overcome your pickiness!"

"Damn religious nut..."

In the end, only three Hunters remained in the game: me, the Black Witch from Black Dragon, and surprisingly, Paladin.

"Umm."

Paladin looked down at her cards, furrowing her brow.

The Deputy Guild Leader of the Vigilante Corps, known for her righteousness and fairness. Vigilante Corps, a guild established to maintain the order in the City of Babylon on the 1st floor of the tower, was akin to a police chief in the outside world. She was known for donating her entire fortune to orphanages.

"I'm out."

Paladin sighed and laid her cards down.

"I thought I had a good poker face. Kim Gong-Ja, do you possess a mind-reading skill?"

"Who knows? Maybe mind-reading, maybe clairvoyance. Take a guess."

"...The young ones these days are really something."

Paladin gave a wry smile, nodded at me, and joined the others in the spectator area.

"Hey! How can you give up so easily, you fool!"

Viper, already seated among the eliminated, scolded her. He had apparently spilled some espresso on his face.

"Shouldn't you cling on like a hunting dog? Are we just going to let this trickster get away?"

"Calling a new hero a trickster. That's harsh."

"Can't you see he's blatantly using his skills!?"

Paladin shrugged.

"I knew it from the start."

"What? Really?"

"Of course. It would've been strange not to know. Did you think a rookie would propose a poker game based purely on luck without any preparation? Proposing the game itself was a declaration that 'I have the confidence to beat you without getting caught using skills.' We accepted that challenge."

Viper's mouth hung open.

"Was that it?"

"Viper... Focus on martial arts is good, but use your head too."

Paladin looked at him with pity.

"From the beginning, this game was risk-free for us. Winning would be a windfall, of course. But even if we lose... Didn't the rookie say he would join all our guilds? That's also a decent outcome."

"But, but... Our pride! How can we treat a green youngster as our equal...?"

"Does pride feed you?"

Viper turned mute.

"Espresso does! Here, Viper. Finish it!"

"Damn it..."

Ultimately, the last to remain were the 2nd-ranked Hunter, the Black Witch, and me.

"....."

The Witch gazed at her cards before speaking.

"Lucky."

"What do you mean?"

"You seem to be a reasonable human after all."

The Witch bet chips. Raise. She was provoking me.

"I'm from Ukraine. Or rather, from a place that used to be Ukraine. I've been a wanderer since I lost my family in a civil war. As you know, whether in the tower or the outside world, it's tough for a woman to survive alone."

"That's true."

I willingly accepted her challenge. Reraise. I increased the bet.

"....."

After a moment's hesitation, the Witch tapped the table twice. Tap. Tap. A sign of accepting the duel. The Countess, who had volunteered to be the dealer after being eliminated, laid out the cards.

"What are you trying to say?"

I pretended to ponder, stroking my chin.

"Those who entered the tower, especially the first generation, it's harder to find someone without a story. I'm just a plain orphan."

My card hand was One Pair.

"...This tower is like my homeland."

The Witch's hand was a Flush.

"The tower doesn't ask about origins. Or rather, we've made it so. It doesn't matter that I'm from Ukraine, Viper is from China, and you're from Korea... In our tower, that doesn't matter."

"Is that so?"

"Yes. Thanks to the tower's grace, we can understand each other's words. Here, we are all equal challengers... at least more so than in the outside world."

If the game continued as is, I would lose.

But I confidently raised the bet again.

"People in the outside world treat this place like a trash can."

"It's called a trash can. Not a trash cannot."

The Witch firmly signaled a call.

"Kim Gong-Ja, the moment the sky clock hits [00:00:00], the media will flood with articles about you. A completely different life will begin. I hope you handle it wisely."

"That sounds good."

Another card flipped on the table.

"I love getting attention. I want people to praise me, look up to me, envy me. I'm serious. That's all there is to me."

My hand had changed to Two Pair.

"...You're frank. Quite the opposite of the Sword Saint."

The Witch's hand remained a Flush.

I was still at a disadvantage, but I went all-in.

"....."

"I'm confident."

I looked directly at the Witch, detaching my gaze from the cards.

"I might as well tell you all now. I don't just want your respect because I conquered the 10th floor. I plan to conquer the 20th, 30th, 40th, 50th, all the way up to the 100th floor. No matter how long it takes, I will conquer the tower."

"....."

"I understand you all cherish the tower. I respect that. I have no intention of needlessly fighting with you. However, I will consider you all as my rivals."

Who will be the first to conquer the tower?

Who will be praised as the greatest hero?

To be remembered, praised, envied, and looked up to by everyone, to build a tower of gold in their eyes.

"I want to see the world beyond the tower."

Thus, I will ascend the tower.

"I don't have time to worry about things like war refugees or food shortages, honestly. If you need my name to solve these problems, use it. Just support my climb up the tower."

That feeling of conquering the 10th floor today, the sensation of being at the top, I wanted to feel it again. I had only tasted it once, but I already seemed addicted to that feeling.

It was just that incredible!

"Ha..."

After a moment of silence, the Witch sighed.

"I was wrong. You're not the opposite of the Sword Saint; you're exactly the same."

The Witch pushed all her chips forward with both hands. All-in.

"A compliment?"

"No, it's an insult. Greedy people."

The final card was turned.

Her hand was still a Flush.

My hand... a Full House.

"Turns out it is a compliment."

I grinned.

"Thank you."

I had won.

"As promised, I look forward to being treated equally with you all."

"Can we expect you to carry the duties as much as you enjoy the rights?"

"Isn't a Hunter's duty to ascend the tower? Don't worry. I'll continue to fulfill my duties as a hunter."

"Such arrogance in a rookie..."

The Witch smirked.

-Yeah, if there was a skill called 'Arrogance', Zombie boy here would be S-rank.

"...Are you really going back to calling me a zombie right after the game?"

-Of course, you zombie! Zombie brat!

The Sword Emperor excitedly flew around.

-Zombie! Zombie! Zombie brat! Ah, how sad it was not to be able to call this arrogant guy a zombie! Never again will I make a bet with this pretentious guy!

"Disgraceful..."

How could the so-called Sword Emperor be so disgraceful?

I shook my head inwardly and stood up.

"Leaving already?"

"Yes. The 11th floor will open soon. I need to prepare to not fall behind others."

"How can you prepare when you don't even know what the 11th floor holds?"

Hmm.

'Giving a little hint here wouldn't hurt.'

Now that I've been promised equal treatment, creating a bit of a debt would make future endeavors smoother.

I gathered my thoughts and spoke up.

"Role-playing."

"Huh?"

"The theme from the 11th to the 20th floor is role-playing."

The Hunters all looked at me, their eyes ablaze. It was natural. Even a small hint could provide a significant advantage.

"The reward for clearing the 10th floor included this hint."

Of course, it was a lie.

I hadn't received my reward for conquering the 10th floor yet. The reward would be given when the sky clock hit 00:00:00. But I already knew what was going to happen.

Knowledge of the future. There was no reason not to use it.

"That's all I know."

"...Thanks for sharing the information."

The Witch nodded.

"I'll repay this debt later."

An exciting statement for the future.

After a good night's sleep, I went to the plaza.

The city was in a festive mood, celebrating the first conquering of the 10th floor in years. Some bars were giving away free beer, and some talented individuals performed songs in the square.

"But who really conquered the 10th floor?"

The only lingering question among the people.

"There's still no official announcement..."

"I heard the guild masters gathered in one place."

"Did you see the video denying it was the Sword Saint? He seemed genuinely upset, insisting it wasn't him."

"Then who is it?"

Murmurs filled the air.

I held back my laughter.

'I'm right here.'

I was standing right in the middle of the festive crowd.

[00:02:09]

Almost a day since the 10th floor was conquered, the sky

clock's numbers were slowly ticking down.

[00:00:10]

"Ten!"

Unprompted, Hunters began counting down as the clock reached ten seconds.

[00:00:09]

"Nine!"

[00:00:08]

"Eight!"

The plaza echoed with the synchronized voices of countless Hunters. Seven, six, five... It felt like welcoming the New Year.

[00:00:04]

"Four!"

I checked the media on my smartphone.

I wanted to see if the embargo was still being respected, if there were any articles about me yet.

[00:00:03]

"Three!"

That's when articles began appearing on the media sites operated by Babylon. Maybe they were eager to get the scoop even a second earlier.

[00:00:02]

"Two!"

I browsed the articles.

-[Breaking] The Hunter who cleared the 10th floor is an unknown E-rank rookie!

-[Breaking] Real name Kim Gong-Ja, a Korean...

-[Breaking] The 10th-floor conqueror has joined several major guilds simultaneously.

-[Breaking] Official statement from the Black Dragon Guild. Welcoming the new hero...

I smiled.

[00:00:01]

"One!"

A new era had begun.

Chapter 22:

Welcome, Warriors!

(1)

[00:00:00]

The sky clock struck zero.

"Zero!"

The Hunters cheered. Many threw their hats into the air, with thousands of hats soaring in the plaza, like countless dandelion seeds swirling on a spring day.

Before the hats had even landed -

[This is a public announcement.]

A voice echoed from the heavens, addressing everyone.

[Today marks the end of the tutorial.]

Signifying that the preview had finally come to an end.

[Repeating.]

[Today marks the end of the tutorial.]

And finally, the curtain rose on the main stage!

"Wow!"

People exclaimed with excitement. Heat, passion, fervor. When had the Hunters last been this animated? Even the old man who retired to open a shop, the middle-aged who had given up ascending beyond the 2nd floor, were now cheering in the plaza.

At least for this moment, they were all Hunters.

"11th floor! 11th floor! 11th floor!"

"Open the 11th floor already!"

"Hey, have you seen the news just now...?"

Responding to their enthusiasm,

Whoosh!

The light rays forming the sky clock burst brightly. The blinding light was like the sun. Hunters squinted or peered through their fingers to gaze at the sky. I was no exception.

[Warriors, the ones who chose to climb the tower.]

[Congratulations on clearing the Hellfire Mansion.]

In the sky hovered a majestic figure, not a human but more akin to an angel or goddess, draped in white, radiating a holy light.

A scene that seemed worthy of a divine painting.

"Wow..."

"She's beautiful..."

Admiration echoed from all around. Most Hunters were captivated by the divine figure above.

-Zombie, snap out of it. That's not a goddess.

But the Sword Emperor remained unimpressed.

Sword Emperor, an entity that had climbed up to the 99th floor in a different world, was not swayed by the scene.

-It's just a system explaining the quest to you.

"Sort of like an NPC?"

-Yeah. Even if there were such a thing as a goddess, that's just a pre-recorded video. It automatically plays after someone clears the 10th floor. Tsk tsk, pathetic.

I became curious.

"How do you know that?"

-Huh? Because...

Just as the Sword Emperor was about to answer,

[Warriors! A world in need of your help is calling. That world is under the invasion of a terrifying Demon King. From now on, you will be summoned as heroes to save humanity in that world. If you wish to accept this mission, say 'Transfer'.]

Whizz!

Before the voice could finish, someone leaped into the air.

"Whoo!"

The Hunter effortlessly scaled the rooftops of buildings. 3rd, 5th, 7th floors, quickly ascending higher buildings, and finally, powerfully stepping on the bell tower of the plaza. Then, the Hunter soared high into the air.

Sword Saint, Marcus Callenbury.

"Haah!"

The current number one ranked Hunter's sword strike cleaved through the sky. Where the blade passed, the goddess figure split in two.

It was a swift and beautiful strike.

People gasped at the sudden development.

"What...?"

But it was only for a moment.

The halved illusion of the goddess quickly restored itself.

Just as cutting through water is futile, the goddess returned to her beautiful form as before.

[...If you wish to accept this mission, say 'Transfer'. Warriors. Then, you will set foot into the grand 11th floor.]

The illusion of the goddess continued to shine.

But that light was no longer holy.

A once torn deity was no longer divine.

"Hmm."

The Sword Saint landed effortlessly on the bell tower's roof. Dressed in a black suit like the first time I saw him in the bar, the elderly swordsman looked discontentedly at the sky, then slowly surveyed the plaza below.

"....."

Silence fell over the plaza.

-Hm.

The Sword Emperor commented.

-See, I used to do that too. Look. It's an NPC, right?

I was speechless.

'...Did you really have to confirm that?'

-Yeah. Isn't it natural to want to slice through something grand that appears? Isn't that human nature?

'Sigh.'

As expected, they're all lunatics. Birds of a feather flock together.

I enhanced my vision and hearing with Aura, carefully watching the Sword Saint, making sure not to make eye contact.

"Transfer."

The Sword Saint murmured softly. Woosh! A bright light enveloped the elderly swordsman, just like the goddess's light. Moments later, the Sword Saint vanished without a trace. Only the white bird droppings remained on the roof of the Italian-style bell tower.

"Ahahahat!"

Laughter broke the silence in the plaza. The Hunters turned their heads.

The source of the laughter was the Heretic Inquisitor of the Temple, the guild master of the Great Temple. He laughed heartily.

"We got beaten to the punch again! Ah! What a splendid day!"

The Heretic Inquisitor took off his clerical hat, bowing gracefully to those looking at him.

"Then, I'll see you all on the 11th floor! Transfer!"

Bright light enveloped the Heretic Inquisitor. The next moment, he disappeared. Only after watching him vanish did the Hunters belatedly realize.

"Uh..."

Both the Sword Saint and the Heretic Inquisitor had already ascended to the 11th floor.

That was the starting signal.

"Me, Transfer!"

"Transfer!"

"Transfer!"

Numerous Hunters hastily shouted "Transfer." Whoosh! Whoosh! The plaza was quickly enveloped in bright light. Each time someone shouted, a beam of light shot up. The light beams from the plaza soon multiplied into thousands, illuminating the sky.

[Warriors, the ones who chose to climb the tower.]

Even amidst this chaos, the illusion of the goddess continued to recite softly.

[From the 11th to the 20th floors, you will face trials. The trials of faith.]

The goddess brought her hands to her chest.

As if praying to somewhere.

[...You will find answers. The answers you find will reveal who you truly are. Thus, you will come to know yourselves...]

However, few paid attention to the illusion of the goddess. Everyone was busy, desperate not to fall behind others.

The few remaining people were either filming or taking photos with their cameras and smartphones.

"It's a pity."

Someone approached and muttered beside me.

It was the Paladin, the deputy guild master of the Vigilante Corps.

"A pity?"

"Think about it. Whoever, whatever being created this tower must have put in tremendous effort. Even that is a message left for us. But no one is interested."

The Paladin looked melancholy.

"It should be a moment to marvel and admire. The fact that such a tower exists, that we can use skills, all of it should be miraculous... But we've become too accustomed to everything by the 10th floor."

"You're more sentimental than I expected."

"Hm. I studied music in the outside world."

The Paladin cracked a smile.

"Does a girl who graduated from a music college seem more attractive?"

"Ah... It seems like it would be hard to make money."

"Ouch. You hit me with the facts."

We chuckled together.

The Sword Emperor quietly joined our conversation.

-Zombie, be careful. This girl is suspicious. Huh?

'Oh, what now.'

-She wouldn't approach you, a good-for-nothing, without any ulterior motives. Are you handsome or kind? No, you're subpar in everything. Aha, perfect! This girl must be a dark-hearted swindler! 100% sure!

This guy really... No, let's just drop it.

"Excuse me!"

At that moment, individuals with cameras approached us. They seemed to be internet broadcasters rather than journalists.

"Are you... Hunter Kim Gong-Ja?"

"Ah."

The Paladin showed a look of annoyance.

"It seems my presence has drawn attention. My apologies, Kim Gong-Ja. I shall head to the 11th floor first."

"Wait a minute. Did you approach me intentionally just for this?"

A suspicion suddenly struck me.

The Paladin's face revealed she was caught off guard.

"Ha-ha. I have an eye for gauging a person's true intentions."

An eye for gauging a person's true intentions? She was confident in assessing people's character?

The Paladin awkwardly scratched the back of her head.

"I wanted to see what kind of person you are, so I engaged in conversation. Think of it as a sign of interest."

"So, what kind of person do you think I am?"

"Hm. Well, the true answer lies within your heart. Transfer!"

Incredible.

She blatantly escaped.

Eventually, the Paladin left me as prey to the journalists and disappeared on her own.

-See, I was right, wasn't I? There's never a fault in my predictions!

'Shut up. You're noisy.'

As the Paladin vanished, more people crowded around me. I found myself surrounded by individual broadcasters and journalists.

"Hunter Kim Gong-Ja! Please, just a word!"

"Is it true that you cleared the 10th-floor boss alone? There's widespread speculation that your simultaneous joining of the major guilds was a pre-arranged scenario!"

"There's been an official announcement that your rank is E. Many question its accuracy. Could you confirm this...?"

"What's your relationship with the Paladin from the Vigilante Corps? You seemed quite close. Do you have a personal relationship beyond professional?"

"Hunter Kim Gong-Ja!"

Wow.

'Is this the [numerous handshake requests] that only successful Hunters get...'

Having experienced it firsthand, I could see why the Flame Emperor was annoyed by journalists.

I decided to respond with just one statement.

"I will clear the 20th floor too."

"What?"

"Thank you for your efforts. Transfer."

Whoosh!

A white light began to rise from my feet.

"Wait, just a moment! Hunter Kim Gong-Ja!"

"No! Catch him!"

"Just a few more questions-"

Sorry.

I've always thought the mysterious approach is the best.

[Those of you who choose to climb the tower.]

Right before the light completely engulfed me.

The goddess' voice echoed one last time in the plaza.

[May fortune be with you.]

Whoosh!

The light that wrapped around me faded. Slowly, my vision began to clear.

The first thing I saw was... a vast battlefield.

-Grrrr!

-Chweek! Chwee!

Monsters.

Grotesque creatures swarmed from beyond the horizon. Goblins. Orcs. Ogres. Monsters from the tutorial up to the 10th floor were now rushing together regardless of their species.

It was an overwhelming horde.

"Block them!"

"It's impossible! There are too many enemies!"

"Don't retreat! If we fall here, the empire is doomed!"

Defending against this horde... was merely a handful of soldiers.

Perhaps from an ancient to medieval civilization era? A group of soldiers clad in armor desperately defended the port. Forming a defense line with a deep river behind them, the human soldiers resisted fiercely.

"What's this?"

"What's happening here...?"

"Wow! Be careful of the arrows flying everywhere!"

Suddenly summoned to the battlefield, the Hunters were bewildered.

It wasn't strange for the Hunters to be confused. Until now, they had only hunted monsters in 'safely prepared hunting grounds.' They had never experienced a battlefield on the brink of explosion like this one.

But from the 10th floor onwards, such scenes were daily occurrences.

'It's truly the end of the tutorial.'

A battlefield where you could be beheaded at any moment.

A fight for survival on every floor.

"Wow!"

Suddenly, someone approached the confused Hunters. It was a soldier, but not just any - his armor was quite splendid. This general exclaimed as he approached us.

"Thank you! You've come to help our empire, brave warriors!"

The Hunters stirred.

"Warriors? What are you talking about?"

"Idiot. Didn't you hear what the angel said in the plaza? About the invasion of the Demon King. We must have been assigned the role of heroes."

"I can't hear from the back!"

"Wow, is this real? Are those soldiers real humans or NPCs...?"

"Quiet down there!"

Murmuring.

While the Hunters were chattering, more reinforcements kept arriving. People pushed and shoved each other in the chaos.

"Warriors! Please help us and save our empire!"

Fortunately, a few skilled ones like me knew how to enhance their sight and hearing with Aura. While the less skilled were lost, a few Hunters heard the general NPC's words.

"This port is the last lifeline of the empire. To keep the capital supplied, we must defend this place. Warriors from another world! Please help us defend the Aegim Empire!"

Then, a voice echoed in my head.

[A Quest for Floor 11 has been given.]

Text appeared before my eyes.

+

[Defend the Port]

Difficulty: F~A

Mission Objective: A calamity has befallen the Aegim Empire. The Demon King. A being of legend has finally raised an army. It cunningly, viciously, and powerfully seeks to cut off the empire's supply route.

Defend the port!

This battle will be the first step in saving the empire.

*However, if defeated in battle, the 12th floor will not open.

+

Seeing is believing.

"A quest...?"

"See, I told you. The Demon King really did appear."

"Where is the Aegim Empire?"

Until a moment ago, the Hunters were disoriented, but they began to grasp the situation. Some silently drew their weapons, while others formed teams with their comrades.

And some Hunters launched their sword attacks toward the goblins.

"Indeed."

The Sword Saint at the forefront sheathed his sword and murmured.

"I'm not sure of the details. But it seems we just have to defeat them."

Then, the Sword Saint plunged into the frontline.

The Hunters who had been hesitating now roared in unison.

"Woah!"

"Good! Follow the Sword Saint!"

"Damn goblins! I've beheaded thousands of your kind over six years!"

Thousands of Hunters charged with weapons in hand, followed by thousands more. The defense force quickly grew in numbers.

As the war turned into a free-for-all...

"Okay."

I smiled from the rear.

Because I heard a voice that other Hunters couldn't.

[Welcome, Hunter Kim Gong-Ja.]

[Receiving Floor 10 clear rewards.]

That was my exclusive privilege – a voice informing me of my special perks.

Chapter 23:

Welcome, Warriors!

(2)

[Normal Stage Reward.]

[You are blessed by the Goddess of War's protection!]

[You have access to the map of the tower from the 11th to the 20th floor.]

Swoosh.

A translucent map appeared before my eyes. Was it some kind of mini-map?

Red and blue dots were chaotically intertwined across the map. Judging by the terrain, the red dots represented monsters, while the blue dots seemed to indicate human troops.

-Tsk, tsk... As expected, a cheat-like privilege!

The Sword Emperor grumbled, his face contorting.

-While others are crawling on the ground, you're just looking down from the sky. Ugh. Yes, always rely on your wits and not on hard-earned skills. This tower is a classic case of the rich getting richer, and the successful becoming more...

However, the Sword Emperor couldn't continue his rant.

[Hidden Stage Reward.]

[You are blessed by the Goddess of Humanity's protection!]

[You can observe the names, abilities, and locations of all NPCs from the 11th to the 20th floor.]

-...Eh?

The notification of privileges wasn't over yet.

[Hidden Stage Reward.]

[You are blessed by the Goddess of Wealth's protection!]

[Select and own one item that exists from the 11th to the 20th floor.]

Swish!

Lists appeared next to the mini-map. One listed the names and abilities of NPCs. The other clearly revealed the names and effects of items.

"....."

"....."

We were at a loss for words.

"Kill them! Push back calmly!"

"Kyaaak! Goblins are throwing spears!"

On the frontline, Hunters were fervently engaged in battle. Orcs howled, and human soldiers bled. Amidst the noisy battlefield, only silence descended between the Sword Emperor and me.

The silence soon broke.

"Ah. This is truly a skill-and-luck based game..."

-Fucking bullshit RNG!

Our reactions were a mix of admiration and screams.

Theme.

Each floor of the tower has a designated theme.

Maybe it's easier to understand if I say genre.

From the 1st to the 10th floor, it's literally [Tutorial].

Hunting grounds are prepared, and there's even a city where you can rest at your leisure. It's a phase for newcomers to get accustomed to the tower.

And from the 11th to the 20th floor...

'Demon King Invasion Story.'

Or a Demon King and Hero story.

It could also be considered a defense story, given the objective of protecting the empire of humanity.

'It's about repelling the armies of the Demon King that swarm like dogs.'

What's important is that the nature of the battles changes from what we've experienced so far.

Monsters no longer roam alone like in the beginner's hunting ground. They form groups. They form units. They create armies.

There are only two ways to defeat a monster army.

'Either become a powerful one-man army strong enough to devour the entire army -'

I looked towards the frontline.

The Sword Saint was slaughtering monsters while scattering blue Aura.

'-or lead an army yourself in battle.'

I smiled.

'This time, I choose the latter.'

I've just received an extraordinary privilege.

Leaving such an immense privilege unused would be a loss.

Of course, I didn't have the knack for leading an army. I'd never done it before, so it was natural. But where there's a will, there's a way.

I was confident I could develop new talents.

"Status window."

Before diving headfirst into the battlefield, I first checked my current status.

+

Name: Kim Gong-Ja

Rank: E

Skills (5/5)

1. I Want to Become Just Like You (S+)

2. Returner's Winding Clock (EX)

3. Sword Constellation (A+)

4. Goblin High Society (F)

5. Only You Can Prevent Fire (A)

*Goddess of War's blessing is being applied.

*Goddess of Humanity's blessing is being applied.

*Goddess of Wealth's blessing is being applied.

+

Good.

I smiled and spoke.

"Hey, Sword Emperor. Did you just curse the game as a luck-based crap game?"

-Yes, I did! You rotten zombie!

"Let me show you why I called it a game of skill and excitement."

I first pulled up the NPC list.

According to the Human God's blessing, numerous NPCs were neatly listed.

+

[Enju] Position: Conscript / Location: 11th floor, Port City Kungur

[Karia] Position: Regular Soldier / Location: 11th floor, Port City Kungur

[Sort] Position: Peasant / Location: 13th floor, Baronial Territory Panbasa

[Rafa Casabella] Position: Sergeant / Location: 14th floor, Horome in the Wall Canyon

[Dop] Position: Blacksmith / Location: 12th floor, Imperial Capital Hakamunia

.

.

.

+

Tens, maybe hundreds of thousands of names appeared on the list.

So far, it was nothing but a chaotic jumble.

But.

"Display NPCs located on the 11th floor only."

The list began to move on its own, as if understanding my command.

Minor names disappeared as if being deleted, leaving only the NPCs located on the 11th floor, reappearing in a newly organized list.

+

[Enju] Position: Conscript / Location: 11th floor, Port City Kungur

[Karia] Position: Regular Soldier / Location: 11th floor, Port City Kungur

[Cort] Position: Sergeant / Location: 11th floor, Port City Kungur

[Amalgam] Position: Conscript / Location: 11th floor, Port City Kungur

•

•

•

+

I continued to speak without pause.

“Sort by highest skill level. Display only the top 100.”

-Huh.

The Sword Emperor let out a short gasp, clearly realizing my intention. His mood shifted from mere grumbling to genuine urgency.

-Wait a minute! Zombie! This is not right. Let's grow stronger step by step, shall we? Slowly train, accumulate skills, learn swordsmanship -how good does that sound?

“That can wait.”

-Eek! Even if you're a cunning one, this is crossing the line! Aren't you ashamed to bear the title of a noble?

“Hmm. No, not really ashamed?”

Regardless of what the Sword Emperor said, the list moved according to my command. The characters in the air scattered and then came together again.

The newly formed list appeared.

+

[Rohan Panbasa] Position: Panbasa Knight Commander

[Sarbast Aegim] Position: Commander of Kungur Front

[Jeshua Camancha] Position: High Knight of the Imperial Knights

[Tomund] Position: Chief Senior Soldier of the Shield Unit

•

•

•

+

Almost there.

Ignoring the Sword Emperor's outburst, I shouted.

"Display NPCs with command skills! Top 3 only!"

-Aaaah! Aaaaah!

Exactly.

I didn't have the knack for commanding an army.

But what's the issue?

If I lack the skill, I can simply steal it from other NPCs!

+

[Sarbast Aegim] Position: Commander of Kungur Front

[Rohan Panbasa] Position: Panbasa Knight Commander

[Sain Camen] Position: Regimental Commander of the Shield Unit

+

From a list of hundreds of thousands, only three names remained.

I gave my final command.

"Display the locations of these three on the map."

-Cheater!

[Goddess of Humanity's blessing] scattered the names, turning them into green lights that merged into the mini-map provided by [Goddess of War's blessing]. Perfect. The map now displayed the locations of NPCs with command skills.

"Okay. Show my current position!"

Finally, my own location was added.

"See? It's all about application. People can turn decent privileges into extraordinary ones with just a bit of ingenuity. It's all thanks to my strategic thinking."

-Making noise! It's not strategy, just manipulative cunning!

“Hehe. Cunning is also a skill.”

Preparations complete. No reason to hesitate now.

I quickly ran to the nearest NPC indicated on the map. Fortunately, it was nearby. The general who had welcomed us as "heroes" upon our arrival was the NPC with the best command skill.

“General Sarbast Aegim.”

“Hmm? Oh, the hero from another world. What brings you here?”

The general, in the middle of issuing orders to his subordinates, turned to look at me. His mustache was impressive. His skills must be impressive too.

-Get away!

The Sword Emperor shouted.

-Run away, you foolish NPC! This guy is not a hero, he's a swindler! If you get caught by him, he'll drain you dry!

A swindler, huh.

This ghost really turned Korean after spending a few days with me.

“General, I have a request.”

“Speak! Thanks to you heroes, what seemed like a hopeless battle is now showing signs of hope. If it's within my capacity, I will gladly fulfill your request.”

“I need you to kill me.”

The general's eyes widened.

“What do you mean?”

“...I have a secret technique. It's a kind of self-destruction. If I die, divine protection will descend upon the entire battlefield. If the blessing is activated, the empire will surely win.”

I tried to look as solemn as possible. Surprisingly, making a grave expression was easy. Just recalling being burnt to death by the Flame Emperor naturally made my face stiffen and my voice solemn.

-Lies! This zombie has no such self-destruct technique!

Hush.

Let's just ignore the ranting ghost of a loser who died just shy of the 100th floor.

“No matter how much it grieves me, I cannot do that!”

“General Sarbast Aegim. Think about what's more important. Whether you draw your sword or not, I'm going to commit suicide. This is the surest way to help the empire.”

I spoke with a grave face.

“I'm asking you for a favor.”

“A favor...?”

“The general, burdened with the responsibility of this harbor, desires the empire's victory more than anyone. Rather than killing myself or dying at the hands of evil monsters, I'd like to entrust my life to you, the battle commander.”

“.....”

“There's no time. Please!”

The general's face turned miserable.

"Even if I must strive for the empire's survival, to take the life of a hero who has come from another world with great effort..."

-Hey. Hey! Do you believe this? Oh, man! How can you believe this? Of all the trustworthy people in the universe, why trust this zombie Kim? Really?

"Oh. Our world must be truly cursed. The advent of the Demon King, only spoken of in legends, the ceaseless onslaught of monsters. And now, having to take the life of a hero – it's all a curse..."

-The curse is the level of your brain!

"Ah, dear God. Do not forgive our sins..."

The general lamented like a protagonist of a tragedy, then took hold of his sword's hilt. With a swish, a seemingly luxurious blade was revealed.

"...At least, I will send you off with a clean, painless cut."

"Thank you."

I was genuinely grateful.

I didn't mind dying, but I disliked pain.

"Please tell me your name."

"Kim Gong-Ja."

"Kim Gong-Ja... On behalf of the empire, I thank you. You are a true hero!"

The sound of the sword cutting through the air.

As promised by the general, it was a clean beheading. The aura-infused blade cleanly severed my neck.

[You have died.]

[Randomly copying a skill from NPC Sarbast Aegim.]

As expected, it was possible to copy a skill from an NPC.

As my head was severed and consciousness rapidly faded, I heard the Sword Emperor's scream.

-Stop dying, damn it! Do you enjoy stealing skills this way!

I mentally replied.

‘The noble says it's sweet as honey!’

Another thrilling day repeated.

Chapter 24:

Welcome, Warriors!

(3)

There is a saying.

Above one who runs, there is one who flies.

Here's another saying.

Next to a hunter who wields a sword, there's a hunter who commands soldiers.

These are the words of Lord Confucius*.

*Gong-ja means Confucius in Korean.

"Hey, what's that!"

"Uh? By the looks of it, isn't that one of our hunters?"

In the midst of battle. Hunters, busy swinging their swords, turned their heads. Distracting oneself in the middle of a fight with monsters was dangerous. Fortunately, the hunters could afford to glance away momentarily.

I personally created that opportunity.

"Hero!"

The general glanced back and shouted.

"Is this the right direction?"

The general's body shook. Mine did too. And for good reason -we were both riding the same horse. The general spurred on his steed, while I sat behind him.

Although the ride was horribly uncomfortable, the feeling was exhilarating.

"Absolutely. Just keep going straight and turn right – you'll find the Demon King's legion commander there. There are some monsters around, but don't worry. Just sweep them away."

"Oh! Understood!"

Why? Because behind the general and me, a thousand soldiers were following.

"All troops, follow me!"

The general raised his baton.

"Hero sent by the Goddess, protect us!"

"Uoooh!"

The soldiers roared and followed the general. A breakthrough attack! The soldiers, who had been defensive until now, pushed through the monster horde. Goblins and orcs were struck down effortlessly.

"Heh."

It was the effect of the minimap.

I had advised the general to target areas where the monsters were fewer.

"Ah. Turn right here."

"Understood! Hero!"

Of course, gaining the general's trust wasn't just due to the minimap. Thanks to repeating today, several preparatory steps were necessary.

Let's talk about witnessing the general's trauma when gaining the skill some other time.

'Status Window.'

Now is the time to focus on the battle ahead.

First, the skill. The skill I had acquired was as follows:

+

Name: Kim Gong-Ja

Rank: E

Skills (5/5)

1. I Want to Become Just Like You (S+)

2. Returner's Winding Clock (EX)

3. Sword Constellation (A+)

4. Goblin High Society (F)

5. Battlefield Insight (B)

+

'The new skill is war-related.'

[Battlefield Insight] was, as the name suggests, an ability to assess the battlefield. Whether our side was at an advantage or disadvantage, where to strike the enemy for a breakthrough - all this became intuitively clear.

In short, it allowed me to pose quite convincingly as a specialist.

'But the skill isn't everything.'

I grinned and raised my sword.

It wasn't an ordinary sword. Nor was it the dagger I had used for suicide. A blade emitting a holy light, the hilt adorned with a lion's open mouth. As I drew it, soldiers around gasped in awe.

"The Goddess has blessed us with her light!"

"The holy sword of our ancestors... Ah, the gods have not forsaken our empire!"

"Long live the empire! Long live the hero!"

Indeed.

This sword was the final piece of the puzzle needed to command the army.

An item chosen through the blessing of the God of Commerce.

+

[Leafanta Aegim's Holy Sword of Protection]

Rarity: Legendary

Description: 'He who seizes the holy sword, shall conquer the continent.' The legendary ancestral sword of Aegim. Rumored to be bestowed upon the founder of the Aegim Empire by the Goddess. 'He who conquered the continent, shall be seized by fate.'

The founder named his successor and then disappeared. Suicide? Betrayed? In a time when legend and history had not yet diverged, his whereabouts became unknown, and the holy sword vanished without a trace. Leaving only a prophecy as a guide.

'On the day destiny arrives, he who seizes the holy sword shall also arrive.'

The owner of the Holy Sword of Protection receives absolute support and trust from those of the Aegim Empire.

+

The legendary item was phenomenal.

"Long live the empire! Long live the hero!"

"O Goddess, protect us!"

"Attack! Sweep away those filthy monsters!"

The soldiers charged with renewed courage.

"Kyaa."

To the soldiers, my skills and I were nothing short of a legendary hero. Though the real commander was the NPC general, and I was just an advisor... It felt as though I was directly reigning over the soldiers.

I felt uplifted.

'This is it. This is it. Ah, this is great. Just witnessing such a scene makes the effort of conquering the hidden stage worthwhile, doesn't it?'

-You trash, using an item like that!

As I soared high, the Sword Emperor ranted.

-It's just a sturdy, shiny sword!

'Tsk tsk. Such a bleak perspective from a ghost. It's a sturdy, shiny sword that makes NPCs go crazy from the 11th to the 20th floor. Got it? NPCs aren't just tools for giving quests.'

A simple change in perspective.

'They're beings to be used in completing quests!'

And this perspective indeed worked.

While other hunters were sweating and struggling in battle, I was enjoying a breezy ride through the battlefield with the general.

"What is that...?"

Every time we passed near the hunters, someone was dumbfounded. There were even looks of shock.

"Why is he alone with the general?"

"Is that an NPC?"

"Wow. Wait. He seems to be giving orders to the general..."

"No, look at his clothes. He's a hunter!"

"Who is that person...?"

Voices of astonishment, doubt, jealousy, and envy.

Typical reactions when humans look up to another human.

'Ah.'

I was intoxicated.

'This is it. This is what I've been looking for. Ah, it's incredible.'

-...This lunatic. You learned aura and instead of training with the sword, you enhanced your hearing to eavesdrop on gossip. Gong-ja, you're truly something... a real zombie.

'Seriously, what's wrong with enjoying it!'

The assault was successful. The monster army was falling swiftly.

In a desperate attempt to stop us...

"Huff!"

To our left, the Sword Saint, leading a group of skilled hunters, was slaughtering orcs.

"Ahaha! Oh, what a touching day! A new battle! A new era! How much-"

"Shut up! If you have time to yap, kill another goblin!"

To our right, the Heretic Inquisitor, along with Viper and members of the major guilds, were making a mark.

The enemy's flanks crumbled. There was no reserve force left to stop our breakthrough. Clatter! Clatter! Under the hooves of the cavalry, goblins' heads were crushed, and orcs were impaled on spears.

"We can win!"

"Follow the general! Follow the hero!"

Charge! And another charge!

Before long, a breach appeared in the enemy lines. We had almost reached the location of the Demon King's legion commander. The minimap marked the legion commander with a particularly red dot.

-Gurgle.

Looking ahead over the general's shoulder, I saw a giant goblin hesitating in the distance.

'Huh.'

I inwardly scoffed.

'A giant goblin is the enemy commander? Really?'

Sure, it would be stronger than the great goblin I had killed on the 5th floor. It commanded a horde of thousands of monsters. But no matter how strong a goblin gets, it's still just a goblin. A cavalry charge would easily sweep it away.

Besides...

[Activating skill.]

I had a skill specialized for goblins.

-Gurgle! Gur!

The giant goblin raised its staff, rallying the nearby monsters. Perhaps in human language, it would translate to something like, 'Block those bastards! Idiots!'

To this giant goblin, I yelled.

"Gurrlle!"

In a perfect Goblin language!

-Gurk?

"Grrrle!"

-Gurk?

The giant goblin was visibly confused. As the leader faltered, the surrounding monsters fell into chaos. Meanwhile, our side continued to charge. What might have been the last hope to stop us vanished. Clatter! Clatter! Under the hooves of the cavalry, goblins' heads were crushed, and orcs were impaled on spears.

-Gorrle!?

The giant goblin frantically moved around. It seemed to realize it had been tricked.

But it was too late.

I swung the Holy Sword vigorously, infusing it with aura.

“A good gurrle!”

The holy sword sliced through the goblin like cutting through tofu. Ding! The blade momentarily caught on something, probably the monster's neck bone. The goblin couldn't even let out a proper scream as its head flew off.

“Ooh!”

The general slowed down the horse and shouted.

“The hero has slain the monster!”

It wasn't directed at me. It was for the soldiers to hear. The general put aura into his voice, striving to make it resonate even amidst the noisy battlefield.

Immediately, the adjutants riding along with us caught the general's intention.

“The monster has been slain!”

“The hero sent by the Goddess has defeated the enemy leader!”

From the general to the adjutants, from the adjutants to the regimental commanders, and from them to their soldiers, the voices resonated and echoed, and the echoes thundered across the battlefield.

“Uoooh!”

The regiments waved their flags in response. Cheers and jubilations. On the battlefield where comrades were falling and monsters were rushing in, the soldiers finally rejoiced.

“.....”

I dismounted from the horse and looked around.

My eyes met with a standard-bearer. He seemed to have lost his left arm in the heat of battle. With his remaining right arm, he waved the flag. As our eyes met, the one-armed standard-bearer smiled broadly and raised the flag even higher.

The sun poured down on the sun-bleached flag.

"Long live the Aegim Empire!"

We had won.

"Purge the remnants!"

"Attack! Attack! Don't let a single one escape!"

The tide had completely turned.

-Keurk, keurr...

-Grrr!

The once ferocious monsters began to flee.

“Huh?”

“Look at these guys.”

Then, the hunters’ eyes changed. If it were a battle between armies, it might be different, but chasing down scattered monsters was a hunter’s specialty. The hunters bared their teeth and pounced on the goblins and orcs.

“Kill them all!”

It was time for the hunt.

The massacre didn’t last long.

Soon after, a voice as vast and clear as the echoes on the battlefield resonated in our heads.

[Stage Clear!]

[Today, the 11th floor stage has been cleared.]

It was a voice of victory.

[Once again announcing to everyone.]

[Today, the 11th floor stage has been cleared.]

Cheers erupted.

“Wow! Is this real?”

“Aren’t we too strong?”

“Long live the Black Dragon Guild!”

This time, not the soldiers but the hunters shouted in jubilation. Just like they had in the square, some hunters threw their hats in the air, and some embraced each other.

Clearing the 11th floor in less than a day!

It was an incredible achievement and a tide-like advance.

[Assessing raid participants... Assessment complete.]

[The raid has exceeded the participant limit.]

[Selecting the top 10 contributors.]

The hunters looked up.

Names were being etched in the sky in light.

+

[Raid Contribution Ranking]

1st. Kim Gong-Ja

2nd. Sword Saint

3rd. Heretic Inquisitor

4th. Viper

5th. Paladin

6th. Black Witch

7th. Countess

...

...

...

+

Familiar names appeared one after another.

However, as the list neared completion, the hunters began to murmur intensely.

“Huh? The first place has no alias?”

“Sword Saint is second?”

“Kim Gong-Ja...?”

My name hadn't been out in the media for long. It was understandable that people were bewildered. But the confusion was short-lived. Someone in the crowd shouted.

“Ah, it's the 10th-floor conqueror!”

“That's right! The conqueror of the 10th floor was named Gong-Ja!”

“A hunter without an alias from the tower in first place again?”

“Could it be some sort of reclusive expert or something?”

Hearing the people's whispers, the Sword Emperor looked puzzled.

-Well, look at that. A reclusive expert? Just a sly guy who's good at scheming...

‘You do acknowledge it's a skill-based game now, right?’

-I can't! I won't!

The Sword Emperor turned away, seemingly upset that I wasn't practicing swordsmanship. What to say about this ghost... He heavily favored basic skills over skills.

I let out a bitter smile.

‘I'll train in swordsmanship before we finish the 20th floor, so cool off.’

-Really?

The Sword Emperor perked up.

‘Yes, of course. Why wouldn’t I? I’m accompanying the Sword Emperor himself. How could I end it without learning anything? I should be begging you to teach me swordsmanship.’

-That's right!

The Sword Emperor started to circle in the air, rejuvenated.

-Ha, finally you recognize my worth, zombie. Though the tower you’re climbing is slightly different from mine, I soared through it in my world. The 11th floor was just light warm-up exercise for me...

Ah, it's easy.

This ghost was so simple to appease.

How could it be this easy?

"Hero sent by the Goddess."

While watching the Sword Emperor float, the general approached. He was covered in monster blood, but his face was clean with a neat smile.

"Thanks to you, we were able to win. I truly, sincerely thank you."

"It's nothing. We all worked together to win."

"Ahaa."

The general scratched his cheek awkwardly.

"I was worried for nothing."

"Pardon?"

"A long time ago, an oracle came from the temple. The Demon King would come, but so would heroes from another world, so don't worry... I was skeptical. Would heroes, not even from this world, really fight hard for us?"

The general smiled.

"But it was unnecessary worry. Let me express my gratitude again."

The general extended his hand.

A handshake. Despite the different worlds, the meaning of clasping each other's hands seemed similar. Whether in this world or ours, humans have two hands, right?

"I look forward to your continued impressive performance."

"I'll try my best."

We shook hands.

[Assessing clear rewards... Assessment complete.]

[Rewarding the top contributors.]

Then, along with the voice, light enveloped me.

Not just me. Lights shot up here and there across the battlefield. One, two, three, four... Ten beams of light shot up into the sky.

[The top contributors will be given early entry into floor 12.]

[Until the top contributors receive their rewards, the remaining participants cannot enter floor 12.]

[Once again announcing to everyone. The top contributors...]

As expected.

The 10 who contributed the most to the raid received the rewards first. I felt sorry for the hunters who narrowly missed 11th or 12th place, but it was a quite reasonable system.

Right before I was completely engulfed in light, the general said.

"Please take good care of our empire."

And then, we were summoned to floor 12.

Volume 2 – Chapters 25-49

Chapter 25: The Chosen Ones (1)

Just as the dazzling light was about to envelop us, the Sword Saint hurriedly spoke.

-Hey, wait. If only the top 10 are being summoned separately, wouldn't Marcus be there? If he sees you, he'll flip out and attack, what will you do?

'Ah, don't worry. What's the worst that can happen? I'll die?'

-You, Kim Zombie...

The Sword Saint seemed about to nag further, but I quickly added,

'I have a plan, so it's fine. Don't you know? I'm Kim Gong-Ja, the sly fox acknowledged by the Sword Saint! Just trust me.'

-You have a plan?

‘Of course! A solid one. I’ll show you in a moment.’

-Hmm.

The Sword Saint crossed his arms, still displeased.

But whether he liked it or not, it was too late. The summoning had begun, and a white light completely enveloped us. Whatever the outcome, I had no choice but to face the Sword Saint.

I closed my eyes, and,

[Transfer complete.]

when I opened them again, I was already summoned to the 12th floor.

It was a place completely different from the 11th floor. Opposite, to be precise? If the 11th floor was a fierce and dirty battlefield where life and death were at stake, the 12th floor was a luxurious and lavish palace. The imperial palace of the Aegim Empire.

‘...Or maybe not.’

I looked around.

‘In terms of fierceness and dirtiness, palace politics might be the same.’

In the audience hall of the imperial palace, the other top contributors were being summoned one after another. Some were unfamiliar, but most were hunters I met yesterday, like the Witch and the Countess. Not surprisingly, they were the leaders of the major guilds.

I caught eyes with other hunters.

“Oh?”

“Hmm.”

Their reactions varied. Some smiled broadly as if to say, 'I knew you would be here first,' while others frowned, seemingly surprised at my top rank.

“Hunter Kim Gong-Ja! You were amazing!”

The Heretic Inquisitor belonged to the former.

“I enjoyed watching your performance on the 11th floor! Using NPCs like that. I was moved!”

The Heretic Inquisitor scurried over. His short stature made him look like a puppy rushing towards me.

“Is the sword at your waist a special item? After seeing that sword, the NPCs started following you without hesitation. Did you receive it as a reward for clearing the 10th floor?”

“Well. Yes...”

“Exactly!”

The Heretic Inquisitor looked up at me with a beaming smile.

“Using the reward from the 10th floor to lead the way through the 11th floor. Your adaptability is impressive!”

“Ah, well, it wasn’t really that big of a deal...”

“From now on, many people will be jealous of you. They might treat you as a lucky upstart. Ignore them! It’s all your skill!”

Uh.

What's with this person? An angel?

-Hey! Kim Zombie! You idiot!

The Sword Saint suddenly shouted.

It was different from his usual teasing tone. It was an urgent cry.

-Be careful! Right now, behind you...

At that moment, before the Sword Saint could finish his sentence, everything happened.

“Hmm.”

The first to react was the Heretic Inquisitor in front of me.

The Heretic Inquisitor, who had been all smiles, narrowed his eyes and grabbed my wrist, pulling me. My posture wavered and crumbled. One step. The Heretic Inquisitor pushed me back and stepped forward in my place.

“Holy Technique, God of Flesh.”

It was a whisper from the Heretic Inquisitor. Clang! The sound of steel fiercely colliding with something echoed. It wasn't just any steel.

A sword.

A stroke of a sword imbued with clear killing intent.

“Ahaha.”

The Heretic Inquisitor laughed.

His eyes, however, were not smiling.

“Surprising, Sword Saint. When did you change professions to an assassin?”

“Move aside.”

The well-dressed elderly gentleman, the Sword Saint, spoke coldly.

He was holding a long sword, pointing it at us.

No, I misspoke.

“I will kill that man.”

Not at us, but at me.

Silence enveloped the audience hall.

Electricity seemed to flow in the air, tingling my whole body.

“Hmm.”

Only the Heretic Inquisitor remained unfazed.

“Excuse me, but when you say 'that man,' are you referring to Hunter Kim Gong-Ja?”

“Indeed.”

The Sword Saint replied.

“If you don’t move aside, I may have to take off one of your arms as well.”

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled subtly.

“That would be quite inconvenient! I can’t afford to make way for you right now. Hunter Kim Gong-Ja is acknowledged by the Temple of the Omnipotent God and the five major guilds. Leaving him to die here would be disgraceful for the guilds!”

“So, you intend to lose an arm, young one.”

“Ah, that too is problematic! My arms are still quite useful.”

The Heretic Inquisitor tilted his head, still smiling.

“May I ask why you are targeting Hunter Kim Gong-Ja?”

“I have no obligation to tell you.”

“No intention of backing down, then?”

“Stop talking and move aside.”

The Sword Saint firmly refused.

Right. From the old man’s perspective, I was a murderer who killed over four thousand people. Without knowing about my skill, the Sword Saint had no choice but to act like this.

“I repeat, I will kill that man.”

“Hmm! Then there's nothing I can do.”

The Heretic Inquisitor joined his hands together.

“I will subdue you here. Holy Technique, God of Teleportation.”

At that moment, light burst behind the Sword Saint. Bam! Bursting through the light were two hunters.

The leader of the Chun-Moon Guild, Viper, and the vice-captain of the Vigilante Corps, Paladin. These two well-known fighters shouted their battle cries. They swung their weapons at the Sword Saint's back.

“Haaah!”

The Sword Saint frowned.

“Annoying flies...”

He clicked his tongue. In the time it took to click his tongue, a single sword strike flew. A blue aura sliced through the air, creating a small blood spray. Two strikes. With just two strikes, the Paladin had a wound on his cheek, and the Viper had a gash on his arm.

“Th-this monstrous old man!”

It was a lightning-fast skirmish.

“How come an old man like you is so spry? Eat less, please! Retire already! You’re stifling the youth like me!”

Viper yelled, fuming.

The Sword Saint let out a small snort.

"There's an old saying that goes like this: behind every strong man, there's an even stronger one."

The Sword Saint, Marcus, spoke sharply. "You're over 40 yourself, aren't you? To the truly young, you're just as old."

"Don't joke! Being in the 40s is just the prime of life! It's practically the true beginning of life..."

The Viper, the leader of the Chun-Moon Guild, was interrupted by the Paladin, a leading member of the Vigilante Corps. "You're old, face it! You look older than you are!"

"Haah," sighed the Paladin.

"Focus on the enemy in front of us, Viper. We're in a disadvantageous fight."

Despite his sigh, the Paladin remained on guard. Actually, he seemed even more alert. The Heretic Inquisitor, the Viper, and the Paladin, three top rankers, were surrounding the Sword Saint, yet he stood tall and alone.

"Hmm. This is indeed a disadvantage."

The Heretic Inquisitor seemed to realize the current situation as well.

He cheerfully called for reinforcements. "Countess!"

"Why?"

"Lend me some money!"

"How much do you need?"

"Thankfully, the Sword Saint hasn't lost his sanity. A brief restraint should suffice. I need 10,000 gold, please!"

"15% interest. Compounded."

The Countess, who had been quietly watching the fight, unrolled a fan.

"Three-month interest-free installment. Would that be acceptable?"

"Ahaha! You misunderstood me! I didn't ask for a loan. I asked for a donation."

"How dare you demand a donation from a merchant?"

"Yes! It's dirty money anyway. Donate it to the temple and go to heaven!"

"You're a worse robber than I thought..."

The Countess shook her head and pulled out a bag with a snail pattern.

"Withdraw, 10,000 gold."

The bag opened its mouth, and countless gold coins poured out. The bag itself must have been a rare item. As the coins piled up, the Countess gathered the bag.

"Here you go, priest. Exactly 10,000 gold."

"I'll take it!"

The Heretic Inquisitor gleefully joined his hands together.

"Holy Technique, God of Donation!"

The spilled gold coins emitted light. The golden light filled the hall, and the Heretic Inquisitor quickly moved his hands, muttering.

"Holy miracle, physical enhancement. Target, Paladin. Viper. Duration, 300 seconds each. The gold will bind our hands. Completed!"

"Hmm."

"Che..."

Then, something strange happened. The gold coins vanished without a trace.

Instead, the light from the coins moved onto the Paladin and the Viper. They were surrounded by a golden aura. "Now," announced the Heretic Inquisitor, "for the next 300 seconds, the Paladin and the Viper will be significantly transformed. Sword Saint! Even someone as strong as you will struggle against us four!"

"..."

"Plus, the Countess's coffers are still far from empty. It's uncertain whether her coffers will run out first or your head will be taken first. If you want to test it, feel free to!"

The Countess, standing afar, pursed her lips.

"Why involve my coffers in your test? I simply donated because the priest asked. Oh, how hard it is to be a merchant, whether outside or in the Tower..."

"Let me add one thing."

The cold voice flowed from the Black Witch, the 2nd rank hunter and the leader of the Black Dragon Guild. She broke her silence.

"The combined attack won't end with just four of us. I, too, will participate. Hunter Kim Gong-Ja yesterday formally made an agreement with all five major guilds."

The Sword Saint furrowed his brows.

"An agreement?"

"Yes, an agreement."

The Witch nodded.

"Hunter Kim Gong-Ja joined all five guilds without being tied to any specific one. In return, we promised to treat him as equal to a guild master. Sword Saint. If you point your sword at Hunter Kim Gong-Ja, it's the same as attacking us all."

"..."

"Of course, by 'us,' I mean the five major guilds."

The Witch took out a mirror.

"Black Dragon. Sang-Ryun. Temple of the Omnipotent God. Chun-Moon. Vigilante Corps."

The mirrors floated and circled around the Witch like protective dogs.

"Are you really prepared to face us all, Sword Saint?"

Five hunters pointed their weapons at the Sword Saint.

".."

The old swordsman remained silent.

That's right.

'No matter how fearsome the Sword Saint is.'

At this moment-.

'He's not strong enough to make enemies of all five guilds.'

I made an agreement with the guild masters for this moment.

I might become stronger than the Sword Saint someday. But that day wasn't today or tomorrow. Until then, I had to have a plan.

I smiled inwardly.

'Do you see? This was my plan. Now, be amazed.'

-Tsk. As expected of a sly fox...

The Sword Emperor sighed.

But he didn't seem too displeased, knowing that I hadn't ascended to the 12th floor without a plan. He's always been one to worry.

I stepped forward.

"Sword Saint."

The hunters in the audience hall turned their attention to me, including the Sword Saint. I deliberately smiled to show confidence.

And I looked directly at the Sword Saint.

"Let's have a conversation?"

Listen well. It's a word from the master himself.

Chapter 26: The Chosen Ones (2)

"...A conversation?"

"Yes. Frankly, I'm quite perplexed."

In the audience hall of a palace, inspired by some empire's royal court, on the 12th floor stage, my voice softly flowed.

"I don't understand why the Sword Saint is attacking me. Although the Sword Saint is seeing me for the first time, I have always admired your noble swordsmanship. But now you draw your sword against me, and it's quite troubling."

The Sword Saint's expression hardened.

Even though I was speaking nothing but the truth.

'It can't be helped.'

The old man's face had hardened for a reason.

On the night the Sword Saint and I first met - a night he probably no longer remembers - he accused me:

-Were you sent by the Black Dragon as a top-class assassin?

-I don't know if it was the Black Witch from the Black Dragon or who hired you, but I will kill you with all my might!

He suspected me of being an assassin.

'An assassin raised by the Black Dragon.'

Even now, the Sword Saint probably harbors the same suspicion. I'm perceived as an assassin employed by the Black Dragon. Or rather, he might suspect even worse.

'Perhaps a top-class assassin secretly nurtured by the five major guilds.'

-Hmm. Well.

The Sword Emperor nodded in agreement.

-From a third-party perspective, you do seem rather unusual.

'Exactly that.'

An unexpected hero appearing out of nowhere!

A mere E-rank hunter conquers an invincible stage. Immediately after the conquest, he forms an agreement with the five major guilds and is promised treatment equal to that of a guild master...

'It's too suspicious.'

-Right. To Marcus, you're not a self-made hunter. You're a fake hero created by the major guilds conspiring together. Tsk.

The Sword Emperor clicked his tongue.

-You said your kill count was about 4090, right?

'Probably around 4093 by now?'

-Right. To Marcus, that number 4093 doesn't just represent the humans you've killed. Because you're not a lone hunter, but a puppet raised by the major guilds.

From the Sword Saint's perspective, it could only be seen that way.

-In short...

'Yes.'

A collusion.

'The major guilds used me to assassinate that number of people.'

The major guilds, reigning over the tower.

They have been secretly assassinating at least 4093 humans.

It was a mere misunderstanding and delusion, but to the old swordsman, it was a most repugnant sight.

"Huh."

If the Sword Saint had been a slightly less righteous old man, he might have backed down here.

"Whether it's the outside world or Babylon, they're much the same."

However, the Sword Saint knew no compromise.

He knew, yet refused.

"Ever since I entered this tower, every day, you all have been throwing your offers at me. You kept insisting to join a guild. But I firmly refused. Do you know why?"

The Sword Saint gripped the hilt of his sword tighter. His hands were old. The skin sagged. But the bulging veins under the skin were not old at all.

A lion's mane may age, but its teeth remain sharp.

"In this tower, in this new world, I wanted to show that one can reign supreme alone. That one can succeed solely on their talent and effort."

"..."

"Such was the hope I intended to give to many people, and that's why I have not joined any clique until now. But what are you all doing?"

The Sword Saint pointed his sword.

"You all are nothing more than stagnant, rotten muddy water."

The guild masters stirred.

Anger. Humiliation. Resentment.

Dark emotions swirled on the guild masters' faces. The Sword Saint's recent remarks were a declaration of war. While some, like the Heretic Inquisitor, remained unaffected and smiled, most guild masters' expressions soured.

"Sword Saint. You, of all people, should not be saying such things..."

"Ha! Have you already forgotten how you skipped out on conquering the 5th floor all by yourself? Old man. It seems your head's gone senile!"

"And you too. Mr. Callenbury. If you had used your connections in the outside world, the current food shortage would have been much less severe, and our Sang-Ryun would have..."

The uproar boiled over.

The hunters gathered here had known each other since the tower's early days. Was it because of the accumulated emotions? The atmosphere in the audience hall quickly turned murky.

"You should have shown the attitude befitting the number one rank. But you lived alone, thinking only of yourself. If you hadn't been so proud, do you know how many hunters could have been saved?"

The Black Witch cursed.

"Not just the 5th floor, but the 7th and 9th too. If only you had cooperated, the losses would have been halved!"

Viper from Chun-Moon Guild spat out venomously.

"As a member of a wealthy family in the outside world, if you had lent a hand, our current situation would have been much more stable. You say we are like stagnant muddy water? Then you're nothing more than a responsibility-shirking child."

The Countess from Sang-Ryun glared bitterly.

A complete mess.

The guild masters' curses, murderous intent, and glances met the Sword Saint, who only slightly furrowed his brow. His dismissive comment only added fuel to the fire.

"Be quiet."

"..."

"Adults like you are babbling on and on... Do you think I'm your grandfather? Shut up. If you want to fight, use your swords."

The atmosphere in the audience hall became uncontrollably hostile.

-Bravo! That's Marcus for you, my one and only disciple.

The Sword Emperor alone admired, oblivious to the mood.

-Hunters talking about connections and politics is the most annoying. If they have time for that, they should swing their swords more!

He had a point.

But...

I felt regret, unlike the Sword Emperor.

"It's sad that even among just ten of us, there are fights."

The hunters in the tense atmosphere looked at me.

I sighed.

"Even the NPCs of the 11th floor fought together to protect their empire. But look at us. We, the hunters, are pointing fingers and arguing who's more at fault. Isn't that a bit shameful compared to NPCs?"

"...Hunter Kim Gong-Ja."

The Black Witch spoke up.

"This is none of your business. It's more serious than you think..."

"I understand. But as hunters, shouldn't we focus on what we need to do?"

I looked around the audience hall.

"Let's focus on clearing the 12th floor."

"..."

"Being a beacon of hope and reducing sacrifices in conquering the tower are noble, but please, let's focus on clearing the stage in front of us."

I particularly looked at the Sword Saint.

"Even if they are just NPCs... their empire is in danger of extinction, right? They're asking for our help. If the summoned heroes, instead of caring for the empire's wellbeing, are just squabbling among themselves, what kind of farce would that be?"

"You..."

I was sincere.

The Sword Saint couldn't threaten my life anymore. The disparity in power was clear. So, my focus now was only on how to clear the 12th floor.

The complex emotional battles and political fights among hunters were of no concern to me.

"What's so hard about being a hero? Solving problems that others can't – that's a hero. We've cleared the 11th floor, so let's clear the rest too."

"Kim Gong-Ja is right."

Fortunately, someone responded to my words.

The Paladin.

The Deputy Guild Master of the Vigilante Corps stepped forward.

"Although it's hard to understand why the Sword Saint attacked Kim Gong-Ja, it's clear that now is not the time for us to fight each other. Everyone's too heated."

" ... "

" ... "

The Paladin tried to mediate, but no one relaxed their guard. Not the Sword Saint, not Viper, not the Countess, not even the Heretic Inquisitor. Everyone was prepared to attack if necessary.

It seemed mere words wouldn't convince them... everyone was too deep in distrust.

"Ha."

Realizing this, the Paladin sighed.

"Alright. I'll make a sacrifice."

As the word 'sacrifice' came up, the hunters looked his way.

In the focused attention, the Paladin softly chanted.

"Open Skill Card."

A soft light emerged from the Paladin's hand. Shortly after, a silver card appeared in the air.

A card that could never be seen by others unless the owner permitted. It was the Paladin's skill card.

"...Deputy Guild Master."

The Black Witch looked worriedly at Paladin. Top-ranking hunters rarely ever revealed their skill cards. A skill was a hunter's secret weapon. Revealing it to others was akin to scoring an own goal.

"It's fine. It doesn't matter."

However, the Paladin calmly flipped the card.

"Everyone, take a good look."

[Lie Detection]

Rank: A-

Effect: You can detect whether someone is lying or not. This applies to people, NPCs, and monsters alike! However, what the other party believes to be 'true' might objectively be 'false'. Is it trust or doubt? The final decision is always up to you.

*However, there is no guarantee that people will believe what you say.

+

I was taken aback.

'Lie Detection!'

This was the skill that the Flame Emperor once falsely claimed to possess. Indeed, it wasn't the Flame Emperor but the Paladin who had it.

'It's a skill perfectly suited for the deputy guild master of the Vigilante Corps!'

The Vigilante Corps was a guild maintaining law and order. Naturally, the tower was rife with criminals. Just look at the Flame Emperor and the Sword Saint, who tried to kill me away from prying eyes.

In such a world, [Lie Detection] would be immensely useful in identifying criminals.

"As you can see."

The Paladin spoke while holding the card.

"I have the ability to detect lies. It's the skill that helped me rise to the position of deputy guild master of the Vigilante Corps. Sword Saint."

"...What is it?"

"If you trust me, ask Kim Gong-Ja anything right here. I will tell you if his answer is a lie or the truth."

The Paladin looked back and forth between the Sword Emperor and me with a neutral gaze.

"Kim Gong-Ja, the same goes for you. If you trust me, I will vouch for whether your answers are lies or truths."

"..."

"Doubt is a poison that eats away at humans, and truth is the most powerful antidote. We may not be able to regain the trust we've lost so far, but at least we can cooperate on the 12th floor."

"Hmm..."

The Sword Saint stroked his beard, deep in thought.

'Wow.'

I thought to myself.

'This is brilliant!'

It was an unexpected stroke of luck. But it was the right answer. The reason I became a suspect in the first place was because of the Sword Saint's skill, the so-called [Eyes of a Detective]. Since the skill had caused the suspicion, it only made sense to use a skill to resolve it!

"I'm fine with it."

I responded immediately.

Being the first to accept it put me in a more advantageous position.

"...Paladin girl. You are the only one here who hasn't harmed a single person. Very well. I will trust you too."

The Sword Emperor accepted it with a meaningful statement.

The Paladin nodded.

"Both parties have agreed. Then, Sword Emperor, please ask Kim Gong-Ja any question. I will fairly verify their conversation, staking my honor and the reputation of the Vigilante Corps."

"Hmm."

The Sword Saint glared at me.

His face was resolute, as if he had been waiting for this moment to expose my heinous crimes to the world. It was a look of assured victory.

-Ah, dear...

The Sword Emperor let out a wail.

-Ah, my Marcus! Old stubborn man. This is why I always say not to rely too much on skills. Those who live by the skill, perish by the skill! Ah, dear, dear.

'Be quiet.'

Unfortunately, the Sword Emperor's voice didn't reach the Sword Saint. He was my ghost after all.

"Hunter Kim Gong-Ja."

"Yes."

"You have killed over 4000 humans. Isn't that right?"

The old man pointed his finger at me dramatically, as if to say, 'Now, your evil deeds will be unveiled to the world!'

I smiled.

"Yes."

"Oh, look at that! You wretched beings. You employed this lad as an assassin and committed atrocities. I will reveal this to the world and..."

"It's a lie."

The Paladin stated.

"What?"

"It's a lie."

The Paladin repeated calmly.

"Kim Gong-Ja said 'yes' to your question. That answer was a lie. To clarify, Kim Gong-Ja did not kill over 4000 humans."

"..."

"Are there any more questions?"

Silence.

The Sword Emperor remained silent, while the Paladin tilted his head.

"But 4000? Strange. Is it even possible for one person to kill that many? Logically speaking, it seems near impossible."

"That's because you all... raised this young man as a top-class assassin..."

I laughed brightly.

"Right. I am a top-class assassin."

"It's a lie."

"..."

The aged swordsman's mouth hung open in shock.

"Pa-Paladin girl. I misjudged you! I trusted that you would mediate without deceit, but..."

"Whether to trust my words or not is up to you."

The Paladin replied steadily.

"Believe it if you want, or don't if you don't. Didn't I ask the same question to both of you from the start? Will you really trust me?"

"..."

"To change your words now would be... petty. No, very petty. Sword Saint, that's not like the attitude you usually show."

"Wa-wait!"

The old man looked at me desperately.

"Surely you must have killed at least one person!"

"Ah. Yes. I have indeed eliminated someone."

The Paladin nodded.

"That's true."

"See!"

"But it was just one person."

"...What?"

The Paladin nodded again.

"That's true."

" ... "

"Of course, killing one person doesn't change the fact that I am a murderer. But, Sword Saint, I can tell you this much. I killed him because he truly deserved it. He tried to kill me first."

"That's true."

"No, it would have been better if he only tried to kill me. He was a mass murderer. A mass murderer! I even witnessed him committing murder, burning people alive without batting an eye! That wretched man!"

"That's true."

"I bet he killed dozens, no, hundreds of people. Yes, he would do that. I killed such a man. Call me a murderer all you want. But you know what? If I could go back, I'd deal with him first. Ah, how can a person be as vile as he was!"

The Paladin slowly nodded.

"It's all true."

"..."

The Sword Saint fell silent.

He slowly looked around. The look on his face said he didn't understand what was happening, but looking around probably helped him grasp the situation.

Because all the guild masters were looking at the Sword

Saint with a '...what are you doing?' expression.

"Ahahaha! Ahahat!"

The Heretic Inquisitor burst into laughter, holding his stomach.

"Kim Gong-Ja, a top-class assassin of our 5 great guilds! What an interesting idea. It would have been great if it were true, but, Sword Saint! Unfortunately, we only met Kim Gong-Ja yesterday!"

"And that's also true."

"..."

The Sword Saint's silence deepened.

-Tsk tsk tsk. The one who thrives on skills perishes by skills.

The Sword Emperor only clicked his tongue.

"Hmm. Anyway, I've answered your questions."

I grinned mischievously.

There was nothing wrong in the words of the young master.

"Apparently, there was a big misunderstanding between us. I'm glad it was just a misunderstanding. But, Sword Saint. Because of that misunderstanding, you attacked me, and if the guild masters hadn't protected me, I would have likely died unfairly."

" ... "

"I think I deserve an apology at this point. What do you think?"

The Paladin nodded.

"An impeccable truth. Not a bit exaggerated or biased."

" ... "

"Apologize to Kim Gong-Ja, Sword Saint."

The old man's face became pale.

Chapter 27: The Chosen Ones (3)

"I... I am..."

After a long pause, Sword Saint finally spoke.

The hunters were watching him. The old man's lips were parched.

"I have to tell Kim Gong-Ja..."

Here, Sword Saint had much to say.

Above all, he did not have to trust the Paladin. There was no reason to. Although the Paladin was famously upright and fair, she was still a power player in one of the 5 great guilds. Why should he trust her?

'I've been fooled by all of you conniving together!'

Sword Saint could have been furious.

Or... rather, Sword Saint could have revealed his own skill card. [Eyes of a Detective]. The ability to see the other person's kill count. Revealing his own skill to others was not a wise choice. But it was sufficient as an excuse.

'It's not because I'm an old fogey that I doubted Kim Gong-Ja. It's all the skill's fault! The skill tells me so, what can I do? It's only natural to trust one's own skill rather than hastily trusting others.'

People tend to distrust others or make excuses when they have done wrong.

'There are psychopaths like the Flame Emperor who just kill their opponents.'

Distrust. Excuses. Silencing.

Just as the Flame Emperor chose [Silencing] and proved himself a psychopath... Sword Saint's choice would also determine what kind of person he is.

It was just such a story.

"Uhhh."

Sword Saint licked his lips.

And he made a decision.

"Your name was Kim Gong-Ja, wasn't it?"

"Yes."

"If you truly did not massacre innocent people... No. No, that's not it."

Sword Saint shook his head in the middle of speaking.

The old man sheathed his sword. Shrrrng. As the sword was sheathed, sighs of relief echoed around the audience chamber. The hunters surrounding Sword Saint relaxed a bit. Amidst this, Sword Saint straightened his tie.

"Let me speak again."

The old swordsman bowed deeply.

"I am truly sorry."

The old man apologized.

"I was wrong. I thought too simply and misunderstood easily... Thus, I almost killed someone too easily. Until now, I believed that those who deserved to die must be eliminated from the earth as quickly as possible, based on my own judgment. And I have killed according to that belief."

Sword Saint bowed his head a little lower.

"However, from now on, such a thing will not happen again."

His voice was low in the audience chamber.

"Merely apologizing in words is useless. If there is anything you desire, I shall grant it... If only I could say that, it would be splendid."

A self-mocking tone tinged his low voice.

"Please forgive me for taking a life. I beg of you. I still wish to live. To reach the top of this tower... I've made a grave mistake, and I nearly killed you. Yet, can you forgive this wretched old body and let it live on?"

The palace's audience chamber fell silent.

The old man could have chosen differently. He could have distrusted the Paladin. He could have made excuses with his skill. But he did not. Instead, the old swordsman acknowledged that [maybe he was wrong].

"....."

The Paladin glanced at my face. Our eyes met. Without words, she nodded slightly. Though no conversation passed between us, I knew what the Paladin wanted to say.

'It's the truth.'

That everything the old man said was true.

Apologizing, not killing people based on [Eyes of a Detective] anymore. Not just that, but not wanting to die.

Wanting to live longer.

So, please forgive him.

-Just like an old geezer.

The Sword Emperor murmured. But did not add anything more. Just looked at the once disciple, the old man, with a hint of regret in his eyes.

Was he leaving the decision to forgive Sword Saint or not entirely up to me?

"Hmm."

Listening to that silence, I also made up my mind.

"Sir Sword Saint."

"Yes."

"Please teach me the sword."

"....."

Sword Saint raised his head that he had bowed to look up at me.

"Well, to be precise... if I ask for a sparring match, please accept anytime. I've managed to find a swordsmanship teacher, but I still don't have a crucial sparring partner. It would be great if Sword Saint could be my sparring partner."

It was a promise I had made with the Sword Emperor on the 11th floor.

To seriously train in swordsmanship before clearing the 20th floor.

It would be fitting to have Sword Saint as a training partner here, to keep the promise.

Ultimately leading to my benefit and growth...

"....."

No.

That's not it.

That's not what I want to say.

I shook my head.

"Sorry. Let me speak again."

".....?"

"Honestly, I can forgive you without any compensation. But."

I began to speak.

"Then it would be somewhat embarrassing. It would make me seem far more magnanimous than you, Sword Saint. I'm not that great a person. It's just that... I'm modestly satisfied with the fact that a strong hunter like Sword Saint is no longer hostile to me."

"....."

"But it's embarrassing to say okay! And to forgive you after we've even come to blows. Pretending to be generous unnecessarily is embarrassing. I just don't like it. So, please teach me something valuable. Like swordsmanship."

I felt somewhat embarrassed.

No, my cheeks twitched.

"This way, I won't be embarrassed... and Sword Saint can save face."

"....."

"....."

Damn!

I didn't realize pouring out my heart would be such an embarrassing act!

My goodness. How did Sword Saint manage to ask for forgiveness, saying his life is precious and begging for it? He seems to have a strong pride. Amazing. Impressive. Can a person sincerely apologize to someone? Beg for forgiveness? I could never do it. Won't do it. I'd rather die.

"...My goodness."

The Paladin murmured.

"Incredibly... it's all true."

Silence descended in the audience chamber again.

It was heavy.

Even though it was the same silence, the atmosphere was completely different now.

"Huh."

Viper was the first to crack open his mouth.

"Really? You can ask Sword Saint for anything and you're embarrassed to show off...? So, you just want him to be your sparring partner?"

"It's hard to believe, but at least according to my skill, it's the truth."

"What? This newbie. Is he some kind of natural monument?"

Shut up before I boil you in snake soup.

"...Refreshing."

The Witch spoke with a wry expression.

"How should I put it? I'm used to seeing kids scrambling to gain even a little more advantage... Seeing someone like Hunter Kim Gong-Ja is quite rare. You've managed to survive until now."

I died. A lot.

Specifically, more than 4000 times. Happy now?

"Ahhh."

For some reason, the Heretic Inquisitor's eyes were wet.

"Truly repentant and truly forgiving! What a beautiful sight! Yes, humans constantly fight each other. But paradoxically, that's why they can endlessly forgive! A true holy miracle! Ah, everyone. I-"

"Shut your trap."

At Viper's word, the Heretic Inquisitor really shut up.

It was a surprising miracle.

"Uh, it seems like things ended well for both of you. But, does that mean my 10,000 gold was just wasted?"

No one paid attention to the Countess's lament.

I sighed. I really craved a strong drink now.

"Anyway, that's it. Sword Saint. There's no need to start sword training right away. Just join me when I ask for it. Please be my sparring partner."

"....."

Sword Saint said nothing for a while, just stared straight at my face. Then, suddenly, the old man slowly opened his mouth.

"Like this,"

The old man's lips trembled along with his mustache.

"To misunderstand such a kind young man like this!"

"Uh..."

"Oh! You asked to be taught the sword. Asked to be a sparring partner. Of course! Yes, indeed! I'll be your sparring partner anytime!"

Thump. Sword Saint grabbed my hands with both of his.

"Uh, Sword Saint?"

"Call me Grandfather Marcus!"

"What?"

"How old are you, young man? Hmm. Judging by appearance, you're not yet 30. I left a very kind granddaughter in the outside world. A child with a gentle heart. If she enters the tower, I'll actively promote your charms to her!"

"No, really, it's fine..."

I wasn't interested in romance. More than that, my hand hurt. It hurt.

Not just for show as the top-ranked, Sword Saint's grip strength was tremendous.

"What? Are you saying you're not interested in my granddaughter?"

"Uh. Yes. Sorry, but not just Sword Saint's granddaughter, I'm not really interested in romance right now..."

"Ah-ha! That would be terrible!"

My grip strength leveled up by one.

"In youth, the spring breeze of love should naturally blow. You don't necessarily need to marry. But romance is essential! Through romance, you see sights you've never seen before, and you learn a lot of things you didn't know! Ahem. Most importantly, you discover how far you can fall!"

"Ah. Yes..."

"Do you know how important it is to realize one's own ugliness? Let me tell you about my experience. It was when I was 16, when I still took the world lightly. But after meeting a girl my age..."

Huh?

This gentleman suddenly became awfully bothersome.

His face was too close. I could see the pores and blackheads on his nose.

Honestly, it was uncomfortable.

I wished he would back off.

-Didn't I tell you he's an old geezer?

The Sword Emperor clicked his tongue.

-Whether for better or worse, he's an old geezer. Do you know what that means? It's someone who doesn't listen to others. Gramps just doesn't listen. To put it nicely, he has his own principles. To put it badly, he's so set in his ways that he's almost ascended to heaven.

I had no idea.

Nor did I want to know.

"Anyway, don't worry. Young man! From now on, I will take good care of you. Ah, do you need an allowance? I've piled up so much money in the Sang-Ryun vault that I can't even manage it all."

"Uh, I can earn my own money. Besides, an allowance? I'm a fully grown adult..."

"You're dressed so shabbily! Ah, people must be neat in their clothing for their minds to be clear. I know a tailor with excellent skills. How about getting a suit tailored!"

What is this?

Is this also a kind of [Countless Handshake Requests]?

Receiving kindness from the current top-ranked hunter should normally be a cause for joy. But I wasn't happy. Instead, I was severely embarrassed. It felt like listening to a real grandfather bragging about his grandchild.

Why should I bear this embarrassment?

'Should I just commit suicide and start the day over?'

-You're insane...

That was the moment.

[Welcome, Hunter Kim Gong-Ja.]

[You have conquered the 11th floor in 1st place.]

A voice echoed in my mind.

As if waiting for my battle to end.

'Ah.'

I reflexively looked around.

Most were sighing in relief. Grateful that Sword Saint had peacefully stopped the fight. It seemed that no one else had heard the voice yet.

'I'm first!'

A smile formed on my face.

'I don't know why, but there was very little information about the floors from 12 to 20.'

Was there media control? I had no way of knowing the details. However, before my 4000 deaths and return, while other floors had extensive information available, the 12th to 20th floors notably had little.

It seemed like the major guilds had united to forcibly hide information.

[You will receive the 11th floor's clear reward.]

I soon learned the reason.

[The Goddess of Protection offers you a reward.]

[The Demon King of the Autumn Rain offers you a reward.]

[Please select one of the two rewards.]

'What?'

I blinked in surprise.

'Choose a reward?'

I had not heard such a voice in the previous stages.

Responding to my surprise, a selection window floated up before me.

+

[The Goddess of Protection]

Description: The goddess who protects the Aegim Empire is moved by your dedication! She has decided to entrust you with an important position in the empire.

You can become the Prime Minister, the Grand General, or the Commander of the Knights of the empire. Choosing a position will also grant you the abilities and reputation associated with that position!

Warrior of the goddess! Join forces with your fellow warriors.

And destroy the Demon King's core located on the 20th floor!

*However, if you choose the Demon King's reward, you cannot choose the Goddess's reward.

+

I read the reward carefully.

I nodded.

'This is exactly as I knew it.'

Role-playing!

Hunters actually become part of the Aegim Empire and act accordingly. Some can become the empire's Prime Minister, others the Commander of the Knights.

It's not just about filling a position. If you're the Commander of the Knights, you inherit the abilities and reputation that come with it.

[Displaying the special class you can choose on the 12th floor.]

And hunters who conquered the previous stage with high ranks were rewarded.

The right to choose a 'special position' one step ahead of others!

+

[Prime Minister of the Aegim Empire]

[Grand General of the Aegim Empire]

[Finance Minister of the Aegim Empire]

[Foreign Affairs Minister of the Aegim Empire]

[Commander of the Knights of the Aegim Empire]

[Captain of the Imperial Guards of the Aegim Empire]

•

•

•

+

A dazzling array of prestigious positions lined up.

'Wow.'

I admired them in my mind.

'In the past, I could only choose roles like Guard A...'

I had reached the 12th floor before my regression, but the situation then was entirely different. Not only the position of the Commander of the Knights, but even roles like the Captain of the Guards had been monopolized by the upper-middle rankers.

But now?

'The stage rewards are really impressive.'

I could choose to be the Prime Minister or the Grand General of the empire.

What a drastic change.

The saying "strike while the iron is hot" couldn't be more true.

'...But what's this reward from the Demon King?'

I shifted my gaze.

There, I saw content I had never seen before.

+

[The Demon King of the Autumn Rain]

Description: The Demon King admires your achievements. The Demon King proposes you secretly collaborate with them. The Demon King promises the same rewards as the Goddess but adds an additional gift.

Kill all the top 10 Heroes except yourself!

Then, the Demon King will use his power to transfer you directly to the 99th floor.

*However, only 1 among the top 10 will receive the Demon King's reward.

*If multiple people choose this reward, only 1 will be randomly selected.

*If no one chooses, the Demon King's reward will disappear.

+

"....."

I was at a loss for words.

As I belatedly reacted, two voices overlapped in my mind.

'What?'

-Huh?

Sword Emperor and I.

We blinked and read the Demon King's reward again.

But the sentences remained the same.

[Kill all the top 10 Heroes except yourself!]

[Then, the Demon King will use his power to transfer you directly to the 99th floor.]

It was clearly written.

I looked around. Sword Saint, Witch, Heretic Inquisitor, Countess, Viper, Paladin, and other top-ranked hunters who were already familiar to me stood there.

'To kill all these people...'

And clear up to the 99th floor in one go?

I swallowed hard.

Finally, the voice echoed again.

[Hunter Kim Gong-Ja.]

[Please choose one of the two rewards.]

Chapter 28:

Autumn Rain of Blood (1)

Silence lingered.

It was a silence that only the Sword Emperor and I seemed to feel. The Demon King's reward. The 99th floor. I read the Demon King's reward over and over again, the words about being transported directly to the 99th floor echoing in my mind.

-It's a trap.

The Sword Emperor cut into my thoughts.

-Definitely a trap. Zombie, don't be fooled.

'I know... Of course, it's a trap. Obviously...'

I murmured to myself.

It was clear that the Demon King's reward was a trap.

Because...

'Flame Emperor would have chosen the Demon King's reward without a second thought.'

The precedent set by the legendary psychopath, Flame Emperor - Yoo Soo-Ha.

'Flame Emperor would have definitely chosen the Demon King's reward. He would have thought nothing of killing other hunters. Yet... he's still lingering around the 40th floor. This means...'

I carefully pondered.

'The Demon King's reward is a trap. Probably the Flame Emperor initially chose it, then realizing it was a trap, he must have returned. I don't know exactly what the trap is but...'

However,

'...Honestly, it's tempting.'

My heart throbbed.

'An opportunity to obtain the skills of the 99th floor boss monster. This.'

Even if the Demon King's reward was just a trap, Flame Emperor and I were fundamentally different. Unlike Yoo Soo-Ha, I didn't need to defeat the boss monster.

Just let the boss kill me and bingo.

'If it's the boss of the 99th floor, it would be the second most powerful after the 100th-floor boss...'

I couldn't deny my greed.

'The 99th floor.'

How much time would it take to reach the 99th floor normally?

One year? Five years? Ten years?

Maybe even more. Even the Flame Emperor, who ruthlessly killed his way up, took ten years to reach just the 40th floor. And now.

To reach that in one go.

-Gong-Ja.

The Sword Emperor stared at me intently.

-Don't do it.

It was a voice I'd never heard him use before.

The Sword Emperor looked at me seriously.

-Look at me. I am the Sword Emperor. I alone climbed to the 99th floor and failed. From my experience, this is a trap. A disgustingly vile trap.

"....."

-It's hard for you to kill the top 10 rankers with your current strength. And even if you manage to kill them, there's a problem. You absolutely cannot break through the wall of the 99th floor, no matter how hard you struggle. Just give up cleanly.

I remained silent.

Was it because he was the only one who had ever breached the 99th floor in this tower? The Sword Emperor's words were filled with steely conviction.

'Is the boss monster of the 99th floor that strong?'

The Sword Emperor grimaced.

-There isn't one.

'What?'

-There's no boss monster on the 99th floor. Instead, something far more malevolent awaits... Ugh, I'm getting flashbacks. Anyway, it's a trap!

The Sword Emperor turned his back and sat down. He seemed like a child sulking for not getting candy. I was a bit taken aback.

'What's waiting on the 99th floor that you react like this? You're scaring me. Is it not a monster but something like a demon god?'

-Hmph. I'm not telling you!

I spoke out of turn.

He really was like a child.

-As much as I hate to admit it, Zombie, you're doing well. Just keep doing what you've been doing. Then you'll be able to clear the 99th floor eventually.

"Hmm."

I sank into thought, fiddling with the hilt of the dagger at my waist. The dagger I relied on for over 4000 suicides. The one I used to kill Yoo Soo-Ha. Just a cheap dagger, but handling it calmed my mind.

'Okay.'

I made a decision.

'I'll abandon this run.'

The Sword Emperor perked up his ears.

-Abandon?

'Yes. I'll only choose the safest routes. Forget about profit and rewards. Just to understand how things play out.'

-You're going to give up on both profit and rewards? What about the [Goddess's Reward]? Why? You don't have to go that far.

'It's fine. It's a step back for a leap forward.'

Sometimes, you need to take a step back to move forward.

I slowly began to speak.

"Everyone."

The hunters in the audience chamber turned towards me.

"Right now, I have the 11th-floor stage reward before me."

"That's good."

The Witch was the first to respond. Perhaps because she hadn't seen the [Goddess's Reward] and [Demon King's Reward] yet, she was as expressionless as usual.

"I was getting bored waiting for the quest. Once you choose your reward, the rest of us can select in order. Take your time choosing."

"Yes. I've already made up my mind."

In front of the top-ranked hunters, I declared.

"I will not choose any rewards."

Silence fell over the audience chamber. Even the Heretic Inquisitor and Viper, who had been playing with cards, looked at me. After a brief silence, the Witch frowned.

"What?"

It was too late.

[You chose not to select the stage reward.]

[You will not be able to choose a special class.]

[If you forfeit the reward, you can only choose roles from the 13th floor onwards.]

[Are you sure about your decision?]

I answered with firm resolve.

"Yes. I, Hunter Kim Gong-Ja, will not select any reward."

Whoosh!

The selection window before my eyes shattered. But that wasn't all. In my mind, a sacred voice and a gloomy voice echoed one after the other.

[The Goddess of Protection questions your choice.]

[The Demon King of the Autumn Rain chuckles softly.]

The hunters looked stunned.

"Kim Gong-Ja? What are you doing...?"

"Hmm."

That's when Sword Saint narrowed his eyes. His experienced gaze swept through the air. In the order of conquering the 11th-floor stage, I was first, and Sword Saint was second. Now, following me, Sword Saint read the [Goddess's Reward] and [Demon King's Reward].

"Indeed. I understand. The safest choice."

Sword Saint looked at me.

"But was it necessary to completely forfeit the reward? Young man. It's just this old man's concern, but by being too cautious, you might end up hesitating."

"Thank you for your concern. But I have no regrets."

"Hmm. As long as you have no regrets..."

The old man sighed. The other hunters watched our conversation with bewildered faces, not understanding what was going on.

"...No."

Sword Saint shook his head.

"Still, giving up the reward entirely seems too cautious. Sorry, young man. I will choose the Goddess's reward. And I will become [Commander of the Knights of the Aegim Empire]."

Creeeak!

The moment Sword Saint made his decision, the grand doors of the audience chamber opened. A group of knights marched in. Dressed in splendid silver armor, the knights reached the old man and kneeled on one knee.

"We swear allegiance to the empire's highest sword!"

"Oho."

Sword Saint looked down at the knights with interest.

"So this is how the roles are assigned."

"Hm? Ah? Really?"

Next was the Heretic Inquisitor, ranked third in the stage conquest. The Heretic Inquisitor scratched his head, then exclaimed, "Ah!" as if he finally understood the situation.

"I see! It's similar to a mafia game."

Of course, except for me, Sword Saint, and the Heretic Inquisitor, the other hunters were still clueless. The Witch furrowed her brows.

"...I don't understand what you're all talking about."

"Don't worry! I'll explain it right away!"

The Heretic Inquisitor spread his arms. Click. Click. Characters began to carve into the smooth marble floor. The Heretic Inquisitor used his aura to inscribe the text on the stone.

"Everyone, take a look!"

The hunters gathered to look at the floor.

+

[The Goddess of Protection]

Description: The goddess who protects the Aegim Empire is moved by your dedication! She has decided to entrust you with an important position in the empire.

•

•

•

+

The hunters murmured among themselves.

"What?"

"99th floor? Is this real...?"

There was little reaction to the Goddess's reward. But when it came to the Demon King's reward, the guild masters' complexions changed. They were noticeably shaken.

Especially the Witch, her face darkened.

"This is..."

"Yes! It's similar to a mafia game! For convenience, let's call those who choose the Goddess's reward [Heroes] and the one who chooses the Demon King's reward a [Traitor]."

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled.

"But there's a crucial difference. [Traitors] are much more at a disadvantage compared to Mafia! [Heroes] are as many as 9, whereas [Traitors] can be at most 1. Plus, we have the Vice-Captain of the Vigilante Corps with us!"

The Heretic Inquisitor pointed at the Paladin.

The Paladin looked down at the marble floor with an impassive face.

"Think about it! The Vice-Captain has the [Lie Detection] skill. Ahaha. In a Mafia game, it's somewhat like the role of a cop. Even if someone here chooses the Demon King's reward, it's okay! The Vice-Captain can quickly expose who the [Traitor] is!"

"Hmm... That's true."

The Paladin slowly raised her head.

"As long as you all trust my words."

"In any case, this is a game overwhelmingly favorable for the [Heroes]! Hunter Kim Gong-Ja. Your decision to forgo the reward is a bit of an overreaction!"

The Heretic Inquisitor adjusted his hat.

"To have conquered the 11th floor in the first place and not receive any reward. Hmm! It's a judgment I find hard to comprehend. While I respect your decisiveness, I will choose [The Grand General of the Aegim Empire]!"

Screeech.

The grand doors of the audience chamber opened again. General NPCs, cloaked in red capes, entered majestically. The generals stopped in front of the Heretic Inquisitor and saluted powerfully.

"We pledge our allegiance to the empire's loftiest banner!"

"Ah, excellent. I sincerely appreciate your service!"

The generals lined up behind the Heretic Inquisitor.

This was the deciding factor.

"Tch. I hate using my brain for this kind of stuff. Anyway, choosing a reward is beneficial, right? Then I'll choose [Captain of the Imperial Guards]."

Viper also chose.

"Then, I will choose [Foreign Affairs Minister]. It seems the most unproblematic."

The Paladin also chose.

"...[Prime Minister] is mine. Please, I beg you, don't choose the Demon King's reward. If no one chooses it, the reward will automatically disappear. The smartest thing to do is to just let it vanish. Remember that, everyone."

The Black Witch also chose.

"Don't worry. Hmm. Well, naturally, I'll be [Finance Minister]."

The Countess also chose.

Every single hunter present had chosen their reward.

Before long, the audience chamber was filled with NPCs. Bustling with noise. Behind Sword Saint, who chose the Commander of the Knights, lined up a knight brigade; behind the Witch, who chose the Prime Minister, lined up a series of officials.

-Wow.

In the vast audience chamber, only one place was empty.

Behind me, there was no one, leaving an open space.

-You're really the only one who didn't receive a reward. Are you okay with that, Zombie? Even if you're throwing away this round, isn't this a bit too much?

'No.'

I was certain.

Maybe it was the instinct of a hunter.

'This is the right answer.'

Knowing when to pounce on prey and when to retreat without a fight.

I...

[The reward settlement is now complete.]

Felt that now was the time to step back.

[All top contenders have completed their selections.]

[Kim Gong-Ja, Sword Saint, Heretic Inquisitor, Viper, Paladin, Witch, Countess...]

The voice echoed in the audience chamber.

The hunters exchanged glances as their names were called.

[1 person has forfeited the reward.]

People turned to look at me. I was the only one who had publicly forfeited the reward. The voice was tantamount to testifying that I had not benefited at all.

The hunters momentarily wore expressions of 'really not receiving any reward,' and then...

[8 have received the Goddess's Reward.]

Their faces hardened.

[1 has received the Demon King's Reward.]

The hunters looked at each other.

[Total of 10.]

[All top contenders have completed their selections.]

[Once again, to inform you.]

Silence followed.

[1 person has forfeited the reward.]

[8 have received the Goddess's Reward.]

[1 has received the Demon King's Reward.]

[All top contenders have completed their selections.]

It was a prolonged silence.

[May fortune be with you all.]

Crack.

The first to break the silence was the sound of someone grinding their teeth.

"How foolish...!"

The Guild Master of Black Dragon. The 2nd-ranked hunter. It was the Black Witch.

"I told you! Don't choose the Demon King's reward. Yet... stupidly!"

The Witch radiated murderous intent. Her face was no longer expressionless. Hatred. Contempt. Anger. Her face was twisted with these emotions, glaring at the audience with scorn.

"Fine. As the master of Black Dragon, I declare here. I don't know who dared to betray us, but I'll gift that person the most painful death."

"Hmm. Surprising."

The Heretic Inquisitor stroked his chin.

"A game that's overwhelmingly disadvantageous for the [Traitor]. Yet someone chose the Demon King's reward... As the Witch said, it's a foolish choice indeed! Ahaha. Of course, its foolishness makes it all the more human!"

"Ah... Shit."

Viper scratched the back of his head.

"Ah, I get it. I get the atmosphere. The air. It's the feeling from when we were conquering the early stages of the tower... My back and neck are freaking tense. Looks like a few will die today."

"That's true. Reminds me of the days when the 5 great guilds were actually 10. Many died back then. Killed many too, didn't we?"

The Countess fluttered her fan. Her tone was gentle, but the glare behind her fan was cold as a wild beast.

"Back then, we really died a lot. Killed a lot too. Right?"

"Shut up! Everyone be quiet. Now is not the time to get nostalgic about the past."

The Witch's expression was twisted.

"Paladin!"

"Hmm."

"Start interrogating everyone with [Lie Detection] right now. Don't leave anyone out! If even one person refuses to answer or tries to evade the question, I'll kill them right here and now!"

Everyone knew it wasn't an empty threat. The Witch exuded murderous intent, and her aura rose like mist around her. A dark, ominous aura. A color that cursed all the light in the world.

"I was planning to do that anyway."

The Paladin quietly nodded.

"First, I'll start by clarifying that I am not the traitor."

And the Paladin turned to start the interrogation.

The first person she approached was... none other than me.

The Paladin stood firmly in front of me.

"Hunter Kim Gong-Ja."

"Yes."

"You've forfeited your reward, so you're not under suspicion. You might not even need to be questioned. But I'll ask anyway. Did you, by any chance, choose the Demon King's reward?"

"No."

The audience chamber fell silent.

All the hunters watched us.

After a few seconds of silence, the Paladin nodded.

"It's the truth."

Sighs of relief were heard here and there.

The Paladin continued without rest, moving to the next person.

Step.

The audience chamber was floored with marble. The Paladin's footsteps echoed unusually loudly as she walked. We followed her movements with our eyes.

"Sword Saint."

"Speak."

"Did you choose the Demon King's reward?"

Sword Saint crossed his arms.

"Upon all my honor. Absolutely not."

"It's the truth."

Step.

"Heretic Inquisitor."

"Yes! Ask me anything!"

"Are you the person who chose the Demon King's reward?"

"I'm sorry, but..."

Amidst the silence, the Heretic Inquisitor's laughter flowed. The sound bounced off the marble floor, sliding off the armor worn by knights and generals.

"I am not! I'm not yet ready to die by the Black Dragon Master's hands!"

"It's the truth."

Step.

"Viper. Did you choose the Demon King's reward?"

"Damn. I did not!"

"...It's the truth."

Step.

"Countess. Did you choose the Demon King's reward?"

"...I did not either."

"It's the truth."

Step.

The atmosphere gradually became heavier. When it was revealed that I wasn't the traitor, sighs of relief were heard. But as each person's truth was declared, instead of sighs, silence overflowed in the audience chamber.

Like a rising water surface.

Soon, the silence reached our throats.

"....."

"....."

The Paladin faced the Witch.

Everyone except the Witch had already been questioned. This was the last interrogation. Facing the hunter who commanded the most powerful guild in the tower and was considered second only to the Sword Saint, the Paladin took a deep breath.

She spoke.

"Master of the Black Dragon."

"...Yes."

"Did you choose the Demon King's reward?"

Silence followed.

"No... It's not me."

Silence continued.

The Paladin slowly opened her lips.

"...It's the truth."

And finally, complete silence settled.

No.

We were submerged in silence.

"Wait... then, what?"

Viper looked around.

"Who is it then?"

The Sword Saint looked at the Witch. The Witch looked at the Heretic Inquisitor. The Heretic Inquisitor looked at the Countess, and the Countess looked at Viper. Viper threw a pleading glance at the Paladin, and the Paladin silently looked at me.

Everyone was looking at everyone else.

"Why are they all saying it's not them...?"

But no one answered.

"Damn it! Who betrayed us?!"

No one.

Chapter 29:

Autumn Rain of Blood (2)

Nobody spoke.

Amid the silence, a voice not our own echoed.

[The Goddess of Protection laments the foolishness of the heros.]

[The Demon King of the Autumn Rain bursts into delighted laughter.]

This voice was not just for me; everyone's faces darkened.

Among them, the Paladin spoke with difficulty, real difficulty.

"...Calm down."

Even after saying to calm down, she remained silent for a while. She carefully considered how to proceed with her words.

"Don't panic. Yes. Maybe the traitor has a skill to hide lies. It sounds absurd, but there's also the possibility of a split personality hiding among us. Everyone has their own trump cards, right? It's not entirely impossible..."

"Or."

Thud.

Sword Saint spoke up.

His cold gaze was fixed on the Paladin.

"Or, it could simply be that you are the filthy traitor."

"....."

The audience chamber turned icy.

Sharp glances, sharper than swords, were exchanged. Until just moments ago, Sword Saint and the guild masters were engaged in a heated debate. The heat and sweat of that had not yet cooled, and yet they had already begun to conflict again.

The Witch frowned.

"Are you doubting us now?"

"That's right."

Sword Saint readily admitted.

"Even if the Paladin isn't the traitor, there's still a chance you all lied to us. You, the leaders of what are called the 5 great guilds, have been close since ancient times. Birds of a feather flock together. Aren't you all just covering for each other?"

"Really, you..."

"No need to argue!"

The Paladin shouted, a desperate voice. Sword Saint and the Witch, who had been arguing, stopped and looked at her. The Paladin tried to regain her composure as she continued.

"Of course, logically, it's possible. Yes, I could be the traitor."

"....."

"But what's important is that we all don't lose our cool and stay calm. It's okay. We have overcome numerous crises and obstacles. Haven't we? We can get through this too if we trust each other..."

"Ahaa."

Laughter flowed.

"The vice-captain is naive. No, pure."

It was the Heretic Inquisitor.

"Trust. Hmm. Trust. Such a beautiful word! But building trust takes a lot of time. It took us nearly 10 years to cooperate as the 5 great guilds. Conversely..."

The Heretic Inquisitor adjusted his clerical hat neatly.

He brushed off his outfit.

"I find it hard to trust anyone outside the 5 great guilds."

"....."

"So, it's highly inefficient to spend another 10 years building trust with other hunters now. Yes, it's a waste of time!"

"Wait."

The Paladin's voice and expression were now desperate. Her composure during the festival on the 1st floor, when she asked me if a woman who graduated from a music college had no charm, was completely gone.

"Now is not the time for efficiency. Heretic Inquisitor, please..."

"Holy Technique."

The Heretic Inquisitor quietly brought his palms together.

"God of Flesh."

A white light enveloped his hands.

"Viper. You take care of the 10th."

The light spread.

"I will take care of the 8th and 9th."

"No, Heretic Inquisitor! Don't!"

"Holy Technique, God of Teleportation."

The Heretic Inquisitor and Viper disappeared. In the blink of an eye, the Heretic Inquisitor was already behind a hunter. The one who had conquered the previous stage in 8th place. Instinctively, that hunter turned around.

"-What?"

An extra, overshadowed by the presence of the large guild masters. Not really an extra, but it's regrettable to downplay him like that. He had performed well in the last stage and thus earned his place here. Compared to my past self, he was a much more promising hunter.

But his future would never come.

"I'm sorry!"

The Heretic Inquisitor laughed gaily, his bare hands without any weapon. However, his long fingers were laced with a pure white aura.

Swoosh!

"Uh, ah...?"

A blood fountain erupted.

The hunter staggered.

Not affiliated with any major guild, not powerful like Sword Saint, nor allied with other guild masters for cooperation like me, just a hunter who had simply graduated a bit higher in the last stage, he died just like that.

Easily.

[A hero has died.]

[He was not a minion of the Demon King.]

The voice echoed in my head.

[The Goddess of Protection expresses sorrow.]

[The Demon King of the Autumn Rain lets out a soft sneer.]

It was a murder that happened in the blink of an eye.

"Hi, hiiik!?"

Another hunter, who had conquered the last stage in 10th place, screamed. Fortunately, or unfortunately, he didn't need to scream for long.

Swoosh!

Teleported by the Heretic Inquisitor, Viper swung his sword. With one strike, the hunter's neck was cleanly severed, and his head fell to the floor with a heavy thud.

[A hero has died.]

[He was not a minion of the Demon King.]

Blood flowed over the marble.

[The Goddess of Protection bites her lip.]

[The Demon King of the Autumn Rain roars with laughter.]

Swoosh!

The sound of a sword being unsheathed echoed somewhere.
It was Sword Saint.

"So, you finally show your true colors!"

The old man's face was distorted with rage.

"Disgusting brats! Nothing has changed from the old days!
Stop right there. If you don't, I'll personally put you down—"

"Holy Technique, God of Teleportation."

With a flash of light, the Heretic Inquisitor vanished.

The hunter who conquered the last stage in 9th place. As soon as he witnessed the deaths of those in 8th and 10th places, he ran. He didn't scream, he just ran. His caution as a hunter was evident. But as he was about to escape through the door, the Heretic Inquisitor teleported right in front of him.

"Ah,"

The hunter reached out.

"Just, wait—"

"Yes!"

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled broadly.

"I'm sorry!"

The hunter's head burst.

He fell in the same posture he was in when he stretched out his hand and said, "just a moment." Thud. The headless body fell lightly. Blood and flesh splattered as the head burst.

[A hero has died.]

[He was not a minion of the Demon King.]

The voice flowed quietly.

[The Goddess of Protection is silent.]

[The Demon King of the Autumn Rain claps his hands.]

"Hmm."

The Heretic Inquisitor took out a handkerchief from his pocket.

His face was covered in bright red blood. He gently wiped his face with a tender touch. After a few wipes, the handkerchief was quickly soaked in blood.

"All three were not it!"

Silence surrounded us.

"This complicates matters. I was certain one of the three would be the culprit! Ahaha. If it's not one of the three, it really means one of us is the culprit. The trust built over nearly 10 years among the 5 great guilds is about to collapse in an instant!"

The Heretic Inquisitor tossed the bloody handkerchief on the ground.

The handkerchief floated in a pool of blood like a paper boat.

"Wait..."

The Paladin trembled.

"I asked you to wait. I clearly said it... I pleaded for everyone to remain calm. And yet, Heretic Inquisitor, you again, just like before..."

"That's strange, vice-captain! I am calm right now."

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled faintly.

He still wasn't satisfied, as he took out another handkerchief with his right hand.

"I calmly considered that the three were the most likely culprits. It turned out to be the wrong decision, but let's focus on the fact that I eliminated the most suspicious ones first. Ah. If the media had been watching, it would have been a disaster, but fortunately, no one is filming—"

At that moment.

The handkerchief fluttered in the air.

Still unstained and white, it fluttered before falling to the ground. Before it hit the ground, something heavier fell first.

A right arm.

It was the Heretic Inquisitor's arm.

"Ah."

It was a relief that it ended with just an arm.

Had Viper not intervened to block Sword Saint's strike, what fell to the ground wouldn't have been an arm, but a head.

"Damn it...!"

Viper cursed, struggling in a fierce exchange with Sword Saint.

"Hey, religious nut! Next time, give a signal before you try to kill someone!"

"Ah, ah."

The Heretic Inquisitor narrowed his eyes, looking down at his severed arm on the ground. The white handkerchief fell on top of the arm, quickly staining red with blood.

"This is more than troublesome; it's serious. Ahaha. Without both hands, I can't perform the Holy Technique. I apologize, everyone! I can no longer be of individual assistance!"

"Now, is that the problem...!"

Viper was visibly struggling. Sword Saint's attack was not just with the sword but also through aura, coming from all directions. Viper barely managed to block these relentless attacks.

"Somebody, damn it, help! I'm dying! Really dying!"

"Kim Gong-Ja!"

The Paladin called out.

"I entrust you with full authority! Even my power of life and death!"

It was almost a scream.

"You are the only one who didn't receive any reward! While there's even a 1% chance that any of us could be the culprit, you're the exception! You are 100% not the traitor!"

"....."

"So, please, I beg you! Stop Sword Saint!"

Sword clashes resonated loudly in the audience chamber. Witch and Countess had joined the fray against Sword Saint. Only the Paladin stood helplessly, shoulders sagged, looking at me.

I watched the fight unfolding before me for a moment.

'Sword Emperor.'

-Yeah? What?

'...Am I destined to be loved by psychopaths?'

I had thought a mess would ensue.

The hunters already seemed to be on bad terms. If a traitor emerged, I expected them to draw their swords without hesitation. That's why I gave up on the reward in the first place.

But...

'This is a total mess...'

I sighed.

"Ah, that's a good idea. Not bad!"

The Heretic Inquisitor interrupted between the Paladin and me. He was single-handedly applying a potion to stop the bleeding from his arm. Surprisingly, he showed no sign of pain or distress.

"In this situation, a majority vote would only be a hindrance. Let's suspend the 5 great guilds' system for now. It's inefficient! It's better to concentrate power on someone who is absolutely not a traitor."

"That means..."

"Yes!"

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled broadly, holding his severed arm.

"I too will entrust all decisions to Hunter Kim Gong-Ja!"

"....."

"Ah, I was confident that one of the three would be the culprit, but I have no shame. However, what's done is done! Until we catch the traitor, I won't trust my own judgment. Hunter Kim Gong-Ja, I will follow whatever you say!"

Back Dragon Witch muttered.

-Yeah. You seem destined to be loved by psychopaths. Rarely have I seen such a lunatic. There was only about one like him when I climbed the tower.

A truly unwanted destiny.

'I've ended up being entrusted with authority by the vice-captain of the Vigilante Corps and the head of the Temple of the Omnipotent God...'

-You've made it big. Congratulations. Did you give up on the reward knowing this would happen? I was secretly admiring you for that.

'I knew it would be a mess, but who knew it would be this disastrous? What about those three who died for nothing? I guess I'll have to return once again later...'

I glanced at the Paladin.

She stood quietly, hand to her face.

"Excuse me. I have a question."

"...Yes."

Did she already know what I was going to ask? A sigh escaped from between the Paladin's fingers.

"He's always been like that."

She was obviously referring to the Heretic Inquisitor.

"When we first entered the tower, there was immense chaos. Especially with religious conflicts. People of different religions, or even the same religion but different sects, split apart and fought. When the Heretic Inquisitor appeared..."

"He appeared and?"

"...He killed them all."

The Paladin sighed again.

"Anyone who caused fights over religion, regardless of nationality or origin, he just killed them all. It was merciless genocide. He's always been that way..."

"Wow."

I had simply thought the religious groups, after repeated conflicts, had joined hands to form the Temple of the Omnipotent God. That's what the media reported. But behind that, was there a thorough massacre...?

"Save me! Someone!"

In the distance, Viper screamed.

His voice seemed to rise an octave every minute.

"I'm dying! Damn it, I'm really dying! Lord of Celestial Martial Clan is dying, save me!"

"Ahaha."

The Heretic Inquisitor adjusted his hat.

"I admit I made a mistake and caused unnecessary trouble. I'm sorry, but Hunter Kim Gong-Ja! In return for entrusting me with full power, could you please stop Sword Saint!"

"Sigh. You are... No, never mind."

I shook my head.

"Let's talk about you later. Seriously. Right now, Viper really seems to be dying, so let's deal with this first."

"Yes! Please!"

I left the Paladin and Heretic Inquisitor behind and walked forward.

'Well, even if it's just for a moment, taking control of both the Vigilante Corps and the Temple of the Omnipotent God is beneficial. They're both large guilds...'

I convinced myself.

A fierce battle was unfolding in one corner of the audience chamber. It was intense and dazzling. Frankly, at my current level, it was hard even to follow with my eyes. Joining such a fight was tantamount to suicide.

But I knew exactly what to say to stop Sword Saint.

"Sword Saint!"

No response.

"Sword Saint! You bowed to me today! Since you've already bowed, please listen to me! Stop fighting and let's talk among ourselves!"

Still no response.

Ah, no choice then.

I took a deep breath and shouted.

"I will ask your granddaughter out!"

Pause.

"If your granddaughter ever enters the tower, well, let's have a meeting. Whether we end up dating or not, I don't know, but she's a family member of Sword Saint, so she must be charming. So as someone who might become your son-in-law, please stop fighting!"

Sword Saint turned silently to look at me.

A long, quiet silence followed.

"...I never forgave these bastards."

"Yes."

"I'm not stopping because of your words, young man. But while crossing swords, I thought that I could kill them anytime. Then, it's better to find the traitor first and then wipe them all out. Right?"

Why are you asking me that?

Instead of arguing, I just nodded obediently.

"Ah, that's a really wise decision. Kill them later."

"Hmm."

Sword Saint slowly sheathed his sword.

On the other side, Viper gasped for air.

"Uh...? What? Am I, alive? Is it over...?"

Nothing is over.

We just temporarily stopped the immediate fight.

"Everyone, please calm down."

I addressed the hunters.

"I don't know who the traitor is here. We might not even find the traitor. But that's secondary. We don't need to find and kill the traitor to overcome this crisis."

"...How so?"

The Paladin asked.

"The traitor chose the Demon King's reward, which means he's already targeting our lives. We don't know when we'll be stabbed in the back."

"Look at this."

I pointed to the marble floor.

There lay three corpses, soaked in blood and flesh, but more importantly, the Heretic Inquisitor's inscribed words.

+

[The Goddess of Protection]

Description: The goddess who protects the Aegim Empire is moved by your dedication! She has decided to entrust you with an important position in the empire.

You can become the Prime Minister, the Grand General, or the Commander of the Knights of the empire. Choosing a position will also grant you the abilities and reputation associated with that position!

Warrior of the goddess! Join forces with your fellow warriors.

And destroy the Demon King's core located on the 20th floor!

*However, if you choose the Demon King's reward, you cannot choose the Goddess's reward.

+

"The Demon King's Core is located on the 20th floor."

I looked at each of the hunters' faces.

"Don't focus on how to find and kill the traitor. It's a trap. Don't fall for it. The traitor is probably trembling in fear right now. Maybe the system even automatically designated someone as the traitor. Who knows?"

"....."

"Let's focus on the Demon King first."

The audience quieted down.

"Eliminating the Demon King also eliminates the Demon King's reward. It's a simple solution. No matter how absurd the tests the tower throws at us, or how much it tries to incite internal conflict among us, the solution is always simple."

A voice echoed in my mind.

[The Goddess of Protection's eyes light up.]

[The Demon King of the Autumn Rain clicks his tongue.]

I spoke with emphasis.

"Let's ascend the tower."

This was my answer.

"Let's shatter the Demon King's Core on the 20th floor."

An answer not only to the hunters but also a declaration to the tower itself.

In response to my answer, a voice responded.

[You are given the floor 12 quest.]

Chapter 30:

Autumn Rain of Blood (3)

[You are given the floor 12 quest.]

As soon as the voice was heard, something poured down the windows.

Drip, drip.

It was raindrops.

The grand windows of the audience hall were hit by raindrops, sliding down. We were briefly captivated by the rainwater on the windows. It wasn't the sudden downpour that slightly startled us. There was something else.

"Oh, oh..."

"The nightmare rain... the rain of nightmares falls again!"

It was the color of the rainwater.

The rain flowing down the windows was as red as blood. Perhaps it was really blood. NPCs in the audience hall with us, regardless of their status, began groaning, clutching their heads.

"Oh Goddess, do not abandon us!"

"What... what's this? Why are they suddenly acting like this...?"

Exhausted from fighting with the Sword Saint, Viper looked around tiredly.

"It's the Demon King..."

An armored NPC muttered. He was lying face down on the floor of the audience hall, trembling. As if his trembling was contagious, groans spread around.

"The Empire is done for..."

"The Demon King is coming..."

"Our lord, where have you gone..."

There was not a single NPC whose face wasn't shrouded in despair. Despair, resignation, lamentation. Their expressions were indistinguishable from real humans.

Viper swallowed hard.

"Th-these guys are funny. Hey, this is all just a setup, right? What's going on?"

"The quest has started."

I said quietly.

"Looks like they won't let us keep fighting among ourselves. If it's hard to stir more internal conflict, they have no choice but to attack us directly."

"Attack? Who?"

"Who else."

I glared outside the window.

"The one who induced internal strife among us by offering such rewards."

Laughter echoed in my head.

[The Demon King of the Autumn Rain affirms your words.]

The rain grew stronger. Initially cautious, like a gentle knock on the window, the sound of rain rapidly became boisterous. Dozens, hundreds, thousands of droplets, all red, bombarded the windows.

"....."

I approached the window. We couldn't see the outside from here. The rain was so intense that the glass windows were entirely stained red. I shattered the glass with the hilt of my sword.

Crash!

Crimson raindrops poured into the audience hall. Finally, the outside was clearly visible. In the middle of the palace. Outside the audience hall was the imperial palace. Beyond the palace was the city, and beyond that, a massive wall.

[The Demon King of the Autumn Rain manifests.]

Beyond the wall, it was there.

-Pitiful creatures.

It whispered softly.

Yes, it was just a whisper.

Just by whispering, its voice crossed barriers, leaped over countless palace walls, and finally flowed inside through the broken window.

-Do you think summoning humans from other worlds and seating them as your leaders will be your shield? You call them heroes, but are they truly heroes for you?

The rain kept falling.

-Call them. Call as many as you can. There's no reason not to. Summon thousands of warriors and tens of thousands of knights. They are merely humans like you. Your foolishness knows no bounds, pitiable indeed.

The voice resonated everywhere. Against the city walls. Along the palace walls. Against the walls of the audience hall. It laughed. A loud laughter. The echo of laughter reverberated through our skulls.

"Uh, ahh..."

The NPCs buried their heads even lower. In pain, they clawed at their heads.

Unlike them, we hunters were better off. Unlike the NPCs, this was our first time hearing the Demon King's laughter. It was bearable. Of course, if we had to listen to that laughter for a year, it would be a different story.

-You who do not see humans as humans.

That's when it happened.

A map only visible to me. The mini-map. Lit up by the Goddess of War's blessing, red dots started to appear on the map. One. Two. Three. The red dots slowly appearing on the mini-map suddenly multiplied rapidly.

Hundreds.

Thousands.

Tens of thousands.

Soon, the horizon beyond was painted entirely red.

-Be consumed by your own evil.

Lightning struck.

For a moment, heaven and earth turned pale, revealing everything in between starkly.

The red dots on the map were all monsters.

"....."

"....."

The hunters fell silent. A monstrous horde of a scale incomparable to the 11th-floor stage. Countless armies were approaching from beyond the horizon.

-Kirr.

-Kek, kek!

The monsters howled. Bared their teeth. Twisted their necks. Raindrops flowed down the twisted faces of the goblins. To them, the rain of blood seemed more like holy water. Like knights embarking on a great crusade, the monsters looked up to the sky and worshipped the red rain.

"...I told you."

I gripped the hilt of my sword tightly.

"It's not the time for us to fight each other."

Then, letters appeared before my eyes.

+

[Defend the Empire's Capital]

Difficulty: A~SSS

Description: Heroes, you have bravely resisted the Demon King's army and defended the port. Sensing the crisis, the Demon King has personally joined the battle. The Demon King can summon monster armies anytime, anywhere. The target of the Demon King is the heart of the Aegim Empire, the capital Hacamonia.

Fortunately, the Demon King's power has weakened due to manifesting from afar.

Stop the Demon King!

*However, if you fail in battle, the 13th floor will not open.

+

Silence lingered for a moment.

"...Weakened?"

Viper muttered absentmindedly.

"That thing?"

It was a sentiment shared by everyone.

"This is... unfair. How are we supposed to clear this? This isn't a quest made to be cleared. Even if the first 10 floors were just tutorials... This is a completely different level of difficulty."

"Enough. Let's stay calm."

I turned and looked at the audience hall.

There were hunters. Behind them, NPCs were in despair.

"We can do this. The tower does not give quests that can't be cleared."

"But how are we supposed to fend off that many monsters with just us...?"

"That's why I'm telling you to calm down."

I pointed at the NPCs.

"Here, we're not just hunters. Have you forgotten what you chose yourself? Viper, you're [the Captain of the Imperial Guards of the Aegim Empire]. As the captain, you should lead your guard."

"....."

"We can't clear this stage with just us hunters."

Exactly.

"Convince the NPCs. Rally them. Command them. Treat them as real people and somehow lead them into battle."

That's how we cleared the 11th-floor stage.

"We shouldn't fight each other. Sword Saint, you are the commander of the empire's knights. It's absurd for the knight commander and the captain of the guard to duel each other. How can a country facing foreign invasion defend itself properly?"

"....."

"If you accepted the reward of the knight commander, think of it as a benefit. But with rights come responsibilities. Whether you like it or not, we have inherited the [roles] of the empire's leadership, and now it's time to play those roles."

I looked at the Paladin.

She was looking at me with a serious expression.

"Foreign Minister."

"Um."

In the audience hall, where the emperor should be, he was nowhere to be seen. The emperor must be somewhere in the palace. "Paladin, please take the foreign ministry NPC staff and find the emperor. Without a leader, the NPCs won't follow us properly."

The Paladin nodded.

"Understood."

"Grand General."

I turned to the Heretic Inquisitor. Despite losing his right arm, he was still smiling brightly, looking at me with an expression of genuine interest.

"Yes! As the Grand General, that would be me!"

"I really don't like hunters like you. Honestly, I dislike you. After watching what you did earlier, I felt we need to settle our differences someday. However, we can't afford to lose someone as important as the Grand General right now."

"Ahaha. I'm finding you more and more likable, Hunter Kim Gong-Ja!"

"Since you've entrusted me with full authority, just shut up and listen to me."

I examined the map as I spoke.

There wasn't much time. The red tide was increasingly approaching the capital.

"There should be many soldiers on the walls. With monsters rushing in like a tidal wave, they must be in no state to think straight. As the Grand General, you must go up on the walls and console the soldiers."

"Hmm! Noblesse oblige!"

"Defend the walls at all costs. If the walls are breached, this stage is over."

"Don't worry."

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled.

"I've never broken a promise in my life. I'll stake my life on it and defend it!"

"Okay."

I looked at the crowd.

"Then I'll go ahead."

It was time for war.

Whoosh! Pop!

As I left the palace, other hunters were being summoned one after another.

"Wow, where is this place?"

"It's nice that it's not a shabby port."

Like tourists on a trip, the hunters looked around the streets of the capital.

"Ew, is this acid rain? What's with the color of the rain...?"

"Get under the roofs! Quick!"

"Hey, it says to choose a role for the reward?"

"Role? What role?"

The later arrivals were completely clueless. Perhaps because they arrived after us.

'Even the top rankers who arrived on the 12th floor first doubted and fought each other.'

They even killed three people on mere suspicion. What would these latecomers be like? It was too much to expect much from hunters who had just entered a new stage.

'I don't have time to persuade the hunters now.'

The Demon King's legion was approaching every moment.

'I'll first try to block the attack with NPCs!'

Ignoring the hunters, I ran into the streets. It was terribly crowded, but luckily I had the mini-map. I diligently followed the shortest route to the walls.

"Kim Gong-Ja."

It was just as I was leaving the palace. Someone appeared beside me.

"Witch?"

"Call me Black Dragon Witch. I don't like my alias."

The Black Dragon Witch, the second-ranked hunter, suddenly appeared and ran alongside me. Was she using aura in her steps? She seemed to glide across the streets.

"How did you suddenly appear here?"

"...It's my skill. Teleportation. I can move anywhere within my line of sight."

That was an overpowered skill.

-Zombie, die once to her! Teleportation is too good! I'll admit it if you die to her. Hurry up and die!

Ignoring the Guardian Spirit's words, I asked.

"Then why didn't you go to the walls first instead of coming to me?"

"That's obvious."

She replied expressionlessly, unfazed by the running.

"I saw you in the 11th floor. You have a sword that the NPCs respond to. I don't know what kind of sword it is, but with it, you can boost the morale of the NPCs. Right now, the soldiers on the walls need you, not me."

The Black Dragon Witch looked at me.

"Agree."

"Excuse me?"

"Agree to come with me for Teleportation. If you don't verbally agree, I can't move you. It's a limitation of my skill."

I was slightly flustered.

"Wait. Teleportation must be at least an S-rank skill, right? Are you sure it's okay to tell me about its restrictions? It's your trump card."

"That's a strange thing to say."

She wiped her forehead. The rain of blood kept pouring down on us. Her white forehead was matted with hair due to the rain.

The Black Dragon Witch's black eyes looked at me.

"According to you, I'm the empire's prime minister, right? Isn't it natural for a prime minister to use their trump card to protect their country?"

"....."

"We don't have time. Just agree quickly, no matter how roughly."

I nodded.

"I agree with the Black Dragon Witch's use of her skill."

That instant, she reached out with her left hand and grabbed my right. Tightly. Her long fingers interlocked with mine, ensuring we wouldn't slip in the rain.

"Huh?"

"-There's one more condition."

She whispered, holding my hand.

"Teleport."

Whoosh!

In the blink of an eye, we were on the walls.

As expected, the walls were in chaos. Despite the approaching monster army, the empire's soldiers didn't react. Rather, they couldn't. The soldiers hid behind the walls, trembling or praying to the gods.

"It's over..."

"God, please show us mercy..."

"Hic, hu... huhuh..."

NPCs. Yet indistinguishable from living humans.

Even if they were mere illusions, their fear wasn't. Their expressions of despair weren't illusions either.

"Black Dragon Witch, thanks for bringing me here. From here, I'll..."

"Wait."

She sighed.

"I can't just show my junior a poor image and leave."

"What?"

"I didn't become a guild master by just sitting around."

She took a deep breath.

Then she spoke.

"Soldiers of the Aegim Empire!"

Black aura flowed from her body.

The black was even darker than the red.

"Stand up! What are you doing on top of these stone walls? Do you think these walls will automatically protect you? Don't you realize that the real barrier protecting our empire isn't these stones, but you, the soldiers of the empire?"

One by one, the soldiers hiding behind the walls began to raise their heads.

"The Prime Minister...?"

"It's the Prime Minister."

Murmurs spread among the soldiers. To them, the Black Dragon Witch appeared as their prime minister. One person recognized her, and his words spread like a contagion through the rain.

The Black Dragon Witch nodded.

"Stand up! I command you to stand! One day, these walls may crumble, and our homeland may be destroyed. But as long as you stand, our empire, our Aegim Empire, will not fall! Because you are the empire!"

It was completely unlike her usual demeanor.

"Stand up!"

Her face, usually cold and expressionless, was now filled with fervor. As she looked down at the soldiers from the walls, they seemed to be caught in her gaze, unable to look away.

"Stand up, soldiers of the empire! Defenders of Aegim! Warriors who are the empire itself! Take up your spears! Grab your swords! Until there is nothing left to grab, until there are no hands left to hold weapons! Stand up for the empire, for yourselves!"

She clenched her hand.

My hand.

"The Goddess protects us!"

The Black Dragon Witch raised my right hand high.

I realized what I had to do.

Swoosh!

The holy sword was drawn from its sheath.

I held the hilt and raised it high. Amidst the red downpour on the walls, the blade of the holy sword shone brilliantly. The white light pierced the rain and illuminated the faces of the soldiers.

"The Founder's Sword..."

"The holy sword. The sword blessed by the Goddess!"

Then.

[The Goddess of Protection expresses her gratitude for your choice.]

[The Goddess of Protection squeezes out her last power.]

Light emerged.

Chapter 31:

Bloodied Sword (1)

"The Goddess..."

That was all it took.

The red raindrops ceased.

Not all the rain had stopped.

It was just where the light of the holy sword shone that the rain halted.

A small pause. A faint light.

"The Goddess..."

"God protects our empire!"

Sometimes, small things were enough.

Especially for humans who had little left.

To the people of the empire, their territory was but a handful of land left. History was nothing but the last unfilled page. This was known to the kingdom's citizens, the soldiers, the officials, and the nobility.

That's why there was not a single NPC in the audience hall.

Because the Prime Minister abandoned governance.

Because the Grand General gave up on the military.

Because the Imperial Guards no longer protected the emperor.

Because the Knights did not uphold their duties.

An empire abandoned by all.

Therefore, the tower had chosen the empire as its stage.

Like the children abandoned in a mansion on the 10th floor.

"Stand up!"

The Black Dragon Witch cried out.

One by one, soldiers began to rise to their feet. Some leaned on the walls to stand, others on their spears, and some were helped up by their comrades.

"Stand up!"

The Witch commanded them to become the last walls of the empire. Yes, they were to be the walls. Her cry echoed off the walls, reaching every soldier of the empire.

"Stand up!"

"The Prime Minister is here! She stands with us!"

"The Founder's Sword protects us!"

Thus, the walls became walls, the spears became spears, and the soldiers became soldiers.

"Stand up, quickly!"

"Such disgrace in front of the Prime Minister!"

Lieutenants ran around, slapping the backs of the soldiers. The soldiers snapped back to reality and adjusted their helmets.

Red raindrops rolled off the tips of their helmets. But the rain no longer blinded the soldiers. They looked straight ahead.

"Huh..."

The Black Dragon Witch let out a small sigh.

The black aura that had been emanating from her gradually subsided. Perhaps she had overexerted herself using the aura. Not only red raindrops but also clear beads of sweat were visible on her forehead.

"...Why?"

The Witch turned to me.

"Have you never seen a Ukrainian giving a speech?"

"Uh..."

"There are a lot of commies in our country."

The Witch slightly raised the corners of her mouth.

I belatedly realized she was smiling.

"I don't like communists, but they do give good speeches. There's something to learn from them."

"Yes?"

"...It's nothing."

Her expression returned to being emotionless. The corners of her mouth dropped. What did the Black Dragon Witch mean?

-No.

The Sword Emperor chimed in.

-It seems like she's just embarrassed because her dad joke didn't land.

'Eh? Was that a joke earlier?'

-Don't know. It seems like it from the context. But if you react like you just did... Never mind. Zombie, you should never join a group and mingle with superiors. Just keep walking the hunter path like now, okay?

I didn't understand.

But one thing was clear.

"Kim Gong-Ja, what will you do now?"

The recent speech by the Witch had somewhat reversed the situation.

"For now, we need to hold out on the walls."

"That's right."

I gazed at the red horizon.

Countless monsters surrounded the Demon King. The Witch's S-rank skill was Teleportation. Even if I used it to fly there, there was no guarantee I wouldn't be killed by the Demon King. I would probably be surrounded and killed by monsters in the blink of an eye.

First, I needed to create a one-on-one situation with the Demon King.

"We need to bring the hunters here while the NPC soldiers hold the line. Then we won't be pushed back in the fight. If the Demon King deploys more monsters to force a breach in the wall..."

"If he does?"

"Then, teleport me in front of the Demon King."

The Witch stared into my face.

"A suicide squad, huh."

"Yes."

"Are you prepared to die?"

A natural suspicion.

I was still just an E-rank hunter. No matter how powerful the Demon King was, if a mere E-ranker could threaten him, the continent wouldn't have been safe to begin with.

No matter what adjectives were used, it was difficult to fully describe my disadvantage.

But to me, death did not signify defeat.

"I intend to win."

My death was a stairway leading to victory.

"I have a trump card too. Trust me."

The Witch sighed.

"Alright. Every hunter has their secrets. I hope your sword is sharp enough to kill that boss monster."

Of course, that was my intention.

-The Goddess amusingly plots.

Then, it happened.

-Such a pitiful last struggle. Light, huh? What use is light to those who cannot harvest tomorrow's grains? Have you too become pitiful, comforting these wretched beings?

The Demon King's voice sliced through the battlefield.

-Then let me show you the light as well.

Suddenly, a loud noise erupted.

The Witch and I remained alert, keeping an eye on the Demon King. That's how we knew what the loud noise was.

It was a sword.

Slowly.

From the distant horizon, the Demon King slowly swung his sword. Time seemed to slow down. It was as if a different time flowed from the Demon King's sword, as if the sword was trying to cut through time itself.

But the Demon King's sword didn't slice time, it cleaved the sky.

As it cleaved the sky, the sword strike was already a beam of red light.

The beam targeted the city gate precisely and pierced it.

A massive explosion followed, and a dust storm surged.

The Witch and I instinctively closed our eyes. As we did, the surroundings were engulfed in dust, and screams echoed from beyond. The soldiers were screaming. Sounds of collapse followed.

Shortly after.

"Cough... Cough..."

When the dust storm subsided a bit, we turned towards the direction of the screams. Despite the pain from the dust in our eyes, shock overcame the pain.

The Witch coughed and muttered.

"...Is that power really weakened?"

The city gate had crumbled.

The Demon King sneered.

-Pitiful beings.

Red rain poured from the dusty sky.

The laughter mixed with the dust in the sky and the rain on the ground.

From heaven to earth, scorn echoed.

-Are you still an empire?

But it wasn't just the gate that had fallen.

The red beam continued beyond the shattered gate. The streets were crushed, buildings on both sides of the avenue crumbled. Finally, even the towering Imperial Palace was caught in the beam.

Boom!

Part of the palace collapsed. Like a ship colliding with an iceberg and sinking, the splendid palace leaned and slowly sank.

From afar, the sound of the empire's palace being destroyed echoed.

[A hero has died.]

Nearby, a voice echoed.

[He was not a minion of the Demon King.]

A voice announcing someone's death.

"....."

My ears were ringing.

The Witch and I glanced at each other for a moment.

"...That was where the audience hall was."

The Witch spoke first.

"The Sword Emperor, the Heretic Inquisitor, and Viper would already be out of the audience hall, leading their knights and guards here. The Paladin is busy searching for the emperor on your order. That leaves..."

The Countess.

"...To die first."

The Countess was not the traitor.

"That bitch."

The Witch muttered quietly.

That was all.

She didn't send off her fallen comrade with many words. Instead, she shook her head a few times, perhaps her own way of saying goodbye.

"Black Dragon Witch. If the Countess really perished, then the outside world and..."

"Now is not the time."

The Witch spoke softly.

"Let's focus on what's in front of us now."

The second strongest hunter in the tower was just staring.

Staring at her prey beyond the horizon.

"Even the Demon King can't keep firing attacks like that. Kim Gong-Ja. Help me defend the fallen city gate."

The red dots on the mini-map were changing.

The monster army approached like a wide wave, but now they sharpened like awls.

Were they attempting a breakthrough?

"Yes."

The awl pointed to the city gate.

The opening created by the red beam.

"That's what I was thinking too."

I grasped the Witch's hand.

She nodded.

"Teleport."

We teleported to the fallen city gate.

-Chirp chirp!

-Keck! Ki! Kiik!

-Grooooar!

Monsters had already rushed up close. Arrows flew about. Archers on the walls fired, but it was insufficient against the red tide. Goblins, orcs, skeletons, all sorts of monsters howled like beasts as they charged.

Only about two minutes remained until the first wave reached us.

-Zombie.

The Sword Emperor's voice came.

-Even if it's just for a minute, or 30 seconds, it doesn't matter.

Dozens, hundreds of monsters broke through the dust cloud and charged.

Then, dozens and hundreds more stirred up dust as they approached.

-Hold the line alone.

There was no ally blocking my path.

-To win this war, you need to become a beacon of hope for everyone.

Thus, I stood alone at the front line.

-Hold the line. Even if it's just for 30 seconds. Showing that you alone can hold back these monsters is what's important. It's not the person who survives for 30 years who is called a hero. It's the person who gives a desperately needed 30 seconds to everyone. That person is the true hero.

I dropped my backpack to the ground.

-Become a hero.

I pulled out a glass bottle from the backpack.

The future Master Alchemist's elixir in the bottle.

-I'll help you.

One gulp. Two gulps. Three gulps.

I swallowed all the elixir in the glass bottle.

-I promised to teach you swordsmanship until the 20th floor, didn't I? It's a bit early, but it's practice time.

Thump.

My heart pounded.

-Place your back foot at an angle.

The intervals of my heartbeats started to slow down.

-Keep your front foot firmly on the ground.

My heart beat faster and faster.

-Now, look straight ahead.

I looked.

-Two goblins are at the front. They normally have poor eyesight, but now they are squinting because of the dust cloud. Instinctively, they'll swing their swords widely, trying to hit anything. Stab them before they can swing.

My heart rate increased, and my 1 second felt longer.

-Your holy sword only shines, but it's perfect for blinding your opponents. In a fight, an absolute 1 second isn't important. Only a relative 1 second matters. Blind your opponents with your sword and take that 1 second from them.

Thus, my 1 second was a bit faster than my heartbeat.

-Here they come.

My sword would be a bit faster than my 1 second.

-Let's go, partner.

The Sword Emperor stood beside me.

-It's time to become a hero.

I swung my sword.

Chapter 32:

Bloodied Sword (2)

A storm of blood surged.

-Kiiieeeee!

A goblin screamed long and loud.

In my time, the scream was unending.

-That's the first one down.

Blood spurted into the air. Red. The blood mixed with the rain, both sharing the same color. As blood droplets still floated and raindrops hadn't yet fallen, the world between them was dyed red.

I readjusted my grip on the sword.

-Next, deal with the one on your left.

And I swung my sword.

-Kreeeeeeeee!

The second one down.

Before the first goblin had fully perished, the second goblin was cut down. It all happened in an instant. Blood spurted from both sides.

The monsters couldn't even see my sword as they screamed in unison.

One perished, then another followed.

Another one died, and then another.

-Eeeeeeee!

-Eee, eeeeeee!

-Kiiiiii!

As one monster's scream was about to end, another freshly started.

Thus, around me, the screams never ceased.

A concert of the sword.

My sword was like a conductor's baton orchestrating a chorus of screams.

-One second has passed.

The Sword Emperor spoke.

-When you swing your sword, don't cut off the motion. Gong-Ja, don't separate each strike; connect them. Continue slicing.

I swung my sword.

-Slice from top to bottom. Just because your sword moved downwards, doesn't mean your attack has ended. Think of it like music. If a note descends, it's only to rise again.

A scream resounded.

-Connect them! If your sword goes down, continue the motion upwards. Then your sword will keep moving continuously.

Another second passed.

-A sword fight is a battle against time! An amateur can only dominate for a mere second. Swing once, and that's it. They're blinded. They don't know how to connect their next strike. But a more skilled fighter can control for five seconds.

Blood flowed from the enemy.

My body exhaled breath.

-Don't waste time!

Before all the blood could spill.

Before my breath could fully escape.

-Don't waste it! Slaying one enemy doesn't mean it's over. Nothing's over yet. Know where to swing your sword next! People usually let time slip by, but a swordsman can't afford that! Live every second to the fullest.

Between the enemy's blood and my breath, my blade flowed.

-A swordsman lives by the sword.

I swung my sword.

-Did you think living a second was easy? Are you really alive?

I swung my sword again.

-People aren't truly living when time just passes. They live when they dedicate time to something. Gong-Ja, you are a swordsman. So you must live by the sword.

I swung my sword once more.

-Burn brighter!

A goblin clawed at my arm, blood spurted. Ah. My head spun. My heart throbbed. Despite the excruciating pain, I kept swinging my sword, focusing straight ahead.

-Kieeee!

-Groooo, grr...

-Kooaaoo!

Countless monsters.

From beyond the red dust cloud, monsters poured in. Numerous enemies. Numerous evils. Monsters seeking to devour my flesh and drink my blood. They charged at me, drenched in red rain.

-Ten seconds now.

This was ten seconds.

Just ten seconds.

-Burn more fiercely. Gong-Ja. Don't just live; set your life ablaze.

I gripped the hilt of my sword as tightly as I could.

-Show them who you are.

And I roared.

Uoooooooooh!

In the midst of the battlefield, right at the front line of this war, my roar echoed. Soldiers shooting arrows from the walls flinched. Monsters rushing through the dust cloud hesitated.

-Yes. Damn it, that's right.

The Sword Emperor chuckled.

-You're finally shedding that zombie face. Kid!

I ran straight ahead.

-Guh...?

I targeted a momentarily stalled goblin first. Swish! Before it could react, I severed its head. The goblin's head soared into the air, mouth agape.

I swung my sword again.

-Krrur, rur.

Next, I targeted an orc standing idly by. Swish! Before it could lift its club, I chopped off the orc's head. A fountain of blood erupted.

I swung my sword again.

‘Just a little more.’

Skewering a skeleton.

‘A little more.’

Another goblin.

‘Just a bit more.’

Many orcs.

‘More! Just a bit more!’

Towards countless monsters.

‘Look!’

I swung my sword.

‘Look at me!’

I was alive.

I was alive when I swung my sword.

-Koooaoo!

An ogre.

From the red dust cloud, a giant ogre appeared, waving a massive club.

One swing. Two swings. Each swing generated a whirlwind.

The dust cloud that had settled thickly over the ruined gate was blown away.

The ogre's swings caught the smaller goblins. Thud! A goblin was flung straight into the wall, smashing to mush on impact.

That's right. The creature had no camaraderie, not even among its own kind. No empathy, compassion, or mercy.

Therefore, it was a mere beast.

An ugly beast.

-Uooooo!

The beast roared savagely.

Baring its teeth, aiming solely at me.

'Come.'

And here stood a lone hunter.

A hunter eyeing its prey.

‘I’ll show you.’

Thud!

The ogre stepped forward.

A corner of the wall, barely holding up, collapsed pathetically.

Thud!

The hideous beast had massive feet. Each step shook the ground. The walls protecting the empire fell. Shaking the ground and crumbling barriers, the ogre charged towards this spot.

-Plant your feet firmly on the ground.

But...

-Look straight ahead.

My mission remained unchanged.

-Slash the enemy with your sword.

I charged at the monster.

Thud!

The giant beast stomped down. That's when I seized the moment. As the ogre raised its club to smash me, I twisted my blade right in front of it.

White light.

The light of the Holy Sword penetrated the ogre's eyes.

-Groooo!

But it was too late for the ogre. Its swing had already begun, and changing its path was difficult.

'Why.'

In this elongated moment that felt infinite, I charged at the ogre, pondering a thought.

'Why did they give an EX-rank skill to such a psychopath like Yoo Soo-Ha?'

Thinking about Yoo Soo-Ha, the Flame Emperor, and this tower that had granted him the returner skill.

'There was no need for him to be a great saint. Just a bit more rational, a bit more sane would have sufficed to receive the skill. But why, why did it have to be given to such a psychopath?'

Whooooosh!

The ogre's club swished past, just missing me, blinded momentarily by the light of the Holy Sword.

This created a brief opportunity.

'Could it be... Is that the reason?'

I sprinted forward.

'Is it because no one but Yoo Soo-Ha can conquer the tower? To reign at the top, must one be like him?'

I soared into the air, the ogre's widened eyes focused on me.

The monster tried to swing its club again.

But it was too late.

'Don't make me laugh!'

I'll show them.

'I'll break through the 20th floor in place of the Flame Emperor.'

Not just the twentieth stage.

'The 30th too.'

'The 40th, the 50th.'

'The 60th, 70th, 80th, 90th.'

Even the 99th floor.

'Till the 100th!'

Until I finally stand at the summit.

'I'll show them!'

Thus.

[Your existence becomes more defined.]

I swung my sword.

[Hunter Kim Gong-Ja is leveling up.]

The blade precisely severed the ogre's neck.

A torrent of blood erupted.

The monster's skin was tough, but not sharper than my sword. Its life force was strong, but not denser than my aura.

The ogre, even in its dying moment, swung its arm in a futile attempt. Refusing to perish gracefully? There was no need to be taken aback. I simply delivered another blow.

[Your skill slots have expanded.]

[You are now a D-Rank hunter.]

The ogre's head fell.

Thud!

A moment later, the monster's body collapsed.

[May fortune be with you.]

Gradually, the red dust settled.

-Kirrrr...

-Kii, ki! Kiii.

The monsters were visible. The horde pouring through the shattered gate. The seemingly endless wave of creatures that had appeared eternal, now hesitated. Seeing the fall of the giant beast, they were struck with fear.

Silence.

Nothing but the sound of rain could be heard. Soldiers on the walls stared at me, and the monsters kept stumbling. The quiet surrounded me. I stood alone amidst the looks and the retreat.

-Congratulations.

The Sword Emperor chuckled.

-Thirty seconds have passed.

Then, someone passed by me.

I knew who it was just by seeing their back. A black suit. White hair. The Sword Saint dashed, stepping on puddles.

Swish!

With one swing, dozens of goblins and orcs were decapitated and bisected. Blood fountains erupted in unison.

One second. Two seconds. Three seconds.

In that brief moment, I saw it. The sky filled with more blood spurts than raindrops.

“.....”

The Sword Saint slowly turned to me.

With the blood storm he created behind him.

The old man spoke.

“-----.”

I couldn't quite hear him.

My sense of time was still slow.

“Hmm.”

Realizing my unusual state, the Sword Saint smiled slightly.

He then spoke with aura.

“---You did well.”

He raised his sword's hilt.

Rain fell.

Since the rain was red, the sword remained bloodied even after the water flowed.

“My name is Marcus Callenbury. Young man.”

I realized it was his way of showing respect.

“.....”

I remained silent.

The second time.

This was the second time a top-ranked hunter had revealed their name to me.

The first time was when I was still wandering on the 1st floor.

In a secluded alley, the Flame Emperor had grabbed my head and whispered his name.

-My name is Yoo Soo-Ha.

-Farewell.

That day, I was killed.

Today, for the second time, I heard a different name from a different person.

I sensed that I, too, had changed.

And what I couldn't do in my first experience,

what I never did, I could do now.

“My name is Kim Gong-Ja, sir.”

Today.

I said my name.

Chapter 33:

Bloodied Sword (3)

Rain poured down.

A blaze may engulf a vast plain, but it must start from a single ember; a river may overflow to the brim of heaven, but it must begin from a single droplet.

I might not claim to be a blaze, but I was an ember; I might not call myself a river, but I was a droplet.

"Hmm."

Amidst the falling rain, the old man stood in the center of the flowing water.

He nodded lightly towards me.

"Let's fight together, young man."

The top-ranked hunter.

The Sword Saint.

Commander of the Imperial Knights.

Joined the battle.

"Ahaha!"

The rain continued.

"Sorry I'm late!"

Splashing through puddles, a voice approached with laughter.

"I could have been here sooner. Leading an entire troop isn't as simple as it seems!"

The owner of the voice was one-armed. In the street swept by the red beam, where only puddles remained, the one-armed priest stood tall.

"Thank you, Hunter Kim Gong-Ja."

The Heretic Inquisitor adjusted his hat with his remaining hand.

Rain fell.

Through the blurry rain, something rushed from behind the Heretic Inquisitor. It cleaved through the rainwater, surging forward.

"We'll take over the time you've bought for us."

Thousands of soldiers.

Avoiding the collapsed buildings, leaping over sunken pits, parting the puddles, soldiers of the Empire were rushing in. Not just soldiers – there were others too. Citizens without armor, people of the Empire without helmets. With almost bare bodies, they flooded in.

"By the order of the Grand General, everyone."

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled broadly.

Thousands of soldiers and tens of thousands of civilians screamed.

"Slaughter the bastards who bared their fangs at the Empire."

The fourth-ranked hunter.

Master of the Temple of Omnipotent God, the Heretic Inquisitor.

The Grand General of the Empire.

Brought reinforcements.

"Oooooo!"

Rain fell.

Droplets merged into a river.

The monstrous army, once a fearsome tide, had now halted. Like a high tide frozen in place, the monsters hesitated at the gate. The tide had turned, the flood became an ebb, and at the broken gate, the current flowed backward.

"The gods are with us!"

Rain fell.

"Long live the Aegim Empire!"

Rain fell.

'Ah.'

Swept away by the rainwater, I couldn't tell when it had begun. Was it because time had slowed? Suddenly, I became the first droplet of the overflowing stream, running along.

A refugee from a border kingdom brandished a spear beside me. A farmer from a now-destroyed Imperial village wielded a hoe on my right. Looking back, a hunter, indistinguishable from me, raised his sword.

They kept saying something,

"----."

"-----!"

But I couldn't understand.

Was it the sound of rain? The shouts of people? The screams of the monsters? Was it because time had slowed? Or was it because I had already become a mere droplet, swept away with them?

Or was it because I was swinging my sword?

"-----!"

Forward.

"-----."

Even more.

Until the fire burns every field and the water floods every corner.

Just a bit more, a little further forward.

"Hey."

Tap.

Something touched me. It tapped my shoulder. Cutting through the noise of millions of raindrops and the voices of thousands, it spoke to me. It was a one-eyed figure, wearing an eyepatch.

"Well done. I should have been here sooner. Ugh! It took time to gather not just my royal guard but also our guild members. But don't worry. We'll show you why we are called the Chun-Moon Guild."

The figure paused abruptly.

"....."

Suddenly, it stopped talking and just stared at my face with its one eye.

"You're not listening. Engrossed, huh? You've got cojones. I like it."

The figure chuckled softly.

"Hey, my name is Liǎofàn. You probably can't hear, but that's fine. You saved my life back in the audience hall. What good is being the Chun-Moon Guild Master if I let a debt go unpaid?"

Just focus ahead. I'll take care of the left side. Consider it a huge privilege."

He drew his sword.

"No one has ever died on my right side."

Rain fell.

"Go on, rising star."

I swung my sword.

"I'll protect you."

The current grew fiercer.

Flowing more violently.

"Sorry I'm late! I was busy looking for the Emperor of the Empire. Found him, but he had already taken poison and committed suicide. It seems difficult to gather forces using the Emperor's authority. My apologies."

"It's alright. No need to gather more forces here. Rather, Lady Paladin, join the fight."

"Of course. Hm? Why is Hunter Kim Gong-Ja...?"

"Don't bother him now."

Rain fell.

"That guy. He's savoring his golden time."

Rain fell.

"Pitiful beings."

"Given time, do you really believe it belongs to you?"

"The power of the goddess who cared for you is waning. Now, there is no god in the Empire. What will you rely on? Will you prove yourselves? Then so be it."

The mocking laughter flowed with the rain.

"Show me."

A red glow.

But there were things blocking my way.

A lot of them.

"Hey, Witch! Get the mirror up quick!"

"I know. I missed it once, but I won't give it a second chance."

"Old man! When the Witch scatters the beam, let's cut it together!"

"I alone am enough."

"It's coming, everyone!"

Rain fell.

"-Scatter."

Six beams of light flashed. The light of mirrors. The red beam hit the first mirror and slid off. Smash! The first, second, and third mirrors shattered. But the fourth one didn't break and completely deflected the red beam.

"Sword Saint! Viper!"

Someone shouted.

"Inhale."

A breath was drawn.

"Yaaaaa!"

And exhaled.

The sky split.

In the moment between taking and releasing breath, the sky split open. Even the red beam was cleaved in half. It was like a vast sea parting on both sides.

The wide-open waterway.

Five voices chattered in their own way.

"Look! Look! I'm far from done!"

"Pretending without any dignity."

"Now's our chance!"

A voice whispered.

"I'll instantly teleport us right in front of the Demon King. Everyone, stick with me!"

"Hurry up! If the Demon King summons more monsters, it'll all be for naught!"

Five voices overlapped one after another.

Gathered in one place.

And then.

"Kim Gong-Ja!"

Someone reached out their hand.

Rain streamed down that person's face.

"Catch this!"

"....."

"We don't have time, hurry!"

Suddenly.

The eternal-like moment unfurled.

I could see the people around me.

I could hear the sounds nearby.

Not just that. Where I was, how I ended up here, everything came flooding back all at once.

I was in the middle of a battlefield.

The Empire's army and citizens were now clearly pushing the monsters back. An endless stream of hunters poured from the collapsed gate. The follow-up participants. Finally, hunters who realized the situation of the 12th floor stage had plunged into battle.

"Hunter Kim Gong-Ja!"

Amid countless humans, we were at the forefront.

The direct path to the Demon King was empty, as the red strike of the Demon King had swept away even the monsters. Monsters would soon swarm, but not yet.

"Hurry!"

There, the hunters gathered in one place.

It looked somewhat comical.

The Heretic Inquisitor was piggybacked by the Viper. The Viper grimaced fiercely, clutching the Sword Saint's forearm. The Sword Saint, even more furrowed in brows, placed his hand on the Paladin's shoulder. The Paladin emotionlessly held the Witch's left hand.

'...This would go viral if it were a photo on the internet.'

Such was the terrifyingly magnificent scene that I was lost in absurd fantasies when the Witch shouted.

"You! If you don't grab on now, I'll leave you here!"

The Witch extended her right hand towards me.

'Ah.'

And then I realized.

This scene was about to disappear.

The sharp exchange I had with the Sword Saint.

How the Sword Saint reluctantly drew his sword, persuaded by the Paladin.

The apology the Sword Saint offered me.

The brutal murder of three hunters by the Heretic Inquisitor.

The fights we had.

The ceasefire.

Our united battle.

'All will vanish.'

Everything.

Like the rainwater that flows away to nowhere.

'They won't remember.'

But...

-What are you doing, partner?

That was enough.

-Now it's time to hunt the boss mob, kiddo.

Even if it's not remembered, it doesn't vanish.

I have my sword.

There is one human here who died on the 1st floor. There is one ghost who died on the 99th floor. No one knows of their deaths, yet we two have come this far.

"Understood."

When I return, nothing will have changed.

The Sword Saint will still doubt me, and when the time to select rewards comes again, the hunters will doubt or kill each other again.

"Let's go."

But I have grown stronger.

I won't let innocent people die anymore. I won't stand by as Sang-Ryun, the Countess, dies and the outside world loses contact with the Tower. I have a pretty good idea of who the traitor is. I was certain.

I will do better.

"Alright!"

The Witch firmly grabbed my hand.

"Transport!"

In the next moment, we leaped from the sky. Five of us landed simultaneously. In front of us stood the majestic Demon King, holding his sword.

-Interesting.

The Demon King was like a shadow taking on a human form.

-The heroes of the goddess, is it?

He had a face but no expression. Arms but no hands. Legs but no feet. It was as if the Demon King wasn't really standing on the ground but about to sink into it.

No. He was actually sinking. The Demon King's body continuously flowed downwards. His skin was murky like dirty water, flowing and surging up anew.

The master of nightmares.

A moving shadow.

An endlessly flowing darkness.

-Heroes, do you know there is a traitor among you? Surely you must. Yet you desperately trust each other, trying to piece together the torn fragments. Do you think those rags will cover you?

Was there a need to listen further?

At least in my view, there wasn't.

I, holding a sword, charged.

"Kim Gong-Ja!?"

The Paladin's alarmed voice came from behind.

"No! Wait! Don't attack alone! We need to cooperate and launch a joint attack-."

I'm sorry.

See you in the next life.

You won't remember today.

-Ho.

The Demon King chuckled as he watched me charge alone.

-Fool.

It was a strange laugh. The Demon King's face had no eyes or mouth, so the laughter seemed to flow from his skin. The shadowy, murky substance flowed and surged, bursting into laughter.

-Are you here to kill me, hero?

The Demon King swung his sword.

An attack I absolutely couldn't stop at that moment.

Just before the blade reached me to sever my neck.

"No."

I didn't try to block with the holy sword.

It was unnecessary.

Instead, I just respectfully raised my middle finger.

"I came to die to you, bastard."

Let's settle this in the next life.

I clearly saw the Demon King's laughter freeze for a moment.

"-----!"

"---Ja, ---!?"

Soon, nothing was audible.

Consciousness faded.

Vision, hearing, touch, various senses shut down instantly.

Only the rain falling on my face was felt until the very end.

And then.

[You have died.]

A voice rang out.

[The condition for your skill has been fulfilled by your death.]

[Randomly copying the monster Demon King of the Autumn Rain's skills.]

Here we go.

[Creating skill cards.]

It's time for Round 2.

Chapter 34: My Death (1)

Yes, I've returned.

Now I can say that I have 'returned' to this place.

[Randomly copying the monster Demon King of the Autumn Rain's skills.]

A pit of fallen consciousness. The Netherworld.

My hell.

People called me a loser. I was indeed a loser. It was this place that gave me a chance. When I was engulfed and burnt to death by the flames named Flame Emperor Yoo Soo-Ha, I did not miss the last opportunity given by the tower.

Why?

[Creating skill cards.]

Why did the tower give me such an opportunity?

It's the same question as 'why did it allow a psychopath like Yoo Soo-Ha such power?' Why? To me, an insignificant person who lurked in the community, burning with envy, why did it gift such an opportunity?

-Checked all the skills.

The Sword Emperor spoke.

-Do you want me to read them out now?

"Yes, please."

Perhaps the tower felt regret.

Listening to the skills recited by the Sword Emperor, I pondered.

Maybe the tower was disappointed with the attitude of the hunters.

+

[Resentment Flows Like Rain]

Rank: S-

Effect: You do not see. It becomes invisible. People believe that if something is not visible before their eyes, it does not exist. 'They are blind.' Yes, 'they are ignorant.'

Then, show them.

Show them vividly how many lives have died in their ignorance. As much as the innocent blood that flowed in this world, the sky will willingly pour down red rain.

*However, only the blood you have witnessed yourself will become rain.

+

Flame Emperor Yoo Soo-Ha must have literally shattered the 10th floor stage.

Not in the sense of clearing it, but literally breaking it. The resentment, grudges, and hatred of the dolls – he must have ignored all of it and shattered everything.

Didn't the tower find this regrettable?

Was it disappointed, perhaps?

"What's the next skill?"

-Here it is.

The Sword Emperor replied.

+

[Echoes of a Crying Heart]

Rank: A+

Effect: Your emotions fuel and strengthen your aura. The stronger the emotion, the more your aura responds. Vengeance. Hatred. Sorrow. All emotions, regardless of their nature, will ignite the flames.

*However, you will increasingly become addicted to that emotion.

+

‘.....’

I took time to ponder.

Yes, the tower must have been disappointed.

‘There’s a hidden quest on every floor.’

Just like the quest to comfort the dolls in the hellish mansion.

Maybe... there was also a hidden quest on the 12th floor.

Wanting to discover it, I focused intently on what the Sword Emperor was saying.

+

[Ghoul Summoning]

Rank: SS

Effect: You summon as monsters those whom you have personally killed. The deceased do not inherit their abilities or memories from life. They are merely summoned as monsters like goblins, orcs, zombies, skeletons, etc.

* However, you can only summon once a week.

+

There were many other minor skills.

But the three that struck a chord with me were these.

‘...Alright.’

I nodded.

‘I’ve decided.’

Which skill to choose.

How to clear not just the 12th floor, but up to the 20th.

‘I’ll go with this one.’

-Huh?

Surprised by my choice, the Sword Emperor tilted his head.

-You're choosing that one? Hm? I don't quite get it, but well, do as you please. I don't know what you're thinking, but you'll probably come up with some scheme anyway.

‘Look forward to it.’

I reached out towards the card, then paused and said,

‘Sword Emperor, sir. You're well-informed about the Sword Saint's schedule, right?’

-Huh? Well, yes. Marcus wakes up at dawn and his schedule is tightly packed until he goes to bed at night. Totally like an old man.

‘Please tell me about his evening schedule. I need it for something.’

-Sure thing.

I grasped the card.

A voice echoed in the dark space.

[Selection complete. Copying skill.]

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

And so, I returned to a day earlier.

[Your current Hunter Rank is D.]

[A penalty for the skill occurs.]

[Re-enacting the trauma of the enemy who killed you.]

Of course, there was a penalty.

I had to witness the trauma of the so-called Demon King of the Autumn Rain...

But we have to deal with the 12th floor first.

[The level of penalty is moderate.]

[Hungry Ghosts Realm.]

Let's talk about that nightmare a bit later.

The Sword Emperor taught me the value of living every second.

Indeed, it's incredibly hard for a person to truly live even a moment.

"---Leaving already?"

At the café.

The Witch looked up at me, sitting in her chair.

It wasn't just her. Leaders of huge guilds looked at me with various expressions. The Countess, who had died at the hands of the Demon King on the 12th floor, also gently smiled, sending off her regards.

1st Floor City Café.

The place where I made agreements with the guild leaders.

I had returned there.

‘A day.’

I realized how vast 24 hours could be.

It was dizzying.

In a day, we ushered in a new era, cleared the 11th floor, and fought the Demon King on the 12th. But, goodness gracious, all of this happened in less than a day.

“...Yes. The 11th floor is about to open.”

I felt a lump in my throat.

Clearing it with a cough, I continued.

“We need to prepare from now to not fall behind others.”

“How do you prepare when you don’t even know what the 11th floor will be like?”

“.....”

The 11th floor is not a problem.

The problem starts with the 12th floor, where the Demon King intervenes.

There, you all will be divided.

Someone will betray, and due to that betrayal, you'll be split.

Even deaths will occur.

“...Kim Gong-Ja?”

The Witch furrowed her brows.

“Are you okay? You suddenly look strange. Are you sick?”

“Hmm. I’m fine. Just overwhelmed being among such remarkable people in this gathering. It’s a bit emotional, you know.”

I smoothly continued.

In the meantime, the Sword Emperor watched me silently.

“Anyway, yes. I know what the 11th floor will be like. Not just that, I even know the contents of the quest.”

“.....!”

The guild leaders' eyes changed.

Information was as vital as life itself. I had effectively told them that I held the key to a life-threatening issue. Naturally, their expressions changed.

“I got the information as a reward for clearing the 10th floor.”

“...And you're choosing to reveal this here because...?”

The Witch asked.

“You're willing to share the information with us?”

“Of course.”

I raised my index finger.

“But there's a condition.”

“Speak. I’ll listen gladly.”

“If I ask for a [favor] someday, please grant it just once.”

I looked at each hunter seated around the table. They pondered my words. A favor. Simple yet heavy.

“What kind of favor?”

“I can’t say right now.”

“.....”

“But I swear here that it won't be anything that threatens your lives. It's not about asking for money either. Nor will it be about taking someone else's life. If you find it impossible, you can simply refuse at that time.”

“Hmm.”

The Heretic Inquisitor stroked his chin.

His right hand.

The hand that was lost to the Sword Saint's sword in the previous round.

“It sounds quite reasonable to me! Ahaha. With information, we can prepare in advance, and if we can prepare, there's hardly any problem we can't solve. I agree!”

“Hmm. If we have the right to refuse... Yes, I concur.”

The Inquisitor agreed, and the Countess joined in.

The rest of the hunters pondered for a while and then promised to comply with my condition.

"Okay."

First step cleared.

"Now, let me tell you. From the 11th to the 20th floor, the stage is set in a different world called the Aegim Empire. It is under invasion by the Demon King, and the 11th floor is a battlefield focused on the port..."

My voice softly filled the café.

After hearing about the 11th floor, the guild leaders murmured among themselves.

"...Indeed. The tutorial was up to the 10th floor. From the 11th, we are getting into large-scale battles."

"Information worth its weight in gold."

"Yes! The nature of the fight will completely change!"

"Our guild members need to be informed to some extent. Oh dear. But our Sang-Ryun members aren't cut out for fighting..."

The hunters actively exchanged opinions.

I nodded.

'This will make clearing the 11th floor stage much easier.'

Already things are changing.

Different from the previous round, just this alone has caused many changes.

But it still wasn't enough.

"Then, I'll be leaving now... Ah, Paladin."

"Hmm?"

The Paladin turned her head. She was sipping her third Americano.

"What do you want?"

"Would you mind taking a walk outside with me? I need to discuss something with you."

"Hmm."

The Paladin looked around and shrugged.

"I was about to get up anyway. As long as the walk isn't too long..."

"It won't take much time. About 30 minutes."

"Then it's fine with me."

The Paladin put down her coffee cup.

"Happy to accept your date offer."

The bustling city was alive with people.

In the square, beside the fountain benches, and at outdoor restaurants, hunters discussed the 10th floor.

"Since there's no announcement yet, it must be some unknown rookie who cleared it!"

"Really? It's probably just the top guilds arranging something."

"Who really conquered it...?"

"I want to clear a floor too."

Buzzing noises filled the air.

For those whose tomorrow had been erased, the 10th floor clearance was a very recent event.

It felt like I was the only one walking through time without being deleted.

-Hey, zombie.

No, to be precise, I wasn't alone.

-He's following you.

I had the Guardian Spirit with me.

‘Are you sure?’

-Yes. But don't turn around.

To clear the 12th floor safely, two conditions were necessary.

One was the cooperation of the leaders of the major guilds.

The other was... for the Sword Saint not to view me as an enemy.

‘It's too late to clear up misunderstandings with the Sword Saint on the 12th floor.’

I learned this painfully in the last round.

‘I need to clear things up before climbing the tower.’

The Sword Saint has a very bad relationship with the guild leaders.

If he draws his sword against me, it automatically makes him an enemy of the guild leaders too. They are already at each other's throats, and adding a traitor to the mix?

A shortcut to disaster.

-Wow, he's stealthy. You wouldn't notice him even if you turned around. The old man has stealth skills.

‘Just make sure he's following properly.’

So, I was currently [fishing] for the Sword Saint.

I asked the Sword Emperor about his schedule and deliberately caught his attention according to that schedule. He spotted me while having dinner at his regular outdoor restaurant. He immediately stopped eating and started following me.

Of course.

"Kim Gong-Ja, where are we going?"

The Paladin walking beside me didn't know this.

"This alley leads to a rather gloomy neighborhood..."

"I want to introduce you to a shop. It's run by an unnamed Alchemist. The skills are really good here. If only it was more well-known, it would be a big hit, but it's struggling because it's not. If you think it's good, why not help the business?"

"Hmmm..."

The Paladin walked beside me, observing my face.

She was checking if I was lying.

"The Paladin activated the [Lie Detection] skill."

The Paladin spoke.

"Is what you just said true?"

"Yes, of course. Why would I lie to you, Paladin?"

It wasn't a lie since I did plan to introduce her to the Alchemist's shop.

"Sorry to ask, but are you planning something suspicious?"

"I'm seeking your help, Paladin. Even if something dangerous happens, it will endanger my life, not yours. Trust me."

"Hmm."

The Paladin slowly nodded.

Everything must have been verified as the truth.

"I apologize."

The Paladin smiled.

"I'm often told that I'm too suspicious. Let's continue."

Okay. Passed.

We passed through the alley and safely arrived at the Alchemist's shop. The Alchemist was moving heavy luggage, possibly a new machine. She first looked puzzled at our approach but recognized me and beamed brightly.

"Ah! Customer!"

"Are you still open?"

"Ahaha. Business hours are over, but I always open the shop for customers! Especially for my first regular customer!"

The Alchemist put down the luggage.

A few days ago, she looked disheveled, but now he had completely transformed. she had visited a barber and bought new clothes, finally resembling a proper shop owner.

"Whew. Ah, sorry. Customer. And this lady is...?"

"This hunter is the Vice-Captain of the Vigilante Corps. You've heard, right? Known as the Paladin."

"...Yes?"

The Alchemist's eyes wavered behind her glasses.

"Vice Guild Leader of the Vigilante Corps!?"

"Yep."

"That's a high-ranking person!"

As expected, a normal hunter would react like this.

"Into this humble shop... Eek! Drugs!? Are you here for drug inspection!? I, I haven't manufactured drugs! Even though I operate in this alley, I never, no, not just drugs, I never produced even 1 gram of harmful medicine!"

"....."

"I've lived conscientiously! I will continue to do so! Please, spare me from the investigation!"

The Alchemist fell flat on the floor.

This wasn't a normal reaction.

"Hmm..."

The Paladin looked troubled. According to [Lie Detection], her words were true, so she seemed to be pondering whether to consider her a quirky lunatic or an honest merchant.

"Alright, alright. Let's not worry."

Thump thump.

I tapped the Alchemist's shoulder.

"I didn't come here to report you to the Vigilante Corps. You have such good skills and a pure heart."

"Is that so...?"

"I feel sorry that your shop isn't doing well despite your skills. I came here to introduce you to the Vice-Captain."

The Alchemist lifted his head, his mouth agape.

"Introduction?"

"Literally. Give the Vice-Captain some potions to try. Who knows? If she likes them, she might make an exclusive contract with you."

"....."

"Wouldn't it be easier for you if you supplied potions to the Vigilante Corps?"

The Alchemist blinked.

It took her a moment to grasp what I said.

Soon after, she grabbed my hand tightly.

"An angel...!"

I'm Gong-Ja, not an angel.

"When the shop was almost closed, you helped, you even placed a huge order, and now... you're even providing me with connections... Are you an angel...? How can I repay this kindness...?"

At that moment, when the Alchemist who would later be known as the Master Alchemist shone brightly...

Thud.

Someone stepped into the quiet alley. The footsteps were unusually heavy, making me, the Paladin, and the Alchemist all turn our heads.

“Stop there.”

The footsteps' owner was dressed in a black suit.

"Leave the man there and clear the area."

He coldly glared at me.

The Sword Saint.

The old man of this round who still didn't trust me.

The low voice of the seasoned Swordsman echoed quietly in the alley.

"This old man would like to have a quiet word alone with that man."

Fine.

Time to clear the second condition.

Chapter 35: My Death (2)

"Sir Sword Saint...?"

The Paladin narrowed her eyes.

"What business do you have here?"

She probably never expected to meet the Sword Saint in such an alley. It was an unexpected location and an unexpected person. The Sword Saint's demeanor was too serious to simply dismiss as coincidence.

"Young lady, your ears seem to be failing you."

The old man was radiating hostility towards me.

"I said to clear the path. I have business with that man

there."

"Such harsh words. Do you have something to discuss privately with Hunter Kim Gong-Ja?"

"Ha! I have no interest in what that guy's name is."

"....."

The atmosphere in the alley changed dramatically.

The Paladin no longer narrowed her eyes but just stared coldly at the Sword Saint. Clear wariness. As the number two of a major guild, she must have concluded that the aged swordsman didn't approach with friendly intentions.

"Make way."

The Sword Saint spoke again.

"I have already asked you to move three times."

"A matter that cannot be resolved by saying once won't be resolved by saying thrice or even thirty times. Have you forgotten such a simple truth of life in your old age, Sword Saint?"

The Paladin slowly reached for her sword hilt.

"Hunter Kim Gong-Ja has formally joined the Five Great Guilds. Attacking him is tantamount to declaring war on the Five Great Guilds. I don't know what you're thinking, but don't expect the Vigilante Corps to stand idly by."

"Ha!"

The Sword Saint let out a scoff.

"As expected. All the guilds are in this together, eh? I knew it."

" 'In this together'? I'm increasingly unable to follow your train of thought."

As time passed, the air in the alley grew tenser.

"Sword Saint. I'm aware that you sometimes go on [human hunts], having received several reports. Of course, the Vigilante Corps is not idle enough to interfere with your personal beliefs. But if you try to hunt in front of me, that's a different story."

"Is it different?"

"If it happens, I will fight you with my life on the line."

"Do you believe you can stop me?"

"No."

The Paladin stared unemotionally at the old man.

"I will fight you with all my might and die. And the moment I die, you will become a lowlife murderer who killed an innocent person. Sword Saint, if you wish to spend the rest of your life as a murderer, feel free to attack."

"....."

"If there's not much left of your life anyway, I'll be the one to throw you into the gutter."

The old face of the Sword Saint twisted in anger.

It was already evening. The sun was setting quickly in the alley. The sounds of people walking in the distant alley reached us, but no one else was here besides us. The Sword Saint and the Paladin faced each other in a standoff, with silence enveloping the scene.

This silence...

'Yes.'

This was why I brought the Paladin here.

'The Sword Saint has a weakness for innocent people.'

And the Paladin is probably the only high-ranking official in a major guild who is truly innocent.

Last round, on the 12th floor stage, when the Sword Saint tried to kill me, it was the Paladin who stepped forward and mediated between us. The Sword Saint cryptically agreed to let her mediate.

-...Paladin girl. You are the only one here who hasn't harmed a single person. Very well. I will trust you too.

An ordinary-sounding statement.

But I didn't miss it.

Meaning...

'The Paladin's kill count is [0].'

No matter how ruthless the Sword Saint's ethical views were... or rather, precisely because of his extreme views, he couldn't help but see the Paladin as a good person in his eyes.

'The Sword Saint can never harm the Paladin.'

A sort of compatibility.

To the wicked, the Sword Saint is a fearsome killer.

But to the righteous, the Sword Saint is just a harmless old man.

And moreover...

'It's not just the Paladin.'

Thud.

Someone stepped forward. It was the Alchemist. Startled by the successive appearances of the Paladin and the Sword Saint, the Alchemist had been frozen but finally stepped forward, arms spread wide.

"Excuse me!"

The Alchemist spoke, his jaw trembling. Despite the risk of being beheaded by the Sword Saint in less than a second, he protested.

"Whatever the matter, this customer here is my benefactor!"

The future Guild Master of the Alchemy Guild.

Master Alchemist.

A hunter destined for success shouted with all his might.

"Though Babylon doesn't have laws like the outside world... protecting a customer is a natural duty for a shop owner... Even if it's the Sword Saint! You cannot mess with my shop's customer!"

"....."

"I'm sorry, but please leave the front of my shop! This is a formal request to leave!"

The Alchemist yelled. The Sword Saint, for the same reason, became less intimidating.

'Saintess. Paladin. Master Alchemist.'

These three were known to be kind-hearted hunters in the future.

'Even when the Flame Emperor set fire to the slum, the Paladin and the Master Alchemist were among the first to arrive at the scene.'

Good people.

People who live a bit more at a loss, suffer a bit more stress, and thus are often treated as fools by others.

But the only people who can stop the Sword Saint, the number one hunter in the ranking, were these good people.

No one else could.

"What will you do?"

The Paladin asked.

"If you want to plunge into the gutter, I'm more than willing to accompany you."

"....."

The Sword Saint hesitated for a while. If I was right, the outcome was already determined.

And I was right.

It didn't take long for the aged swordsman to retract his hand from the sword hilt.

"...It just wasn't my day today."

The Sword Saint withdrew his hostility.

Even as he turned away, the old man glared at me until the end.

"Pray that you don't cross paths with me. If it weren't for the Paladin and the shop owner here, your head would already be rolling on the ground."

Good.

Condition for stage two cleared.

This meant the Sword Saint wouldn't immediately start swinging his sword upon seeing me. Even if he decided to kill me, at least we could exchange a few words first.

What I needed was just that brief moment.

"Sword Saint!"

Before the old man completely turned away, I called out.

"I will be waiting for you tomorrow at noon in the northern plaza of the city!"

"....."

"If you wish to know what kind of person I am, please come tomorrow at noon!"

The old man briefly turned his head to glare at me. His blue eyes scrutinized my face. But that was it. Without any further response, the Sword Saint quietly left the alley.

Thud. Thud.

Only after his footsteps had completely faded did the Paladin finally breathe a sigh of relief.

"Phew! I aged ten years in a night, meeting a murderer like that."

Murderer.

"...Is the Sword Saint famous for being a murderer?"

"Not famous. But at least the heads of the Five Great Guilds know about it."

The Paladin shook her head.

"I don't know the details, but he lost his daughter and son-in-law to a serial killer in the outside world. Since then, he has been merciless to murderers. His hands are lethal. Well, but there's no evidence, so we just watch... Um, of course, this story is a secret."

The Sword Emperor chimed in.

-Right. Marcus told me about it. His daughter and son-in-law were killed by a serial killer. Only his granddaughter and grandson barely survived.

'Why are you telling me this now?'

-Huh? What do you mean? You didn't ask.

The Sword Emperor shamelessly replied.

Of course, that's what he was like.

"I can understand the Sword Saint's feelings to some extent."

The Paladin muttered, looking around.

The shabby alley.

The Harlem-like area of the city spread out like a shadow behind the sunset.

"Working with the Vigilante Corps, you encounter various criminals. Talking to them, you often wonder if such people deserve to live. Killing those who deserve death in advance... Even I am sometimes tempted by that thought."

The Paladin mumbled.

"All the heads of the major guilds have their own deep stories. Hunter Kim Gong-Ja, now that you've joined us, you'll gradually come to understand... Really, there are many places so rotten they stink. I wonder how you'll react... Hmm."

The Paladin shook her head, perhaps thinking she had shared too much with an outsider.

"I've strayed off topic."

She deliberately brightened her voice.

"So, how much for the potions? The Vigilante Corps is always tight on budget, so it's a problem if it's too expensive..."

The next day.

I stood alone in the desolate field, looking at my smartphone.

Unsurprisingly, not a single person was in the usually quiet plain. Of course, the hunters of Babylon were gathered in the square, celebrating a festival.

It was similar to the last round.

'But there are differences.'

I glanced at the news headlines on my phone screen.

-[Breaking] 11th Floor a Mass Battle? Black Dragon Executives Gather.

-As the festival approaches, major guilds hastily organize teams for the raid...

-Inquisitor's exclusive interview! "To conquer the 11th floor, you must form a team."

-Another secret pact among major guilds?

-The source of information remains a mystery...

Indeed.

The world had changed a bit.

Precisely because of me.

"....."

And it will change a bit more.

"Hmm."

From the other side of the field, the Sword Saint slowly walked towards me. Perhaps it was because of his black suit, but the sky behind the old man seemed unusually blue. Faint cheers from the city in the distance could be heard.

[00:01:31]

Above us, a clock of light floated gently in the sky.

The blue sky, the voices of the people, the clock of light.

With everything behind him, the Sword Saint approached me.

"You're really alone."

The Sword Saint stopped.

"Do you have confidence that you can face me alone? Well, for an assassin who has committed such slaughter, you must be confident in your abilities."

His gaze.

The way the old man looked at me felt quite unfamiliar. It was completely different from the last cycle. Last time, our eyes conveyed mutual trust and recognition.

But now, there was neither trust nor recognition.

Distrust. Hostility.

Just the look of someone seeing a murderer.

-Zombie?

'.....'

-Are you okay?

I nodded inwardly.

'Yes. I'm fine.'

It just hurt my heart a little.

"Sword Saint."

I gathered my thoughts.

"There's something important I want to tell you."

"Speak. If it's your last words, I'll listen."

"I know why you want to kill me."

The Sword Saint's lips curled.

"Indeed. It's like a thief feeling their own foot. You know your own sins."

"It's because of a skill called [Eyes of a Detective]."

"....."

The Sword Saint's expression hardened for a moment.

"How did you...?"

"Please believe what I'm about to say."

I began to speak, thinking.

How difficult it is to gain someone's trust.

Everyone has their own stubbornness. For the Sword Saint, [Eyes of a Detective] was his stubbornness. A skill that shows the kill count of others. The fact that this skill could be wrong, that it could make errors, the Sword Saint just ignored it.

That's why it's stubbornness.

The man before me had lived his life according to this stubbornness.

People who have lived with stubbornness can't separate it from their lives. It's intertwined. Giving up their stubbornness is like giving up their life.

'I have to convince such a person.'

Even more, I have to gain his trust.

To persuade the man before me to deny his own life.

Thinking about it again, how difficult is this task?

'But... I can do it.'

I clenched my fist.

'If it's about putting my life on the line, that's all.'

I began to speak.

"Sword Saint. I'm a prophet."

"What?"

"To be exact, I have a skill like prophecy. Thanks to this skill, I know that you have [Eyes of a Detective]. If things continue as they are, you'll kill me, and I'll ask why I must die."

"....."

"When that time comes, you'll say you have [Eyes of a Detective] and this skill shows the number [4093] above my head."

A little lie.

But right now, I had to use a lie to convince the old man.

That I know the future.

Only if the Sword Saint trusts this fact can we safely clear the 12th floor.

[00:00:00]

The clock in the sky pointed to zero. Fireworks burst in the distant city. Cheers celebrating the opening of a new era echoed faintly.

The old man and I.

The only two people away from the celebration, looking at each other.

After a long silence, the Sword Saint spoke.

"Guess."

"Excuse me?"

"I'm hiding my left hand behind my back and holding up some fingers. Guess how many fingers I'm holding. If you're truly a prophet, it should be easy to figure out."

Okay.

As expected, he went this way.

As I predicted.

"If you fail to guess, I'll consider it as you daring to lie..."

Probably, the Sword Saint was fully prepared for any attack from me. Whether it was a surprise attack, using an item, or employing a skill, the Sword Saint would easily block it.

But 'this' he wouldn't have expected.

Before the Sword Saint could finish speaking, I drew a dagger. The Sword Saint flinched. And when he prepared to defend against an attack, I didn't hesitate to stab myself in the neck.

"What!?"

The Sword Saint's eyes widened.

The aged swordsman had only prepared for an attack from me. He never expected I would stab myself. A moment of carelessness. A second of time. Thanks to that, I was able to end my life.

And then.

[You have died.]

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

I only needed a second.

And so, I started the day again.

I descended from the 10th floor stage, met with the heads of the major guilds, played poker, won, asked the Paladin to join me in the alley, encountered the Sword Saint, and was defended by the Paladin and the Apothecary. The Sword Saint backed off, and I shouted to meet him tomorrow at noon.

[00:00:00]

And once again, I stood in this moment.

Chapter 35 Part 3:

The Sword Saint spoke the same as yesterday.

"Guess."

The same test as the last cycle.

However, my reaction was not the same as last time. When the Sword Saint said to guess, I didn't respond dumbfoundedly with 'Yes?'. Instead, as if I had anticipated it, I answered promptly.

"Right now, you're hiding your left hand behind your back."

"....."

"You're going to lift some fingers and then challenge me to guess how many. You're thinking that if I'm truly a prophet, it wouldn't be difficult to figure out."

The Sword Saint's face became even more rigid.

"Sword Saint. Please believe me. I have attained a skill similar to prophecy. It's simple for you to kill me here, but if you do, safely clearing the 12th floor stage will become impossible. Many people will lose their lives."

"...Wait. Hold on."

The Sword Saint spoke.

"This alone is insufficient proof. It might not be prophecy, but [Clairvoyance] or [Mind Reading]. Where's the guarantee that you're really a prophet...?"

Right.

Once isn't enough.

I was prepared for this.

[You have died.]

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

Convincing one person isn't easy, especially if that person has reached the pinnacle in their field.

"This alone is insufficient proof. It might not be prophecy..."

"You suspect that instead of prophecy, it could be [Clairvoyance] or [Mind Reading]. You're wondering where's the guarantee that I'm truly a prophet."

But that's okay.

Test me as much as you want.

[You have died.]

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

Doubt all you want.

[You have died.]

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

Whether it takes a week or a fortnight, it doesn't matter.

[You have died.]

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

I am confident I can convince you.

My death is longer than your life.

"....."

Finally, the Sword Saint closed his lips.

All his suspicions and doubts were pre-empted and overturned by me.

I spoke calmly.

"Sword Saint. Please believe me."

"....."

"If you kill me here, it will be disastrous. Numerous casualties will occur on the 12th floor stage. I'm not trying to say I'm innocent, nor am I begging to be spared forever."

"...Then what?"

"Five days."

I held up five fingers.

"Just don't kill me for the next five days. Follow me around, and decide for yourself whether I truly deserve to die or if I'm actually a prophet who approached you."

The Sword Saint was silent.

I didn't need to stab myself with the dagger again; I knew the old man was conflicted internally. It was the moment for the final blow.

And I knew what would serve as the 'final blow.'

"You still don't believe my words."

"....."

"Sword Saint. Later, much later, you'll tell me a phrase. You said if I say this one phrase, you'll believe I'm truly a prophet."

"...What is it?"

I answered.

"Sword Emperor."

The old man's eyes widened.

Regardless, I continued.

"I don't know whose alias it is, but you said you'd believe me if I said this."

"....."

Silence settled.

Far in the city, cheers still resounded. The figure of the Goddess giving a long speech during her descent was faintly visible.

As the Goddess disappeared, the aged swordsman finally spoke.

"Five days, you say. Young man."

"Yes."

"Fine."

The Sword Saint looked into my eyes and said.

"For the next five days, I'll follow you. I'll watch every word, action, attitude, and posture you have. Then I'll judge whether you deserve to die or if you really are a prophet who approached me."

"....."

"Is that all?"

Good.

"...Yes. That's enough."

I bowed deeply.

"Sincerely, thank you."

I had cleared all the conditions.

First, to get a promise from the guild leaders.

Second, to ensure the Sword Saint wouldn't kill me on sight.

Third, to gain the Sword Saint's trust, at least for now.

'Finally.'

Finally, I can ascend to the 12th floor without the guild leaders and the Sword Saint being at odds.

The needless suspicion and fighting between them will be gone.

The needless deaths of innocent hunters too.

"Then, Sword Saint. I'll see you at the next stage."

I spoke, holding back the lump in my throat.

The Sword Saint looked at me with a strange gaze, but I had no time to care about that. I had to do what was necessary.

"Transfer."

Whoosh!

White light enveloped me.

Feeling my heart pounding, I thought.

'Now, only the hunt for the Demon King remains.'

The world has changed.

'Wait for me, Demon King.'

And it will change a bit more.

Chapter 36: My Death (3)

As the white light faded, I found myself back in the midst of a battlefield.

A familiar scene unfolded before my eyes.

-Kirrr, Kieeek!

Strange monsters howling.

Soldiers fighting and bleeding against them.

Thousands of monsters from the monster legion were rushing to take over the harbor.

11th floor stage. The Supply Route Defense Battle.

The first battle to protect the Aegim Empire was unfolding.

"Thank you! You've come to help our empire, brave warriors!"

The welcoming figure of the general NPC was no different from the last cycle. Wearing the same armor, with the same expression, he recited the same lines.

"Brave warriors! Please help us save the empire..."

But that was it.

Everything changed from that point on, compared to the last cycle.

"Black Dragon, assemble!"

A harsh voice cut through the battlefield. The Black Dragon's master, the Witch. As she had done in the battle at a certain city gate, which only I remembered, the Witch shouted with aura-filled voice. Something about her voice instinctively captured people's attention.

"From now on, Black Dragon takes command of this battle!"

The Witch commanded the battlefield.

"Celestial Martial Guild! Vigilante Corps! Take the left wing and break through! Temple of the Omnipotent God and Sang-Ryun, take the right wing! We, the Black Dragon, will break through the center. If anyone has a problem with my command, speak up after the battle! If you have the luxury to chatter now, catch one more orc!"

The world had changed.

"Uoooh!"

The shouts of the hunters were evidence of change.

The giant guilds moved in unison. Was it because they shared information about the 11th floor stage being a mass battle from me? Unlike the last cycle, where hunters were dumbfounded, there were no such hunters this time.

"Follow me, lads! If any of you die before me, you're dead meat!"

The Celestial Martial Guild, led by Viper.

"What the heck... No, never mind. Everyone, back up Celestial Martial! Make sure those boars don't get isolated!"

The Vigilante Corps, led by the Paladin.

"Ahaha! Independent actions are punishable by death, everyone! Strictly move in teams!"

The Temple of the Omnipotent God, led by the Heretic Inquisitor.

"Everyone's so full of energy. Let's move slowly, don't rush."

Sang-Ryun, led by the Countess.

There was no weakness in any guild. Everyone played their part efficiently in the battlefield. Hunters specialized in combat led the charge with their swords, while those specialized in support chanted magic skills from behind. Like a mighty river, the hunters pushed and pushed against the monster legion.

"Ooh...!"

The general NPC exclaimed in admiration. Perhaps moved by the sight before him.

"Indeed, the gods have not abandoned our empire yet! Look! The heroes from another world are pushing the monsters back relentlessly! Soldiers of the empire! Can we just stand by and watch? All troops, follow me!"

The soldiers roared and charged together.

I stepped back and observed the scene.

"....."

Right.

People only need a small hint.

With just a little change from me, with a bit more covert action, the landscape unfolding on the stage changes so drastically.

At that moment, Bae Hu-Reong, the Sword Emperor, whispered softly.

-Zombie, are you okay?

'Yes? What do you mean?'

-Aren't you the type who likes to stand out in front of others? You're crazy for people's attention. Doesn't this decrease the attention you get compared to the last round?

'Well, I suppose so.'

I shrugged.

'But this doesn't feel bad either.'

-Ho? Look at you. Have you grown a bit?

'Grown? I still plan to grab what I can take care of.'

Suddenly, I felt a gaze on the back of my neck.

Turning around, I saw the aged swordsman silently staring at me.

The Sword Saint.

"Oh."

I asked, a bit startled.

"What are you doing there... sir?"

"I'm watching you."

The Sword Saint replied matter-of-factly.

"Didn't I say that earlier? I'll decide whether to kill you or not after following you for 5 days. So, I'm observing."

"...Eh. Um. You're not seriously planning to follow me around 24/7 for 5 days, are you?"

"Strange question. Of course, that's my intention."

Oh my.

What's this? A stalker?

"No, sir, you should fight monsters too! The quest rewards are given based on contributions to the battle!"

"Hmm."

The Sword Saint glanced away and casually swung his sword.

Swoosh!

A blue aura swiftly swept forward. About twenty goblins, unable to even scream properly, had their heads flown off. A fountain of blood bloomed in the middle of the battlefield.

The Sword Saint turned back to me leisurely.

"I'll take care of the swordplay intermittently, so don't worry."

"....."

"Focus on your own tasks without concern for me."

Indeed, a true old-timer.

The senior was on a different level.

"Phew, this is something."

Shaking my head, I approached the Witch of Black Dragon. The Black Dragon guild members tried to block me, but upon seeing the Sword Saint following me, they hesitated.

Eventually, the Witch noticed our approach and gestured to allow us through.

"What's up? Hunter Kim Gong-Ja. And the old man too."

The Witch frowned and got irritated.

"I'm busy commanding the guilds right now. I'm not in the right mind to talk. If it's not something important, please leave soon. Ah, there! Team 4!"

While rebuking the Sword Saint, she hurriedly issued orders to her guild members.

"Don't foolishly charge forward, stay in your positions! If you don't want a spear in your butt, stay put and don't move! What are you doing, Team 12! Are we here for a stroll!? Hunt properly!"

"Sorry, Black Dragon Witch!"

"Sorry my foot! If you have time to apologize, swing your sword once more!"

She seemed really busy.

I quickly stated my business.

"Black Dragon Witch. I have a reward from clearing the 10th floor."

"So what about it? What's the reward?"

"It's a mini-map reward. I can see the entire battlefield as if it's a mini-map. Enemies and allies are marked as dots. Naturally, I can also see where the enemy commanders are."

"....."

Finally, the Witch turned to look me in the eye.

"Really?"

"Why would I lie? It's true."

"Then why didn't you come to me sooner instead of now!"

Abruptly, the Witch grabbed my right hand.

"Speak! Where is the boss monster!?"

Her true nature seemed to emerge when she was out of her mind.

"Um, right over there."

I pointed in the direction indicated on the mini-map.

"Surrounded by monsters, it's not clearly visible, but over there-"

"Consent to use my skill! Hurry!"

"Ah, I consent to the use of Black Dragon Witch's skill."

"Teleport!"

Whoosh!

The next moment, the Witch and I were floating in mid-air, plummeting towards the ground. In the midst of the battlefield's sky. Far below, a swarm of monsters and human armies were clashing fiercely.

The Witch, with her black hair fluttering in the wind, shouted.

"Where!?"

"There!"

I had to shout loudly to be heard over the roaring wind.

"I'm pointing in the direction of-"

"Teleport!"

With each call of the Witch's Teleport skill, we rapidly approached the location of the boss monster.

I held the Witch a bit tighter. There was no particular intention, just a thought that I might fall from the sky if I only held her hand.

She seemed to understand my intention and cooperatively stayed still, continuing to shout with a frown.

"Do you have some confidence in using your sword!?"

"I can handle the boss here!"

"Then I'll Teleport you above the monster! Finish it in one blow! Got it!?"

"Yess!"

I understood very well what she meant.

"Teleport!"

As the last Teleport concluded, we flew right above the boss monster.

Just ten meters below.

A great goblin wielding a luxurious golden staff was squawking orders at surrounding monsters, seemingly commanding the legion.

"Kim Gong-Ja!"

"Iyaaaaaa!"

I wrapped my body in aura and yelled. Hearing our voices, the great goblin commanding the monsters looked up, puzzled.

-Gurk?

The great goblin's gaze met mine.

But it was already too late.

Swoosh!

My blade precisely penetrated the great goblin's skull. The body split in half.

Despite being a boss monster, the great goblin couldn't even resist. It just looked at me pitifully till the end. Well, considering it's the second time I've killed it, its frustration was understandable.

-Gurk...

-Kurrk...?

The monsters, having suddenly lost their leader, stared at me in confusion. The swift turn of events seemed too much for them to comprehend.

I smirked at them.

"Why?"

Trampling over the great goblin's corpse.

"Do you all want to be sliced in half too?"

Only then did the monsters belatedly scream in terror.

-Kieeeee!

-Kurk! Kur?

Goblins and orcs, mere pawns, scattered in utter panic. One fleeing led to six, and six led to thirty. Like dominoes falling, monsters started fleeing in all directions.

"Ajaa!"

The Witch clenched her little fist beside me.

"Well done, Kim Gong-Ja! Amazing! We might even clear the 20th floor soon at this rate! I thought at least five thousand would be sacrificed... A great start, indeed."

This excited demeanor of the Witch was new to me.

Was she emotionless in the last cycle because too many hunters died early on? Now, with fewer casualties, she's happier?

'She's simpler than I thought.'

Someone who's sad or happy depending on the number of casualties.

I smiled.

"Easy there, let's calm down a bit."

"People should get excited when they're excited! I'll praise you again. Really well done, Kim Gong-Ja! It's unprecedented to clear a stage with so few sacrifices since the tower's beginning. You should be proud!"

The Witch smiled brightly.

Not just the slight curl of her lips as when she spoke from the ramparts, but a genuinely broad smile.

"Even though you could have hoarded the clear reward for yourself... really... I'm glad to have a new hero like you. What a relief."

"....."

"From today, all the media and reporters in the tower will rush to you, so be prepared!"

Pure goodwill.

'Right.'

The Witch extended her hand for a handshake.

'That's it.'

Grasping her hand firmly, I thought.

'To receive recognition from ordinary people... to be adored, envied, antagonized, and treated as a hero by them. It all feels incredibly good.'

But...

'It's not the same as being acknowledged by these people.'

People who have lived diligently.

Even if they can't say they've achieved the best in life, they can definitely say they lived their best.

The Sword Saint, who reached the pinnacle with a single sword.

The Witch, who built the largest force in the world of the tower.

And many others living their lives earnestly.

'I...'

Holding the Witch's hand tightly.

'I want to live a life recognized by these people.'

Not just that.

'I want to protect them.'

So they won't be manipulated by the Demon King.

So they won't be insulted or denigrated like the Flame Emperor, not ridiculed or met with cruel laughter, nor involved in petty schemes, but purely recognized... and to be recognized by them.

No.

To be admired by them.

Even if it seems an impossible dream.

'I want to live that way.'

In a slightly changed world.

I, too, wanted to change a bit more.

That was my deepest desire.

-Darn kid.

The Guardian Spirit muttered.

-Watching you is actually worthwhile.

Soon after, the announcement for clearing the 11th floor echoed.

Huge letters floated in the sky.

[Contribution Ranking]

1st. Kim Gong-Ja

2nd. Black Witch

3rd. Heretic Inquisitor

4th. Viper

5th. Paladin

6th. Countess

7th. Sword Saint

...

...

...

+

As the world changed, the clear rankings subtly shifted.

The Sword Saint, who was 2nd last cycle, slid down to 7th.

Meanwhile, the Witch, previously at 6th, jumped to 2nd.

[The top contributors will be given early entry into floor 12.]

[Until the top contributors receive their rewards, the remaining participants cannot enter floor 12.]

[Once again announcing to everyone. The top contributors...]

Finally, the voice opening the 12th floor, the floor of the Demon, echoed.

"With this momentum, we might even clear the 20th floor soon."

The Witch spoke with a slightly flushed face.

"I expected at least five thousand sacrifices... A great start."

No.

If left alone, the 12th floor will result in horrific sacrifices.

Notably, the loss of the Countess, crucial for external trade, will collapse the tower's economy. Chaos will ensue. Not just five thousand, but fifty thousand, or even five hundred thousand could perish.

'That's why...'

Therefore,

'I'll carry.'

Blinding light enveloped us.

When I opened my eyes again, I was there.

The imperial audience hall.

The marble floor, not yet stained with blood like last cycle, was still white.

"Oh?"

"Hmm."

Hunters were summoned one after another. Their expressions upon seeing me varied. Some smiled, 'I knew you'd be here first,' and others resented, 'Even this time, you're first.'

Just like last round.

"Hunter Kim Gong-Ja! You were amazing!"

The Heretic Inquisitor, rushing to praise me, was also the same.

"Cooperating with the Black Dragon Witch like that! Is pinpointing the boss monster your reward from the last stage? Probably..."

"Wait a moment."

But unlike last round, the Heretic Inquisitor couldn't continue praising me. I raised my hand to stop his words. He looked puzzled.

"Yes?"

"I have something to say to everyone first."

The hunters looked at me.

The Witch still slightly excited, the Viper with a stern face, the Paladin indifferent, and the Countess fanning herself.

As everyone watched with various expressions-.

'Where's the Sword Saint?'

I first checked the old man's whereabouts.

"....."

The Sword Saint stood alone in a corner of the audience hall. Quiet. Despite our eyes meeting, he showed no particular reaction, just silently observing me with crossed arms.

'Good enough!'

Far different from the last round when he immediately attacked with his sword.

'It's done now!'

The frustrating conflicts that erupted at the beginning of the 12th floor are now gone.

I made them disappear.

Feeling my heart pounding, I spoke.

"Yesterday. I told you something."

"Yesterday? What was it?"

"My favor."

The Heretic Inquisitor's question was met with my response.

"I asked if I ever asked for a favor, to please listen just once. I said that."

"Ah, yes! Of course, I remember!"

"Now, I want you to fulfill that promise."

I looked at the hunters slowly.

The guild leaders perked up their ears at the mention of a favor.

"For the next five days. Just stay here without doing anything."

"....."

"And then..."

I took a deep breath.

And began to speak.

"I will clear up to the 20th floor within these five days."

Chapter 37: The Alias of the Hero (1)

In the last round.

It was when the tutorial of the tower had ended.

-Warriors.

-The ones who chose to climb the tower.

The hunters shouted the countdown energetically in the square. The Goddess descended above the square. She recited solemnly, like a priest offering a prayer.

-From the eleventh to the twentieth floor.

-You will face a trial.

-A trial of faith.

The hunters didn't pay attention to the Goddess's words.

A new era. A new floor.

Excited about the long-awaited floor finally opening, everyone rushed to the 11th floor. Some hunters even tested whether they would be cut by a sword.

-You will find the answer.

But...

-The answer you find will reveal who you truly are.

I didn't do that.

I stayed till the end, listening.

-Thus, you will come to know yourselves.

Looking back now.

We had already received a revelation.

About what would happen from the 12th floor.

-The ones who chose to climb the tower.

It wasn't about what rewards we would receive. It wasn't about who to suspect. The tower hinted that only the answer we found mattered.

-May fortune be with you.

The Goddess was just quietly offering her prayers.

Now, once again arriving at the 12th floor.

I nodded, my mind colored by that scene.

And I declared.

"I will clear up to the 20th floor within five days."

The answer I had decided on.

The atmosphere was silent.

The first to break the silence was the master of the Black Dragon.

"Wait a moment. 5 days...?"

The Witch looked bewildered.

"Did I hear that wrong? It sounded like you said you'd conquer up to the 20th floor in 5 days. If it's a joke, it's not funny. Drop it."

"No, you heard right. It's not a joke."

"....."

The Witch closed her lips.

The hush that settled in the audience hall gradually turned into a murmur. The expressions of the hunters changed. Some looked incredulous, others disbelieving, and some didn't know how to react...

'Such a reaction is natural.'

I calmly faced the gaze of all the hunters.

It was a declaration that made no sense by any conventional logic.

"...It's impossible, Kim Gong-Ja."

After a while, the Witch spoke.

"You know it. It took us years just to clear up to the 10th floor. Sure, you might be confident after clearing the 11th floor in less than an hour, but... it's too much. Isn't that overconfidence? Aren't you a bit too excited?"

"Black Dragon Witch."

I bowed my head.

"Please."

"....."

"Remember, I cleared the 10th floor. Not for you, but for myself. I wanted to succeed. But the rewards and achievements I gained from clearing the 10th floor, I shared with you all."

Including the information that wide-scale battles would occur from now on.

And the mini-map showing the boss monster's location.

I shared the information, and the guilds minimized their losses.

"It wasn't just me but all of us who benefited from it."

Therefore, I could say with confidence.

"I have the right to ask you for a favor."

"....."

"Please just wait for 5 days. Not until I clear the 20th floor, but just wait for 5 days, regardless of success or failure. That's my request."

Silence swirled in the audience hall.

It didn't feel disadvantageous to me.

Maybe that's why.

[Welcome, Hunter Kim Gong-Ja.]

[You have conquered the 11th floor in 1st place.]

[You will receive the 11th floor's clear reward.]

The reason why the notification came much earlier than the last round.

In the previous round, rewards were only given after the Sword Saint's swordplay was over. It took a considerable amount of time. But this time, it was different. As soon as I started speaking, the topic of rewards surged to the surface.

'Alright.'

As if desperately trying to catch my attention and interest.

[The Goddess of Protection offers you a reward.]

[The Demon King of the Autumn Rain proposes a reward for you.]

The notifications sounded one after another.

I didn't choose any reward.

Just smiling inwardly.

'Getting impatient, Demon King?'

Soon the Goddess's and the Demon King's rewards appeared. I briefly glanced at them. Beyond that, I showed no further interest or curiosity.

[The Demon King of the Autumn Rain suggests you choose a reward.]

A voice echoed in my head.

[The Demon King of the Autumn Rain hints that you could even refuse the reward.]

Several times. Continuously.

My attitude didn't change.

'Whether you rush or not.'

Firm as a rock, I ignored the rewards proposed by both the Goddess and the Demon King.

[The Demon King of the Autumn Rain is puzzled.]

[The Demon King of the Autumn Rain fails to understand your intentions.]

Fine. Don't be hasty.

Keep burning up, and I'll come to you directly.

"Hmm..."

The silence continued in the audience hall. The Heretic Inquisitor looked around and burst into laughter. He seemed to have decided to be the first to speak.

"The issue is simple! Hunter Kim Gong-Ja shared the strategy for the 11th floor with us. In return, he asked us to fulfill one request, and we promised to do so as long as it wasn't impossible!"

The Heretic Inquisitor grinned broadly.

"Do nothing and wait here for 5 days. It's not exactly a simple request considering the media frenzy for these 5 days... but it's certainly not impossible! Therefore, I agree!"

"It's certainly not an impossible request, but..."

"A promise is a promise! Black Dragon Witch!"

The Witch's complexion darkened.

She hesitated, her lips quivering several times before finally sighing.

"Alright. A promise is a promise."

Essentially agreeing to my request.

The other hunters, one by one, also agreed to my request. The Black Dragon Witch and the Heretic Inquisitor, the most cultured and the most cunning hunters here, supported me side by side. Hunters who were not guild leaders were swayed by the atmosphere and promised silence for 5 days.

"I never agreed to such a promise."

Except for the hunter with the highest level of stubbornness here.

"The only promise I've made is to watch over the young man for the next five days. There's no reason for me to entertain any other requests."

"....."

"If you plan to leave for the 20th floor, I will simply follow you, as I promised."

"Hm."

I nodded in agreement.

"Yes, that's fine."

From now on, I will be confronting the Demon King alone.

Although I'm confident in winning alone... having the Sword Saint behind me is like gaining a thousand allies. There's no need to refuse his offer to follow.

I looked around the audience hall.

"Thank you for listening to my favor, everyone."

Then, I slowly turned to leave.

"See you in five days."

Creaking, I opened the grand doors of the audience hall and stepped out.

Beyond the doors lay the vast palace. Exiting the palace, a high wall stretched out, and beyond that, the capital of the Aegim Empire spread out.

A scene I had already passed in the last cycle.

-What?

But it was different.

-Why are the NPCs all frozen?

Guardian Spirit commented while strolling with me, looking around.

He was right.

The knight NPC guarding the palace, the street vendor NPC selling fruits, the patrol guard NPC with a bored expression – all NPCs from the palace to the city were motionlessly frozen.

'It's because the quest hasn't started yet.'

It was like time had been paused.

I trudged through the still streets.

Far behind me, the Sword Saint followed.

-Quest?

"Yes. No one has chosen a [Role] yet."

Currently, there's no prime minister or knight commander in the empire.

Important figures that should exist in a nation.

This is what the quests from the 12th to 20th floors were about.

'In the 11th floor stage, we were given a quest as soon as we entered. That's probably the correct order. But we hesitated a lot on the 12th floor, didn't we? It took ages for a quest to be given.'

Only after a role was chosen did the quest start.

Meaning...

'If you don't choose a role, the quest doesn't start. The Demon King's invasion won't happen, and the empire's army won't fight.'

That's why NPCs are frozen.

And will remain so.

'As long as we don't choose a role.'

A kind of trigger.

The choice of a role by the top hunters itself triggers the start of the quest.

'But you know, Sword Emperor.'

I crossed the street. I had to zigzag through the gaps between the motionless people, like walking through a maze made of human bodies.

Even as I navigated this labyrinth, notifications kept ringing in my mind.

[The Demon King of the Autumn Rain advises you to choose a reward.]

I ignored it.

[The Demon King of the Autumn Rain suggests that if you don't choose a reward, you should give up on it entirely. In that case, the right to select a reward will pass to the next hunter.]

I kept walking, ignoring it.

[The Demon King of the Autumn Rain urges you to make a choice!]

Finally, I left the city gate behind.

Crossing the city of the empire, a vast plain unfolded before me.

'What if, hypothetically, the Demon King dies in this state?'

-What?

I saw it.

The mini-map revealed by the Warhorse of the Eternal Plains.

A single red dot was unmistakably twinkling on the translucent map.

At this moment, when no monster has been summoned yet, the red dot meant only one thing.

'What do you think will happen if the boss monster dies before the quest starts?'

The Demon King.

'It's simple. No one can choose the Demon King's reward.'

-.....

'Of course, there won't be any traitors either. It's just an instant out, even before any scheming could begin.'

I walked across the plain, straight towards the red dot. In no time, I reached the exact location of the boss monster.

[The Demon King of the Autumn Rain is furious with you!]

Realizing my intentions at last.

A different voice reached my mind now that I was here.

[The Demon King of the Autumn Rain manifests!]

The sky in front of me undulated darkly. A black hole-like abyss opened, spilling out a murky liquid.

A drop. A stream. A mass.

The liquids joined to form a larger shape, from which a voice leaked.

-How dare you....

The Demon King was enraged.

-Challenge me alone, without the empire's aid, Hero of the Goddess. Only those who inherit the empire's mantle have the right to point their sword at me.

"What nonsense."

I gripped my sword's hilt tightly.

"I've made the proper choice."

-What...?

"See. This is the best choice."

A time not yet started by a quest.

A city of the empire yet to be invaded by the Demon King's army.

A world where not a single human has died.

"Demon King. I will kill you before the quest begins. Then, not a single hunter will die, not a single citizen of the empire. Of course, there won't be any traitors either."

-.....

"This is a happy ending without any sacrifices."

I smiled wryly.

"I've always disliked bad endings. Maybe it's my nature? I prefer happy endings whenever possible. Since you're making it hard to see one, sorry, but you'll have to die."

-How dare...

The Demon King's form writhed.

-You dare to stop me alone! Without the empire's help!

"Yes."

I drew my sword.

Aiming it precisely at the dark figure.

A vast plain.

In the middle of a frozen time and a halted world.

My sword became a minute hand, targeting the enemy.

I spoke out.

"Heroes are supposed to fight alone."

The eternal five days began.

Chapter 38: The Alias of the Hero (2)

On a rainy day, it awoke.

It had no name. No form. It was more like a shadow. On a rainy day, a shadow opened its eyes and immediately saw the first living creature before it.

-Croak.

It didn't know what this creature was. There was much it didn't know. Only the sound... the sound of rain. The croaking from all around was thick in the air.

The rainwater carried a sweet scent.

Like a snake, though it did not yet know what a snake was, it instinctively crawled towards the creature in front of it. Squirring. The creature didn't realize something was approaching. Unaware, it continued to bark up at the rain.

The creature, too, emitted a sweet scent.

It opened its mouth. In an instant, the beautifully chirping creature was swallowed up by its maw. Croak! It had no teeth, so the creature's body was not torn apart. It just dissolved. Falling into its stomach, pooling in its belly, slowly melting away.

The rain fell.

When the creature in its stomach had fully dissolved into a mush, it realized it had grown forelegs. Hindlegs too. What its legs touched was the earth, and what they couldn't touch was the sky. The rain connected the earth and the sky. The world became a little clearer.

Ah.

The feeling of raindrops falling on its green, slippery skin and shattering into pieces. The sensation. The anticipation of life.

-Croak.

It opened its mouth and let out a joyous croak.

-Croak.

The rain continued.

It wanted to live a little longer.

The first was a strike.

Whoosh!

My eyes couldn't even follow the attack properly, despite having consumed a time-stretching elixir. I had stretched one second into an eternity, but the Demon King's strike was faster than my elongated second.

[You have died.]

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

A day.

I marked the number one (—) on my palm with a black marker. To never forget how many days had passed, even far in the future, like a prisoner marking the days of lost freedom.

-Zombie, listen..

Yes.

-Its swordsmanship itself isn't extraordinary.

This was a prison. A prison of time.

-It's more about brutally overpowering with sheer strength. Of course, that's terrifying in its own right. If you're strong enough, you can destroy anything. But...

"If I can tell which direction he's attacking from, I can avoid it."

-Exactly.

What if we normally progressed through the quest?

In the last round, at that fiercely tumultuous battlefield, how many soldiers had died?

For every soldier that died, at least 20 years of life was lost. A human who could have lived 20 more years died in vain.

Ten dead equals 200 years.

A hundred dead equals 2000 years.

I chose not to take any role to save that time.

I just stood in front of the Demon King with a sword in hand.

Then, this body.

[You have died.]

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

Should be prepared to be exiled to eternity.

-But even if you know the direction, can you actually avoid it? You weakling! A corpse of a zombie!

"Ah, shut up. It's noisy."

-Hahaha.

[You have died.]

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

Each day returned to the start, and I repeated that day.

Not just repeating but also reviewing and revising the battles.

-You're still clumsy with handling aura. That's your problem. If you concentrate your aura on your feet to evade, that's all you need.

"If I focus on my feet, my posture collapses."

-That's why you need to flow aura to your thighs, waist, and shoulders too. Balance it out.

"No, easier said than done..."

[You have died.]

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

-If you can't do it, then just die.

"Damn it."

A day passed.

Another day.

-How dare...

I faced the Demon King's enraged voice countless times.

-Follow the proper order, Hero of the Goddess. It's presumptuous to come here without making any choices. Only those who have inherited the empire's mantle...

"Let's go for a one-shot today."

-What?

Tired of the back and forth, I didn't bother to answer and drank the elixir first. In the slowly stretching time, I rushed towards the Demon King and swung my sword. Clang! Alas, my strike was easily blocked by the Demon King's sword.

-You...

"A Hero slays the Demon King."

[You have died.]

"The Demon King slays the hero."

[You have died.]

"What more is there to say?"

-.....

"Come, Demon King."

[You have died.]

"I am the sword of the empire."

-So be it!

[You have died.]

-Prove it before me!

[You have died.]

-Show me your proof!

"Alright."

[You have died.]

"I'll show you."

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

The world stood still.

And in this frozen world, my sword alone proved the passing of time.

My sword, the only minute hand.

For this world to breathe another breath, my sword first needed to continue for one more second.

I was just a sword living for a second.

But the world took another breath on my second.

Like a drop of water needed to start an overflow, even to flood the roots of the sky.

Even if I wanted to live forever, I had to live in seconds.

I kept living my life that way.

"Good job, Kim Gong-Ja!"

One day.

"Unbelievable! We might clear the stage in less than an hour!"

Another day.

"Maybe less than 40 hunters died!"

And then, gradually.

"Maybe even less than 30 died! Oh, this is perfect!"

The face of the Black Dragon Witch began to change.

11th floor stage.

The quest to teleport with the Black Dragon Witch and smash the boss monster. It became like a rite of passage that I had to go through every day to repeat a day. After facing the Demon King day after day, dying and living, the situation on the 11th floor also gradually changed.

Slowly but surely.

"Faster, more efficiently, more lethally."

Each repetition brought a brighter smile and a happier face to the Black Dragon Witch. Her words changed from "maybe 50 didn't die" a year ago to "maybe less than 20 didn't die" yesterday.

"Ah..."

A day died.

"Impossible... Great job, Kim Gong-Ja! Just by healing that knight Jeshua and dealing with the golems as you said... Ah, maybe less than 10 hunters died... It's possible. It was possible. In such a battlefield... Yes, it was possible..."

A day lived.

-You.

One day, the Demon King asked.

-Why?

"What?"

-Why are you smiling?

I smiled.

"Because I'm happy."

My heart pounded.

The Demon King raised his sword.

-Even those about to die can feel happiness?

"You wouldn't understand. No one will."

-Presumptuous, Hero of the Goddess.

"I'm just humble."

I swung my sword.

-Pathetic.

The sword struck me.

[You have died.]

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

But I didn't give up.

There was no reason to.

My sword is faster today than it was yesterday.

And it will be faster tomorrow.

I'm alive.

I'm living.

"..."

That day came silently.

The Black Dragon Witch grasped my hand tightly. She probably didn't realize, but my palm was etched with numerous black 'one hundred' markings. To me, those numbers were like invisible wrinkles, marking the days spent imprisoned in this temporal cell.

"Just now..."

The Black Dragon Witch's voice trembled.

"Just now, I checked. Kim Gong-Ja. Not one person..."

Her hand in mine was shaking too.

"Not a single person died."

Her shaking turned into a sob.

"I checked with the Temple of the Omnipotent God. There were fools who stupidly got shot in the arm with arrows, but... but still. There were no deaths."

The Black Dragon Guild.

A guild that had been at the top since the Tower opened.

The Black Dragon Witch, the second-ranked hunter, had attempted the 10th floor dozens of times. Despite failing each time, she managed to bring all the participating hunters back alive.

That's who she was.

"Thank you..."

She leaned her head against mine.

"Really, thank you..."

The Black Dragon Witch was crying and also smiling.

I wanted to live a little longer.

Yes.

Time flowed.

It flowed in my heart.

-How dare!

As long as my heart beats, I will swing my sword.

-How dare you face me alone! Without the empire's help!

"Sure."

The vast plain.

In the middle of a stopped world, a halted time.

With an unstoppable heart and an unyielding sword, I targeted my enemy.

"Heroes are supposed to fight alone."

-Foolish!

The Demon King roared in fury.

Those who cannot laugh with others become Demon Kings.

"Sorry, pal."

I swung my sword.

"I meant to face you alone, but you know, I think it's tradition for a hero to gang up on the Demon King. It's an accepted practice, right?"

-You dare try to cloud the sky with your petty tricks!

The Demon King's body seethed.

-No more swordplay!

The murky liquid spilled onto the ground.

The endless flow from the Demon King's body turned the plains dark, like a vast shadow cast upon the earth.

-Demons, answer my call.

Bubbles. Bubbling.

The shadow bubbled up and burst.

-Keek!

-Croak!

Each bubble was a monster. The black liquid took form.

Some bubbles became goblins. Others, orcs.

An orc shook off the liquid, and then, the plain was surrounded by thousands of monsters.

-Roar!

The beasts howled savagely.

"This is..."

The Black Dragon Witch surveyed the surroundings, her brows furrowed.

"We can't handle this alone. Sword Saint! What are you doing standing there? Help us, don't just stand there."

"I was watching for a bit. The young lad and the sludge just started fighting not even 30 seconds ago. Who would've guessed the sludge would summon monsters?"

The Sword Saint, who had been watching me for over 30 rounds, drew his sword and spoke.

"Indeed. I was planning to endure for a minute before asking for help."

Having been under his gaze for so long, I responded with a smile.

"Men..."

"That's enough. Kim Gong-Ja, take my hand. We'll get out of here. Sword Saint! Come here too. Don't you see the numbers we're up against?"

The Black Dragon Witch, irritated, reached out her hand.

"No, it's fine."

But I didn't take her hand.

The Black Dragon Witch frowned in confusion.

Instead of answering her question.

I softly chanted.

"Ghoul Summoning."

The Demon King momentarily panicked.

-You... what did you just...?

Before the Demon King could react, another voice reached me first.

[Activating skill.]

A voice proving my qualifications.

Soon, the plains turned upside down.

Chapter 39: The Alias of the Hero (3)

It grew larger and larger.

A frog... Yes, the first creature it had devoured was a frog, which it now understood. It had come to know much more than before. It knew frogs, snakes, and even eagles.

The joy of feeling raindrops directly on its skin as a frog.

The pleasure of slithering smoothly over the soft earth as a snake.

The delight of entrusting its weight to the sky as an eagle.

It had come to know the joys of rain, earth, and sky.

-Grrrr.

Finally, it became a lion and even realized the joy of slaughter.

The meat of the deer was delicious. How fragrant! The moment it sank its teeth into the deer's neck and became intoxicated by the blood, ah, it felt as if it could close its eyes in satisfaction.

It should have become a spirit or a divine being, following the natural order.

-Ah...

But by chance.

-Gasp!

It encountered a noisy creature.

-Aaaah!

The creature ran away, showing its back.

Instinctively, it chased after the creature.

-Save me... Daddy! Daddy, please save me!

The creature was slow despite being noisy. It even stumbled onto the ground itself.

What was it doing?

It didn't understand the creature's 'fall'. It had swallowed countless creatures while traversing land and sky, but this was the first time it saw one so foolish to trip while running.

-I don't want to die! Daddy, help...

Before the noisy creature could get louder, it bit down. Crunch! Gulp. Blood flowed between its teeth. When it filled its mouth with blood, it paused momentarily. A lightning-like shock struck its mind.

Fragrant!

What was this aroma?

It was mesmerized, addicted, intoxicated by blood. It devoured everything about the creature in a frenzy – blood, flesh, bones, entrails! Everything was so fragrant.

From blood to flesh. From flesh to bones. From bones to entrails.

As its teeth sunk deeper, its hindlegs became thinner. Its forelegs grew longer.

The hindlegs became legs.

The forelegs became arms.

The lion's mane turned into hair.

It all happened in an instant. It quietly consumed the remains of the creature. As it licked up the last remnants, memories of the creature slowly seeped in.

-.....

Human.

The creature was called a human.

The human was born in a remote village, loved and raised by family. There was no lack of love. But perhaps life always lacks something. This human was deprived of health.

Disease.

There was no way to cure an incurable disease in the poor countryside. Even if there were, they lacked the money. In a home overflowing with love, the human was dying day by day. Bravely, this young human refused to die in bed.

-I want to walk before I can no longer!

-I want to breathe more of the outside air.

It was a mistake.

The human went too far. It was a test to see how far it could go before dying.

The human's final destination was death. Inside its stomach.

-Hey! Ester!

No.

-You were here!

It was no longer that thing.

-Dad! Why did you go out alone! The forest is dangerous. You never know when a beast might appear. Don't ever wander alone again... Wait, why are you dressed like that!

-.....

The girl spoke.

-Dad.

She smiled.

-I think I'm healthy now.

Ester.

The first name the Demon King ever had.

A voice echoed in my mind.

[Activating skill.]

The plains started to flip over.

The change began right under my feet. Shadow. My own shadow began to expand endlessly. Over the plains already covered by the Demon King's murky liquid, my shadow overlaid.

-Grooo...

Squirm!

Something emerged from the shade.

-Grooo!

They were bones.

White human bones emerged from the shadow.

Like demons escaping hell, they appeared.

'Sword Emperor.'

I thought to myself as I surveyed the scene created by my shadow.

'You wondered why I chose [Ghoul Summoning], didn't you?'

-Yeah, I did.

'At first, I was drawn to other skills.'

Like those enhancing Aura.

The red beams shot by the Demon King were terrifyingly powerful. Imagine how cool it would be if I could use such attacks someday.

But after some more thought, I changed my mind.

'Skill card open.'

+

[Ghoul Summoning]

Rank: SS

Effect: You summon as monsters those whom you have personally killed. The deceased do not inherit their abilities or memories from life. They are merely summoned as monsters like goblins, orcs, zombies, skeletons, etc.

*However, you can only summon once a week.

+

A card shining brilliantly in gold.

'I can summon all those I've personally killed as monsters...'

I muttered as I glanced over the card.

'But here's the problem. How many people have I actually killed?'

-Oh.

The Guardian Spirit frowned.

-Wasn't it two, including that guy named Flame Retard or something?

'That's right. Seems likely.'

I smiled.

'But then, why does [Eyes of a Detective] show my kill count as over 4000?'

-What?

'It's excessive and strange. I've been killing myself like it's a meal, but why would my kill count reach 4000? Logically, it should only be two.'

-.....

'So, here's the thing.'

I looked ahead.

'The Tower has its own way of calculating death.'

I gazed at the shadow-covered plains before me.

"Even if you kill the same person twice, it is treated as [2 deaths] instead of [1]."

And then I saw the monsters crawling out of the shadows.

A legion of skeletons emerging from my hell.

"Let's ask again."

It was an army.

Countless skeletal soldiers covered the wilderness.

"How many deaths do you think I've caused?"

4097 suicides.

The first hunt of Yoo Soo-Ha and the second hunt which had to be repeated due to being killed by the Sword Saint before 24 hours were up.

Therefore, 4099 deaths.

My trace of deaths spread across the vast plains.

"Wow..."

I nodded, contentedly observing the hellish scene I created.

"I really died a lot."

It was then.

-The skeletons roared.

They bared their teeth, all looking identical. Similar in size and height to me. It made sense since these monsters were evidence of my own deaths.

"Even the weapons are all the same."

Daggers.

Every skeleton wielded the same dagger I used for my suicides and during the hunt of Yoo Soo-Ha.

"This is unbelievable!"

However, the only one leisurely admiring the skeletons' weapons on this vast plain was me. Both the Witch and the Sword Saint looked around in dismay.

"Is this your skill, Kim Gong-Ja?"

"Yes."

The Witch was astonished.

"Unbelievable! A skill to summon thousands of monsters! No wonder you cleared the 10th floor alone!"

"Well..."

The Witch seemed to misunderstand my method of clearing the floor. Before I could correct her, she marveled by herself.

"No, that's not it..."

Hmm.

Let it be.

"Yeah, that's right."

"Exactly!"

"Let's talk about this later."

There was no immediate need to correct the misunderstanding.

Nor the time for idle chat with the Demon King in sight.

-How dare vermin like you use the same skill as me?

The Demon King stood still. Though his face showed no expression, the tone of his voice revealed his dismay.

"Curious?"

I brushed off the lingering regret and smiled slyly.

"But what to do? I have no intention of telling you."

-.....

"Keep wondering. Or, want to trade your life for the knowledge? How about it?"

-Unforgivable...! This is not permitted!

The Demon King roared like a wounded lion.

-How long will you mock me! Goddess! You promised to accept my anguish, my resentment, all my grudges! How could you let this happen!

"Sword Saint Sir!"

I didn't pay attention to the Demon King's lament. The Demon King had his reasons, and I had my role. The Demon King was my enemy. If the enemy was distracted, it was an opportunity for me.

"Please fight alongside the skeletons! With you joining, we won't be pushed back!"

"Hmm."

The Sword Saint replied with a reluctant face.

"Alright. I'm not keen on fighting alongside monsters... but it's more tolerable than helping you."

"Thank you! Black Dragon Witch, please help me! Together, let's take down the Demon King!"

"I know. Just don't hold me back!"

The Sword Saint swung his sword, and the Witch spread her aura. Both seemed determined to follow my command until the Demon King was defeated. I nodded once and then shouted to my deaths.

"Ghouls!"

A quiet roar from thousands of bones.

"Show me what you do best!"

I commanded.

"Kill and be killed!"

The legion obeyed my command.

-The skeletons charged in all directions. They were lightweight, being only bones. Jumping high, they landed on the heads of orcs. Despite broken arms, they thrust their daggers.

-The Skeletons frenziedly swung their daggers, ripping through the orcs' eyes, mouths, necks. The orc collapsed, and the skeleton, though losing its left arm, didn't stop. It just rushed towards the next prey.

-In another scene, a skeleton, reduced to a skull and spine, bit off a goblin's forearm.

-The goblin screamed as other skeletons joined. All of them were damaged in some way - missing an arm, a leg, a head - but each held a dagger. They surrounded the goblin, stabbing it relentlessly, causing a fountain of blood.

-Damn, look at those skeletons.

The Sword Emperor exclaimed.

-They're relentless, not fearing death. What the hell, a monster legion like that is terrifying!

A massacre occurred all over the plain.

The Demon King trembled in rage.

-Unacceptable!

The Demon King's shadow continuously spilled a black liquid. If the liquid had been red, I would have thought it was the Demon King's blood. The Demon King wailed as if vomiting blood.

-You have no right!

The Demon King's outcry echoed between heaven and earth.

-A mere being from another world!

"Does it matter where I come from?"

I said, facing the echo.

"I stand here now. But if you still think I lack the qualification..."

Before the echo could fade, a familiar voice resounded in my mind.

[The Tower bestows upon you an alias.]

As if someone who had been watching me for a long time was blessing me.

As if celebrating my liberation from the prison of time.

[Your alias is the King of Death.]

The voice echoed long.

[The Tower shows its respect to the King who harvests Death.]

Yes.

Someone remembers me.

Even if I die day after day.

Someone knows why I'm here.

That's enough for me.

"Don't interfere."

I raised my sword.

And spoke to my enemy.

"The Tower proves my worth."

King of Death.

That was my second name.

Chapter 40: His Time (1)

It did not age.

It was perpetually youthful.

-Ester.

It grew more beautiful day by day, with the scent of freshly-picked apples wafting from its fingertips and the rich aroma of grapes from its feet. As it walked, people felt intoxicated as if by wine. Its hair was like a field of golden wheat ripe for harvest, enchanting the village with the scent of autumn whenever it fluttered in the wind.

-Ester, the Saintess of the Outskirts.

Eventually, people began to say so.

-Saintess.

A poor woman, burdened by poverty, came with a sick newborn in her arms. She had followed the rumors from afar.

-Please, I beg you. This poor child is ill. Please bestow your blessings...

-Do you know the rule?

-Yes, yes, I do...!

Ester nodded.

-Leave the child here. Come back at dawn tomorrow.

The woman bowed and left.

After the mother departed, only a small child remained, wrapped in a worn but soft swaddle. The woman had chosen only the softest rags she owned, wrung them out, and wrapped the child in them. The old swaddle, smelling of fresh milk...

Ester buried her nose in it for a moment.

So fragrant.

Humans are so desperately in love.

-Goo?

The child reached out and touched Ester's hair.

Ester smiled. Even wrapped in rags, life shone brilliantly. Ester considered it a happiness to know such a humble miracle existed in the world.

-It's okay.

Ester's shadow writhed.

-You won't suffer anymore.

-Gaga...

The shadow's maw yawned open.

-Poor thing.

Ester quietly devoured the newborn.

The child's death was gentle. It did not struggle. It simply sank into the shadow without resistance.

As the flesh and bones of the newborn melted, memories flowed into Ester. Memories clinging to the child's flesh and bones – the pain of birth, the swollen feeling of the breast, the mother's smile...

-Yes.

Short memories for a brief life. After skimming through the ephemeral life, Ester gestured towards her shadow. The shadow bubbled and boiled.

-Let's give it a little more life.

At that moment, the shadow solidified into the shape of a baby. The black shadow gained flesh tones. The flesh wriggled slightly, innocently smiling like a young animal.

-Gaa!

Ester smiled.

-Poor thing.

The mother returned at the crack of dawn the next day. Had she stayed up all night? Her complexion was haggard. Ester, who had been waiting by the door, handed over the baby wrapped in the swaddle.

-Your child should be healthy now.

-Ah...

-It won't fall ill again. Please continue to cherish it as you have.

The mother's face crumbled with gratitude.

-Thank you...

The rumor started spreading from the outskirts of the continent.

-Saintess...

The rumor from the outskirts consumed the small nations.

-Thank you, Saintess...

The small nations on the outskirts were the first to stir.

-Ester.

Then the great nations that encompassed the small ones followed.

-Saintess Ester.

Other small nations, shielded by the great nations, clamored loudly. The continent was vast, and wherever it was vast, there were countless unfortunate humans.

Those gripped by dreadful diseases, rotting away.

Those limping, lamenting their fate.

Those born disabled.

Those who had lost their sight.

-Saintess of salvation!

All those blind eyes, disabled arms, limping legs, and rotting flesh increasingly gravitated towards Ester. With each occurrence, Ester's shadow grew a little more.

-Savior of all the sick!

As Ester's shadow expanded, human territories shrank. In abandoned villages, officials could no longer govern, and in cities deserted by their citizens, kings could no longer reign.

-Ester.

The kings realized that this new name was a plague.

And they knew exactly what was needed to eradicate a disease.

-Burn it!

Fire.

-Burn the witch's nest to the ground!

Ester heard screams.

People were being burned by fire demons.

No.

That wasn't it.

-Show no mercy. They are all cursed monsters! Don't spare a single one!

Humans were burning humans.

-Those who do not see humans as humans.

It sounded like a groan.

Almost like a scream.

Groans amalgamated into shadows, and screams congealed into blades.

-Be swallowed by your own malice!

The Demon King swung his sword.

The sword trembled as if emitting groans.

“Kim Gong-Ja!”

The Witch shouted.

“I’m okay!”

I faced the Demon King. The air churned like rapids. The Demon King’s sword seemed ready to unleash a red beam at any moment.

‘Right?’

I concentrated aura on my feet.

‘Or is it left?’

A 50-50 chance.

The Demon King's sword screamed.

The sword, hotter than fire and redder than blood, engulfed me.

[You have died.]

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

‘Left, then.’

I died.

When I die, I go back 24 hours.

[6 days 23 hours 53 minutes 27 seconds left until you can reuse Ghoul Summoning.]

‘Returner’s Winding Clock’ states that the user retains ‘memories and stats.’

That retention includes skills.

[You have died.]

[You have 5 days 23 hours 51 minutes 42 seconds left till you can reuse Ghoul Summoning.]

And as Sword Emperor's Sword Emperor and I share memories of the regressions, it's clear that skills continue in the state they were at the time of death.

Abilities. Power. Cause and effect. Memories.

Even cooldowns.

[You have died.]

A day went by.

[You have 4 days 23 hours 49 minutes 33 seconds left till you can reuse Ghoul Summoning.]

I conquered the 11th floor.

No one died.

I climbed to the 12th floor and cross swords with the Demon King.

The Witch of the Black Dragon assisted me.

The enraged Demon King summons ghosts.

I charged at the Demon King and died.

[You have died.]

[You have 3 days 23 hours 47 minutes 15 seconds left till you can reuse Ghoul Summoning.]

I died.

[You have died.]

[2 days 23 hours 45 minutes 28 seconds...]

I died.

[You have died.]

[You have 1 day 23 hours 43 minutes 13 seconds left till you can reuse Ghoul Summoning.]

A day went by.

[You have died.]

[You have 23 hours 41 minutes 53 seconds left till you can reuse Ghoul Summoning.]

And then...

The day returned.

[You are now able to use Ghoul Summoning again.]

With each repetition of the seven sword battles.

I could engage in one final showdown.

"---Kim Gong-Ja!"

The Witch shouted.

I nodded.

"I'm okay."

In this life, I leaped to the right without even seeing the beam.

Swoosh!

The red beam uselessly pierced the empty space. Dozens of skeletons were ensnared in the beam and perished screaming. But ten times more goblins and orcs were set ablaze.

-You!

The Demon King's voice was twisted with rage.

-A mere mortal! Do you possess the Eyes of Prophecy?

"Sort of."

Minus the fact that my price for prophecy is a week of my life.

-Harsh.

The Sword Emperor clicked his tongue.

-Really harsh, this guy.

The Sword Emperor demonstrated tirelessly in front of me, where to swing the sword and how to move my feet.

-But this is a complete jackpot. Hey, Zombie! Try duplicating the summoning later. Get trapped somewhere and after a week, try summoning again.

I frowned.

'Let's talk about it later! Please!'

-My guess is that the previous summon will be canceled and only the latter will be recognized, but who knows? 4,000 could become 8,000, and 8,000 could turn into 80,000. A miraculous jackpot time. Then you'll evolve from a zombie to a Zombie King! Zombie King Kim Gong-Ja! How cool is that!

'Ah, stop talking nonsense! I can't concentrate with this...'

[You have died.]

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

‘Damn it!’

-You've died and died a thousand times, turned from a zombie to a skeleton. Whether you have a soul or not, the patheticness of Kim Zombie is endless.

‘It's your fault I died! Now I have to repeat a week again!’

-It's because you're weak. Not my fault. Definitely not.

The Sword Emperor laughed.

‘I swear, someday, I will definitely get you!’

-Oh, I'm already dead. How will you get a dead ghost? Meh. Our zombie is getting angry, peekaboo.

‘This damn...’

-As angry as you are, go and defeat the Demon King. Even without skills like yours, I conquered up to the 20th floor alone. Oh, the shame, Kim Zombie.

‘Damn it!’

Though we joked, we steadily cornered the Demon King.

Skeletons held back the Demon King's forces. Any monsters approaching us were slaughtered by the Sword Emperor. I predicted the Demon King's attacks through my week-long deaths, and with those predictions, the Witch delivered effective blows to the Demon King.

“Black Dragon Witch! Next, he'll attack from the right!”

“Got it!”

The Witch scattered dark aura. The mirrors reflected the aura. Once, twice, thrice, four times, the aura doubled with each reflection in the mirrors. Swoosh! The dark strike, amplified dozens of times in an instant, ripped through the Demon King's waist.

-Kyaaa!

In the center of the frozen world, the Demon King's scream tore through the sky.

“Hahaha! Nice shot, Lady!”

I laughed, swinging my sword.

“Who are you calling Lady! I'm not even married yet!”

“And you're still unmarried at your age!”

“I'm still, quite, young!”

“Yeah, right. Youthful thanks to the Elixir of Immortality! I know.”

“You... first, let’s finish the Demon King, then come see me.”

We crossed countless lines of death.

Sometimes the red beam ensnared the Witch. The Sword Emperor was swept away too. One second. Another second. We fought desperately, entrusting our lives. The Demon King’s strikes were lethal, so even a second of carelessness was fatal.

[You have died.]

But that didn’t matter.

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

My determination was stronger than the Demon King’s lethality.

-You, you...

Twelve times.

-How dare you defy my resentment... my hatred...

The Witch's aura pierced the Demon King's body twelve times. Only then did the Demon King's movements slow down slightly. Black sludge bubbled from the attacked areas.

‘Huh?’

Was it my imagination?

For a brief moment, before the sludge boiled over... it seemed like flesh-colored skin was visible, not black. It was a fleeting moment. When I turned to look again, the Demon King's body was already covered in sludge.

-Kuh!

The Demon King retracted his sword.

Even without a face, I could feel him glaring at us.

[The Demon King of Autumn Rain decides to retreat.]

What?

[The Demon King of Autumn Rain retreats to the 13th floor!]

That's overkill!

I felt a surge of heat from my heart to my head.

“Wait! Who ever heard of a boss running away when nearly caught!”

-Do not be mistaken! I will return again!

“That bastard!?”

I swung my sword, but before it could hit, the Demon King's body crumbled. Like a hidden drainpipe beneath the ground, the black sludge rapidly flowed downward.

“Hey! You black sesame shake!”

Not just the Demon King. The monsters born from his shadow also bubbled and collapsed. Gurgling! Like water draining from a toilet. The monsters turned into dark currents and disappeared into the ground.

“Wow.”

Suddenly, only me, the Witch, the Sword Emperor, and thousands of skull-and-bones were left on the field.

“What is this...”

As I stood bewildered, wondering if my countless deaths were in vain.

[The Tower acknowledges your choice.]

A voice echoed in my head.

[Creating Hidden Quest.]

[The 12th floor quest has been amended!]

“...What?”

And one after another.

[The 13th floor quest has been amended!]

[The 14th floor quest has been amended!]

[The 15th floor quest has been amended!]

[The 16th floor quest has been amended!]

[The 17th floor quest has been amended!]

[The 18th floor quest has been amended!]

[The 19th floor quest has been amended!]

I was speechless at this unprecedented phenomenon.

Can quests be amended?

“.....”

As I stood with my mouth open, text appeared before me.

Text meant for me.

+

[The Hero of a Time-Frozen World]

Difficulty: Unknown

Objective: You have made up your mind. You will not tolerate even a single sacrifice.

It is called justice to not expect anything back from those you have saved. It is called devotion to not expect recognition from those you have saved. And they call those who are dedicated to justice a hero.

Hero!

The people of the Empire will not know your justice. They will not realize your devotion. But still, justice remains justice, and devotion remains devotion. Will you continue to choose to be a hero in this frozen world?

The Demon King has escaped after being injured. He hasn't gone far. If you wish, you can still pursue him.

Now only your choice remains.

+

A quest just for me.

“.....”

The voice rang out.

[Will you accept this quest?]

My heart pounded.

It was an answer that needed no hesitation.

“Yes.”

The voice responded to me.

[Hidden quest activated!]

[Quest :Hero of the Time-Frozen World.]

[May fortune be with you.]

I was enveloped in white light.

Chapter 41: His Time (2)

The light did not only envelop me.

[Searching for the Demon King's presence on the 12th floor...
Not found.]

[The Demon King's retreat has been confirmed.]

Whoosh!

[Timeline Alteration.]

The white light spread in all directions, like a faintly sparkling mist. The cluster of light rapidly unfolded across the vast plains and soon covered the capital of the Aegim Empire.

Light droplets.

They were innumerable, floating like dandelion seeds in the wind.

“What's this...?”

The Witch looked around in confusion.

“Kim Gong-Ja. What’s happening?”

“Well, I... This is new to me too...”

I was just as perplexed.

As the world was engulfed in light, I asked myself:

‘Sword Emperor, do you have any idea what's going on?’

-No, this is new to me too. What is this? It's scary.

‘.....’

Apart from when learning swordsmanship, this guy is really no help.

How such an ignorant gorilla conquered up to the 99th floor is beyond me.

-Huh? Hey, Kim Zombie. You just cursed me in your mind, didn't you? Right?

‘No, Sword Emperor. I was just thinking that someone as great as you is beyond my understanding.’

-Strange. That's not it. Your face looked like you were cursing me...

The Sword Emperor grimaced and grumbled.

While we were chatting, the light droplets continued to float endlessly.

“Huh?”

That's when I felt a noticeable change.

I pointed towards the empire's majestic city walls.

“Black Dragon Witch, look over there.”

“Hmm?”

“The city walls. The number of flags seems to have drastically decreased.”

The military banners on the city walls, fluttering in the wind.

The red and gold flags were rapidly disappearing. From what was hundreds, only dozens remained, and even then, they were still diminishing.

“...You're right.”

The Witch narrowed her eyes.

“Hold on, let me check. Just hold me. I need to see this.”

“Agreed.”

“Teleport!”

The Witch held my hand and used her skill. In the next moment, we were no longer in the middle of the desolate plains but atop the empire's battlements. The splendid cityscape was visible at a glance.

“My goodness...”

The Witch murmured softly.

“Everything is changing.”

Indeed, it was.

The world was transforming.

There were no refugee camps. The slums had disappeared. The refugees who had fled from all over the continent due to the Demon King's destruction. Their settlement in the slums was surrounded by white light... and then vanished.

As if the refugee camps never existed.

“.....”

The attire of the pedestrians in the streets changed. Worn-out rags transformed into decent clothes and garments.

Even the fruits on the market stalls changed. The rotten apples slowly started glistening with freshness.

I murmured unconsciously.

“Timeline Alteration...”

“What?”

“The history has changed.”

The number of patrolling guards on the city walls had significantly decreased.

Not just in number, but their expressions were different too.

The soldiers' faces were no longer filled with despair from the fear of the Demon King. They showed the boredom of duty, the tedium of patrol – the expressions of ordinary human beings.

“Originally, the Aegim Empire was invaded by the Demon King. It had to face either victory after battle or complete annihilation... Regardless, it faced the invasion of the Demon King's army. But now...”

I swallowed hard.

“In this world, the invasion by the Demon King itself has become [nonexistent].”

Unknown to everyone.

Unnoticed by all, the Demon King's invasion was erased.

Yes.

I erased it.

“...History has been rewritten.”

The result unfolded before my eyes.

[Altering the 11th floor.]

[Altering the 12th floor.]

The white light enveloped the city.

A street child who was wandering around as a beggar, touched by the light.

A man worrying about his next meal, his coat brushed by a light droplet.

Shhh...

The light droplets fluttered like dandelion seeds.

In the city streets. At intersections. In a shop with a crumbling pillar. In the house of someone returning home from work.

The fingertips of light gently caressed the world,

[Alteration complete.]

And soon drifted away.

Disappearing somewhere.

“.....”

I closed my mouth.

The Witch did the same.

In the frozen world where no sound was heard, even though it was just our silence, it felt as if the world itself had held its breath.

But...

"---Come on, they're cheap! Very cheap!"

The silence soon broke.

"Apples freshly brought in from Eilbrandt! Fresh apples! My lords, even elves can't resist these seasonal fruits! Take a look at these fresh apples!"

Sounds.

"These days, the baths are not clean. I can see the dirt. Really, these bureaucrats can't even manage water properly. What do they expect us to believe..."

Sounds were heard.

"I'm telling you, the crown princes are up to no good! The walls of the palace resound with the Emperor's crying every night. It might just be a rumor, but I think..."

"Let's have a drink tonight, just us, what do you say?"

"Please spare a coin. Just one coin! The Goddess loves you all."

"Eilbrandt apples that even elves crave for taste! They're cheap!"

The world resumed breathing.

"Hey!"

Among them was a breath directed at us.

"What are you people doing here!"

The Witch and I turned our heads towards the voice. From the direction of the city wall, a general was brandishing his sword.

The general's face contorted angrily.

"How audacious! Who dares to trample upon the battlements of the Empire! Come down immediately!"

Somehow, his face looked familiar.

I murmured.

"Sarbast Aegim..."

The NPC general's eyes widened.

As if seeing someone like me for the first time.

"Ha! Insolent thieves. How do you know my name?"

I pressed my lips together tightly.

‘...I see.’

The general, who should have been on the 11th floor, not the 12th.

The first to kindly welcome hunters in the empire.

The NPC from whom I deliberately received death to copy his skill.

"Come down at once! Can't you hear me?"

The man who should have recognized me as a familiar face was shouting as if I were a complete stranger.

The alteration was not limited to the 12th floor; it had also changed the history of the 11th floor.

Thump.

‘Ah.’

Suddenly, my heart pounded against my chest.

An unknown emotion wrapped around my heart, chest, and then my entire body, even seeming to clog my throat, making it hard to speak. Why? While the world had regained its sounds, it felt like my voice was taken away by something.

“.....”

I looked down at the general, my lips twitching slightly.

Memories that had already become stories of the past.

I reminisced about the words the NPC general had said to me.

-‘I cannot take the life of a hero.’

-‘We thank you on behalf of the empire.’

-I was skeptical. I wondered whether heroes from other worlds would truly fight earnestly for us. But it was just needless worry. I thank you again.'

The last smile of the general crossed my mind.

-Please take good care of our empire.'

“.....”

Ah. Yes.

This is what it feels like.

“Huh.”

For some reason, a smile broke out on my lips.

“Ahaha, uhah! Haha, ahahahahat!”

I laughed, holding my stomach.

The general looked up at me with wide eyes, soldiers focused their attention on us, and the Witch gave me a weird look. The Sword Emperor stared at me as if I were insane.

But I didn't care.

There was sorrow that the people of the empire had forgotten me.

But a much more immense emotion had seized my entire being.

“Ah.”

I took a deep breath and opened my mouth even wider.

“---I kept my promise!”

A roar burst from my mouth.

The general's shoulders flinched.

“I protected your empire!”

The soldiers on the walls were startled.

“I kept my promise to you all!”

Yet, I did not stop.

I made sure my roar was amplified with my red aura to reach far and wide.

“I am proud! I fulfilled my promise!”

For the first time in my life.

I felt this emotion for the first time.

I lived like trash.

Jealous of others, mocking them, wasting my days just drinking. Freezing my heart under the guise of being rational, giving up on life, on myself.

But not today.

[Stage Cleared.]

At least today, I was proud.

[Today, the 12th floor stage has been cleared.]

Proud in front of people.

In front of the Witch and Sword Emperor.

Towards the world.

Most importantly, proud of myself.

[Announcing once again.]

I could be proud of myself.

[Today, the 12th floor stage has been cleared.]

That I could be such a person.

[Raid participant assessment in progress...]

[Assessment complete.]

I was overjoyed.

[Announcing the 3 raid participants.]

The sky of the empire was etched with light.

[Raid Contribution Ranking]

1. King of Death

2. Witch

3. Sword Saint

+

It was probably invisible to NPCs.

The general was frozen by my roar.

“What... what are you talking about...”

“Sarbast Aegim!”

The general flinched.

I looked down at him from the battlement.

“Take good care of the empire!”

“.....”

“I'm sorry, but this is where the role of the hero ends! I've hunted down the Demon King for you! Your empire might be rotten in unseen places, and there will be many problems! It's obvious!”

I smiled broadly.

“From now on, you figure it out yourselves!”

“.....”

“Fighting for this existence of ours! You can do it! Woohoo!”

The general opened and closed his mouth like a goldfish.

“Ah, I don't understand what you've been saying since just now... I can't comprehend it at all...”

-Hahaha!

The Sword Emperor rolled around in the air, clutching his stomach.

-Heheheh! Wow, you lunatic! You're insane! I thought you might be drowning in regret, but no, you just brazenly boast about yourself! I'm curious about your thought process, Kim Zombie! I acknowledge it! You're a real case study!

‘Ah.’

I brushed back my hair.

‘So what? I'm too adorable today.’

-Crazy... Kim Lunatic! Heh, okay! At least you don't whine pathetically! Heheheh!

Despite his laughter, the ghost continued to roll in the air, as if it wasn't enough.

I turned to the Witch.

“Come on, Black Dragon Witch! What are you waiting for? Let's go to the 13th floor!”

“.....”

The Witch sighed enigmatically.

“Alright... It's common for high-ranking hunters to be abnormal. It's okay. I understand. At least you're better than the Heretic Inquisitor.”

“Huh?”

“Teleport.”

The Witch grabbed my hand and activated her skill. In the next moment, we were back in the wilderness. Without warning, she grabbed the Sword Saint's arm.

The Black Dragon Witch looked into my face.

“The entry priority is always given to the first rank.”

She said.

“You represent us and announce the transfer. King of Death.”

It was the first time I was called by my alias.

Today was a day full of new experiences.

“Yes.”

I smiled.

“-Transfer.”

And thus...

We moved on to the next stage.

Chapter 42: His Time (3)

The countless decisive battles had been crossed, and endless duels endured. Finally, the thirteenth stage had been reached.

‘A stage comprised of the ominous number 13.’

Was it because of this number? From the moment of entry, this place exuded a unique aura. As soon as we were transported to the stage, two completely different kinds of voices welcomed me.

One was a voice of joy, and the other, a voice of terror.

[Welcome, King of Death.]

First, there was the familiar voice.

The Tower no longer called me 'Hunter Kim Gong-Ja.' Instead, it used my alias, my second name, King of Death. I had been duly recognized as a resident of this place and welcomed as a legitimate member of the Tower.

Was I too modest to find such a fact mildly pleasing?

-Kaaaah!

Then there was the other voice.

-I will not forgive you!

Like a tearing scream.

-How dare you! How dare you take my children!

No, the owner of the voice was literally being torn apart.

-You dare to take away the children I nurtured and raised! Are you mocking me? Trying to deceive me? Taking my flesh, my blood, my soul!

The Demon King.

The ruler of the red nightmare was bleeding black fluids all over.

-I curse you! You and the world! If the world wishes to erase me, I shall devour it! Your seas will become my gastric acid, and your lands, my flesh! I will chew up your flesh, bones, heart, and even your last entrails!

"Uh..."

The Witch next to me held her breath.

The Demon King's howling screams were ominous and filled with deadly intent.

Even the Sword Saint stepped back, gripping his sword handle tighter.

“This is a dreadful outcry.”

The Sword Saint muttered.

“I’ve never heard such a voice before. It’s like it has thousands of mouths.”

“Really, why is it screaming like that...?”

Both the Witch and the Sword Saint raised their auras, perhaps to avoid being engulfed by the murderous aura. It was clear that, even if only momentarily, they were overwhelmed by the Demon King's presence.

Only one person remained unfazed.

-Eh?

As always, Sword Emperor was nonchalant.

-What's with that guy?

Then, unexpectedly, Sword Emperor dropped a surprising remark.

-It's gotten weaker, hasn't it?

‘What?’

- It's much weaker than when we fought on the lower floor.

Much weaker?

I looked at the Demon King again, examining him closely.

‘That?’

-Yeah.

The Sword Emperor frowned.

-Well, it's understandable that it's damaged from the Witch's aura assault. But it's not just an injury... Its [rank] seems to have dropped.

‘Rank dropped?’

- Let's say... compare his combat strength to a Great Goblin King. On the 12th floor, he was like an SSS-tier Great Goblin King formed by a fusion of Alexander and Arthur with a goblin.

‘Your comparisons are getting more creative. When did you learn about Alexander and Arthur?’

-An Emperor always diligently pursues knowledge. That's why one becomes an emperor and remains so.

‘Ah, yes. Let's assume that, Sword Emperor.’

I said inwardly.

‘So, the Demon King was like that SSS-tier Great Goblin King on the 12th floor...’

-Right. Now, it's like he's just a Great Goblin King without the SSS-tier. Not even the one leading the army on the 11th floor, but rather the weakened version you barely defeated with your underhanded tactics, remember?

I recalled the event from the Tower's timeline, not long ago, but a distant memory in my time. Sword Emperor continued, tilting his head in confusion.

-Strange. Normally, as you go up the Tower, the bosses get stronger, right? But why has he become like this? Does that aura burn from the Witch have a level-down effect or something?

"....."

I looked around, pondering the Sword Emperor's words.

The temple had turned into ruins.

In the middle of it all, the Demon King was still howling at the sky. Like a lion struck by an unexpected blow. The Nightmare of the Autumn Rain was lamenting, above all, furious.

‘Perhaps.’

This sight gave me a certain conviction.

‘Is there an unexpected change in the stage?’

It was then.

[Tabulating 12th floor rewards...]

[Unable to tabulate!]

[You are currently undertaking a hidden quest.]

[All rewards will be tabulated upon clearing the 19th floor.]

[Only a simplified reward will be given for now.]

Swoosh!

A translucent something unfolded before me.

[The Goddess of War’s Blessing has been buffed!]

It was a map.

But unlike any map I had seen before.

[Maps from the 11th to the 20th floor are now open to you!]

A world map.

The maps I had received as a special privilege were just 'minimaps.' They were limited to the range of a single floor, no matter how wide. However, what unfolded before me now was on a different level.

This was a map of this world and the otherworld, the so-called 'world map.'

".....!"

And upon seeing the map, I realized.

“I got it!”

“Huh?”

The Witch and the Sword Saint both turned to me. The Witch with a puzzled look and the Sword Saint with a stoic expression.

“What do you mean, you got it?”

“I know why the Demon King is like that. Black Dragon Witch, think back to the previous stage.”

I spoke quickly, explaining my realization.

"The history of the Demon King invading the capital has disappeared. The city has completely changed. The refugee camps are entirely gone."

"And how does that matter...?"

"Think about it logically! Where would these refugees have fled from? Not just from all over the empire, but from across the continent. But now, even the refugee camps have completely vanished."

"...Ah."

Finally, the Black Dragon Witch seemed to catch on.

"I see."

The owner of the Black Dragon narrowed her eyes.

"Not only the history of the empire being invaded but also refugees who fled from all over the continent have disappeared..."

"Yes."

I nodded.

"It's not just the empire; the entire continent has changed. We've returned to a time [before the Demon King officially invaded the continent]!"

Exactly.

"And now!"

That was it.

"This temple is under attack at this very moment!"

Upon seeing the world map, it became clear to me.

The continent of this world was divided by a vast mountain range. So high and wide that even birds dared not cross it. But in the middle of this expansive mountain range, there was a narrow pass. East and West of the continent were connected through this pass.

This temple was built right at that location.

A temple bridging the East and West of the continent. It must have been built with a grand history and many legends unknown to me. Due to such reasons, it resembled a fortress and a wall, functioning as a temple.

This temple was a shield of the goddess, blocking the mid-mountain range.

Inside the shield, to the East, lay plains. Small nations were located on these plains, and beyond them lay the empire. Since only the sea existed beyond the empire, its borders started at the horizon and ended at the sea.

A realm of humans, vividly blue.

On the other hand, beyond the temple, the West was entirely red.

All the lands beyond the goddess's shield were stained blood-red. That was the realm of the Demon King.

The Demon King had broken this shield and surged eastward. He had engulfed the small nations and the empire. Finally, he even pushed to the ports.

In the original history, it must have been so.

'History alteration means this!'

I realized.

The time of this otherworld was regressing into the past.

A historical regression.

Maybe [historical return] would be a more appropriate term.

-Kaaaah!

That's why the Demon King was crying out so desperately.

Why the Sword Emperor was talking about the Demon King's rank.

I could now perfectly understand.

I murmured inwardly.

‘That's it, he's lost levels.’

-Huh?

Sword Emperor narrowed his brows.

-Lost levels?

‘You know, Sword Emperor. The voice we hunters hear when our levels rise.’

Yes.

The voice heard when a hunter grows stronger is always the same.

「Your existence becomes more defined.」

「You are leveling up.」

Sword Emperor also seemed to recall the same phrase quickly.

-Are you talking about that 'Your existence' thing?

'Yes, exactly that!'

What did it mean when it said [your existence becomes more defined]? I had thought it was just a fancy expression but looking at the Demon King now, it all made sense.

“Maybe that boss monster grew by killing countless imperial citizens and refugees. But now that slaughter and hunt have become [nonexistent]. So...”

Therefore...

“That's why his growth has been deleted.”

His existence is becoming fainter.

"The Demon King's path... The history of his continuous slaughters has been erased because..."

I had completely altered the history of the 12th floor.

Enduring endless duels and countless decisive battles, my time, woven stitch by stitch.

-Kaaaah!

The Demon King's time had regressed by that same stitch.

[The Demon King of the Autumn Rain is enraged.]

[The existence of the Demon King of the Autumn Rain is becoming faint.]

The timely voice proved my thoughts were correct.

-You...!

The red nightmare growled.

The murderous intent, just as strong as before, but no longer could it overpower any hunter.

Not me, not the Witch, nor the Sword Saint. We all looked straight at the Demon King.

“Let’s go.”

I said.

"Let's ignite the beacon of counterattack."

-Ghoul Summoning!

Rumble!

The Demon King's body boiled.

-My children!

A voice that sounded like a scream.

-Rise, my children!

In response, monsters all over the stage slowly rose. It wasn't a summoning spell. Probably the monsters that were originally prepared for the 13th floor.

From the temple pillars, from the ruins that had become rubble, monsters began to rise.

-Uuuuh.

Thousands of zombies.

Were these the people who were in this temple, the [Shield of the Goddess]? There were zombies wearing priest hats, some dressed in paladin uniforms, and others in merchant clothes. They moved their lifeless eyes around aimlessly, moaning as they shifted their bodies.

The Demon King commanded.

-Kill them!

The horde of zombies charged towards us.

Beside me, the Witch sighed.

“Ah, I’ve always hated zombie movies...”

“Me too, not a fan.”

"Can we win, King of Death?"

“It’s not about whether we can win or not.”

I drew my sword.

“We will win.”

Chapter 43: His Time (4)

I spoke rapidly, sharing my insight.

"To break through the 12th floor, nearly a thousand deaths were needed. The 13th floor will require fewer deaths."

‘Sword Emperor.’

-What?

‘Let's make a bet.’

As I beheaded the first zombie that charged at us, I proposed. The zombie's neck, already rotting, was sliced effortlessly by my blade. Facing the onslaught of dozens, hundreds, thousands of zombies, I continued.

‘Let’s bet on how many times I’ll die before reaching the 19th floor.’

-Hmm.

Sword Emperor stroked his chin thoughtfully.

-Okay, I bet on less than 100 times!

I grinned.

‘Then I bet on less than 99 times.’

-You sneaky brat. Trying to one-up me, huh?

‘Yes, that’s exactly what I’m doing.’

Sword Emperor chuckled.

-Alright then. Let's see how you, a zombie, handle your kind.

But remember, a bet is a bet, so I won't help you this time.
Deal?

'Deal.'

I laughed amidst the endless surge of zombies.

[You have died.]

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

Laughing, I died.

•

•

•

[You have died.]

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

"Ah, first, I need to handle this horde... Black Dragon Witch, any ideas?"

"I'm already giving it my all. I'm the only one here with an area-of-effect skill, but it's tough. Besides, King of Death, can't you counter with your skill?"

"Ah, of course I will. But right now, it's on cooldown... I can use it after about 3 coins."

"What's a coin?"

"It's a thing. Uh, anyway... Oh, is that... on the minimap? Hey, Sword Saint! Can you smash that big lid over there? It looks like a sarcophagus! I need to check something!"

"What do you mean to check?"

"I'll explain later, just please! I'm the prophet! Okay!?"

"Hmm..."

[You have died.]

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

"Okay! Sword Saint! That sarcophagus is actually a secret passage. There's a hammer underneath that's super effective against undead! Please go with the Witch and retrieve it for me!"

"I have been walking the path of a sword my entire life..."

"That hammer has an area-effect! If you slam it to the ground, it'll create a field that sweeps away the zombies! Okay!?"

"How do you know all this?"

"I'm a prophet! Okay!?"

"Ah, this guy..."

[You have died.]

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

"Now that the zombies are taken care of, it's time for the Demon King... What's that now?"

"That is a giant. And it's a zombie. So, it's a giant zombie, I presume."

"Hmm. Given the deep history of this temple... Perhaps it was a guardian giant who fell under the Demon King's control... If the Heretic Inquisitor were here, we might know more..."

"Wow. Do you even know about otherworldly religions? That's some SSS-Class Clergyman skill."

"It's all skill."

"That's what makes one SSS-Class, I suppose."

"So unpleasant. Why bring up that deplorable man? Anyway, I'll handle the giant."

"No, Sword Saint. Please continue to control the zombies with your area-effect skill."

"Now, listen here. That giant seems like the perfect test for my sword..."

"I'm the prophet! Okay!?"

"Really now..."

[You have died.]

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

"Anyway, I'll take on that giant."

"Ghoul Summoning!"

"My goodness. King of Death, does your skill even have a cooldown?"

"It does... Anyway, there's just one thing I need from you, Black Dragon Witch."

"What is it?"

"Don't aim for its eye."

"Why not?"

"It'll cause big trouble."

"But King of Death, look at that one-eyed giant. If you were in my shoes, able to use beams, and you saw such an eye..."

"I get it... Black Dragon Witch, I'd probably argue like mad if I were you. I don't have time to explain why, but please. Don't."

"Ugh..."

"Just follow the young man's advice for now, Witch."

"Sword Saint, you too..."

"Let's see how it goes. After all, he claims to be a prophet."

".....Alright. I'll do my best not to aim for the eye."

"Thank you!!"

We ran. We fought. We saved each other.

We acted.

We spoke a lot.

-My children...!

We shattered the zombies lingering in the temple.

-My generals...!

We defeated the one-eyed giant that must have been a legend guarding this temple.

-Aaaah...!

[The Demon King of the Autumn Rain decides to retreat.]

And,

[The Demon King of the Autumn Rain retreats to the 14th floor!]

Once again, we pushed the Demon King to the next level.

Light particles fluttered around.

The temple, the boundary line dividing the continent, shone brightly like a newly polished shield.

Bells rang, and hymns resonated. Traders from the east rode horses, those from the west rode strange two-legged birds, exchanging greetings as they passed. Paladins practiced against each other with hammers, and orphans, once under the temple's care, sneaked glances at the traders with longing and at the paladins with admiration, before being dragged back to the chapel by the priests.

And at a spot overlooking the temple, a one-eyed giant, using the mountaintop as a chair, sat bored. Occasionally, cloud-like sheep's wool brushed over his head, making him blink and sneeze.

"The mountain god is sneezing!"

The chattering orphans showed fearlessness rather than fear. The priest scolded them, then bowed deeply to the one-eyed giant.

The giant grinned and waved back at the priest.

"King of Death."

"Yeah?"

“Are you ready? Witch, Sword Saint, are we set?”

“Wait a moment. That trader over there is selling a good whetstone.”

Sword Saint bought the whetstone and began sharpening his sword. During this time, I turned my gaze from the giant and looked at the world map.

The red lands that had fallen away still seemed ready to surge back at any moment.

But there was enough time for the Sword Saint to sharpen his sword.

"That's all we need."

"King of Death."

The Witch took my hand. Sword Saint, having finished sharpening his blade, promptly took Witch's hand.

“Transfer.”

Light enveloped us again.

“Hmm, the 14th floor is a forest. The Demon King... seems to have hidden.”

“Be careful. Hostility is coming from all directions.”

“Let's proceed slowly, very slowly.”

[You have died.]

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

•

•

•

Thus, we defeated the Demon King, who had marshaled a fallen elven lord in the cursed forest.

[The Demon King of the Autumn Rain decides to retreat.]

[The Demon King of the Autumn Rain retreats to the 15th floor!]

.

.

.

Thus, we vanquished the Demon King, commanding the mermaid queen at the reversed waterfall.

[The Demon King of the Autumn Rain decides to retreat.]

[The Demon King of the Autumn Rain retreats to the 16th floor!]

-

-

-

And thus, we repelled the Demon King, leading wyverns atop the erupted volcano.

[The Demon King of the Autumn Rain decides to retreat.]

[The Demon King of the Autumn Rain retreats to the 17th floor...]

History regresses.

Back to before the Demon King's army invaded the empire.

Before invading multiple countries.

Before the breaking of the temple, known as the Shield of the Goddess.

Before the curse of the elven forest, the reversal of the waterfall, and the eruption of the volcano.

Further and further behind.

To a time before the Demon King reigned as the absolute lord of evil.

Fleeting.

Like waves engulfed by other waves, turning into a mere bubble, disappearing.

Like a falling petal.

With each floor we ascended, the Demon King's domain shrank, and his power weakened.

[The Demon King of the Autumn Rain's existence becomes fainter.]

Just as the Demon King on the 12th floor was weaker than on the 13th,

And the one on the 13th was weaker than on the 14th.

The one on the 14th weaker than on the 15th,

And so on, little by little.

[You have died.]

[The Demon King of the Autumn Rain decides to retreat.]

[The Demon King of the Autumn Rain's existence becomes fainter.]

[You have died.]

[The Demon King of the Autumn Rain decides to retreat.]

[The Demon King of the Autumn Rain's existence becomes faint.]

•

•

•

•

•

•

-You!

After the 97th death, on the 19th floor, in a nondescript outskirts of a nameless small country.

-You!

The Demon King howled in that desolate land.

Not at Sword Saint or Witch.

His grinding teeth and furious gaze were directed at me.

-If it weren't for you!

His eyes, bloodshot with rage.

-It's all your fault! Everything! If you hadn't interfered... Yes! If you weren't here, none of this would have happened! How dare you, a swordsman from another world...

I drew my sword.

"Ah, finally I can see your eyes."

-What?

"Exactly what I said. I've finally seen what your eyes look like."

Originally, the Demon King of the Autumn Rain had no eyes.

He was a writhing shadow. A face without expression. Arms without hands. Covered in black liquid, continuously bubbling.

That had been the case.

"Does that make sense?"

Finally, the Demon King's mask shattered.

"A Demon King and a hero, never even making eye contact. That would've been a real tragedy."

A part untouched by the black liquid, at last, appeared. Red, bloodshot eyes. Though they seethed with deadly intent... I wasn't afraid. Rather, I was relieved.

I pointed my sword at the Demon King.

"Attack with all your might."

-You...

"Or run away again. Aren't you curious? How much weaker you'll become if you flee again."

-...

"If you don't attack with your full strength now, you won't stand a chance."

Even without the rewards from clearing the 19th floor, the Demon King on the 20th floor would inevitably be even weaker.

-You dare to speak... You, a mere hyena feeding on my flesh, what do you know...

His growling voice, lost and wandering in the shadows.

I slowly opened my mouth.

“Ester.”

Hesitation.

The Demon King’s red eyes widened.

“I warned you to attack with full force.”

-...

“Otherwise...”

I lunged forward.

A scream erupted.

Black liquid splashed.

“My time will surpass your history.”

I glared at the Demon King, Ester, amidst his screams.

Straight ahead.

Towards the path I must follow.

Chapter 44: The Demon King's Name (1)

It was a long journey.

After a lengthy passage of time, I arrived here.

[You are penalized by the skill.]

[Re-enacting the trauma of your killer.]

It seems about time to talk about a particular nightmare.

The battle on the 12th floor.

A moment when I was swept away in the torrent, reduced to a mere droplet of water.

[The level of penalty is medium.]

It was after being killed by the Demon King that I saw it.

[Welcome to the Hungry Ghost Realm.]

Trauma.

The nightmare of the one known as the master of nightmares.

[Initializing the penalty.]

[Recreating the trauma of the Monster - The Demon King of Autumn Rain.]

.

•

•

•

•

•

A village engulfed in flames.

Before I knew it, I stood alone amidst a sea of fire.

No.

-Burn it down!

Perhaps it wasn't me who was standing alone.

At least, I was accompanied by my Guardian Spirit.

The one truly alone, plunged into the hellfire, was on the other side of the fire.

-Burn down the witch's nest!

Ester.

Saintess of the Outskirts.

The savior of the sick.

-Show no mercy. They are all monsters cursed by a spell!

-Don't let a single one escape!

Ester couldn't comprehend.

She was at a loss for words.

Unable to understand, her mouth merely quivered slightly.

Why?

How can humans set other humans ablaze?

Parents who had thanked her, newborns given a new lease on life through her - all of them were slaughtered.

-By the lord's command!

Soldiers, whose origins were unknown, demolished the village's palisades,

-We have orders from His Majesty, the King!

Knights bearing various crests struck down with their swords.

-Under the orders of the Czar of the East, who watches over the rising sun and guards all land and sea...

-As per the Holy Pope's decree, the heretic who dares call herself a saint...

-As instructed by the Great Sage of the Forest, oh spirits, let this arrow...

-By the grace of the Mermaid Queen, this orb bestowed upon us empowers our staves...

-For the honorable promise made in the primordial volcano, we, the dragon cavaliers, have arrived! Now, dragons, unleash your fire upon these cursed beings...

Though they proudly announced their affiliations and names, Ester still couldn't recognize them.

Who were these people?

Who dares to burn humans alive?

-Ahh, ahhh!

-Save us!

They hunted with precision. Surrounding the village like it was a grand hunt, there seemed no escape. A fleeing family was quickly caught and hunted down.

The only refuge was the village square.

Impaled by spears,

Chased by swords, struck by arrows,

Hit by hammers, targeted by staves, scorched by fire, people were driven more and more into the square.

-Cough!

In the center of the village.

In the heart of the paradise she had created.

Amidst the thick smoke, Ester slowly surveyed her surroundings.

-Hang in there, just a little longer...

A father bent his back. A small gap formed between the earth and his waist, a space where his young child hid. The father took the brunt of the flying sparks, inhaling the acrid smoke in his child's stead.

The father died first.

The child managed to live a minute longer.

-Just a bit more...

An old grandfather and grandmother embraced each other. Was it to bid farewell to their companion at the end? Ester thought so at first. But upon closer inspection, she saw a newborn nestled between them.

-Just a bit more...

As the flames spread, the elderly couple screamed. But they did not separate. Their elbows charred and solidified by the fire. Even as they turned into blackened cinders, the old couple held each other tightly. Not a farewell, but an embrace to save the small child.

The couple died first.

The cries of the newborn spilling from the gap ceased a minute later.

One by one.

Coughs echoed across the square.

The family that became the wealthiest in the village by establishing an orchard. The old man who toiled in the fields every dawn. The old woman who looked over the wheat fields in autumn, muttering about the golden ripeness of the grain.

-Why...?

Every citizen was shattered. A terminal illness dormant in the stomach. Cancer eating away at the brain and spine. Blind eyes. Legs that couldn't walk. With numerous ailments in the world, Ester willingly swallowed them all.

Even more than when she had swallowed all those diseases,

-How...?

Her heart now blackened even more.

Blackened by the smoke.

Scorched by the flames.

She cautiously parted her lips.

-.....

From her mouth, came the smell of char.

Ester realized her heart had darkened a bit more.

Overnight, the village was engulfed in flames.

Overnight, Ester was consumed.

Crunch!

Ester scratched at the ashes with her fingertips.

No one disturbed her. The soldiers had leisurely departed after seeing the village wrapped in flames.

The remains of a burnt paradise.

-Leafandor...

There lay the corpse of a father.

-Dajenna...

Underneath him, the body of a child.

-Solafe..., Jou..., Ugen...

She dug.

-Mobazaijan..., Topo..., Enna..., Garchev...

With her bare hands. With her fingertips.

Through the remnants of a village reduced to debris.
Through the ashes of a paradise settled into dust. Even as her fingers turned black and her nails cracked, bleeding blackened blood, Ester dug.

-.....

And then, she opened her mouth and ate.

The flesh of humans.

Their bones.

And if there was no flesh or bones, then the ashes.

-.....,

Human flesh no longer had any fragrance. She could feel no hunger, no beauty. Only the scent of char. The mere lingering smell of something burnt. Yet, Ester kept eating the charred remains. Devouring them greedily. Even if it was hideous.

Ester's mouth was dirtied black.

Her teeth stained pitch black.

-Poor souls...

Her esophagus was painted black, and pus collected in her stomach. The blood turned into a viscous fluid, spreading throughout her body. It wasn't just blood. Something was flowing from her eyes too.

Perhaps it wasn't tears.

If they were tears, why weren't they clear?

-Poor souls...

So, it was nothing but dirty water.

Waste water discarded by other humans, flowing and flowing until it reached her.

With nowhere else to go, it just collected in her heart.

-Poor souls...

The black wastewater kept flowing, unstopped.

-You,

It flowed into the square.

-You... you too. You too were human.

The village flowed with grief.

-You, born as humans, knew the beauty of life and shed tears. How, how could you...

The wilderness echoed with sorrow.

-You called them monsters. But you burned them like monsters? Wasn't it enough that they knew beauty and shed tears? Did you feel no hesitation in branding and burning them?

The mountains and fields wept.

-So, you remain human, while these... my children are forever doomed to be monsters? Is that your world?

Hatred flowed like rain.

-In that world, only you smile. Are only you granted the grace to be beautiful? Only you worthy of shedding tears? Is it only you who is truly human? For you, proof is needed to be recognized as human.

The heart cries out in echoes.

-Then now, you prove it.

Rain fell.

-Show me.

Rain fell.

-I curse you.

Because the rain falls.

No longer will any village burn, nor will any borderland be engulfed in flames.

My children. My blood. The color stolen from my heart.

Though my blood has lost its color and flows merely as ash and wastewater, the red rain falling upon this world testifies in my stead.

-Be swallowed by your own malice.

Rain fell.

Rain.

-You...

Rain,

Rain fell.

-You made me this way,

Continuously.

-And thus, you made yourselves.

Rain,

Rain for...

- "Hey, Gong-Ja."

Blink.

- "Wake up."

A voice.

- "This is not your hell."

At the gentle voice, I opened my eyes.

[Trauma re-enactment complete.]

[The target's ego has remained intact.]

[Penalty Finalized.]

•

•

•

•

•

•

A single sword.

Just holding one blade in hand.

Simply because there remains something in this world that I must cut down.

-Zombie!

Blink.

-Now!

I looked ahead.

No.

It was what lay before me.

-Your mind is clear!

The time of confusion, as if floating for an eternity.

Before my eyes, having crossed a moment, stood someone entirely blackened.

From its body, wastewater continuously flowed.

Water, even when cut, remains water, leaving much to be cut down.

Cutting down what must be cut.

-Aaaaaah!

As it was sliced, the Demon King released wastewater.

Perhaps it wasn't wastewater after all.

If it were, why would it be red?

Blood.

Bright red blood dripped from the Demon King's body.

-Ugh... Cough...!

The Demon King staggered backward. One step. Two steps.

Three steps. When he took the third step, wastewater ceased flowing from his right arm.

Where the Demon King stepped, black puddles still gathered, but each step lessened the pool, shrinking gradually.

Eventually.

-Cough, gasp... Ugh...

The Demon King's body was shedding the wastewater.

Drip. Drop.

No longer flowing wastewater, blood took its place.

The color of life, naturally, was red.

[The existence of the Demon King of the Autumn Rain becomes faint.]

The once absolute presence there had vanished.

-No... I can't... Ugh!

The Demon King wrapped its right hand around his left arm, where blood was flowing. As if trying to recapture spilt water, desperate not to let a single drop escape, he tightly pressed the wound.

-My children... I can't let this... be in vain, the resentment, the curses...

"Retreat."

I spoke softly.

A human's sword may divide the body, but a voice can sever the soul.

As if cut by my voice, the Demon King hesitated.

"Retreat to the 20th floor. You can't defeat me anyway.

Return to your base, to your final castle."

The 'World Map' made it clear.

Blue territories. Human realms had reclaimed the continent. They crossed the central mountains, passed the canyon known as the Shield of the Goddess. The temple under the gaze of the one-eyed giant. Forests where fairies dance. Waterfalls where mermaids play. Lava-flowing mountains... There was no part of the plains not covered in blue.

In contrast, the red territory...

"Return to your starting point."

Was just a dot.

Merely one dot.

No matter how far the flames burned the fields, in the end, they reduced to a single ember. Even if the waters flooded to the very skies, eventually, they dwindled to a single droplet.

On the vast world map, only a tiny red dot remained.

That was...

"Your end. Demon King."

The Demon King grunted.

-You, scum...

It lifted his head. Wastewater had ceased, and blood flowed, but half his body was still blackened by the ash. Its face too. Only the red eyes shone ominously. With a face still immersed in ashwater, the Demon King glared at me.

"Hmm."

The Sword Saint silently gripped the hilt of his sword.

"I'll leave the final blow to the King of Death."

The Witch casually controlled her six mirrors.

-.....

There was no chance for a reversal anywhere. No gaps. Was it because I witnessed the Demon King's trauma? The situation felt eerily similar to a village surrounded by soldiers.

A barrier of humanity with no escape.

-Cough!

The Demon King had no answer but to flee. Yet, it hesitated to choose that path, knowing it wasn't the right one.

Just as fleeing to the square from the flames only prolonged life by a mere minute. Being chased away by us to the twentieth floor would only delay the moment of defeat.

-Damn it...! Damn it all!

Blood spilled from the Demon King's mouth.

[The Demon King of the Autumn Rain decides to retreat.]

[The Demon King of the Autumn Rain retreats to the 20th floor!]

Yes.

Fleeing, knowing one will burn to death, is what humans do.

The more it fled, the closer the Demon King came to being human.

[Confirming the Demon King's retreat.]

[Timeline Alteration.]

[Altering the 19th floor.]

The world once again enveloped in a light droplet.

After confirming the Demon King's disappearance, I turned around.

"Sword Saint."

"Hmm."

"Black Dragon Witch."

"Yes."

"I apologize. I wish to conquer the 20th floor alone."

I bowed.

"Thank you for your help so far. But I want to settle this with that Demon King. Please let me go alone."

"....."

The Witch shrugged nonchalantly.

"Sure. I'm okay with it. You've contributed the most in getting here... Besides, we agreed not to act for five days according to your word. I broke that agreement to help, so this time I'll really stay put."

"Hmm."

The Sword Saint sheathed his sword.

"When today ends, it'll be five days. After clearing the 20th floor, we should meet separately. There's much to discuss between you and me."

"Yes. Understood."

I bowed again.

"Thank you."

And then I proceeded.

"Transfer."

The 20th floor.

[Welcome, King of Death.]

To the Demon King.

To the village where Ester was born.

Chapter 45: The Demon King's Name (2)

[You have entered the Boss Stage.]

This is the second time.

It's my second entry into a Boss Stage.

Comparing then and now... there are many similarities, yet many differences.

[Challenger: King of Death. Alone.]

[May fortune be with you.]

First, the notification.

Just like when I challenged the ‘Hellfire Mansion,’ I was still a solo player. As always in the tower, it quietly wished luck to the challenger, to me.

However...

There were definite changes from that time.

[Clear rewards will be given.]

[Clear rewards from floors 11 to 19 will be collectively tabulated.]

Now, I was no longer just a challenger.

I had conquered from the 11th to the 19th floors and ascended here.

The tower welcomed me, the conqueror, and joyfully sounded its trumpets nine times.

[Tabulating Floor 11 clear reward.]

[Tabulating Floor 12 clear reward.]

[Tabulating Floor 13 clear reward.]

[Tabulating Floor 14 clear reward.]

[Tabulating Floor 15 clear reward.]

[Tabulating Floor 16 clear reward.]

[Tabulating Floor 17 clear reward.]

[Tabulating Floor 18 clear reward.]

[Tabulating Floor 19 clear reward...]

Step.

I took a step forward.

[Tabulation complete.]

While listening to the melody that greeted my footsteps.

[The tower acknowledges your achievements.]

[You are granted the right to modify a skill!]

[You can enhance any skill, except for those of EX rank.]

It was like a hymn blessing me.

The tower had prepared the stage in advance, with the quest's path set. However, I didn't walk the paths already laid out. I created a completely new stage and cleared it in my own way.

The tower acknowledged my strategy.

As if to say, 'That's also a good approach.'

[Adjusting the King of Death's authority!]

This time was no different.

[You are temporarily granted the authority of an Apostle.]

[For this reward, you have limited management authority.]

[How you enhance a skill is left to your discretion!]

A stage not predetermined.

A strategy not predetermined.

Therefore, naturally, the rewards were also not predetermined.

'Indeed.'

I nodded inwardly.

‘Leaving the choice to me.’

I don't know why the tower was built, who built it, or why it's filled with creatures from other worlds.

There's still much I don't know.

But now I have a guess about what the tower is.

‘An entity that observes our choices.’

And an entity that remembers my choices.

‘Alright.’

Swish!

I drew my sword.

‘I’ll show you my choice again.’

An artifact said to be crafted by the founder of the empire.

[Leafanta Aegim's Holy Sword of Protection] resonated with my aura, emitting a white light.

I aimed my sword at the [enemy] in front of me.

“Now.”

At the entrance to the twentieth stage.

At the path leading to a small village, it stood.

“It’s time to decide your fate, Demon King.”

-.....

It growled softly.

Like a beast irreversibly wounded.

A beast engulfed in the world's flames and driven out by fire had only a tiny refuge left. The entrance to the village.

-My...

A road lined with acacia trees.

In the middle of the road, draped with white flowers, the beast stood alone.

-My village!

It roared.

-Do not dare to destroy my paradise!

And its voice echoed.

[Initiating the Boss Stage.]

The stage was set.

A stage to defeat the weakest boss in the world.

"....."

I looked up at the sky for a moment.

It was clear and blue.

The sky had always been a territory of blue.

Looking up at the cloudless sky, I was certain.

Today...

There will be no rain.

Acacia petals fluttered down in white.

As they drifted, the petals made no sound.

The ground was silently painted white by the falling petals.

Only the breaths exchanged above the path filled the world's silence.

-I cannot forgive!

The breath that filled the world was harsh.

-I will never forgive! The burn marks still in my eyes! The smell of char embedded in my brain! That fire! You people! How could I forget your malice!

It swung its red sword, crying out in despair.

Every scream narrows the world a bit more.

The 20th floor was especially cramped.

In comparison to other floors, the minimap revealed it to be less than 1/100th in size. Even checking the World Map wouldn't change anything. Just a tiny red dot, one pixel in size, marked on the world map.

That was the boss stage of the 20th floor.

-Go back! Turn back time!

It was just an ordinary rural village.

-Are you trying to burn down my paradise again!

The narrowest stage in the world.

And...

The weakest boss monster in the world.

-Again! You people, always like that! Always!

In the path littered with acacia petals, it was screaming. Just one person's scream. A frail voice. But even a single person's outcry was enough to fill this narrow world.

A small world.

A tiny village.

"The roles are completely reversed now."

I deflected the Demon King's sword.

Our blades sharply collided.

"Remember? On the 12th floor, you were the Demon King and I was the hero. You invaded, and I defended. It's ironic, isn't it? Now you're the one defending."

-Die!

“Sorry, Demon King.”

I twisted my blade.

“That line means nothing to me.”

My sword easily pushed away the Demon King's. The strength was incomparable. The Demon King's physical power was already insignificant. Unable to withstand my push, it exposed its flank like an open path.

A gap.

My blade smoothly sliced through the Demon King's torso.

-Aaaaaah!

Red blood gushed.

[The Demon King of Autumn Rain's existence becomes faint.]

Blood flowed.

On the ground, among the white acacia petals, red scents dripped, staining them.

“You’ve weakened, Demon King of Autumn Rain.”

I took a step forward.

Red petals were crushed under my feet.

“You’ve really weakened.”

-Ugh, cough... Ahhh...

“But it’s still not enough.”

I swung my sword.

“Become weaker.”

-You...

“Much weaker than now.”

My blade cut through the Demon King.

The white petals turned a shade redder.

[The Demon King of Autumn Rain's existence becomes faint.]

The road to the village.

Behind the Demon King, the path was white.

But the road behind me gradually reddened.

[The Demon King of Autumn Rain's existence becomes faint.]

One step.

[The Demon King of Autumn Rain's existence becomes faint.]

Another step.

With each step the Demon King retreated, the whiteness of the petals diminished.

With each of my steps forward, the one-lane acacia path reddened further.

It wasn't just that.

-Ugh... Ahhhh...

The Demon King's entire body began to reveal itself.

Resentment. Grudges. Curses.

The clotted wastewater was being stripped away.

-No...

The Demon King's feet became visible.

-It can't be...! No more, I can't endure...

Both of its legs standing on the path were revealed.

-Ugh...

Next, its left and right arms were fully exposed.

And after that, the area below and above the waist appeared.

Furthermore, a long neck became visible.

-Tower, it can't be... it just can't be...

I swung my sword.

[The Demon King of Autumn Rain's existence becomes faint.]

And then.

Finally, the face started to be revealed.

[The Demon King of Autumn Rain's existence becomes faint.]

The jaw.

Lower and upper lips.

The philtrum and tip of the nose, both cheeks.

[The Demon King of Autumn Rain's existence becomes faint.]

The red eyes.

The white forehead.

[The Demon King of Autumn Rain's existence becomes faint.]

Lastly...

[The Demon King of Autumn Rain's existence becomes faint.]

The hair, resembling a lion's mane.

Each strand of hair lost its black color.

The last of the wastewater dripped away.

-Ah...

It let out a groan. Its thin forearms trembled, unable to bear the weight of the sword anymore.

-Uh, uh...

Standing under the acacia tree, it was no longer the Demon King. No one would call someone who couldn't even properly lift a sword a Demon King.

And then.

[The Demon King of Autumn Rain's existence becomes faint.]

[The Demon King of Autumn Rain can no longer maintain its authority.]

The tower too did not call it the Demon King.

[Initiating rank adjustment.]

[Revoking The Demon King of Autumn Rain's alias.]

The former Demon King shivered.

-No!

It was engulfed in a white light.

Like being swarmed by bees, it thrashed around.

-It can't be! It can't be! No, it can't be!

But it was futile. The light unwaveringly enveloped it.

[Announcing once again.]

Executing.

[Revoking The Demon King of Autumn Rain's alias.]

[Revoking The Demon King of Autumn Rain's authority.]

It screamed.

-Ahhhhhh!

The once absolutely powerful Constellation had now fallen.

-Ah, ahh! Ahhhh!

It reached out frantically, as if trying to grasp the dispersing light droplets. Desperately trying to catch the light. But the light could not be grasped, slipping through its fingers.

The white light scattered and dissipated.

-Ah,

There.

"Ah,"

Only a fragile creature remained.

"Ah, uh... no, uh... ahhh..."

Not the Demon King of Autumn Rain.

Not the master of nightmares.

Not the Saintess of the Outskirts.

A fragile being.

"Right."

I gripped the sword hilt.

"Now you are weak enough."

"Don't come... Don't come closer..."

"Then stop me."

Step.

I took a step forward.

"What will you stop me with, words? A sword? Try anything. Otherwise..."

Another step.

"I will stand right in front of you."

It took a step back.

Facing me, it struggled to speak.

"You... to me, to my children... You dare do this to me, after all that..."

"You're wrong."

I took another step forward.

"As you said, I am a foreigner from another world. Yes. From the Demi-Human Alliance to the Temple, the Church, the Kingdom and the Empire, everyone in this world collaborated to burn you and your village. Let's say there isn't a single person on this continent who is free from that responsibility. But, I am different. A complete outsider. Hunters like us are free from such responsibilities."

"Uh..."

"You have no right to hold me accountable. And of course,"

I took another step towards it as it retreated.

"You no longer have the power to stop me."

It trembled. The trembling leaked from its lips.

"I... I didn't do anything..."

"You mean you did nothing wrong?"

"I! I just helped the sick..."

"[Ester] was afraid like you are now."

It flinched.

"She screamed for help. Cried not to be killed. Sought her father. What did you do to such a child before you became Ester, before you gained human memories?"

I calmly recounted what it had done before it gained human memories, before it became Ester.

"You bit the neck of a struggling person. Ate them at your whim and became Ester. Not just that. You devoured the newborn baby entrusted to you by a woman who believed in you. And yet, you pretended to be a savior, acting all high and mighty. You betrayed the woman who trusted you with her child."

"I... That's not... I didn't..."

"You hid the truth. You remained silent, knowing people would misunderstand, afraid of being treated as a monster. You deceived people."

I took another step forward.

"Excuses are useless. There's no one in this world who knows you better than I do. I know what you've experienced, how you felt, and how you changed."

"....."

"You are not an innocent saint. Not an innocent victim. There's no need to even mention the woman and child. Like I said, the moment you devoured Ester, you lost any right to claim your innocence,"

"I am!!"

And it suddenly exclaimed.

"I didn't know!!"

I stopped.

Clenching its teeth, trembling, it covered its face. Sobs leaked through the gaps in its fingers.

"I didn't know back then. I had no human memories... no knowledge..."

The meaning of pleas for mercy.

The struggles.

The begging.

"Back then... I didn't understand what that meant..."

"You mean you made a mistake because you didn't know."

"Yes! If only I had known, I never would have devoured Ester,"

It tried to say it wouldn't have eaten her, and I spoke first.

"That's what humans do."

It lost its words.

"The people who burned you could make the same excuse. Actually, they definitely did, didn't they? What did they say when they faced you, as you covered the world in blood?"

We didn't know,

We didn't realize you were innocent.

We just thought you were an evil witch.

"Uh..."

Finally, it fell completely silent.

To the silent being, I spoke quietly.

"Sorry, but I'm not very educated. I don't know much. There's only one form of justice I know in this world."

Another step.

"And that is Karma."

It shivered.

"An eye for an eye. A tooth for a tooth. If you believe what you swallowed in shadow and then spat back out were people, fine. Then suffer the same fate. At least that's fair, isn't it?"

"What... what are you saying...?"

"Tower!"

I looked up to the sky.

"I want to use the clear reward!"

I pulled out a golden card. The clear reward earned by breaking through from the 11th to the 19th floors. I decided to use it on this skill.

+

[Ghoul Summoning]

Rank: SS

Effect: You summon as monsters those whom you have personally killed. The deceased do not inherit their abilities or memories from life. They are merely summoned as monsters like goblins, orcs, zombies, skeletons, etc.

*However, you can only summon once a week.

+

Ghoul Summoning.

An SS rank skill.

I held the card and raised it towards the high sky.

"The tower clearly said I could modify the skill as I wish!"

[The tower affirms your statement.]

A voice responded to my call.

[However, excessive modifications are not allowed.]

[The tower uses an example for your understanding.]

[Evolution of an SS-rank skill to an SSS-rank skill is within the permissible range.]

I nodded.

My request was simple from the start.

"I request the modification of the Ghoul Summoning skill!"

[The tower asks for your intent.]

"Don't touch anything else! Just modify the part about memory. The 'do not inherit memories' part. Allow the summoned to retain their memories from life, but only if I wish it!"

It flinched.

"You... what are you trying to do?"

"How about it! Isn't this a reasonable request?"

Ignoring Ester, I shouted.

"I'm not asking for the inheritance of their abilities! Not even to inherit their skills. Not even to reduce the cooldown. Just memories! Only memories. I want the dead I kill to remember their lives!"

Silence.

The sky was silent.

[Measuring your request level.]

[Currently measuring...]

After a moment.

[The tower acknowledges that your request is reasonable.]

Permission was granted.

[Confirming your request.]

[Do you wish to use the special privilege earned by clearing floors 11 to 19 on the Ghoul Summoning skill?]

"Yes."

[Ghoul Summoning's requested modification is as follows.]

[If you wish, the dead will inherit their memories and appearances from life. If you do not wish it, they will be summoned only as monsters.]

[Is the above request accurate?]

"Yes."

[Confirmation complete.]

[Requesting approval from Zuraqua.]

[Approval complete.]

And then.

[The King of Death's request is approved.]

White light enveloped my skill card.

A storm of light blew through.

After the light settled, I carefully examined the card.

+

[Ghoul Reincarnation]

Rank: SSS

Effect: You summon those you've personally killed. The deceased do not inherit their abilities from life. However, if you wish, they can inherit their memories and appearances from when they were alive. If you do not wish it, they will only be summoned as monsters.

*However, you can only summon once a week.

+

Ghoul Reincarnation.

That was the new name of the first SSS-rank skill I had acquired.

'Good.'

Everything I wished for had been perfectly fulfilled.

I turned to look at it.

Our eyes met.

“I’m going to kill you now”

“If the word ‘kill’ doesn’t sit well with you, think of it as ‘swallowing’ like you did. Just as you thought while swallowing Ester, the sick, and the children into the shadows. I’ll kill you in the same manner---”

Slowly.

I raised my sword.

“And resurrect you in the same way.”

It trembled in fear.

Chapter 46: The Demon King's Name (3)

Fear.

A feeling more human than any other.

“Hi...”

The face of the fallen Constellation was colored with such an emotion.

Uncertainty about the unknown future. The fear of possibly dying right there.

‘It’ was afraid of me. As I took another step forward, it groaned in terror. But a mere groan could not stop someone's footsteps.

“I’m really glad you’ve become human.”

I said.

“If you had remained a monster, killing you wouldn’t have made you eligible for [Ghoul Summoning], right? Or now it’s [Ghoul Reincarnation]. Whatever the skill name is...”

“Aaaaaa!”

Stagger.

It made a final attempt in its fear. The Demon King’s red sword, now too heavy to be properly wielded. In a desperate effort, it grasped the great sword. Its arms, weakened to the extreme, lifted the red sword, swinging it wildly at me.

"Hmm."

Of course, such a reckless attack wouldn’t affect me. I easily dodged it. Once, twice, thrice, the fallen Constellation shook as it swung its sword.

The Sword Emperor muttered behind me.

-It's hopeless.

He frowned.

-Even the stance is sloppy. Not properly grounded. Swinging a sword without even looking ahead. No confidence in the sword path, huh? What do you plan to do after swinging it? What's your goal?

The Sword Emperor grumbled.

-Tsk. Typical of a swordsman who relies only on skills and aura. No, not even a swordsman.

After remaining silent since clearing the 19th floor, the 'farce' unfolding before the Sword Emperor seemed to deeply displease him.

-Look at that. A zombie. Look at that. That's why I always stress the basics. At the very last moment, all a human can rely on are their own hands and feet.

The Sword Emperor continued.

-End it.

I did.

With a single swing of my sword, I shattered another. Chaang! The clashing of blades echoed fiercely. The fallen Constellation, in apparent shock, widened its eyes.

"Ah,"

Before my eyes, the red greatsword split in two.

"Aah, uh... Aaah..."

With the sword shattered, the last defiance of the fallen throne broke as well. Thud. The fragile creature fell to the ground, crushing the acacia petals beneath its small body.

‘Is this the end of the Demon King?’

I calmly looked down at it, collapsed on the ground.

‘The Harvester of Death...’

Suddenly, I remembered what the tower said when it bestowed the title on me. A tribute to the King of Death. That's what the tower declared. Somehow, it seemed to fit the current situation, making me feel strange.

‘Right. It's not wrong.’

I slowly applied force to the sword handle.

Just as I was about to strike down and claim the neck of the fallen Demon King.

-Wait, Zombie? Hold on for a moment.

"....."

-It's rude to interrupt while you're posing so dramatically, but I had to say something. Actually, I'm not sorry. Just bored.

Anyway, don't kill it yet, just wait.

As always, the Sword Emperor did 'Sword Emperor' things.

"Ah, geez. Why?"

I snapped back, irritation bubbling up. Since I didn't bring the Sword Saint or the Witch to the 20th floor, there was no hunter to misunderstand my talking to myself.

-It seems like you're taking it for granted.

"What do you mean?"

-So, it's not a monster anymore, that's clear. But does that make it human? I mean, does it get treated the same as a human like you, Zombie?

Maybe it just became a regular NPC?

"So what if..."

-Does an NPC still count as a target for [Ghoul Reincarnation]?

I paused.

“Uh... maybe?”

-You're such a sucker, you haven't killed an NPC even once, right? It's clear that monsters don't count for [Ghoul Reincarnation], but it's still unknown about NPCs.

"....."

-What if you impulsively go ahead with it, and then it turns out [Sorry! NPCs aren't eligible for the skill!]? What will you do then? Will you be responsible for the awkward atmosphere?

“No, but...”

-Hey, Kim Zombie. Wake up! I've experienced it, and the tower is extremely ruthless in this aspect.

Damn it.

Still fearful of death, the fallen throne was cautiously watching me.

Eyes filled with the terror of death.

As I cursed and rechecked the skill card.

+

[Ghoul Reincarnation]

Rank: SSS

Effect: You summon those you've personally killed. The deceased do not inherit their abilities from life. However, if you wish, they can inherit their memories and appearances from when they were alive. If you do not wish it, they will only be summoned as monsters.

*However, you can only summon once a week.

+

-Look at that. It says you summon 'those' you've directly killed.

The Sword Emperor pointed at the card.

-How do you know if this 'those' includes NPCs? Huh? Are you sure?

"Yes, NPCs are people. People."

-Oh. That's what you think, Mr. Kim Zombie.

The Sword Emperor spoke with a stern and solemn expression.

-Negotiate with the tower before chopping off that thing's head.

"Negotiate with the tower..."

-Why? What's wrong with that? You did well by yourself earlier. You've already done it once, can't you do it twice?

"Hmm..."

That was true.

Feeling slightly sheepish, I looked up at the sky.

"Excuse me, Mr. Tower...?"

[The tower listens to your words.]

Thankfully, I wasn't ignored this time.

Maybe it's because I was given the 'temporary apostle's authority' earlier. At least for now, it seemed I could communicate freely with the tower.

"I have a question."

-Come on. You were all informal with the tower earlier, now suddenly looking for polite language? Funny guy.

“That’s because I got emotional and slipped into informal speech earlier... Ah, forget it. Just be quiet!”

Even as we bickered, the tower diligently responded.

[The tower pays close attention to what your question is.]

“Let's see. Uh. So, does the Ghoul Reincarnation skill recognize NPCs as targets if they are killed? Or does it only count hunters like me?”

An unexpected answer came back.

[The tower is judging.]

[Your question is beyond the tower's authority.]

“Huh?”

But that wasn't the end.

Then came a response that exceeded my expectations.

[Verifying the authority of the questioner.]

[Cleared. The King of Death currently holds the status of a temporary apostle.]

[The tower acknowledges the King of Death's question as a subject of discussion.]

And then.

[The tower requests a vote from the Six Pillars of All Lives.]

A blinding white light enveloped my vision.

.

•

•

•

•

•

'Huh?'

A moment passed, and when I blinked, I found myself in a secluded place. It wasn't unfamiliar. It was more disconcerting because it was familiar.

The Netherworld. My dark hell.

The starting point I return to every time I die.

‘Why here?’

Just then, a voice brought my consciousness back to reality.

[Confirming participants.]

Not just the voice.

[The 6th Pillar, ‘Staff of Time Immemorial,’ has joined.]

[The 5th Pillar, ‘The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages,’ has joined.]

[The 4th Pillar, ‘The Moon Contemplating Blindness,’ has joined.]

[The 3rd Pillar, ‘Legislator of the Beginning,’ has joined.]

[The 2nd Pillar, ‘The God Who Dances in Emptiness,’ has joined.]

"....."

No matter where I looked, only endless darkness unfolded, and nothing was visible to my eyes. However, I could feel it.

Their presence.

[Confirmed the presence of the Six Pillars of All Lives.]

[The tower shares the query raised by the temporary apostle, the King of Death.]

Their presence was felt from all directions.

Not just an indication of presence, but an overwhelming existence.

[Sharing complete.]

Voices flowed in a space wriggling with gazes.

[The majority vote meeting on the agenda begins.]

[Does the skill 'Ghoul Reincarnation' include NPCs as targets?]

[If you agree that NPCs are included, please vote in favor.]

[If you disagree that NPCs are included, please vote against.]

Suddenly.

Beings without form spoke.

-Gesh... la... ZakuA cho... Deo...

An incomprehensible language.

-Sato, yovela? Weloyo-na Sh...! Deo phenta...

-kunto, nyola Gesh-ve-Nail na? Nai-Gesh-Nail na?

It was like a language made of shadows.

Invisible snakes filled the space. From the left and right, above and below, no, right in front of me, they hissed. Sssk... Sssk... Their voices were the tongues of snakes. The tongues were red and long, slipping into my ears and touching a corner of my brain. They licked it.

-Gesh... Mula-Gagamia... cho Gretehen Weloyo...

-Nail.

Dizziness overwhelmed me.

Despite being nothing more than a disembodied consciousness at the moment, nausea surged within me. I wanted to vomit, to expel anything. It felt like grease was seeping into my brain.

The sensation of being licked to the core of my soul by tongues.

-Layo na.

Suddenly, all voices ceased.

-Gesh. Nail. Nai-Gesh-Nail.

-.....

-.....

-Deo zakun.

Silence.

A profound silence descended upon the void. No entity spoke. The voices that had flowed into my ears, licking and consuming my brain fluid, also stopped. I finally felt like I was able to breathe.

‘They are not from the Tower!’

I gathered my thoughts with difficulty.

‘Entities from the Tower translate all languages... But these beings are different. They reside outside the Tower. Entities far beyond the likes of the Demon King of the Autumn Rain!’

Perhaps they were the architects of this Tower, lurking in an unimaginable realm.

After a brief silence,

[The vote on the query will proceed.]

A familiar voice echoed, bringing me comfort as if I had returned home.

[The 6th Pillar ‘Staff of Time Immemorial’ casts a dissenting vote.]

[The 5th Pillar ‘The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages’ casts an affirmative vote.]

[The 4th Pillar ‘The Moon Contemplating Blindness’ casts an affirmative vote.]

[The 3rd Pillar 'Legislator of the Beginning' casts a dissenting vote.]

[The 2nd Pillar 'The God Who Dances in Emptiness' abstains.]

Two votes in favor.

Two against.

One abstention.

"....."

I paused, perplexed.

Who are these beings and where do they come from? I do not know. But one thing is clear: they have the authority to decide the fate of my skill [Ghoul Reincarnation]. Yet, their decision is neither purely in favor nor against.

Why?

What do they expect from me?

‘Wait a minute.’

A realization struck me.

I looked around the formless space.

‘One more entity hasn’t voted yet.’

Right.

When I was summoned here, it was explicitly stated:

「The Tower requests a majority decision meeting with the Six Pillars of All Lives.」

Was it not the same before the serpentine voices hissed?

「Confirming participants.」

「Confirmed the presence of the Six Pillars of All Lives.」

‘Yes. It was mentioned there are six!’

The Tower assured that six entities were present in this space. However, the current voting tally was odd. Two affirmative votes, two negatives, and one abstention. That's only five.

Where did the sixth vote go?

And...

“.....”

“.....”

Who is this remaining entity that silences everyone?

“.....”

The one who doesn't need to be summoned here.

Already present, not needing to arrive.

Always here, knowing everything.

The master of the Tower.

‘I believe...’

I looked straight into the dark space.

There was a heavy presence lurking there.

‘I think an affirmative vote is the right choice.’

I spoke as calmly as I could, sharing my thoughts.

‘If NPCs are not included in the skill, how did the Demon King summon countless monsters? The humans of the empire and the citizens of the kingdom that he slaughtered were all NPCs, weren't they?'

The presences quietly observed me.

'Of course, I understand your concerns. You worry I might recklessly kill NPCs and then summon them as minions... But I've shown enough of who I am.'

In the dark space.

I looked in the direction of each presence.

And said,

'I am not that kind of person.'

-.....

'And I won't live like that in the future.'

It's always the same.

No matter how mighty the being I face, my options are limited. There are only two options:

Fight them or persuade them.

'The Demon King could summon NPCs as minions, why can't I? That's unfair.'

-Not bad.

Suddenly, something spoke.

The voice.

As if whispering right in my ear, yet also seemingly far away. It sent shivers down my spine. Every syllable sent a current down my spine.

-But it's troublesome.

The voice chuckled.

-King of Death. Speak from your heart, not your head.

'.....'

I paused for a moment.

And I spoke the words I needed to say.

"This Demon King is my prey."

I said what I could.

“---It’s mine so keep your hands off.”

The voice burst into laughter.

[The 1st Pillar.]

[‘The Master of All Lives’ casts an affirmative vote.]

The laughter shattered the darkness like glass.

[The voting is concluded.]

[Three votes in favor, two against, one abstention.]

[The skill ‘Ghoul Reincarnation’ of the King of Death will include NPCs as targets.]

Clink, crack! The laughter fragmented the darkness. In this empty hell, gaps of emptiness widened, letting in streams of white light. [The temporary Apostle authority of the King of Death is revoked.]

Enveloped in blinding light, I realized something.

[The meeting is concluded.]

I had successfully convinced the Tower.

[May fortune be with you.]

•

•

•

•

•

•

-Zombie? Hey, Kim Zombie?

Blink.

When I reopened my eyes, acacia petals, the Sword Emperor, and the once-called Demon King of Autumn Rain, now the fallen Constellation, filled my view. The acacia petals were silent, and the Fallen Pillar dared not make a sound.

Only the Sword Emperor floated about, speaking.

-Why the daze all of a sudden? Didn't I tell you to ask the Tower?

"....."

-Zombie King, hey! You hearing me?

I felt strange.

It seemed like only a moment had passed, yet at the same time, it felt like an eternity. The memory of what just happened was quickly fading, making it hard to recall exactly what was discussed.

"Sword Emperor..."

-Oh, finally a response. Calling you a zombie so much, you're starting to act like one.

“Didn’t you hear it? Didn’t you see it?”

-What?

“That thing, the Tower summoned me to the Netherworld, talking about All Lives, some Pillars, and... something like the Tower's master appeared, laughing... I don't know?”

The Sword Emperor frowned.

Like someone looking at a rabid dog.

-In my whole life, I've never felt sorry for anyone, but suddenly I feel sorry for you... I'll ease up on the zombie jokes. Get your head together.

"....."

I didn't know.

The Sword Emperor, who had conquered the Tower up to the 99th floor and earned the title 'Sword Constellation,' had no idea what I was talking about.

A chill ran down my neck.

‘Who did I just meet?’

The chill wrapped around my neck and spread to my shoulders, eventually reaching my spine.

‘What exactly...’

I gripped the hilt of my sword tightly.

‘Calm down, Kim Gong-Ja.’

After swallowing hard, I looked ahead.

My path still lay before me.

‘There’s still much I don’t know.’

The fallen Constellation sat collapsed in the middle of the road.

‘But there are things I do know.’

I slowly raised my sword.

‘Now, I deliver the final blow to my prey.’

Someday, when I reach the 100th floor of the Tower, perhaps I’ll understand more.

The Sword Emperor tilted his head.

-Are you just going to kill it? Without asking the Tower?

“It’s fine.”

I replied.

“I've already received my answer.”

The fallen Constellation reached out.

“Wait...! Spare...!!”

I swung my sword.

This sword, a reward for appeasing the 10th floor, the same sword that moved the hearts of soldiers when I first challenged the 11th floor. It had been in my hand for tens, hundreds, thousands of times, especially when trapped in the prison-like 12th floor.

A sword that witnessed my time.

With that sword, I cut down the Fallen Constellation.

".....!"

A faint scream, and with its end, the Fallen Pillar collapsed.

Blood flowed.

The blood stained another acacia petal. Looking down at the white turning red, I slowly opened my mouth.

“Ghoul, revive.”

Squirm!

My shadow stirred.

From the flat shadow, a black hand surged like emerging from a pit in hell. Seemingly reluctant to leave this hell, it resisted. But the struggle was futile.

“Stand up.”

The shadow couldn’t defy my command. It regurgitated a head, then a chest, waist, and legs.

“This... black, ah... aah...”

The entity, like a newborn fawn, trembled weakly. Despite having a fully grown body, it was merely a newborn life.

And...

"Ester is not a name you can have. It's not yours to take."

Those who bring life into the world always have responsibilities.

The first of those responsibilities is to give a name to the life I've burdened.

“Preta.”

With long hair flowing, it looked up at me.

“From now on, your name is Preta.”

“You shall serve me, and live.”

Once called Ester, hailed as the Saintess of the Outskirts, and revered as the Demon King of the Autumn Rain, she shivered.

“Yes...”

On the last of the promised five days.

“...My lord.”

The King of Death and the Demon King.

One of the two kings had fallen.

Chapter 47: How to Confront the World (1)

In the aftermath of the king and his subject, it wasn't either of them who spoke.

Rather, it was the 'Emperor', neither king nor subject, who solemnly opened his mouth...

“...Sword Emperor, even at a time like this, must you always 'be the Sword Emperor'?”

Always an expert at ruining the mood, that man.

Twisting his body like a pretzel, he seemed in agony.

-Yeah... I have to... I don't want to, honestly... Deep down, I wish I could just stay away from you guys, pretend I don't know you... Oh, but I'm the only one who can say this.

“Ah, what are you saying?”

-What are you guys doing?

I wondered what he meant, but apparently, that's what the Sword Emperor wanted to convey.

“What do you mean? As you can see.....

-Yeah. You killed the Demon King, right? You brought her back with your skill. Even gave her a name... Ah, jeez, even the name. Preta for a girl? If you had to name her Preta, at least make it cute, like "Chorong* Preta" or something.

*Chorong is a famous korean singer/songwriter/actress.

“Are you seriously quibbling over her name now?”

-Forget the name. The thing is... why did you suddenly form a master-servant relationship?

The Sword Emperor scrutinized me and Preta as if he had seen the strangest of things.

-You guys, what, have some kind of bond? I get it for you, Zombie. It's your prey, right? You have the right to play the old song of "I've got you under my skin". But why is she bowing to you saying, "Yes, my lord"? I don't get it.

I learned one of the Sword Emperor's hobbies.

Something I wish I hadn't known... but that's not what's important.

Hmm.

“So, you're wondering why Preta is willing to serve me unquestioningly?”

-Yeah. Zombie? Let me objectively list what you did to her.

I nodded.

-You blocked her path and played "Hehehe, can't escape,"

right?

“That’s how it started.”

-You destroyed everything she built, and later, shattered her mental state with a truth bomb.

“That’s how it unfolded.”

-Then you literally beheaded her. Oh boy, the cherry on top was dragging her out into the world with Ghouls Reincarnation, despite her refusal.

“That’s how it ended.”

The Sword Emperor clicked his tongue.

-Hah, truly heartless. Are your arteries made of snakes?

“Maybe some cobras too. You forgot to mention, I also broke her sword following someone's advice on 'showing the fate of those who aren't even swordsmen'.”

-That was necessary, and she must be deeply grateful for it, if there's still a spark of a swordsman within her.

The Sword Emperor spoke solemnly.

I thought this guy only talked nonsense, but now I see he's also good at utter nonsense.

-Anyway, I thought she'd be filled with hatred and anger toward you. So why is she kneeling and submitting? Was the great calamity that swallowed a world actually just a massive masochist?

“Wow.....”

I had wanted to distance myself from the Sword Emperor, but now I took a step back.

His level of thinking was just...

“Sword Emperor... It's because Preta willingly submitted to me.”

-Why?

“She knows.”

I glanced at Preta.

“Soon, you will know too, Sword Emperor.”

Weeping echoed through the acacia forest.

“Hic... ah... sob.....”

Preta was crying. Tears of frustration and sorrow.
Heartbreaking sobs fell drop by drop.

Indeed.

Preta knew all too well.

[Searching for the Demon King's existence on the 20th floor.]

What tragedy was about to unfold.

[Not found.]

Preta's shoulders jerked, convulsing.

[Confirming the absence of the Demon King.]

Shaaah!

Lights erupted everywhere. They sprang from the ground and flowed from the acacia trees. The 20th floor stage was a small world, quickly surrounded by a swarm of light.

In the midst of blinding light.

“Please, no... don't let it happen...”

Preta trembled and moaned. But what was the use? Her moans might excuse her life, but not her sins.

[Timeline Alteration.]

The sky spoke with solemn authority.

Announcing judgment like a court to a foolish sinner.

[Altering the 20th floor.]

Slowly.

The predetermined history began to repeat itself.

“Ah...”

Preta, with tearful eyes, looked towards the entrance of the acacia forest path. Something was approaching.

Clank! Clank!

Each step they took, their armor and helmets cried out fiercely. Flags of various colors fluttered above them.

“Please...”

Numerous banners.

Sounds of military boots, hooves, and flapping wings.

“Not again, the village will burn... Burn to ashes...”

To restore history as it was.

To burn the paradise.

Now, the allied forces dispatched from around the world entered the acacia forest path.

“Please, no... Oh, ah...”

Preta collapsed onto the path, huddling.

Huddled, her head and clasped hands pointed directly at me.

“My lord.....”

As the Sword Emperor said, to me, she should be an unforgivable nemesis.

Yet she bowed deeply to me, feeling immense anger and resentment.

“My lord.....!”

But she did.

She had to.

“I will not hold grudges..... I will not seek revenge.....”

Becoming my subordinate and accepting me as her master was the only choice Preta had.

When a powerless person has something precious to protect, they can become a Preta, able to swallow any humiliation.

TL/N: Preta is the Sanskrit for “Hungry Ghost”.

“I will do anything, follow any order..... I'll be your maid, your slave... Whatever happens to me doesn't matter, just please,”

She begged on her knees.

“Please save my village.....”

“Yes.”

I replied.

“Alright.”

I didn't say much.

I took a step.

Led by my step, the Sword Emperor followed. Just moments ago, he mocked me and Preta with a ridiculous expression, but now, his face was heavy as a mountain.

-So, that's how it is.

“Yes, that's right.”

Step.

-The subject is obliged to follow the sovereign.

“The sovereign has the responsibility to protect his people.”

Step.

-I'm sorry for being sarcastic.

“You lost the bet, remember? Just think about the compensation.”

I walked past my subject.

Inhaling deeply, I infused aura into my voice.

And shouted.

“Halt, all troops!”

Like a giant's fist scattering petals, the acacia leaves fluttered.

The roar of the dragon wings ceased, the rattling of the armors stopped. The sound of horse hooves, the clanking of spears and swords, all came to a halt.

I stood.

On the acacia's single path.

Between me and the legion, there were only petals.

Petals make no sound when they flutter. So when they cover the world, it seems as if the world quietly drifts into slumber.

But eventually, petals that leave the branch must fall to the ground.

The commander of the Aegim Empire, donned in sea-colored armor without a gap, bearing the sun's seal on his breastplate, stepped forward.

I knew who he was.

“I am General Sarbast Aegim! Who dares block our path!”

And of course, he had no idea who I was.

Hmm.

“Well...”

I faced countless monsters, thousands of zombies. I even received the direct gaze of Preta when she was the Demon King at her peak.

Despite having faced menacing auras as much as anyone, I still needed to carefully choose my next move.

I gripped my sword handle.

“What business do you have in such a remote village?”

“It is the will of His Majesty, the Emperor!” bellowed General Sarbast Aegim.

A battalion of soldiers rattled their spears in response. Birds fled the forest, no longer dropping petals but taking flight in panic.

“We’ve heard of a witch here, misleading the good people of the continent! Even monsters fooled by her charms, how could we stand by and watch?”

“And so?”

“We shall purify with holy fire!”

I silently glanced at the blue dots on my ‘minimap’.

“It’s not just the will of the Emperor!”

There weren't just one or two blue dots. Hundreds. Thousands. The map was filled with them, and more were still converging towards this location.

I knew who they were.

“The Pope himself decreed, punish the heretic who dares call herself a saint!”

Paladins from the Temple, whom I saved on the 13th floor.

“The lord of the forest entrusts us, may all spirits bless our path!”

Elves from the Forest, saved on the 14th floor.

“The current monarch of mermaids grants us the soul orb in acknowledgment of our mission!”

Magicians from the Falls, saved on the 15th floor.

“For the honorable oath, warriors from the ancient volcano have come forth!”

Warriors from the Volcano, saved on the 16th floor.

“Merchants from the Free City Federation, the Field Cavalry, and soldiers from the small kingdoms and even smaller territories, all have joined us!”

Armed merchants from the 17th floor, nomads from the 18th, and soldiers from small nations and territories from the 19th floor.

“All worlds unite for our retribution!”

From the 11th to the 19th floor.

Places I trod, stood upon, and saved.

Heroes of those stages, ranging from dozens to hundreds, rallied under their respective banners.

"....."

I knew them all, yet they did not know me, just as Sarbast Aegim didn't.

"I ask again!"

Sarbast Aegim roared.

"Who are you to obstruct our mission!"

I looked at my mission window.

+

[The Hero of a Time-Frozen World]

Difficulty: Unknown

Objective: You have made up your mind. You will not tolerate even a single sacrifice.

It is called justice to not expect anything back from those you have saved. It is called devotion to not expect recognition from those you have saved. And they call those who are dedicated to justice a hero.

Hero!

The people of the Empire will not know your justice. They will not realize your devotion. But still, justice remains justice, and devotion remains devotion. Will you continue to choose to be a hero in this frozen world?

The Demon King has escaped after being injured. He hasn't gone far. If you wish, you can still pursue him.

Now only your choice remains.

+

Of course, my decision was already made.

“General Sarbast Aegim.”

Sarbast Aegim faltered.

I pointed at him with a taunting tone.

“You said you came under the Emperor’s command?”

“You... you dare? To me, a general under imperial command, you now.....”

“Hah, what a joke. Who knows the situation of the Empire better than you to talk about imperial commands?”

“H-how could you.....”

Well, I saw your trauma when I killed you to steal your skill.

I also knew about the intensifying power struggle among the princes.

Wasn't it the talk of the Empire's capital when I liberated the 12th floor?

Instead of saying all that, I just glared at Sarbast Aegim with a stern gaze. The general, who had been leading the allied forces, frantically scanned his fellow monarchs.

My earlier words touched a sensitive nerve about the imperial family, but his confusion didn't last long. The dragon knight captain and paladin leader frowned, but the rest acted as if they hadn't heard.

The world's most powerful nation's general cleared his throat and glared.

“.....How dare you say such a vile thing! Are you another minion of that witch over there?”

“Vile? Ha. You're talking about vile when you're plotting to dethrone the legitimate crown prince and raise the third prince to that position? You're the one spouting vile words!"

Sarbast Aegim was shocked again. This time, his expression shattered under the weight of his surprise.

I continued to provoke him with a calculated tone.

"You... That's no way to live. Do you even realize how much the Emperor has done for you? A nobody destined to mend nets at the docks, now an imperial guard and a general – all thanks to His Majesty. And you, blinded by power....."

I spoke calculatedly to incite his anger.

Finally losing his cool, the general exploded.

"This makes sense now. You're from the Amber Palace, aren't you? Trying to sway public opinion at a gathering of world unity! If you're a true imperial, you should know the only rightful heir is His Highness, the third prince....."

"Fool!"

I sharply cut off his fury.

And changed my tone, catching the flustered Sarbast Aegim off guard.

“Amber Palace? Ha! Do I look like a mere pawn of a deposed queen to you? Blind as a bat! Foolish and ignorant!”

“Then, who sent you.....”

“Who am I, you ask!”

I raised my sword and shouted boldly.

“See for yourself!”

Sarbast Aegim's eyes filled with horror.

“Yes!”

Indeed.

“Even with those knot-hole eyes, you can see this, Sarbast Aegim!”

I had raised [Leafanta Aegim's Holy Sword of Protection]!

+

[Leafanta Aegim's Holy Sword of Protection]

Rarity: Legendary

Description: 'He who seizes the holy sword, shall conquer the continent.' The legendary ancestral sword of Aegim. Rumored to be bestowed upon the founder of the Aegim Empire by the Goddess. 'He who conquered the continent, shall be seized by fate.'

The founder named his successor and then disappeared. Suicide? Betrayed? In a time when legend and history had not yet diverged, his whereabouts became unknown, and the holy sword vanished without a trace. Leaving only a prophecy as a guide.

'On the day destiny arrives, he who seizes the holy sword shall also arrive.'

The owner of the Holy Sword of Protection receives absolute support and trust from those of the Aegim Empire.

+

I declared loudly.

“The Emissary of the Great Emperor, Leafanta Aegim, stands before you!”

Sarbast Aegim trembled uncontrollably.

That trembling spread to the knights bearing the imperial crest and then to the soldiers. Until the entire imperial army was shaking, I stared them down like an eagle.

“Sarbast Aegim!”

“Yes, yes……”

“I am aware of the imperial turmoil, and the misdeeds of the reckless crown prince! That you sided with the third prince out of sheer loyalty to the imperial lineage, I know! My earlier rebuke was just to test your integrity! Are you upset about that!”

Sarbast Aegim's eyes now welled with emotion.

“Upset? How could I be... you recognize my loyalty... But how can I atone for my folly... Oh, Emissary of the Great Emperor.....”

“There’s nothing to be upset about! And if you have no qualms in calling me so! Why are you still on your horse looking down upon me!”

“My negligence.....!”

Sarbast Aegim hurriedly dismounted his horse. He stumbled. Scrambling to his feet, he knelt without even brushing off the petals and mud on his armor.

“Guardian of the rising sun! Protector of all that dwells between the sea and land! The Aegim Empire shall shine eternally!”

The empire's general cried out with emotion.

“Humble words in the presence of the Emperor's Emissary.....!”

The effect spread rapidly.

“I see him!” Imperial knights dismounted. “I see him!” Soldiers knelt in unison. “I see him!” Some prostrated in respect.

“The Emissary of the Great Emperor is here!!”

The world alliance gathered to vanquish the witch.

The mightiest of the eight forces had knelt before me.

-Wow.

The Sword Emperor marveled sincerely.

-Kim Zombie... I thought you were only good at rants and nonsense, but you have a knack for bullshitting too.

‘Just realizing that now?’

Like when I faced the six pillars of the tower.

No matter how mighty the opponent, no matter how many I face, my course of action is always one of two.

Fight them or persuade them.

And just as there are various ways to fight---

‘There’s more than one way to persuade.’

Alright.

It’s time to deceive the world I saved.

Chapter 48: How to Confront the World (2)

The Guardian Spirit a.k.a. the Sword Emperor, seems like the kind of guy you'd get if you mixed a psychopath and a know-it-all in equal parts. Thanks to this golden ratio, 99% of what he says to me is either insane or useless.

-When wielding a sword, what really matters is not just your skill.

In other words, that 1% contains the essence of both psychopath and know-it-all.

-Faith! Confidence! Faith in yourself is what's most important.

The Sword Emperor's face was stern.

-Bullshitting is the same!

A profound statement filled with life's experiences!

-To deceive others, you must first deceive yourself! Believe in your own bullshit. Have confidence! The most plausible lies won't be believed if said without confidence. But even the most outlandish lies can be convincing if delivered with confidence.

‘Really?’

-I've done it enough to know!

Perhaps the ratio of psychopath to know-it-all was actually 6:4.

-Of course, if it's completely 100% false, neither the other party nor you will believe it. So mix truth into your lies! Blend 10% truth with 90% lies!

‘Mix them?’

-Yes. The charm of a lie lies in that. If you believe 10% of the truth, the remaining 90% of the lies will naturally flow out!

Indeed.

-Remember this, Zombie. Confidence is the key to bullshitting!

"Hmm."

I looked ahead.

Armies from across the continent, gathered to capture Witch Ester... Among them, the vanguard of the Aegim Empire's army, their soldiers, and their general, all looking at me.

I had to deceive them to avoid danger on my side.

"The Emissary of the Emperor..."

"But that sword is definitely..."

"Why is the Emissary here?"

Murmurs.

Some of the soldiers looked at me suspiciously. The Aegim Empire's soldiers were dutifully bowing their heads, but that was it. The soldiers from other affiliations were clearly doubtful. Perhaps the influence of the holy sword only extends to the empire's own troops.

"But, Emissary of the Emperor...?"

The leader of the Aegim Empire's army cautiously observed my expression.

"May this ignorant soldier ask one thing?"

"What is it?"

"The reason we came today, as mentioned, is to subdue the witch. But how did the Emissary of the Emperor come to be here?"

I closed my eyes for a moment,

‘Confidence.’

and then, opening them wide, shouted.

“Soldiers! I have already subdued the witch!”

My voice, filled with aura, echoed through the acacia forest path.

General Sarbast Aegim flinched.

“Yes... yes? You've already subdued her? What do you mean by that...”

“Look this way!”

I stepped aside, revealing the figure of Preta, who was hiding behind me. Some recognized her appearance as Ester and shouted.

“That’s Ester!”

“The witch from the west!”

“I’ve seen her before! That woman is definitely her!”

“Burn the witch!”

Preta flinched, making a startled noise.

But I was undeterred and commanded.

“Preta.”

“Yes...?”

“Come forward and kneel before them.”

" "

A firm command.

Preta, now reduced to my Ghoul, had no power to defy my order. She staggerly walked forward and knelt down.

But that wasn't the end.

“Bow your head.”

Preta bowed her head.

“Place your hands on the ground.”

""

With trembling hands, Preta touched the ground. Was it rage or humiliation? She bit her tongue so hard her cheeks were deeply indented. Soon, blood from her lips dripped down her chin.

“Place your forehead on the ground.”

“Uh... ”

Preta complied with my command.

The soldiers watched in stunned silence as the former Demon King pressed her forehead to the ground. Her breathing mixed with more rage and humiliation. Yet, to protect her small paradise, she obeyed my commands.

A scene of noble surrender.

Then, I authoritatively commanded.

“Now, perform a forward roll while in that position.”

Silence.

A moment of stillness hung over the acacia path.

".....What?"

Preta turned her head to look up at me.

A look of disbelief, as if she had misheard.

I frowned.

“Didn’t you hear?”

“Um, um...?”

“Perform a forward roll immediately!”

Startled, Preta obeyed the command hesitantly. In other words, she placed her hands on the ground and did a forward roll.

Roll!

Her small body rolled across the ground, her long hair scattering acacia petals. After completing the roll, Preta still looked bewildered.

“Hmm.”

I nodded.

“Now stand on your head.”

"....."

Preta looked at me again.

A look of doubt about the sanity of her new master.

Naturally, I didn't flinch.

“Why aren't you standing on your head yet!”

"Gasp."

Trembling, Preta placed her hands on the ground and slowly tried to stand on her head. She fell with a thud, unable to maintain balance. Sobbing, she flailed on the ground like swimming on dry land.

Regardless, I continued my stern orders.

“Perform twenty jumping jacks!”

“Do ten sit-ups. Begin!”

“After that, immediately ten push-ups!”

“Now twenty sit-ups!”

“Maintain a plank position for 20 seconds!”

A while later.

“I can’t anymore, my lord... My body won’t move...”

The former Demon King lay sprawled, utterly drained.

Tears glistened in her eyes.

"Hmm."

I turned to Sarbast Aegim.

"Do you understand now?"

Sarbast Aegim stood with his mouth agape. Not just the general, but his soldiers wore similar expressions. They watched Preta, crying like a helpless child, in stunned silence.

"Emissary, what is the meaning of this...?"

"As I said."

I intensified my gaze.

"The witch has already been subdued by me. She can no longer defy my commands!"

Naturally, I added.

“She can no longer harm the people of the continent. Soldiers. You can rest assured about the witch!”

The soldiers were restless.

As the lower ranks wavered, their leaders were equally perplexed.

“Hmm. If the Emissary says so...”

“Wait a minute!”

While Sarbast Aegim seemed willing to believe me under the authority of the holy sword, other commanders, especially the Paladin Commander, were clearly skeptical.

“What’s all this about!? We came to vanquish the witch.”

“Not so. Didn’t the Emissary of the Emperor say the witch has already been vanquished...”

“How can we believe that!”

“On the contrary, how can you not believe it? The Emissary of the Emperor commanded and... well, whatever it is, you also saw the witch strictly following those... commands, didn't you!?”

Sarbast Aegim angrily retorted. The power of the holy sword was indeed formidable.

The Paladin Commander, nearly jumping out of his skin, shouted.

“That's what I'm saying... how can we believe that... no, no, first of all! The only proof this young man is the Emissary of the Eastern Emperor is that one sword! Because of that sword, since a while ago...”

“That one sword?”

Sarbast Aegim raised his voice.

“A mere sword? My goodness. Are you questioning the authority of the Great Emperor who founded our empire! That holy sword is the very proof of our goddess' favor. How dare you!”

The Paladin Commander flinched.

“No, General. Calm down... What I meant to say was,”

“What could you possibly mean!”

“Po, Pope His Holiness gave me a strict command. He ordered me to subdue the wicked witch... but now because of such words,”

The imperial general roared.

“Such words! You’re doubting the words of the Emissary of the Emperor over the Pope’s command!”

Wow.

“What, what...”

The Paladin struggled for words.

It took precisely two seconds for astonishment to evolve into fury.

“How dare you question the authority of the Temple!?”

“You were the first to doubt the authority of the Holy Sword!”

“Oh, fine! Very well! It seems the 3rd Prince's faction of the Empire doesn't need the Pope's endorsement!”

“Bah, such an endorsement. The Emissary of the Emperor has already appeared and subdued the witch. With the goddess's favor watching over the Empire and its lineage, why should that matter!”

“That is indeed the will of the 3rd Prince's faction!”

The Empire's general and the Temple's paladin were fiercely arguing.

I smiled inwardly.

‘Perfect.’

There's something to be mindful of when various groups come together.

Once conflict is exposed, even just once, it rapidly spirals toward collapse.

‘No need to look far.’

When we Hunters ascended to the 12th floor, there were precisely eight factions.

Me, the Sword Saint, the leaders of the five great guilds, and then the smaller factions from 8th to 10th in contribution.

Although united under the external goal of ‘conquering the tower,’ we were never a cohesive unit.

There was distrust and underlying tensions.

So, when the variable of the [Witch's Reward] arose, it led to a pathetic collapse.

"Warriors, the ones who chose to climb the tower."

I recalled the Goddess's hologram's words when the 11th floor opened.

"You will face a test from the 11th to the 20th floor. A test of faith."

I smirked to myself.

That so-called test of faith.

‘Not just the Hunters, but the tower's residents should experience it too, right?’

It would only be fair.

As the Empire and the Temple began their real [Test of Faith], other factions started to join in.

“Sigh, everyone... now is not the time.”

The elf ranger captain from the Fairy Forest sighed.

“Shouldn’t we verify more thoroughly whether that young man truly controls the witch? Even if you humans are foolish, please choose the right time and place.”

It was unclear whether he was trying to mediate or exacerbate the situation.

Naturally, he was no help at all.

“To add one thing, it seems the Temple is caught in its own contradictions, isn't it? The Holy Sword of the Aegim Emperor, revered by the Temple, was bestowed by the Goddess of Protection. Doubting the Sword's authority is tantamount to doubting the Goddess's. This is why short-lived humans are so foolish...”

“What!? So, the elves have been looking down on us!?”

“That’s why these long-eared fellows are untrustworthy!”

If anything, it only caused more disruption.

“Why are the Empire and the Temple behaving like this! We came here to honor our noble oath!”

The dragon cavalry leader from the volcano erupted in anger.

“Settle it in a duel like warriors! What’s the use of carrying weapons otherwise!”

They were simple-minded.

Reminds me of Viper, the leader of Chun-Moon or the Celestial Martial Guild.

“The Free Cities Federation agrees with both the Empire's Sword and the Temple's Hammer. There must be someone even more correct. We're open to suggestions.”

“Typical. That’s why these farming weaklings... So, when do we get to plunder that village? You said we could plunder it, right? We came all this way and...”

“Everyone, everyone... the witch's den is right before us...”

A mediator trying to stir trouble from the Armed Merchant Company, a nomadic chieftain complaining while calming the horses.

The lords of the smaller nations, closest to Preta's paradise and therefore most desperate to conquer it, were the only ones fretting.

A situation on the brink of chaos.

-Keheh!

Meanwhile, the Sword Emperor and I were more relaxed than ever.

The Sword Emperor crossed his arms and shook his head.

-Now I understand why Preta caused fights among the Hunters. There's a certain pleasure in inciting discord!

‘I agree.’

It was honestly fun.

But of course, not everyone in their ranks was just a troll.

“Sigh, everyone. Please, step aside!”

Naturally, there was also a mediator, someone trying to sort out the chaos. Like the ‘Vigilante Corps Leader.’

The lizardman wizard from the Mermaid Falls stepped forward.

“To me, the issue at hand is simple. That,”

The lizardman pointed at me.

“Whether this young man is truly the Emissary of the Emperor. Whether that woman is truly the witch. Whether the Emissary truly subdued the witch and took her under his control. Just confirming these will resolve everything.”

The paladin, tired of arguing with the general, frowned.

“So how do you propose to confirm this?”

“Don’t worry. I have a way.”

The lizardman reached into her pouch.

In her grasp was a blue orb, seemingly condensed from the depths of the sea.

“This is the Soul Orb bestowed by the Mermaid Queen.”

The lizardman was very serious, as if she was about to reveal a precious treasure, a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity for us.

“By dropping a blood droplet on it, we can determine if the blood's owner has a [Good Soul] or an [Evil Soul]. If it’s a good soul, the orb will emit a bright white light; if evil, it will turn black.”

Hmm.

‘So, it's similar to the Vigilante Corps Leader's [Lie Detection] or the Sword Saint's [Eyes of a Detective]?’

-Yeah. Seems like the Demifolk do well in making these gizmos.

The Sword Emperor and I were at ease. It sounded grand with the Mermaid King's Orb, but it was nothing new to us.

Oblivious to our thoughts, the lizardman was confident.

“Come! If you truly are the Emissary of the Emperor and that woman the witch, accept this test of the orb!”

The lizardman raised the orb.

“Your sins and deeds will be laid bare by the orb!”

“Very well.”

I nodded readily.

“Go ahead and test.”

“Don’t regret it. As I said, the orb will expose your soul for what it is.”

“Blathering on and on. Get on with it.”

The lizardman's snake-like eyes narrowed.

“Let's hope your confidence is not mere bravado. First, let's verify the soul of that woman.”

She approached us confidently, grabbed Preta's wrist, and sharply scratched her palm with her nail.

Blood oozed from the palm.

"Gasp."

Preta shuddered. Dark red blood droplets fell, drip, drip, into the Mermaid King's orb.

Whoosh!

The orb instantly turned a deep black.

“Gasp!”

“Good heavens.”

The commanders watching the soul test were horrified. The color that stained the orb wasn't ordinary black. It was like a bottomless abyss, a shadowy blackness that writhed like a serpent.

“Such an evil soul...!”

Even the lizardman conducting the test swallowed hard.

“How many sins and killings must she have committed... Such a being should not exist. A truly cursed entity... undoubtedly a witch!”

Thud.

The wizard dropped Preta's wrist like discarding dirty water. In her snaky eyes, immense contempt and equal fear towards Preta were visible.

“No. She's more than a witch. She's undoubtedly a Demon King!”

Preta shrank further.

The mood shifted. Was it because the lizardman announced Preta's identity? The soldiers' murmurs ceased. The commanders stopped arguing and glared at Preta. As they did, Preta withdrew further, timidly stepping behind me.

“Now, it's your turn.”

The crowd's attention naturally shifted to me.

The lizardman raised her sharp nail.

“Self-proclaimed Emissary of the Emperor. Are you ready?”

“I am always ready.”

“No amount of pretense will help you now... Come, give me your hand.”

I willingly extended my left hand. Nick! The lizardman's nail passed, and the flesh parted like gills.

Red blood flowed from the split flesh. My blood droplet fell quietly into the darkened orb, stained by Preta's blood.

And then.

“Ah...?”

There was light.

“What, what...?”

The dark aura in the orb vanished as if washed away. Not just that. A brilliant white light accumulated and intensified, eventually exploding outward.

Flash!

The Acacia forest path was instantly illuminated in white. Small screams erupted here and there. Soldiers startled, closed their eyes, and commanders covered their faces with their palms.

The lizardman wizard holding the orb was no exception.

"How, how..."

She fluttered her lips, stunned.

"What is this soul...?"

"This is unbelievable!"

The Paladin Commander shouted.

"Mermaid King's droplet! Why is such light bursting from the orb!?"

“The soul is...”

The wizard, not even looking back at the Paladin, muttered.

“How could it be so pure... What lives must he have saved to be so brilliantly white, this is... this is truly...”

“Ah,” the lizardman wizard said.

“This man... is the Light!”

That's right.

I was the light.

Chapter 49: How to Confront the World (3)

“Light...?”

The Temple's paladin stuttered.

The brilliant white light from the orb had subsided a bit.

Now it was bearable to look without closing the eyes.

“How can a person be light? What does that even mean?”

“I told you... This person is just... just light...”

The lizardman wizard choked up.

I wasn't great at reading lizardmen's expressions, but now it was clear. The wizard was moved. Tears, like dew at dawn, glistened in her torn snake eyes.

“Can’t you recognize this sparkling soul...?”

“I, I don’t understand.”

“Why don’t you? Is it a problem with your eyes? Or your head...?”

The paladin wore a sullen expression. Suddenly, his intellectual capacity was under scrutiny.

“No. I mean, I don’t understand what you mean by light.”

“Aah.”

The lizardman wizard sobbed.

Then, she spun around to face the paladin.

“This is why those fools at the Temple...!”

“Wh-what?”

“This person, you see? He is the light! Real, complete light! Why can’t you see that? Are you blind? Brainless? It’s not just any light, but bright white light!”

“But, isn’t light usually white?”

“Aah, this is why! It’s impossible to talk with vulgar humans!”

The lizardman magician, seemingly irritated, thumped her chest. Bang, bang. A little more frustration, and she looked ready to strike not her chest, but the paladin’s head. Sensing this, the paladin quickly backed down.

“This soul... to tell such a lie to us!”

The lizardman wizard's voice soared.

“Even if it were a lie, it would be for our sake! Foolish humans, stay quiet and obey this person’s words. He is surely the Emissary of the Emperor... No, the Apostle of the Goddess!”

The lizardman wizard looked at me, seeking agreement with her words.

Not just her, but the entire army gathered on the Acacia forest path was holding their breath, watching me.

"Hmm."

I confidently crossed my arms.

“That’s right.”

Maintaining a solemn expression.

“I am indeed the Apostle of the Goddess.”

“Indeed!”

The soldiers buzzed. Following the Empire's general, now even the wizard of Mermaid Falls had vouched for my identity. Three witnesses make a tiger. If three people say there's a tiger, it becomes real.

“He's the light.”

“What's light?”

“Anyway, he was shining. His sword was all flashy...”

“That's the sword used by the Founder of Aegim or something.”

“Then he must be from a noble family.”

Even those soldiers who were skeptical upon seeing the Holy Sword now looked at me with ‘maybe?’ in their eyes.

Of course, one more witness was needed to complete the trio.

“No! I still don’t understand!”

The paladin stepped forward.

“Let’s say you are the Emissary of the Emperor and the light! But why would you... No, why would such a person come here to obstruct our path! Have you all forgotten? We have a mission!”

The paladin pointed assertively over my shoulder.

“We must burn that place!”

Ester’s homeland.

The place Preta called paradise was there.

“Not just the witch, the Pope was worried about her followers too! Heretics following her cannot escape divine punishment! If you truly are... the Apostle of the Goddess, then lead the charge in executing this divine punishment!”

"....."

Someone clutched the back of my robe. It was Preta. Without looking back, I could feel her fear.

‘It’s alright.’

I remained calmly crossed-armed.

‘The best lie is made of 90% truth and 10% falsehood!’

Recalling the advice given by the Sword Emperor, I slowly opened my mouth.

“Temple’s paladin, be careful with your words. It is not for you to decide how divine punishment should be executed. What punishment should be meted out to those vile groups, that is entirely my decision.”

“What is...?”

“All evil has been gathered by me, and the divine punishment has already been executed.”

I spoke softly.

“Executing divine punishment on earth is my duty.”

“What, a duty...?”

“Watch.”

I raised my right hand.

Wriggle.

My shadow instantly spread across the Acacia forest path.

-Growl!

Skeletons began to emerge from the shadow.

The soldiers screamed. The paladin's face turned ashen, and the other commanders were shocked, drawing their weapons. While they reacted, the skeletons multiplied from dozens to hundreds, then thousands.

Soon, the continental army was completely surrounded.

Ghoul Reincarnation.

Thousands of skeletons were resurrected.

-Growl!

-Gah! Wah!

The monsters howled savagely, awaiting my command.

It was obvious to those who knew I was still in Ghoul Reincarnation mode, but to the unaware continentals, it seemed different.

“Demons!”

The soldiers panicked at the sudden emergence of thousands of monsters, as if escaping from hell through the ground.

A literal depiction of hell.

“God...”

The paladin trembled.

“What are these horrifying things?”

“My duty.”

I placed my hand on Preta's head.

She flinched but said nothing.

“See. How can only the witch be the evil in this vast world? Each of these is an evil person I've gathered, demons comparable to the witch.”

“All these monsters...?”

“That’s right.”

I narrowed my eyes, gazing into the far horizon.

Like a hero trapped in a tragic fate.

“The Goddess commanded me. To punish the evils overflowing on earth on her behalf! To gather them! And so, she bestowed me this power.”

My voice naturally became solemn.

“To punish all evil in the world is my mission. To gather these demons in hell is my duty. You are witnessing my hell.”

“My goodness...”

The lizardman wizard sighed.

“All these are on the same level as the witch...?”

I nodded.

“That’s right.”

“In our ignorance... the Apostle alone, all by himself, has been vanquishing evil in this world...?”

“That’s right.”

“My god. No one recognized you... How could you, a mere human, create such a hell alone... Apostle of the Goddess, are you alright...?”

"Hmm."

I crossed my arms and nodded.

“This is my duty!”

Sternly, solemnly, and seriously.

“There is no need for you to punish the witch or her minions. I have already gathered all the evildoers. They will eternally groan and suffer under my shadow. I am their hell!”

“Aah... The Light...”

The lizardman wizard collapsed sobbing.

“How could you shine so brightly, even I, foolish as I am, can see now! In our ignorance, the Apostle was saving our continent all along!”

I nodded again.

“Indeed it is so!”

The best lie consists of 90% truth and 10% falsehood.

Though the process was dotted with lies, the conclusion was correct.

After all, as long as the conclusion is correct, does the process matter?

-This guy...

The Sword Emperor looked at me proudly.

-I have no more for me to teach you! Go forth!

‘Ah, but all this is thanks to your advice, Master. How could your unworthy disciple go on alone?’

"No, it's not. Zombie, your moral compass has far surpassed mine..."

The Sword Emperor lamented.

-This teacher, so pure like a child, simply cannot handle a scoundrel like you...

‘You’re too modest. I still have much to learn from your wicked ways. Please, take back your words.’

-Did you ever hear of the saying 'the student surpasses the teacher'?

‘And have you heard ‘there’s no disciple better than the master’?’

The disciple and the teacher mutually praised each other's character.

In today's world, where human relationships have grown cold, there was indeed a warm and lovely master-disciple relationship here.

"Anyway."

I dismissed Ghoul Reincarnation.

Swoosh.

The skeletons, numbering in the thousands, quickly disappeared. The continental folks watched in stunned silence as the monsters sank into the shadow, like a sinking ship.

"Do not worry about the witch or her minions. As long as I am here, they will forever suffer in my hell. This is the will of the Goddess, and this is her divine punishment."

"....."

"Would you dare defy the solemn will of the Goddess?"

The paladin shuddered.

"Ah, but... your holiness, Apostle. Are these cruel demons truly safe? That is, my humble point is... if these demons escape into the world, the devastation would be unimaginable..."

"Indeed."

I nodded thoughtfully.

"You wish to verify if I'm truly keeping these demons securely?"

"I am, indeed, most apologetic for this inquiry..."

"Very well."

Snap!

I snapped my fingers.

A skeleton, not yet dismissed, approached. It stood between the paladin and me.

"What... what is this skeleton doing here, Apostle?"

"I shall clarify your doubts."

I patted the skeleton's shoulder.

"Return to your former self, Ghoul."

Wriggle!

Black muck rose from the skeleton's shadow. It climbed the white bones, forming a human shape. Muscles, flesh, and then clothing.

In a blink, a handsome man stood where the skeleton had been.

"Ah, what the fuck!?"

Although his mouth was foul.

"What the hell... Yo, you son of a bitch! What grudge do you have against me to do this to me? What did I, damn! What did I do to deserve this!"

Burning rage in his eyes.

Yes.

I had restored the memories of Flame Emperor 'Yoo Soo-Ha.'

"You crazy bastard! Damn it! I will kill you! No matter what,

I will utterly crush you!"

"As you can see."

I indicated Yoo Soo-Ha and looked at the commanders. Despite his struggles, Yoo Soo-Ha couldn't defy me, his 'master.'

"This man is also an evildoer, comparable to the witch."

I wore a forlorn expression.

"Actually, worse than the witch. The witch was born a monster, but this man, born human, committed horrifying evils. Burning anything that stood in his way..."

"I'll kill you, you hobo piece of shit! I'm going to kill you!"

No need for further explanation.

"---You, -----! Hey! I'll tear you apart, -----!!"

The Acacia forest path was filled with curses. Ghoul 'Yoo Soo-Ha' spat every curse known to this world.

With every curse, the commanders grew paler. Within a minute, Yoo Soo-Ha had described 15 different methods to kill me. Impressive.

"No, fuck, and who the hell are you guys! Hey, lizard! Big ears! What are you staring at! You want to die by my hands that badly-----."

After another minute, the curses shifted not only to me but also to everyone present, their parents, and families. About 10 more methods to murder people were added.

"This, this atrociousness...! Such darkness...!"

The lizardman wizard was horrified.

"We don't even need the Soul Orb. That man, he truly possesses a demon's soul!"

"Definitely..."

The elf ranger captain groaned.

"I've lived a long time and seen many foolish humans, but such an ugly and evil one is rare..."

Oh, rejoice, Yoo Soo-Ha.

Finally, your greatness is acknowledged in another world.

-Zombie. But isn't this desecration of the dead?

‘Exactly.’

-Isn't that problematic?

‘Yoo Soo-Ha deserves this. And Sword Emperor, you called me the king of zombies. If a zombie king uses a zombie-like creature, what's so strange about that?’

-Hmm.

The Sword Emperor deeply nodded.

-You're right. I can't argue with that logic...

‘Right?’

-Indeed, your moral compass is far beyond mine, Zombie.

That was a minority opinion.

Snap!

I snapped my fingers again.

"Dance."

"What the, shit, what----."

Upon my command,

Yoo Soo-Ha began tap dancing. His heels cheerfully wandered the flower-strewn path. Tap, tap! His moves were surprisingly good, possibly honed in clubs in his heyday.

"No, what is this, damn---."

"Dance again."

Snap!

Yoo Soo-Ha's dance changed from tap to breakdancing. Fortunately or unfortunately, Yoo Soo-Ha had a talent for dancing. He seamlessly transitioned from breakdancing to the Cossack dance.

"I'll kill you!"

Yoo Soo-Ha screamed while dancing the Cossack dance.

"You, I'll kill you! You bastard! I swear I'll—!"

But as everyone knows, anything said while doing the Cossack dance, no matter how foul or terrible, doesn't seem serious.

Even if Hitler returned to give a speech, if he did the Cossack dance, no one would take him seriously.

That's the power of the Cossack dance.

"Shit, shit... Fuck, damn..."

Realizing the futility of his words, Yoo Soo-Ha just cursed repeatedly while diligently dancing. It was an entertaining backdrop of music and visuals.

"Hmm."

I turned to the paladin.

"Are you still worried?"

The paladin gaped in shock.

"Demons can never defy my command. Rest assured."

Ultimately.

The paladin slowly knelt.

"Apostle of the Goddess... may I inquire your name...?"

A trembling voice.

The continental forces all looked at me.

I boldly accepted their gazes and crossed my arms again.

"My name is Gong-Ja."

The paladin bowed deeply.

"I will follow your words, Lord Gong-Ja...!"

The last remaining commander, who shouted to burn the village, gave up.

Then.

[Congratulations.]

A welcome voice.

[Normal Stage Clear.]

[Hidden Quest, 'Hero of the Time-Frozen World,' cleared!]

And an unwelcome voice.

-You crazy bastard!

The voice's owner was rolling on the ground, clutching his stomach.

-Crazy! You're the first to clear a quest like this! Really, where did this nutcase come from? I admit it, Kim Gong-Ja!

‘What are you admitting?’

-You are... the light of all crazies!

That was a minority opinion.

Volume 3 – Chapters 50-74

Chapter 50: Paradise After the Ending (1)

"Crazy bastard!"

The continental forces retreated a bit.

Meanwhile, the Sword Emperor kept laughing, holding his belly.

"From now on, I shall call you Kim Crazy!"

‘Ah, please stop it...’

I sighed inwardly.

'Do you know how many nicknames you've given me? Kim Zombie, Zombie King, Kim Crazy. At this rate, I could fill an entire A4 paper with just nicknames.'

"Ah, that sounds great. Let's go! A crazy person with dozens of nicknames, let's gooooo!!"

The Sword Emperor's laughter filled the sky.

Thankfully, not everyone in this world was just there to tease me.

[You have cleared the Boss Stage.]

The voice of the Tower.

It announced that I had fully conquered the 20th stage, echoing in my mind like when I cleared the 10th stage, the so-called 'Hell Mansion.'

[The conqueror is the King of Death.]

[Alone.]

I slowly looked up.

Between the branches and leaves of the Acacia, the blue sky stretched out.

[Tabulating the clear reward.]

[Tabulation complete.]

[The reward will be given upon entering the 21st floor, 24 hours from now.]

Yeah.

I smirked.

‘What does it matter if I’m called crazy or not? Anyway, I did my job.’

-Oh, look at that confidence?

‘I cleared up to the 20th floor my way.’

I had vowed not to leave anyone to die.

What a preposterous ambition it was, in hindsight.

‘Not a single hunter died while I conquered the 20th floor.’

The Demon King of Autumn Rain. By dealing with the fallen Constellation, I prevented the tragedy of hunters killing each other out of suspicion.

I had preemptively blocked the root of the tragedy.

‘And not a single person of the empire died either.’

I fought for the otherworld while time stood still.

‘And...’

I raised my right hand and rested it on someone's head.

‘I’ve also taken care of this one.’

Preta.

The former Demon King, now confined to my shadow, sat on the ground, blankly staring at the continental forces.

The soldiers who would have burnt her small hometown in the original history.

But today, history did not repeat. The moment the paladin knelt, the continental forces withdrew their hostility. Believing my words as the Apostle of the Goddess, they abandoned their mission.

Paradise was preserved.

‘This is just my thought, but.’

I gently stroked Preta's head.

‘This 20th floor... even if I had just stood by, it would have cleared on its own. There was no real need for me to step in.’

"Huh? Why?"

‘Because burning down the village would also have been one of the [endings].’

An ending.

I realized while conquering stages that the Tower doesn't differentiate between happy and bad endings. Any properly concluded ending is accepted, regardless of its nature.

‘Otherwise, Yoo Soo-Ha wouldn't have cleared up to the 40th floor.’

Whether it's like the Flame Emperor, smashing the dolls in the Hellfire Mansion.

Or like me, just playing with the kids for a while.

Either way, it's recognized as a valid [conclusion].

‘So, this isn't a world set by the Tower.’

I turned to look at the village.

‘It's not an ending chosen out of helplessness.’

A place where wheat ripens under the sky.

A stubborn yet benign old man who overlooks kids playing mischievously, sitting in front of an orchard, smoking a cigarette.

A refuge for incurable patients.

‘It's the ending I chose.’

Today.

Rain will not fall from the sky.

And fire will not engulf the ground.

"Indeed..."

But why?

As I indulged in these proud sentiments, the Sword Emperor looked at me with a somewhat pitiful expression, as if looking at a sorrowful child. 'What's wrong?'

-It's just... is this part of the ending you chose?

The Sword Emperor subtly pointed somewhere.

There was Yoo Soo-Ha.

"Fuck! Shit, bastard! Why won't this stop!? Huh!? Stop it right now--- Fuck! Why isn't it stopping!?"

More specifically, Yoo Soo-Ha was still doing the Cossack dance.

In a picturesque scene with blue skies and petals on the ground, a handsome man was alone, cursing beautifully.

It would've hit millions of views if uploaded as a video on the internet.

‘Huh? What’s wrong with that?’

I tilted my head.

‘Isn’t it incredibly beautiful?’

-You truly are Kim Crazy...

The Sword Emperor murmured.

Then.

[Today.]

[The 20th floor has been cleared.]

A voice echoed between heaven and earth.

This time it wasn't just for me to hear.

[Announcing once again to everyone.]

[Today, the 20th floor has been cleared.]

An official announcement.

Like when I cleared the tenth stage, the same voice was likely spreading throughout the Tower.

"Ah."

I smacked my lips.

‘What a pity.’

-What is?

‘We don’t have internet here.’

My smartphone was soundly asleep in my backpack. It had been five days in the real world, but hundreds of days in the time I spent here, and I hadn't touched my phone.

The internet only works in the Tower from the 1st to the 10th floor.

‘It must be chaos on the internet now...’

-Eh? I thought you didn't care about people's reactions anymore?

‘When did I say that?’

-Didn't you? You said you'd rather get recognition from people like the Witch and Marcus than from ordinary people?

'Ah.'

I shrugged.

'More is better, right? To receive recognition from the Witch and the Sword Saint, and also from ordinary people. To look up at the sky without shame.'

-Wow. Are you a pig? So much greed.

'Humans live by their desires.'

Luckily, I could compensate for my regret of not being able to see the internet.

[The 21st floor will open in 24 hours.]

[24:00:00]

Boom!

Fireworks adorned the sky, just like last time. The first firework burst into a clock of light. Just at that moment, as if waiting for this precise instant, two hunters were teleported here.

"King of Death!"

It was the Witch and the Sword Saint.

The Witch used a teleport skill to fly over instantly. Whoosh! She bent her elbow and hugged my head. Then she beamed her signature bright smile.

"You're insane! You're absolutely crazy!"

"Ow. Ouch! Wait a minute, Black Dragon Witch. That hurts unexpectedly..."

"Brat! A whippersnapper not even thirty years old!"

I tried to resist, but it was futile. I couldn't escape her headlock. Oh my. How many elixirs had she consumed to be this strong?

"Really, clearing the 20th floor in just five days! Aren't you crazy!? You're insane!"

"Please, calm down, Black Dragon Witch..."

"You have no idea the chaos that's erupted in the Tower right now! Look!"

The Witch showed me something.

It was a smartphone.

An old model, at least five years old, with a battery barely hanging on. The phone screen, which should have no internet access here, displayed numerous online articles.

"What's this...?"

"I stopped by the 1st floor to capture these!"

Her voice was genuinely excited.

"There were too many articles to capture them all! Sorry! But you have to understand, King of Death. It's not just the Tower in chaos, but the outside world too. I captured only the top-clicked articles, but look how many there are!"

She swiped through the smartphone screen.

There were headlines.

-[Breaking] Lightning-Fast Conquest! 14th Floor Cleared!

-King of Death decided as a sacred alias.

-Official announcement by the Black Dragon. The current conquest team is just made of three members.

-Who is the main character? The Sword Saint? The Witch? Or the King of Death?

-[Special Feature] Focused coverage on the King of Death.

•

•

•

There were many.

Too many headlines to read them all.

"The titles say this, but..."

The Witch smiled.

"They're all about you!"

"Uh...."

"Starting from where you're from, your life story. How you entered the Tower and quickly climbed to the top rankings. Really, that's all they talk about-"

"Wait a minute."

I was bewildered.

Not by the newspaper articles. This reaction was to be expected. In the past five days, the internet must have been ablaze hundreds or thousands of times.

I'd experienced this before.

What bewildered me was something else.

"You captured all these yourself?"

"Yes!"

She nodded, her face close to mine due to the headlock.

"Of course!"

"To show me?"

"You think there would be any other reason?"

"Um. So...."

I narrowed my eyes.

"You went all the way down to the 1st floor to show me these articles, searched for them one by one, and captured each one... Is that what you're saying?"

"That's the gist of it!"

I imagined it.

Hunter ranking 2nd place. Leader of the largest guild in the Tower.

Such a high-ranking person hurried to the 1st floor, diligently fiddling with a smartphone, clicking and capturing, then proudly showing off the captured screens upon returning.

"....."

Imagining it, the scenes seemed quite cute. But still, I didn't understand.

"Why would someone like the Black Dragon Witch go through such trouble...?"

"What are you even talking about?"

The Witch laughed brightly.

"Of course, I wanted to do something for you!"

"....."

"Ahh, and don't read the article comments later. Accusations of fabrication and fraud. The envious ones have unleashed terror there."

The Witch sighed softly.

"Why do they always do that? Zero casualties is an incredible feat! King of Death. Don't bother with those nobodies. From now on, the Black Dragon will take care of the media for you."

What? Is she an angel?

-Kim Zombie. You're so easy to please with a bit of kindness.... Even though you've led such a pitiful life, be more resilient to kindness. Why are you so weak to it when you're so strong against malice?

An angel, or perhaps even a goddess?

-You're insane....

The Sword Emperor's face contorted.

-You're finally losing it, aren't you?

"Then maybe you should praise me more often. Do you know how starved I am for compliments? How precious a little attention is in my dreary life? You wouldn't understand."

-That's... not pleasant.... I'd rather achieve nirvana than this.

The Sword Emperor feigned vomiting.

Such a psychopath.

-Hey! What nonsense! I had friends, you know!?

"Excluding the Sword Saint?"

-.....

The Sword Emperor looked away. A quiet victory for me.

The reason for this victory remained unknown.

"And look at this!"

Finally, the Witch released the headlock.

What she wanted to show me this time wasn't a smartphone screen. The Black Dragon Witch opened a small backpack and pulled out a thick stack of newspapers.

"Here!"

She unfolded the newspaper widely.

"Yesterday's front page!"

I couldn't immediately make out the article's content.

However, the list printed in big letters caught my eye first.

The list had the title [Hunter Rankings Updated!] on top.

+

1st place. Sword Saint

2nd place. Black Witch

3rd place. King of Death

4th place. Countess

5th place. Heretic Inquisitor

6th place. Viper

7th place. Babel's Linguist

8th place. Wide-Area Communicator

9th place. Paladin

+

"....."

I was speechless for a moment.

While I was trapped in the prison of time, fighting the Demon King alone.

Below the 12th floor, something had happened in the world.

"It's the first time something like this has happened since the Tower opened!"

The Witch laughed.

"Jumping straight up to here from outside the rankings!"

3rd place.

The hunters' aliases, just like the rankings, are determined by the Tower.

These rankings are displayed on the stele in the 1st floor square.

"You might not feel it yet... but go down to Babylon today. You'll immediately realize the kind of person you've become."

Thump!

The Witch rolled up the newspaper and tapped my shoulder.

"Congratulations, King of Death!"

That's right.

"You now represent all hunters!"

In just five days, the world had changed.

Chapter 51:

Paradise After the Ending (2)

"Now you really need to think more about your future!" the Witch said.

She continued to hit my forearm with the rolled-up newspaper bundle. Thump! Thump! Her excitement was palpable.

"My future?"

"Yes. Right now, you're a member of all five major guilds. But you're effectively independent. Considering how well things have gone, it might be good for you to establish your own guild."

The Witch laughed pleasantly.

"A hunter ranked third should at least hold a title like 'Guild Master.' Even if you're a member of all five major guilds, just being an ordinary guild member doesn't really fit the bill."

It was hard to grasp the reality.

"Guild Master?"

Me, leading a guild? It was unimaginable. Did I even need to control hunters when I had an army of skeletons?

"Well."

Noticing my reluctance, the Witch shrugged. In the background, the Sword Saint watched silently.

"Perhaps you're more suited for solo play, like the old man here. There are surprisingly many who dream of smashing everything alone. If you're not interested, I won't press the issue."

"Oh. Are you talking behind my back now?" the Sword Saint interjected.

"Ignoring that," the Witch continued, turning her head.

"What are those?"

Across the Acacia forest path, in the small plain, the continental soldiers were constructing something. A camp. They had given up on attacking Preta's paradise, opting to rest here today before retreating.

"Ah."

I rubbed my chin.

"Those soldiers are from all over the continent."

"From all over the continent?"

"As I was saying..."

I explained, leaving out the story about Preta. I only told them how I deceived the continental army.

The Witch and the Sword Saint listened, their expressions growing more peculiar as I spoke. The Witch's comment summed up their thoughts.

"King of Death... you have quite the talent for lying."

"Well, thanks to that, we cleared it without shedding any blood."

"No, I'm not criticizing. Actually, it's impressive."

The Witch's eyes narrowed, like a shrewd merchant devising a cunning plan.

"Now we can trade with this continent. No more groveling to the old folks outside. Those bad people always beat down the price with food. Let's see if they can continue that."

Resentment flowed from her voice.

"Fundamentally, trade between the Tower and the outside world is unfair," the Sword Saint added.

"Capital, resources, technology - the outside world is richer in everything. Though the Tower has unique ingredients and elixirs not found outside..."

"Food! It's always about food!"

The Witch stamped her foot.

Initially, she seemed taciturn. But having cleared floors 12 to 19 together, her emotional expressions had become much more varied.

"We're going to start trading with these continental people?"

"Yes? Of course. The outside world needs to taste bitterness too."

"Then."

I grinned.

Pointing to the encampment on the plains, I said, "We'll have to start talking to them. But just saying 'Let's trade' won't work. To them, we are foreigners, and to us, they are from another world."

"True."

"I'll lend you my name."

"I am the Emissary of the Founder Emperor and the Apostle of the Goddess in this other world. If you present it as if you're also sent by the Goddess, it should be useful, at least for starting the trade."

"....."

The Witch's eyes narrowed.

"That's a generous offer. Effective, too. But you wouldn't suggest lending your name for free... What do you want?"

"The 20th floor."

"What?"

I looked around.

The Acacia forest path, the small plain, Ester's homeland.

This tiny world was the entirety of the 20th floor.

"I want to own the 20th floor."

The Witch was momentarily speechless.

"Wait a minute. Own the entire 20th floor?"

"Yes. Specifically, I'd like to own all the land on the 20th floor."

"That's..."

"In exchange. I won't take anything for clearing floors 11 to 19. The profits from trading with the continent should be shared with the other hunters." The Witch's lips sealed again.

It was a bold proposal.

Usually, when hunters clear a stage, participants share the outcomes. Ownership of items, resources, and so on. But about half of the rights are left for all hunters to share.

There's no precedent for someone owning an entire floor.

"This isn't something I can decide alone," the Witch said, looking troubled.

"We need to call the other guild masters and discuss it."

"Well, we have 24 hours to spare, so I can wait."

"...Do you really want this floor?"

The Witch glanced around.

"At first glance, it doesn't seem very valuable. The Acacia flower path is pretty, but it's not good land for farming. The floor is also cramped."

"Hmm."

"My experience says, King of Death. At times like this, it's more profitable to just take your share of the clear. You could make a tremendous amount of money."

I smiled.

"I prefer real estate over money. Land is the best."

"Deal?"

The Witch sighed.

"I'll gather the guild masters. Let's discuss it in Babylon on the 1st floor."

"Sounds good."

"Okay. You should show your face to the people anyway. But..."

The Witch slowly turned her gaze.

"I've been wanting to ask since earlier."

"Yes."

"...What is that?"

She pointed in the same direction I looked.

"Fuck... Black... damn it, stop...! Stop it! Is this request so hard, fuck! What grudge do you have against me, what did I do wrong....!!"

There, the Tower's greatest dancer was showcasing his talent.

His sweat and tears beautifully moistened the Acacia forest path.

Beautiful.

"Witch."

I smiled brightly.

"You saw nothing."

"Huh?"

"You didn't see anything. Understand?"

"....."

The Witch made a face like a biologist who had encountered the mystery of a lifetime.

"Fine. I'll accept that. There are various kinds of people in the world. But still," the Witch muttered.

"You're really not sane..."

That too was a minority opinion.

Leaving Preta and the Flame Emperor on the 20th floor, I teleported with the hunters to the 1st floor.

"Is it okay to have the meeting at the same cafe as last time?"

"Yes. I'm fine with anywhere."

Back in the city of Babylon on the 1st floor, after what others would see as just five days, but for me, it felt much longer.

"Ah."

"What's wrong?"

"Nothing. Just now, I was feeling the realization of having cleared the stage."

The Witch chuckled.

"Well. You might need to feel it a bit more."

"Huh?"

"I told you. Right now, in the Tower, people are only talking about you. Be mentally prepared."

There was no need to ask what kind of mental preparation I needed.

"Huh?"

"Is that...?"

It didn't take long after stepping on the 1st floor teleportation stone for the surroundings to start buzzing.

Pedestrians walking the streets, vendors at their stalls, hunters gearing up for their next hunt—all began to whisper among themselves.

"That's the Witch and the Sword Saint."

"Then that person is..."

"The King of Death!"

Someone shouted, and it became a turning point.

"The King of Death has appeared!"

A customer examining used weapons at a stall turned their head. A couple at an outdoor cafe stood up. A flower merchant, hunters chatting, dozens, hundreds of people all turned to look our way at once.

In an instant, a crowd gathered around us.

"Wow, wow---."

"He cleared the 20th floor alone, is that true?"

"Please look here! Just a moment! Over here!"

Buzzing voices surrounded us.

I had no time to react. In the blink of an eye, we were completely encircled. By the time I blinked again, the crowd had doubled.

"Uh..."

"Don't say anything."

The Witch whispered in a voice only I could hear.

"Have you never dealt with the media before?"

"Yes, of course not."

"A man of mystery? A popular star?"

"Huh?"

"Your concept. Do you want to be a man of mystery, or a popular star?"

Even as the Witch whispered, the crowd tripled in size. Our pace slowed to a crawl. Click! Click! Every step was accompanied by the loud snapping of camera phones.

My mind was completely overwhelmed.

"Once you choose a concept, it's hard to change. Decide now."

"What's a popular star?"

"Similar to a movie star."

The Witch explained.

"First, you need to start a new SNS account. You'll have managers for image and media relations. Of course, you'll hire someone to take care of your appearance and fashion. Don't worry about money; the Black Dragon Guild will cover it."

My already scattered wits were fraying at the edges.

The Sword Saint frowned beside us.

"He doesn't like this crap, that's why he always goes solo."

That seemed like a wise decision.

"Let's go with the man of mystery, please..."

"People enjoy the attention at first. The Inquisitor even started modeling for magazines and shooting personal photo books."

I knew that.

Before the 4000-day regression, collecting and organizing those magazines and photo books was my hobby. The Black Witch before me was a regular on magazine covers.

"No, please, a man of mystery."

Aren't I shot in the head!

"Shyness will kill me!"

"Everyone's shy at first. Well, except the Inquisitor... But King of Death, what you shouted atop the Imperial Palace tower was much more..."

"If it's not a man of mystery, I'll quit the five major guilds."

I was dead serious.

The Witch chuckled softly.

"Yeah. That suits your personality."

"What does a man of mystery do?"

"It's simple. Just keep a straight face."

For the first time in my life, I was advised to keep a straight face.

"Avoid SNS activities. No interviews or appearances in magazines or on TV. Even if personal broadcasters or journalists request interviews, refuse them. A couple of interviews a year are fine, but only with journalists I've vetted."

Hmm.

"...Is that all?"

"You don't realize how hard that is."

The Witch giggled.

"Attention is like a drug. The most addictive kind."

The Sword Saint picked up where she left off.

"And the drug that most thoroughly destroys people."

"Right. Just 10 people giving you attention can make you feel happy. But once you reach this level, millions respond to your every word. Few can resist such a drug."

The crowd pressed in closer.

It felt like the entire city's population was here.

"It's all vanity."

Said the Sword Saint.

"Yep. But it's a pleasant vanity."

"Maybe enjoying such a drug is part of being famous. Until you tire of it. Or until you become disillusioned with others taking the same drug. What will you do, King of Death?"

I looked around.

A curtain of humanity.

People packed so tightly there wasn't a single gap. Camera flashes never stopped, and I had to squint to see through them. The flashes looked like mirages, and the curtain of humanity like a shadow.

"...I might be the least deserving of attention."

I spoke up.

"What I want is recognition. And I think... getting attention and getting recognition are different."

I thought of the Flame Emperor.

The absolute ruler who once monopolized all attention in the Tower before my 4000-day regression.

"I'm fine without the attention of millions. The attention of those around me is enough. Whether it's thousands or millions, what I want from the world isn't attention, but recognition."

"Right."

The Witch smiled.

"I think they're not entirely separate, but if that's your answer, I respect it."

"Thank you."

"You're that kind of person, and I'm glad for it."

That was something I'd heard before.

"So, how do I keep a straight face?"

"I'll tell you a secret."

Crowd noise swelled around us.

We seemed to slow to 10cm per second.

"Think of a truly bad memory."

"A bad memory?"

"Yeah. For me, it's when my father died in a civil war in the outside world."

The Witch spoke calmly.

"I was seven. We were fleeing, and soldiers were probably chasing us. My father stayed behind. He shouted, 'Don't look back, just run.' But..."

She pushed through the crowd.

"I didn't look back. I heard gunshots but kept running."

Click! Click!

Camera flashes never ceased.

"It was a long time ago."

"A long time ago."

The Witch murmured.

"I don't regret running. I was a child. But why didn't I even look back? It would have been easy. Just to look."

"....."

"When I need to be expressionless, I remember that moment. My heart races so hard. It's my little secret."

The Witch looked at me.

"You have such memories too, don't you?"

I do.

In a dark alley, gripped by the Flame Emperor, burning all over.

"That's right."

Without a mirror, I knew.

I was wearing a perfect expressionless face.

"Look here, please!"

"Say something, please!"

"Black Witch, when can we expect an official statement?"

"What's your relationship between the two of you!"

"Sword Saint! What do you think of the King of Death!"

As I looked around again, I'd become accustomed to the camera flashes. I could see clearly despite being surrounded by so many people. This was my first time being encircled by such a crowd, my first time under such a barrage of flashes.

But...

"It works amazingly well."

I wasn't as mentally scattered as before.

Just calm as usual.

The Witch's mouth tWitched slightly.

"You learn fast. You'll get used to it quickly."

In just five days, the world had changed.

But I hadn't changed enough to be affected by it.

Chapter 52:

Paradise After the Ending (3)

We finally made it to the cafe through the crowd, where familiar faces awaited us.

"Ahaha, welcome!"

The Heretic Inquisitor, guild master of the Temple of the Omnipotent God, waved his arm.

"Clearing the 20th floor in just five days! This is the greatest feat since the Tower's creation. I sincerely respect you, Hunter Kim Gong-Ja! No, I should say, King of Death now!"

"Still feels like a dream..."

The Paladin sipped her iced coffee.

"Honestly, I thought you, the Black Witch, and the Sword Saint would fail and die. And you even soloed the 20th floor? Amazing. If there's a secret, please share it."

"A secret?"

I sat at one side of the table.

"Just live a decent life?"

"A very practical advice."

The Paladin smirked.

"Anyway, it's nice to see you all after a long time. How have you been?"

"Well, it's only been 5 days."

The Countess puffed on her long pipe.

"We stayed in the audience hall as promised. A promise is a promise, after all. But soon after, NPCs from the empire started roaming around. It was a surprise!"

"Ah."

That was when I defeated the Demon King on the 12th floor.

I received a quest, which restarted the frozen time.

"I didn't think about that. What happened?"

"The empire's NPCs thought we were traitors who invaded the palace!"

The Heretic Inquisitor chuckled.

"Some well-dressed person was shouting, 'Catch those traitors!' and the empire's knights and elite troops came after us. It was chilling!"

"But this little guy has various tricks."

The Celestial Martial Clan Master, Viper, ruffled the Inquisitor's hair.

"We got caught first, then escaped from the prison. It was... quite the adventure."

"Ahaha! Wasn't it fun! I never imagined a secret passage in the underground prison! It felt like going back to childhood!"

"Wait, weren't you kidnapped by the Bulgarian mafia as a child?"

"Yes!"

The Inquisitor laughed genuinely.

"That's why it reminded me of my childhood. Prison! Underground! Escape! Ah, all these things glorified my youthful days! Now they are just distant memories."

"Madman..."

Viper sighed deeply.

While I was busy filming the Demon King saga, it seemed the guild leaders had their own adventures.

"Right. We all had quite the lives in the outside world."

The Black Witch joined the table nonchalantly.

"The Countess was born in a slum in India. Viper, your parents were gang leaders. The Paladin struggled in Venezuela."

"....."

"So we're all trash in the eyes of the outside world, right?"

The cafe's atmosphere suddenly grew heavy.

Only the sound of the Paladin sipping coffee echoed.

"...This isn't a conversation for this occasion."

The Paladin glanced at me.

"Are you considering the King of Death as [one of us] now?"

"Yes."

The Black Witch replied.

"You might not know, but the King of Death has contributed decisively to the Tower's conquest."

"We know that."

"No. You don't."

The Black Witch shook her head.

"In this conquest, we didn't have a single casualty. Even on the 11th floor where numerous hunters participated. All thanks to the King of Death's strategy and tactics."

All eyes turned to me.

"Hmm."

"It's true."

"I."

The Black Witch spoke.

"I want to make this man the hero representing our Tower."

Silence enveloped the cafe.

The Black Witch scanned the hunters around the table.

"Countess, you're too greedy for money."

"It's true, can't deny it."

"Heretic Inquisitor, you've killed too many."

"Yes! It was a necessary sacrifice!"

"Paladin, you hate getting attention from others."

"It's just my nature."

"And Viper, you are..."

"Uh? What?"

"...sorry. You're too ugly."

"....."

Viper's face contorted, a portrait of middle-aged sorrow.

"As for the Sword Saint, well, he's obsessed with swords."

"Hmm."

"I have to operate in the shadows, so I can't."

After scanning the table, the Black Witch finally turned to me.

"But the King of Death has no public image yet. With some effort, we can mold him into the perfect hero. It's an opportunity. A chance to renew the Tower's image."

"Indeed."

The Heretic Inquisitor stroked his chin.

"We're old figures, lacking in appeal. Even though we're constantly in the news, our sales are steadily declining!"

"Right. That's what I mean."

"So, we should start image-making today!"

The Inquisitor stood up, circling around me like an excited puppy.

"Hmm, a bit short, but that's fine! As you can see with me, photoshop fixes everything!"

"Uh..."

Wasn't your short stature your charm point?

His small face broke into a wide smile.

"[A small but passionate man, the King of Death]. This phrase will hit the mark!"

Before I could respond, the hunters gathered around.

The Black Witch, Countess, Viper, Paladin.

Regardless of affiliation, they came close, examining me thoroughly.

"Do you have a partner right now?"

"Uh... no."

"Any lovers or romantic interests in the Tower?"

"None."

"So, there's no risk of scandals. Perfect!"

What does 'perfect' even mean?

The top rankers began to murmur.

"He looks a bit cunning when he smiles. Let's push the mysterious concept. He's good at keeping a straight face."

"Having no partner is troublesome."

The Paladin spoke.

"We might need to create a fake scandal. Otherwise, outsiders will start rumors..."

"Don't worry. I'll handle that."

"Ah, a love story blossomed during the fierce battle of the past 5 days. Ahaha, great! A story people will love!"

"No, wait..."

"Let's call the photographers! Let's take some photos!"

The Inquisitor beamed brightly.

"Call all the designers. We need to distribute at least one photo to the media today. We have some videos of the 11th floor battle, we'll release them online at the right time!"

Wait.

Hold on.

"Everyone, I..."

"Don't worry."

The Black Witch interrupted me, smiling with deep wisdom.

"You don't need to do anything, King of Death. We'll handle everything. Just keep doing what you've been doing."

"But, you said a mysterious concept. Designers aren't necessary, right?"

"Just for today, please."

The Black Witch pleaded gently.

"The whole world wants to know about you. Just one photo. Let's show them one picture. Okay? Don't worry, our contracted designers are incredible."

Thirty minutes later, it turned out to be far more than just one photo.

"Look here, please!"

Click!

A swarm of designers dressed me up, styled my hair, and every time they did, the photographer flashed the camera.

"Yes, perfect. Now, hold a dagger! Like a wolf stalking prey in the bushes!"

"No, wait..."

"Excellent!"

Click!

The hunters huddled behind the photographer, scrutinizing my pose.

"The suit surprisingly suits him."

"Maybe a slightly more mischievous feeling."

"No way! I've already secured the mischievous concept!"

"Then, how about a young man burning with a sense of adventure?"

"Let's go with that."

Click!

"Perfect!"

Perfect my foot.

-Hahaha!

The Sword Emperor was rolling in the air, laughing.

One hour, then two hours passed, and my patience finally broke.

"I'm not doing this anymore! I quit!"

I threw the suit on the floor.

"Hunters are supposed to climb the Tower! What's with all this media image and photo shoot nonsense! This is why you couldn't even clear the 10th floor for years!"

Silence.

Did my heartfelt words resonate? The atmosphere turned cold. The Black Witch and the hunters all stared at me intently.

Then, they nodded.

"...That line wasn't bad."

"Hmm. The embodiment of a young man burning with passion."

"The headline for tomorrow's newspaper: [King of Death, Shocking Declaration. He will give up his rights from the 10th to 19th floors to all hunters, stating he's satisfied just conquering the Tower.]"

"Agreed!"

"Second page: [King of Death, known for donating to orphanages since long ago.]"

"Yes. Leave the 20th floor to the King of Death as our token of gratitude and respect."

"Perfect! What a beautiful conclusion!"

No.

They didn't listen to me at all.

These people were obsessed with making me a hero.

"Forget it, young man."

The Sword Saint spoke bluntly.

"I went through the same when I became rank 1. All kinds of nonsense about old man's charm, how to grow a beard differently. They said everything."

Oh no.

"They want to show the outside world. [We are also living proudly.] It's a kind of inferiority complex."

The old swordsman murmured.

"Having given up everything in the outside world to come to the Tower, why do they still yearn so much..."

The Sword Saint turned to leave.

"Let's go."

"Yes?"

"If we stay, there's no end to this. After photos, they'll want videos, then a press conference. That's how they are. If you don't escape now, you'll lose a whole day."

A terrifying thought.

"Let's escape quickly!"

"A wise choice."

We ran, infusing our steps with aura. "Ah!" cries echoed behind us, but we didn't stop.

"King of Death!"

The Black Witch shouted.

"Come back in the morning for the press conference! Don't get noticed, move secretly! Escape via the rooftops! Be careful!"

The Guardian Spirit laughed uproariously.

-Heh, she's more like your mother than an angel or goddess, isn't she?

Indeed, she was.

Although I'm not sure what a mother is like.

Soon, the world was bathed in the glow of sunset.

As advised by the Black Witch, we escaped via the rooftops. Looking down, hundreds of people still swarmed the cafe. Reporters from TV stations were buzzing around as an added bonus.

'Good thing we didn't exit through the main door!'

We leapt across the rooftops tinged with red.

Our stop was a bell tower in the square.

A security guard, fiddling with his smartphone, belatedly recognized us.

"Wow! Sword Saint, sir?"

"Hmm."

The Sword Saint landed gracefully on the tower.

"Would you mind stepping aside for a moment?"

"Ah, but... um..."

"Five minutes will suffice."

The young guard was flustered, understandably overwhelmed by a living legend. Then his gaze met mine, and his eyes lit up.

"Is that... the King of Death!?"

"Ah, yes."

"Wow, wow! It's my first time seeing you in person, wow! Amazing!"

The guard fumbled through his bag in excitement. A romance novel popped out, probably to kill time during his shift.

"I only have this paper right now. Could I get an autograph, please!?"

The Sword Saint, as if used to such requests, took the novel.

"Have a pen?"

"Here, sir!"

"What's your name?"

"I don't have an alias yet...!"

With neat handwriting, the Sword Saint signed the book.

The guard, like an innocent boy, received the autograph and turned to me. His eyes sparkled with eagerness.

"C-could I also get one from you, King of Death?"

"Sure."

My autograph?

"I've never done something like this before..."

"It's a lifetime wish of mine! Please!"

I awkwardly took the book and pen.

A lifetime wish for my autograph? How light must one's life be.

I glanced down at the book, already signed by the Sword Saint. I hesitated, realizing that writing 'King of Death' would be the first time I put that name in writing.

Before I knew it, our signatures lay side by side.

+

Sword Saint 劍星.

King of Death 死王.

+

"....."

"Thank you so much! I'll treasure this! I won't sell it, promise! Thank you, thank you! Have a great weekend!"

The guard hurriedly descended the tower stairs, his excited voice fading, "Yes! Scored big!"

The tower was left with just a red sunset and our soft breathing.

"....."

After a long silence,

"Um, Sword Saint."

"Listen, young man."

We spoke simultaneously, our voices colliding in the air.

Awkward silence ensued, but not for long.

I spoke.

"To you, Sword Saint, I must appear as someone who killed countless people. A mass murderer who must be punished."

Calmly, I looked at the Sword Saint.

"But if you look in the mirror, you'll see a mass murderer who has also killed countless people. Yourself."

The Sword Saint gazed not at me, but at the twilight sky.

"Yet, you don't seek to punish yourself. You must have a clear standard for killing: 'punish those who have harmed many.' Similarly, I've always had a clear standard: 'punish those who will harm many.'"

This was a carefully crafted lie prepared since I falsely claimed to be a prophet,

"If someone killed many in the past, and you killed them for it, then I have been killing those who would harm many in the future."

Before I could finish, the old man softly interrupted.

"You don't need to convince me of that."

"Huh."

"Sword Saint, I..."

"Young man."

His gentle call silenced me.

Still fixed on the sunset, he spoke.

"I'm different from the other hunters."

It seemed an abrupt statement.

"Black Witch. Countess. Heretic Inquisitor. Viper. Paladin... all suffered harshly in the outside world. But I'm different.

Born into abundance, I lived without the lack of anything."

Marcus Callenbury.

I knew the man before me was from a prominent family. I had researched him during my investigation. A renowned family in Northern Europe.

"When the Tower appeared, I had already established a family. Ran a business, married, had children, and saw my grandchildren. I experienced success as much as one could."

His voice was steady.

"But doubts crept in."

"Doubts?"

"I wondered if my success was truly my own achievement. It just suddenly intrigued me."

The old man slowly drew his sword.

"Was it just because I was born into a good family?"

The twilight reflected on the blade.

The sword that had not cut anything was red.

"Born under a good family, educated well, befriended the best, grew up drinking only the finest... Was I just a bird in a gilded cage? I was proud, believing I achieved everything on my own... but maybe it was just a delusion."

He said.

"No."

Sharp as a blade.

"It can't be."

His heart was as red as the sunset.

"True, I was born into privilege. Yet, I still stood tall on my own. I wanted to prove my pride wasn't a delusion."

"So you came to the Tower."

"Hmm."

He nodded.

"In the Tower, where no one can return to the outside world, where I have no family, supporters, or prestige... I wanted to prove my life with just myself."

"But," he murmured.

"I think I've grown complacent."

"Skill card open. Reveal."

Flash!

A silver card materialized in the Sword Saint's hand.

+

[Eyes of a Detective]

Rank: B-

Effect: You can know the kill count of others. Direct murders only. The skill counts only intentional killings.

*However, the method of murder is unknown.

+

"Foolish."

He gazed at his skill card.

"Though I resolved to rely only on my eyes and hands... before I knew it, I was dependent on 'skills.' I saw through skills rather than my eyes, and trusted the skill's judgment over my own."

And then,

"Last question, young man."

His blue eyes met mine.

"Have you ever killed an innocent life?"

That's why he said no need to convince himself.

I understood.

Convincing is done by 'mind,' as I just did, merely luring someone's mind, not capturing their heart.

"No."

Convincing, not convincing.

"I haven't. Sword Saint."

Like when I addressed the Tower's pillar,

I spoke through my heart.

"I won't in the future either."

The Sword Saint silently closed his eyes, as if savoring my expression and voice.

Silence flowed.

Then,

"Whoosh!"

The card flew.

The golden twilight shone through the split card, torn by the red blade.

"I'll trust my eyes."

The card disintegrated into light dust.

"Thank you for the past five days. For indulging an old man's whims. Rest well tonight. After the press conference tomorrow, the 21st floor will open."

He stepped off the roof.

Before leaping to another building, he glanced at me.

"Looking forward to your performance on the next floor, King of Death."

And he quickly vanished.

"....."

I stood still for a long time.

I awkwardly spoke.

"Sword Emperor. Did he just...?"

-Yeah.

"Recognize me?"

-It seemed so.

A weight lifted from my heart.

"Wow..."

I slowly sank to the ground, the stone floor cool beneath me.
I gazed blankly at the darkening sky.

"Wow, it's really over. The 20th floor is mine now. The media will be handled by the guild leaders... Yes, everything is truly over."

The Guardian Spirit chuckled.

-Not really over. You'd think you cleared the 50th floor.

"Feels like I've cleared the 90th."

-Tsk, sometimes I can't tell if you're brave or just naïve.

"Sometimes, I'm not sure myself..."

But I had wrapped up everything up to the 20th floor.

As I settled into this strange sense of fulfillment,

[The Goddess of Protection marvels at your achievements!]

A voice I hadn't heard in a while echoed.

"Huh?"

Come to think of it.

Even after defeating the Demon King of the Autumn Rain, the Goddess of Protection was quiet. Except for when I first conquered the 12th floor, she was always silent.

[The Goddess of Protection recognizes all your deeds!]

Her voice, silent for so long, now flowed continuously.

[The Goddess of Protection acknowledges that even though your claim of being her apostle was a lie, you indeed have the qualifications to be a true apostle.]

[The Goddess of Protection permits you to continue using her!]

But there was something odd in her words.

"Continue to use her? What does that mean?"

[The Goddess of Protection is upset that you've been getting along well but now ask what she means.]

Even more confusing.

"Getting along well?"

[The Goddess of Protection urges you to look down at your waist.]

I looked down.

Nothing but the stone floor.

[The Goddess of Protection suggests you look slightly to the left.]

I shifted my gaze.

There were my legs and waist.

On my waist hung the legendary weapon, the Holy Sword of the Aegim Empire, allegedly bestowed by the Goddess herself.

"Wait a minute. Could it be?"

[The Goddess of Protection advises you to focus your gaze on your waist.]

I felt a strange premonition.

I recalled the scene where I was fighting against the Demon King's army on the 12th floor.

At that time, the Goddess of Protection had said she was exerting her last bit of strength. Right after those words, something I was holding emitted a bright white light.

There were no other miracles.

"Wait. Let me think. The [Goddess of Protection] that was occasionally mentioned while fighting the Demon King..."

With a sense of incredulity, I spoke.

"Are you... perhaps the 'sword'?"

After a brief pause.

The voice responded.

[The Goddess of Protection says yes!]

Good heavens.

It seems that the holy sword I had been using was indeed a sacred weapon.

Chapter 53: The Ultimate Fanboy (1)

-You are now watching an astonishing footage!

-The Witch, known by her alias "Black Witch," is leading the 11th floor assault team. This is the latest footage we've obtained at BBS. Ah! Let's zoom in on this part.

-Yes, right here! Let's pause the video for a moment.

In a quiet waiting room.

I was blankly watching the television.

-Viewers, do you see this? The Black Witch is holding hands with another hunter. This hunter is presumed to be the "King of Death."

-If this footage hasn't been manipulated, it appears the King of Death single-handedly hunted the stage boss of the 11th floor. It's commonly referred to among hunters as a one-shot kill. However, there's been no recorded instance of a boss monster being defeated in one shot until now.

The caster and commentator were making a fuss.

-So, this is a first?

-Yes, indeed. Of course, the Black Witch assisted, but it seems that the King of Death was the only one who directly confronted the boss monster.

Below the screen, a breaking news ticker read, [King of Death's press conference this afternoon].

-Viewers, let's watch the next footage together.

-The King of Death, shrouded in mystery until now, finally revealed himself yesterday afternoon. He returned to Babylon via a transmission stone. As you can see, the Black Witch and Sword Saint are accompanying him.

-It almost looks like they are escorting the King of Death, right?

-Yes. To convey the atmosphere on the scene, let's turn up the volume for a moment.

A video, seemingly shot on a smartphone, played.

In the center of the screen, I was walking expressionlessly.

-Look here, please!

-Don't push! Can you say something?

-Black Dragon Witch, when can we expect an official statement?

-What is the relationship between the two of you...

Click!

Unable to bear it any longer, I sharply pressed the remote.

The Guardian Spirit, watching TV beside me, frowned.

-Ah, why turn it off? I was enjoying it.

I spoke up.

"I feel like I'm going to die of embarrassment!"

This was the waiting room.

It had been a night since the Sword Saint acknowledged me.

Today, a press conference was scheduled to report the progress of our tower assault. Normally, the leaders of the large guilds would handle it, but this time I was invited as a special guest. The conference would start soon.

-So what if you die? You don't die even when you're dead.

"I still don't like it!"

I thought of watching TV since there was nothing to do until the conference, but it was a mistake.

-Oh, come on. Then change the channel.

"It's the same on every channel, talking only about me!"

Regardless of whether it was a news channel or not, nearly all broadcasts were covering the 10th to 20th floor assault. And it wasn't just television; the internet was no different.

Overnight, I became a celebrity.

[The Goddess of Protection points out that your achievements are so exceptional.]

The holy sword at my waist vibrated.

[Fame is a tax that heroes pay as they progress. You should get used to being a hero, advises the Goddess of Protection!]

"....."

I felt incredibly burdened and looked down at the holy sword.

"Yesterday, I was too tired to talk and fell asleep... Hey, Goddess? Aren't you overestimating me a bit?"

[You are the light!]

The sword vibrated more strongly.

It seemed like a fan idolizing a celebrity.

[The Goddess of Protection still vividly remembers. Standing on the pavilion of the empire, proclaiming 'Please take good care of the empire' with a roar... Your confident declaration was truly majestic....]

"Ah!"

I covered my ears.

"Stop it! Stop! I was completely excited when I said that!"

But it was no use. The sword's voice was transmitted directly to my mind.

The sword continuously whispered about my embarrassing history.

[The Goddess of Protection says true heroes must love themselves! A hero without self-love always meets a miserable end, bringing misfortune to those around. In that sense, your confidence is very admirable! It's fantastic!]

Yes.

The Goddess of Protection was my fervent fan.

"Please... just stop...!"

Like how I once obsessed over the Flame Emperor, the sword was obsessing over me.

It would have been fine if the sword fangirled in private, but its voice was broadcast directly to me 24/7. [The Goddess of Protection confesses.]

[She is happy to serve a person like you as her second master.]

Good grief.

Has anyone ever experienced someone praising them earnestly non-stop? Especially about memories you consider embarrassing and wish to forget?

I'd rather die.

[The Goddess of Protection especially remembers the moment you took the Demon King of Autumn Rain as your subordinate, murmuring, 'The lord has the responsibility to protect his people.'...]

This is unacceptable.

I took out maintenance oil from my backpack, used for polishing swords. I soaked a cloth in oil and glared at the holy sword.

"You started this."

My hand approached the blade.

[The Goddess of Protection feels threatened.]

[The Goddess of Protection begs you to stop.]

[The Goddess of Protection...]

10 minutes later.

[The Goddess of Protection apologizes for her wrongdoing.]

Sparkle-.

Thanks to my diligent polishing, the holy sword was now clean. The blade was so clear it reflected my face. But the sword trembled with humiliation.

"Phew. Finally, it's quiet."

I looked down at the now subdued holy sword.

"So, why are you a sword if you're a constellation? Were you always in a sword?"

Constellations, as I understood, were like stage managers.

There might be cases like Preta, who started as a monster and became a constellation. But I couldn't imagine how a 'sword' could become a constellation.

Expressing my doubt, the holy sword emitted a faint white light.

[The Goddess of Protection shakes her head.]

[It's easier to think of a constellation as 'something that represents that world.']

The representative of the world.

[The Goddess of Protection speaks.]

[She was originally a holy spirit revered as a god. However, the founder of the empire, 'Leafanta Aegim,' split her into five swords and sealed her.]

[She is the first holy sword, 'The Idol.']

I blinked.

"The sword's name is 'The Idol'?"

[Affirmative.]

The Goddess of Protection listed the five swords.

[First sword, The Idol.]

[Second sword, The Pity.]

[Third sword, The Prayer.]

[Fourth sword, The Sacrifice.]

[Fifth sword, The Salvation.]

[These are the five sister swords.]

[The Goddess of Protection boasts that gathering all the sister swords can restore power comparable to her heyday.]

"Interesting. So where are the other sister swords?"

There was no reply.

An awkward silence settled in the waiting room.

"Hey? Goddess? Where are your sisters?"

Silent.

My eyes narrowed.

"...You don't know, do you?"

After a moment, a soft voice flowed.

[The Goddess of Protection exercises her right to remain silent.]

"So you don't know."

[She can sense their presence if they are close, the Goddess of Protection argues.]

I shrugged.

"Well, it's not urgent. Anyway, you have at least 1/5 of your power. So, what can you do, The Idol sword?"

[You can receive absolute support from the citizens of the Aegim Empire.]

"Nobody knows that better than I do. What else?"

Whooosh!

The Holy Sword emitted light at its maximum output, as if it had been waiting for this moment.

"Aack! My eyes!? My eyyyes!?"

I rolled on the floor, covering my eyes.

A gloating voice resounded in my head from the Holy Sword.

[The Goddess of Protection boasts of her ability to emit light.]

"I've seen enough of that already!"

Seriously, it was a close call. If I hadn't protected my eyes with aura in time, I could have gone blind!

"No, I mean, apart from getting support from the empire's citizens and shining brightly, what else can you do?"

Silence followed.

The Holy Sword emitted a dim light, almost as if it was stuttering.

[I'm confident in repelling monsters.]

"....."

[And also in repelling humans, the Goddess of Protection hastily adds.]

Knock, knock.

In the midst of my speechless reaction, someone knocked on the waiting room door. I quickly sheathed the Holy Sword. To anyone else, my conversation with a sword would look insane.

"Who is it?"

"It's me."

The Witch's voice came from outside the door.

"It's been noisy here. What's going on?"

"Nothing! Everything's fine!"

"Really...?"

The Witch sounded suspicious but didn't press further.

"The press conference starts in 5 minutes. The reporters will bombard you with questions. After the conference, the 21st floor will open. We just need to answer the reporters briefly, then head straight to the 21st floor. Got it?"

"Yes!"

"Your answers are just perfect... Don't be late."

I heard her footsteps walking away. After ensuring the Witch had completely left, I drew the Holy Sword again and stared at its blade.

"So, apart from shining, you're pretty useless."

[The Goddess of Protection protests against this unfair opinion...]

"That's it. From now on, you're not the Goddess of Protection but Shiny. The name 'Holy Sword' is too grand for you!"

Thinking about it, this Constellation was lamentable!

Unable to protect its world, devoured by the Demon King of Autumn Rain. I had to carry it to protect this Constellation's world. Like Preta, this Constellation too was not in a position to hold its head up against me.

"And you're too noisy. Having the Sword Emperor in my head is already too much. Your constant 'Goddess of Protection, Goddess of Protection' chatter is driving me crazy! From now on, unless it's really necessary, don't speak to me."

[The Goddess of Protection...]

"Ahem. Do you want to go back to the Aegim Empire? Got it, Shiny?"

Silence lingered for a while.

Then, the Holy Sword vibrated.

[Shiny acknowledges your command, Oh Valiant Hero.]

It was the moment I truly claimed the Constellation.

The press conference was held in the central plaza.

The plaza and even the alleys were swarming with people.

Easily tens of thousands. As we walked onto the stage set up in the middle of the plaza, camera flashes erupted from all directions.

The Witch, Sword Saint, and me.

We three sat side by side at the prepared table.

"-Thank you for welcoming us."

The Witch was the first to take the microphone. Her calm voice flowed, and cheers erupted from a corner of the plaza.

"Black Dragon Witch~!!!!"

"Kyaaa!"

"Please look here, Black Dragon Witch! Just once!"

A group waved banners. Some even brought magazine covers featuring the Witch.

‘Impressive.’

Was it because it was before the era of the Saintess? The Witch, as a female hunter, enjoyed unparalleled popularity.

The Witch bowed in greeting and then smoothly led the conference.

"As you all know, we've conquered from the 10th to the 20th floor. As highlighted by various media and broadcasters, it's a remarkable achievement. We pondered how to share this joy, but you all publicized it for us. Yes, we're deeply grateful you saved us advertising costs."

A faint laughter came from the press.

"But what we're most proud of is something else."

The plaza grew quieter.

"It's not the fact that we finally conquered the 10th floor, which everyone has longed for, for years. Nor is it the unprecedented speed with which we reached the 20th floor. The most joyful thing is... we didn't have a single casualty."

A little humor followed by sincerity.

Even to me, inexperienced in public speaking, the Witch masterfully controlled the conference.

‘Is this what it takes to lead a top guild?’

I wondered if this was the same person who playfully dressed me up yesterday.

"Please look down for a moment."

The Witch spoke.

"Look at the floor of Babylon's plaza you're standing on. You will see names engraved on each stone. Names of the fallen warriors who sacrificed their lives in the tower conquest. Our predecessors."

Whirring-.

The cameras of the press turned to the plaza floor.

"When the 2nd and 3rd floors were conquered, countless names were engraved. Their sacrifices brought us here. I'm sincerely happy to declare in front of them."

The Witch's voice filled the plaza.

"Today, nobody's name has been engraved."

Click! Click!

Reporters snapped photos of the tiles and the Witch. This determined the mood of the conference and the day's news. The crowd chanted the Witch's alias.

'I don't even need to step in.'

I observed the conference expressionlessly, feeling unexpectedly pleased.

'It's important to choose the right allies!'

Comforted, I glanced up at the sky.

[01:22:10]

Just like when the 11th floor opened. The light clock was drawn in the sky. When the numbers hit 0:00:00, the 21st floor would open.

‘I can't wait to finish this and head to the 21st floor...’

In the midst of the smooth conference, as questions from reporters and the Witch's answers were exchanged.

"John Evans from Babylon Daily News!"

A reporter suddenly stood up.

"I have a question for the King of Death, who recently rose to 3rd in the rankings."

‘Me?’

I looked at the reporter. Naturally, the crowd's gaze also turned to me.

"There's much talk about your sudden rise in the rankings. Especially the theory that [you're a big newcomer secretly groomed by the major guilds] is gaining traction!"

"Uh..."

"If this is true, it means you're a hero deliberately created by the major guilds. What do you think about these suspicions?"

Murmurs spread across the plaza.

"There are concerns that the major guilds are monopolizing the tower from the 10th to 20th floors. Especially since you, King of Death, have exclusive rights to the 20th floor! Is that true?"

The air buzzed more intensely.

Tsk.

The Witch, expressionless next to me, clicked her tongue softly enough only for me to hear. She turned off the mic and whispered.

"It's bait. Don't answer. I'll handle it."

"No."

I shook my head.

"They'll keep coming anyway. I should clarify my position at least once."

"But..."

"It's okay."

I reached out my hand to the Witch.

"Please pass me the microphone."

"....."

My resolve was firm.

Before climbing the 21st floor, I would decisively cut off such bait.

Chapter 54: The Ultimate Fanboy (2)

"Haah."

The Witch sighed as if worried.

"Don't go too far. I can cover for minor mistakes, but if you really go overboard, I can't control the media."

"I'm the most well-behaved person you'll know. You know that, right? I'm a prophet, okay? I roughly know what the most exemplary answer would be."

"...Can I really trust you?"

"Hey, of course."

I received the microphone from the Witch. Even in the last moment of handing it over, the Witch seemed concerned about me, but I was truly fine. I had a [secret weapon] for this.

"Ah. Ahem."

I lightly cleared my throat. My voice spread across the plaza through the speakers.

"Hello, everyone. I am a hunter known by the alias King of Death. Nice to meet you all for the first time."

Click! Click!

Lights created a grand wave. I wasn't too flustered. Maybe my experience being surrounded by a crowd yesterday served as a kind of vaccination? Surprisingly relaxed, I endured the flash bombardment.

"Your name is... John Evans, right?"

"Yes, that's correct."

The young reporter looked straight at me. His eyes, burning with journalistic spirit, seemed to say he wouldn't miss a single move of mine, determined to expose my true identity.

It was a quite burdensome gaze.

"Hmm."

Facing such a look at this moment, there was only one thought occupying my mind.

"I think it's all because of my shortcomings that these concerns are arising."

A lesson in what not to do.

Don't be like the Flame Emperor!

"What?"

The reporter blinked, microphone in hand, apparently not expecting this kind of response. Meanwhile, I recalled the Flame Emperor's smug face in my mind and said,

"I'll say it again. I think it's all because of my shortcomings that these concerns are arising."

My ultimate strategy was very simple.

'Just say the opposite of what the Flame Emperor would say!'

Did I have any great interviewing skills?

I was different from the Witch. I had no talent for captivating a crowd with a speech. I lacked talent, skills, and even experience.

But I had one thing.

Knowledge that others didn't know.

Specifically, interviews of the most despicable hunter in this world!

'If I just go the opposite way of the Flame Emperor, I'll at least hit a decent mark.'

I had been a fan of the Flame Emperor for almost ten years. As a result, my head was like a library filled with records of the Flame Emperor's atrocities and outrageous statements.

If the Flame Emperor were holding this microphone right now?

He would have said:

「It's all because I'm so great that I conquered up to the 20th floor. You little punks.」

「I slaved away to conquer this, so what? The items and experience points I earned are obviously mine. Hey, reporter. If I don't take them, then who should I give them to? Huh?」

「Your dad?」

This wasn't something I made up on the spot. He actually said that!

‘That's why before regression, the Witch's face turned pale during the press conference....’

The infamous [Your dad?] incident.

Understandably, the press conference exploded spectacularly. The reporters' curses were broadcasted live, and even though the Witch hastily ended it, it was too late.

A complete disaster.

The live broadcast was abruptly cut off, but the tragedy didn't end there.

The Flame Emperor's verbal onslaught against the reporters, spewing every curse known to mankind, was live-streamed by personal broadcasters.

‘No wonder they call him the Flame Retard.’

Rumor has it that the Witch was bedridden for a week after that day.

Probably, the [Your dad?] incident was a turning point for the Witch, leading to her aversion to the hunter named Yoo Soo-Ha. Maybe this incident even contributed to the major guilds distancing themselves from the Flame Emperor.

‘In the past, the Flame Emperor completely botched this press conference.’

Meaning...

‘I just need to do the exact opposite of the Flame Emperor.’

Turn the worst into the best!

I recalled the Flame Emperor’s outrageous quotes as I firmly gripped the microphone.

「It's all because I'm so great that I conquered up to the 20th floor. You little punks.」

"I'm aware of the heated public opinion about me. But it's an overestimation. Without the Black Dragon Witch and Sword Saint here, I could never have conquered the 20th floor alone."

「 I slaved away to conquer this, so what? 」

"Of course, I pride myself on having put in maximum effort. I strived to the bone with the goal of zero casualties. But I don't see it as my 'sacrifice.'

It's just what you naturally do as a human, what you should do as a hunter. Above all... it's something I did because I enjoy it."

「 The items and experience points I earned are obviously mine. 」

"Therefore, I have no intention of claiming my rights. I've entrusted the rights from the 10th to 19th floors to the guild leaders here. Regarding monopolizing the 20th floor... No. The 20th floor is more like a [Greenbelt] area. The original residents of the tower will live there, and I will be content with the role of a manager."

「 Your dad? 」

"Mr. Evans. That's all."

"....."

"Do you have any more questions?"

The young reporter, previously ablaze with journalistic spirit, stuttered.

"No... I don't."

Good.

I quickly thought further.

If the Flame Emperor was in my place, how would he have responded to the reporter's silence?

「 Alright. If you have nothing to say, get lost, you American pig. 」

I could vividly imagine the scene, complete with the grandeur of a middle finger.

‘So, if I say the exact opposite of this...’

I spoke.

"Thank you. Ah, if there are any other questions, let's briefly take them, everyone."

Silence fell across the plaza for a moment.

But it was only for a brief moment.

"Here! Summons Times!"

"Please take my question, King of Death! Tower Daily!"

"From the Babylon Tower Broadcasting System!"

"King of Death!"

The reporters eagerly raised their hands. Sensing that I was approachable, they rushed to get more material for their stories.

Their eagerness was like baby ducks eagerly pecking towards their mother bird.

‘Wow.’

I admired the press corps inwardly.

‘...The result of doing the opposite of the Flame Emperor is amazing.’

As always, the Flame Emperor, the most annoying psychopath in the world.

He always served as my compass in the worst possible way.

Even now, the compass clearly guided me on how to react.

‘What? Summons Times? I won't do interviews with you. It's full of old fogies. Just opening your newspaper makes it smell old. Hey, if you're a journalist, at least take a shower. 」

I thought of the Flame Emperor's quotes and said,

"---Then let's start with a question from the Summons Times reporter."

The effect was tremendous.

The press conference ended triumphantly. A great success for over an hour of rapid-fire Q&A, and I didn't make a single slip of the tongue.

In fact, it was not easy to conclude the conference. The reporters were desperate to extract even one more line of news. In the end, the Witch had to snatch the microphone from me to pacify the press.

"Everyone! I understand your desire to know more about our new hero. However, unfortunately, we're running out of time." The Witch gestured towards the sky.

[00:05:27]

The light clock was now just minutes away from 0:00:00.

Just a few minutes until the new stage opens!

The perfect excuse to end the press conference.

"We've finished our night of rest and will dedicate ourselves to conquering the tower again today. Please continue to watch over us with deep interest and warm support. We will strive towards our goal of zero casualties, as before."

"Ah..."

Sighs of regret echoed here and there.

Just when it seemed the conference was wrapping up, a brave soul raised their hand.

"Uhh, Black Dragon Witch! One last question, please!"

"Yes. This will be the final question and then we'll conclude."

"Black Dragon Witch and King of Death! What's the relationship between you two?"

At that moment, people's eyes sparkled.

Pure curiosity. A hint of slyness.

Humanity's eternal fascination: romance. The reporters probably wanted to link the Witch and me in that direction.

"Hmm..."

The Witch glanced at me.

A hint of mischief in her eyes.

"Our relationship..."

The Witch slowly opened her lips.

And then came a statement destined to be remembered.

"– More than friends, comrades in arms."

Murmurs and whispers.

The press was unsure where to focus. Should they concentrate on the phrase "more than friends" or on "comrades in arms"? They couldn't grasp the exact nature of our relationship.

The person who asked the question widened their eyes in surprise.

"Are you saying it's more than a friendship?"

"Well,"

The Witch replied leisurely.

"As I said, it's more than friends, but comrades in arms. That's all. I hope there's no misunderstanding or misinterpretation."

"Misinterpretation and misunderstanding mean...!"

"Today's press conference hosted by Black Dragon ends here."

The Witch stood up.

"Thank you again to everyone who showed interest and support. I was the guild leader of Black Dragon, the Black Dragon Witch. I wish everyone a great day."

The reporters also stood up quickly.

"Black Dragon Witch! You can't just leave like this!"

"Please, a more detailed comment on your last statement!"

"Black Dragon Witch!"

"King of Death, what do you think about her statement! King of Death!"

Wow.

The reporters cried out hoarsely, trying to get more information. But the Witch remained composed throughout, smiling slyly as she led me behind the stage.

"Let's go now."

"Okay."

I glanced back at the press corps. They all looked dejected.

"...Leaving after heating up the grill like this?"

"I'm a drama queen."

The Witch playfully winked with her left eye.

"A grand impression is left only when you fan the flames at the end."

Indeed, a statement befitting a guild leader who reigned over the tower.

Behind the stage.

We walked until we were out of sight of the public. There, the Witch let out a big sigh and suddenly grabbed both my hands.

"Perfect! King of Death!"

Her eyes sparkled.

It was hard to believe that this was the same person who had been managing her expressions so neutrally throughout the press conference.

"When did you learn to handle interviews like that! I'm impressed!"

"Uh... "

I just did the opposite of what the Flame Emperor would have done.

"Your humble attitude was especially a plus! People love heroes, but there's something they love even more. A hero who bows to them! Of course, if humility becomes servility, that's a problem... but you were just right. It was a perfect balance!"

I just recited the opposite of what the Flame Emperor used to say.

"Not knowing you also had the talent to handle the media was a surprise. Ahh, where have you been all this time? You're conquering the tower, building a great image, making my shoulders feel ten times lighter...!"

"....."

What?

I was feeling guilty for just mimicking a psychopath's opposite behavior.

"Don't hesitate to tell me if you want anything. Money? Fame? Power? Or a lover? Don't worry, if it exists in the tower, I'll give it to you."

"I'm already taking care of what I want... But, Black Dragon Witch. What was that statement about being more than friends but less than comrades? I was quite surprised."

"Oh, that?"

The Witch shrugged nonchalantly.

"It's nothing. Just spreading some smoke."

"Smoke?"

"Yes. The media will dig into baseless scandals anyway. That would damage your image. So, it's better to direct the attention to you and me instead."

"Is that so...?"

I wasn't sure if it was the right or wrong approach, having no experience in handling the media.

The Witch smiled faintly.

"Don't worry. King of Death. I've been handling public opinion alone for years. Trust me completely in this field. Leave it to the expert. Got it?"

"Ah, yes."

Strange.

Something felt odd... like being targeted by an unknown monster in a hunting ground. But this wasn't a hunting ground; it was Babylon, the first-floor city of the tower. There couldn't possibly be any monsters.

Was it just my imagination?

-Tsk, tsk.

The Guardian Spirit clicked its tongue.

-Pathetic, zombie. You have a head but no brain, so why wouldn't I call you a zombie? Shame on you, a hunter walking into death's ground unknowingly.

'What now?'

-Pathetic! Pathetic!

The Sword Emperor hit his chest in frustration, looking like a disgruntled gorilla.

Then, it happened.

"Woahhh!"

From beyond the stage, towards the plaza, a high-pitched cheer erupted. It was a bit different from the cheers for us earlier.

"Ten!"

"Nine!"

"Eight!"

The countdown began.

I stopped talking to the Witch and looked up at the sky.

[00 : 00 : 05]

Time had nearly run out for the opening of the 21st-floor stage.

"Three!"

"Two!"

"One!"

And then.

[00 : 00 : 00]

The beams of light that formed numbers in the sky scattered in all directions. The cheers of the people grew even louder. Responding to their cheers, the beams of light regrouped to form the image of a goddess.

[Warriors.]

In the blue sky.

The goddess's figure spoke.

[Heroes who climb the tower.]

[Congratulations on breaking through the shadow filled with the Demon King's resentment.]

The moment a new stage was unveiled.

The crowd, having already witnessed the goddess's image before, chattered happily.

But I knew, having experienced the tower in the past.

-Zombie.

'Yes.'

I nodded.

'I won't be careless.'

Just like the tower changed from the 11th floor after being a tutorial up to the 10th floor.

The fact that a completely different stage would unfold from the 21st floor onwards.

[You could have stayed forever on the first floor of the tower.]

The goddess's figure stated coldly.

[A refuge for those who fled.]

[You could have chosen comfort over giving up the challenge.]

[But by breaking through the 10th and 20th floors, you made your choice.]

Her voice echoed in the vast sky.

[To witness the end of this tower.]

[Then, it is right to respond to your will.]

Whoosh!

Suddenly, a white light enveloped us. It wasn't just the Witch and me. From the direction of the plaza, bewildered voices reached us.

"What, what's this!?"

"We didn't even say anything about..."

This was the biggest change from before.

No one had yet said 'transfer,' but we were engulfed in white light.

The Witch looked down at her feet in confusion.

"...Forced teleportation?"

Her guess was correct.

[Warriors who ascend the tower.]

[Those who have resolved to climb.]

[Only the chosen warriors will bear the noble burden from now on.]

In an instant, the white light completely enveloped us.

Chapter 55: The Ultimate Fanboy (3)

In any field, latecomers face disadvantages.

In a red ocean already dominated by veterans, newcomers must dive in and prove their worth, much like a low-ranking soldier struggling to climb a fortress seized by the enemy.

The tower was no exception.

"---Welcome!"

As the white light faded and we regained our sight, we were not greeted by the goddess's voice.

"Warriors ascending the tower!"

It was a child, indeterminate of gender.

A little kid, draped in an overly large robe, reminiscent of traditional eastern clothing at first glance.

"This Holed-Up Head Librarian has been eagerly awaiting your arrival like a day feels like three autumns!"

However, upon closer inspection... it was entirely different.

Other than the long sleeves, there was nothing resembling traditional eastern formal wear. In fact, the sleeves themselves were extraordinary, stretching out over 5 meters.

"Ah, but no matter! Life starts and ends with encounters. Looking back, what matters most in life is whom we've met. Waiting is just a spice that deepens life!"

There's a saying that fashion is completed by the face. No matter how special the clothing, it varies drastically depending on who wears it.

In that sense, the kid fluttering the 5-meter-long sleeves was definitely unique.

"Let me express my sincere welcome once again!"

In the air.

"Welcome to the Great Library of All Knowledge!"

The kid floated high in the sky, looking down on us who had been abruptly summoned.

[Holed-Up Head Librarian welcomes you all!]

The Head Librarian, in charge of managing floors 21 to 30.

The representative of this world spread his arms wide with a broad smile.

Regrettably, no one responded to his greeting. Hunters were still confused, trying to comprehend the situation.

"Uh, uh... what?"

"Why were we teleported all of a sudden?"

"Where are we?"

Roughly a few hundred people.

The hunters murmured in dismay. Most were those who had been in the plaza counting down just moments ago.

But there were others who were having 'personal time' elsewhere.

"Ahhhh!?"

"Don't, don't look here!"

Embarrassed screams echoed here and there.

Hunters who were summoned while showering, lovers teleported in the nude, and even someone who appeared to have been summoned from sleep, all drowsily looking around. Unexpectedly victimized hunters emerged.

"Oh my."

The Head Librarian chuckled.

"I might have lacked a bit of consideration."

While the hunters panicked, the librarian snapped his fingers. Large bookcases flew in. These bookcases, with holes for the head, arms, and legs, automatically fitted themselves onto the naked hunters.

"Ah..."

"Th-thank goodness."

Onlookers sighed in relief. I, too, felt a bit embarrassed by the scene.

"What... what the heck is this..."

The actual victims, now dressed in gigantic bookcases like Gundam suits made of cardboard, looked distressed. But they were in the minority. With this wave of embarrassment passing, people started to regain composure, looking up into the sky one by one.

"...Who are you?"

The Witch, representing the hunters, spoke up.

"And where is this...?"

"Ah. I'm just a humble manager of a slightly large library. Black Dragon Witch. Compared to you, I'm nothing more than an extra. I'd appreciate being treated as invisible."

"....."

The Witch frowned.

The stranger knew her identity, which she found to be an ominous sign.

I was already somewhat familiar with the concept of constellations, having recruited both the Demon King of the Autumn Rain and the Goddess of Protection. But to other hunters, constellations were still an unknown entity.

"-Just a slightly large library."

Seizing the moment when the Witch closed her lips, I took the initiative.

"I doubt it's just a slightly large level."

The 21st floor.

This place was one enormous library. Perhaps it was even an understatement to call it merely enormous. Bookshelves packed with books stretched from nearby to the horizon, from the floor we stood on to the ceiling above.

It was more akin to 'a world made of a library.'

"Interesting."

The world's master looked at me.

Eyes of pure innocence.

Eyes like those of a purely innocent child sparkled.

"Indeed. You must be the King of Death."

Hmm.

"Don't worry too much. My friends. I'm harmless. I sincerely just want to welcome you. To me, you're like the heroes from an epic."

Heroes from an epic.

Knowing what that meant after 4,000 days of regression, I pretended not to understand and asked.

"Heroes from an epic?"

"Like this."

Snap!

The Head Librarian flicked his fingers. Two hardcover books flew out from the countless shelves. Floating, they circled around the librarian.

Their titles were clearly written on the covers.

+

[Chronicles of the Aegim Empire]

[Story of the City of Ascension]

+

The Head Librarian smiled softly.

"My hobby is reading books. But the books in my library are no ordinary records. They're your histories. Books about the worlds where the tower has been erected."

The Head Librarian gently caressed the spine of the books.

"Wondering why only you among many warriors were summoned? The reason is simple! In your world, only you have 'character names.'"

"...Character names?"

"Aliases, as you call them."

The Head Librarian looked down at us with a faint smile.

"302 of you gathered here. All warriors with aliases."

The hunters murmured.

"Only hunters with aliases were summoned?"

"Then, the others are..."

"Wait. Does this mean we have to climb the tower amongst ourselves!?"

Yes.

Not the real names used outside, but the unique names given by the tower. Aliases. That was the entrance ticket from the 21st floor onwards.

'...That's why I couldn't set foot beyond the 20th floor before regressing.'

Pioneers with aliases.

Those without aliases, the latecomers.

'The gap between the two groups will only widen.'

I fiddled with the hilt of the dagger at my waist, a method to calm and focus my mind... a small personal ritual.

'I'm different from before.'

No longer was I the dropout who couldn't even step beyond the 20th floor due to lack of skills and aliases. Now, I was a hunter who just ascended to the 3rd rank.

'I won't just be excluded and fall behind.'

But few others maintained such composure.

The Witch was one of them.

She muttered in disbelief.

"It's impossible. Climbing the tower with just 300 people..."

"Don't worry!"

The Head Librarian grabbed [Chronicles of the Aegim Empire]. He smiled.

"You defended the Aegim Empire with just three people. 300 is a hundredfold more! You'll easily pass the stages I've prepared. Have confidence!"

"....."

Most hunters exchanged anxious glances. In the midst of the vast library extending to the horizon, the small group of hunters seemed insignificant.

Before the anxiety spread further, I interjected.

"Let's proceed, Head Librarian."

"Ah!"

"Though I'm thrilled to meet living beings, we'd like to ascend the tower quickly. The quest hasn't even been assigned yet. We request swift progression."

"Ah,ahaha."

The Head Librarian chuckled softly.

"Indeed! In my excitement, I neglected to assign the quest. However, explaining everything verbally isn't quite my style...."

Thud!

Hundreds of books flew towards us.

The hardcovers circled around the librarian, whirling in the air.

"Let's see... Which work will resonate most clearly? This apocalypse is too bland, and this one's end of the world is too quiet... Ah, yes! This one will be perfect."

He grabbed a book.

"But be warned."

And opened it.

White light burst from the opened pages.

"It's just a taste, so don't be too startled."

Whoosh!

A wave of light engulfed us.

All the hunters were transported somewhere.

It was clearly not our world. Buildings of unfamiliar architecture surrounded us, resembling termite mounds enlarged hundreds of times.

Including me, the hunters floated in the sky. We were high above, and beneath us, buildings unlike any we'd seen or heard of before stretched out.

"S-scary!"

Someone screamed. Perhaps they had a fear of heights? Despite not falling, the hunters instinctively clung to each other's sleeves.

Watching their antics, the Head Librarian laughed.

"I am the Head Librarian. But as mentioned, the records that gather in my library aren't ordinary history or fiction books. They are much more, no, significantly higher in level!"

The Great Library of All Knowledge.

A repository where the records of numerous worlds converge.

"These are the worlds you've conquered."

He tapped the spine of the book titled [Chronicles of the Aegim Empire].

"And this is your world!"

There was also a book titled [Story of the City of Ascension].

Hundreds more books flew around the librarian, resembling a childlike figure. He looked at his collection with an expression of unbearable adoration.

"People call these books various names. Some call them epics. Others refer to them as novels or chronicles. Annals. Or even sagas. But my preferred term is different."

The librarian turned to us.

"Apocalypse,"

He laughed.

"A peculiar laughter resonated in the sky.

"Your apocalypse is... let's say, still in [serialization]. You've just ended a long prologue and are beginning to climb the tower. You're entering a phase that's just starting to get interesting."

Then...

"But not all apocalypses are smoothly [serialized] like yours."

Rumble, rumble.

Something began descending from the sky. Descending was too gentle a word; they were tearing through the heavens.

"Regrettably."

Meteors.

"Some apocalypses have unfortunately faced [serialization cancellation]."

Massive rocks blazed and plummeted.

They struck the termite-mound-like buildings. Boom! An immense roar shook the world. The earth itself split under the torn sky. Cities that might have harbored other intelligent life were obliterated without a trace.

The hunters screamed.

Clouds of dust from the impact engulfed us.

"Not just one, but many."

In the dark, only the librarian's voice echoed magnificently.

"There are many."

Snap!

A book closed somewhere. With that, the dust clouds vanished. The destroyed city disappeared. The cracked earth and torn sky were gone.

In their place, new worlds unfolded beneath us.

"If the cause of cancellation in that apocalypse was stone -"

Tsunami.

"Then the reason for this one is water!"

A tsunami, reaching the bottom of the sky, engulfed the city.

It was too vast to be called a wave and too violent to be merely a tsunami. It was a disaster. The tsunami, nearing us, set off more screams among the hunters.

"Ah."

The librarian sighed sorrowfully.

"How tragic is it?"

Worlds where all humanity died from a disease.

Worlds where the last drop of water dried up under encroaching sand.

Worlds where volcanoes erupted, shrouding the sky in smoke and clouds.

Even a world ravaged by a zombie virus.

"These people were just like you. Alive, creating their own stories. But before reaching a proper ending, before achieving a grand finale, they met an unjust end."

The librarian closed the book.

"I call this 'serialization cancellation,' but..."

Hundreds of books still circled him.

"You would simply call it 'destruction.'"

Back in the enormous library.

"Ugh, ugh..."

"Blargh!"

Sounds of retching echoed. Dozens of worlds had been witnessed meeting their demise. Though physically unharmed, many hunters were mentally shaken.

"The quest for you is simple."

The librarian looked down at us.

"Choose eight apocalypses from those that have faced cancellation."

Select eight worlds from those that have been destroyed.

"I wish to finish reading the apocalypses that faced untimely ends!"

He wanted to continue the stories of worlds that were destroyed for irrational reasons.

"Enter the eight apocalypses yourselves,"

Enter those eight worlds directly.

"And save them from the brink of cancellation!"

Prevent their destruction.

"That is the quest I bestow upon you."

That was the quest from the 22nd to the 29th floors.

As the retching in the library continued, a voice resonated in the hunters' heads.

[The 22nd floor quest has been assigned.]

Text appeared before our eyes.

+

[Remake The World, Volume 1]

Difficulty: Undecided

Objective: There are countless worlds, and countless destructions. The 'Holed-Up Head Librarian' refers to this as 'serialization cancellation.' He wishes for the worlds that have faced unjust cancellation to resume their stories.

First, choose one of the canceled apocalypses!

If you succeed in saving the world, it will be registered as your 22nd floor.

*However, if you fail, the 22nd floor will not open.

+

Indeed.

This librarian was none other than a book-crazy, world-obsessed reader.

"So..."

I slowly opened my mouth.

"You're unsatisfied with the endings, so you want us to write the books for you?"

"Exactly so!"

The librarian laughed heartily.

"Please satisfy my reading tastes!"

Remaking the endings of worlds for this book-crazy reader.

That was our mission.

Chapter 56:

Bibliomania (1)

Silence filled the great library.

Hunters with weak stomachs were retching. Those with stronger constitutions stared at the quest that appeared before them, lost in thought.

The constellation.

"Ah."

The librarian, the only one with 5-meter-long sleeves fluttering, spoke up.

"Please clean up after yourselves if you're sick. Isn't that basic manners? The cleanliness of the library is maintained only through everyone's efforts."

Clap!

The librarian lightly clapped his hands. From the shadowy, dark corners behind the bookshelves, unidentifiable things approached. At first glance, they might have seemed human due to their limbs...

The Witch narrowed her eyes.

"...Bookmarks?"

The mysterious beings had bodies made of bookmarks.

Odd drawings adorned the middle of the bookmarks. Maid outfits? Servant dresses? Anyway, they bore images of attire that old-timey maids would wear.

"Ah. Right on the mark. These are Bookmark Maids!"

The librarian cleared his throat and placed his hand on his waist.

"They will serve you until you clear the 30th floor."

The maids depicted on the bookmarks bowed their bodies.

"If you need to eat or use the restroom, just speak to the Bookmark Maids. They might not look it, but they are quite capable."

"Monsters... right? Basically?"

The librarian covered his mouth with his sleeve.

His eyes smirked while he spoke.

"You may think of them that way."

Though his eyes smiled, his voice did not. The hunters flinched. It was the first time the constantly cheerful voice of the constellation turned cold.

"While you stay here, there are a few things to keep in mind," the librarian continued.

"First, never touch a book I haven't permitted. Don't even lay a hand on them. These are all books I've painstakingly collected. Unique apocalypses in this universe. Anyone who dares to touch a book without the owner's permission..."

"Damn it."

Suddenly, a hunter cursed.

"This is a joke. You're just the boss monster!"

"...Hmm."

"Hey! Arm yourselves! Forget quests and stuff; if we all attack that guy, we can clear up to the 30th floor. What kind of 'lord' are you! If we attack together, we can take him down!"

The crowd began to murmur.

The librarian didn't stop the instigator, just quietly watched with a smile. Seeing the constellation's silence, the hunter became even more emboldened.

"We can take down a little kid like that! Even that newbie, calling himself the King of Death, cleared the 20th floor alone."

"....."

They're dragging me into this.

"We can do it too! Right!?"

As the instigator pointed at me, several people turned in our direction. The hunters were of various ethnicities, with eyes of all colors. But the emotions in their eyes were all the same.

Envy, jealousy, greed.

All too familiar emotions.

"Stay out of this! You, the Five Great Guilds, back off!"

The hunter shouted not only at me but also at the Witch, the Sword Saint, and even the Heretic Inquisitor and the Countess, leaders of the large guilds.

"I didn't like that you monopolized the assault from the 11th floor. Acting like you represent the tower, bringing in some new hero. Thinking we don't know about your tricks?"

The Witch bristled.

"Who are you talking to...!"

Squeeze.

I grabbed her wrist.

"Hold back."

"No, King of Death. If we let them..."

"Just bear with it for now."

I whispered to the Witch.

"This is all being 'broadcast' live."

She blinked.

"Broadcast? What do you mean?"

"It's being projected as a hologram in Babylon Square."

"....."

In the past, I couldn't set foot on the 21st floor as I lacked an alias. Yet, I knew exactly how this stage worked, what the quest was, every detail.

"It's like a TV program. People gathered in the square are watching everything we do live."

"Why would they do that...?"

"The librarian said it. We are no different from 'characters.'"

I quietly said.

"Of course, there are 'readers' watching these characters."

That's right.

Even in the past, I saw it in the square. I watched it. Although I couldn't participate in the assault... I watched how the titled hunters cleared from the 21st to the 30th floor.

'There must be a hologram in the square right now.'

Everything we do and say is broadcast live to hundreds of thousands of readers.

In the truest sense, we are on stage.

"Don't let your guard down thinking no one's watching. Black Dragon Witch."

"If we say or do something strange here, it will stay in people's memories forever."

The guild leader immediately understood.

How terrifying that was.

"Indeed. This stage isn't just about clearing it or not."

I nodded.

"Yes. It's most important 'how' we clear it."

We must avoid doing anything that might be criticized later. We, the people, no, the readers, must feel like heroes in a book, acting and fulfilling our roles.

"We are already in a work called [The Great Library]."

That's when it happened.

After the quest appeared, a notification that should have followed arrived.

It wasn't the Witch's or the librarian's voice, but the voice of the tower.

[Welcome, King of Death.]

I smiled inwardly.

[Receiving the 20th floor clear reward!]

The reward for yesterday's deeds, for saving the Aegim Empire and the continent.

It was time to receive it.

The tower is harsh on latecomers.

But it generously rewards those who lead.

[Normal stage reward.]

[Blessing, God of Beauty's favor descends upon you!]

[From the 21st to 30th floors, you can observe the favorability of characters.]

The rewards didn't end there.

There was still the reward for completing the hidden quest.

[Hidden stage reward.]

[Blessing, God of Snakes's favor descends upon you!]

[From the 21st to 30th floors, you can observe the psychology of characters.]

'Great!'

They were the perfect privileges for me.

In this quest, how well you perform your role is key.

'These are exactly the privileges I need now!'

To play a role, it's not enough to be good alone. You must also understand the psychology of others, of other characters.

After all, acting is always teamwork, not solo play.

'Ability window.'

Before starting the quest in earnest, I checked my status.

+

Name: King of Death

Rank: D

Skills (5/6)

1. I Want to Become Just Like You (S+)

2. Returner's Winding Clock (EX)

3. Sword Constellation (A+)

4. Goblin High Society (F)

5. Ghoul Reincarnation (SSS)

6. None.

*God of Beauty's blessing is in effect.

*God of Snakes's blessing is in effect.

+

'Okay.'

I glanced at the Witch. I realized I was still holding her wrist. I let go as naturally as possible and muttered a plausible command in my mind.

'Character window.'

Swoosh!

A hologram appeared before my eyes.

For the first time, I saw a status window I had never seen before.

+

Name: Black Witch

Favorability: 82

Preferred Genres: [Romance]

Disliked Genres: [History]

Preferred Characters: [Prince on a White Horse], [Young Guys], [Wild Man], [Goofy Guys]

Disliked Characters: [Psychopath], [Soldier], [Politician], [Incompetent Female Lead]

Preferred Plots: [Gratitude], [Small Sacrifice for a Greater Cause]

Disliked Plots: [Forgetfulness], [Betrayal], [Misunderstanding by the Female Lead]

Mental State: 'If our actions are truly being broadcasted in Babylon... I must portray a noble character for the future. Clearing the stage is secondary. Yes, I need to move with calculated political tactics. The wisest tactic would be...'

+

Uh.

As I was bewildered and lost for words, the witch's expression hardened. It seemed she was worried something had gone wrong with me.

“What's wrong? Is something the matter?”

“No, no, it's nothing.”

“...Well, that's good. But if you have any information I need to know, tell me right away. I'm thinking of a strategy.”

“Yes, yes.”

The witch turned her head and immersed herself in thought again.

With a very serious look.

While looking at her profile, I felt a certain emotion.

‘What is this?’

What was this inexplicable sense of guilt?

‘It feels like... I've secretly read someone else's diary....’

-Hahahaha!

The Guardian Spirit, sharing my consciousness, was already rolling on the floor laughing.

Kicking the air and bursting into laughter.

-The Prince on a White Horse! The Prince on a White Horse...! Ah! To think that someone that age, maintaining her youth with elixirs, is dreaming of a Prince on a White Horse at this age! Zombie, why don't you find a majestic horse to ride on! You're a hero, right? Just put a crown on a hero and he becomes a prince! Wow, what a perfect match!

"....."

I stared blankly at the Guardian Spirit.

-Huh? What's with that look? You seem to be glaring at me.

I murmured softly in my mind.

‘...Character Window.’

-Eh? Wha-what? Hey, Kim Zombie! What are you doing!?
Man! Hey!

The Guardian Spirit panicked and waved its hands.

But waving hands couldn't stop my command.

The Guardian Spirit's character window was blatantly displayed before my eyes.

+

Name: Sword Emperor

Favorability: 59

Preferred Genres: [Martial Arts]

Disliked Genres: [Everything but Martial Arts]

Preferred Characters: [Macho], [Rivals], [Mothers]

Disliked Characters: [Weaklings], [Fools]

Preferred Plots: [Victory], [Cathartic]

Disliked Plots: [Defeat], [Frustration]

Mental State: ‘Shit! Does this thing work on me too!?’

+

‘Pffft!’

I burst into laughter internally.

I barely managed to maintain my expressionless facade.

‘Oh, a mama's boy, Sword Emperor? I didn't see that coming...’

-I'll kill you!!

The Sword Emperor's eyes widened in rage. More than just widening, it exploded in anger. Flailing its limbs, it caused a ruckus.

-I'll kill you! Turn it off now! Forget it! Erase it from your brain, damn it! If you don't erase it right now, I'll blow your head off! I'll really kill you! I'll break off all ties with you, man!?

I had known him for quite some time, but I had never seen him this flustered. The more disadvantaged a person, the louder they become. Unlike the Sword Emperor, I was completely relaxed.

‘Until the 30th floor, keep your head down around me.

Otherwise, I'll bring up your character window whenever I get the chance.'

—Eek...!

The Guardian Spirit gasped. His nostrils flared tremendously. But no matter how impressive his nostrils were, what could it do? He couldn't hit me, nor could it block my abilities.

-Just you wait! You'll get what's coming to you!

'Haha.'

The threat didn't scare me at all.

While I was testing my new privilege, the hunters were increasingly divided into two factions.

One side, led by the agitator, advocated for collectively attacking the [Boss Monster]. The other side, including me and the Witch, opted for a more cautious approach, observing the situation.

The aggressive faction had about 100 members.

The cautious faction had about 200 members.

“How foolish.”

The usually silent Sword Saint finally spoke.

The elderly swordsman looked disdainfully at the aggressive faction.

“Have you already forgotten what the Constellation just showed us? The destruction of worlds. If it wishes, the Constellation could throw us into such a world and easily escape. And yet, you choose to provoke it. Insanity.”

“If it's mass suicide you're after, I won't stop you.”

With just one sentence from the Sword Saint, half of the aggressive faction withdrew.

Now, only about 50 hunters remained in the aggressive faction.

“Hey! Don't chicken out!”

The instigator, likely a high-ranking hunter, yelled.

“King of Death cleared the 10th floor alone! The 20th floor was a solo play too! Boss Monsters are always like that, but the giant guilds want to monopolize the benefits. If you want to wag your tails at the Five Great Guilds forever, then get lost!”

It seemed like the instigator might be the head of a sturdy mid-sized guild, considering about 50 people were still swayed by his words.

‘But, if I can't remember his face or title...’

“Hmm-.”

There's always a reason for that.

“-Has the situation been sorted out?”

The Head Librarian looked down at the 50 hunters of the aggressive faction.

Like planets orbiting the sun, hundreds of books revolved around the Head Librarian.

“That’s right! Boss Monster, we’re more than enough to take down a little runt like you...!”

“Sorry, I’m not particularly fond of clichés.”

The Head Librarian picked up a book.

[The Epic of the Sealed World] was its title.

“Let’s just get this over with.”

Whoosh!

The book opened and emitted a bright light. But this time, it wasn’t just a flash. Dark arms, numerous tentacles flowed out and engulfed the aggressive hunters.

Screams echoed around.

“What... what is this!?”

“In this epic, humanity has been wiped out, leaving only a single magician alive.”

One by one, the hunters were seized by the monster's tentacles and lifted into the air.

“Well, this magician, my favorite character, has become more like a tentacled monster than a human. He's my ninth favorite character, actually.”

“Aaahhhhh!”

The hunter grabbed by the tentacles was soon swallowed by the book.

“Save, save me!”

The lucky hunters who dodged the tentacles started to flee, but it was futile. Even more tentacles emerged from the book. Some hunters were grabbed by the wrists, some by the waist, others by the ankles.

“This magician specializes in sealing magic. It's like a guest-host relationship. I occasionally give him ‘materials,’ and he gladly fulfills my requests.”

In an instant, all 50 hunters were devoured by the book.

The Head Librarian grinned.

“Just like now.”

Thump.

Thump, thump. Clatter. Thump, thump.

The book that devoured the hunters began to spit something out.

Bingeing and purging.

We held our breaths, watching the unfolding scene. Although we couldn't see it from here, probably tens of thousands of people gathered in Babylon Square were doing the same.

“Ah.”

The book regurgitated giant bookmarks.

As tall as a person.

Bookmarks with arms and legs.

“The magician’s hobby is to dress up his creations in maid outfits.”

A maid's outfit was drawn in the center of each bookmark.

“A bit perverted, but what can you do? Everyone else in his world is gone. It'd be more strange if he kept his sanity.”

The hunters looked around in horror.

Just within sight, there were 50 bookmark maids.

Looking further around the library, there were hundreds, even thousands of bookmark maids, holding mops or dishes.

"....."

The hunters were silent.

Just considering what was visible, the scale was immense.

The Grand Library stretched beyond the horizon.

If the entire library was considered, how many bookmark maids were wandering around?

"Hmm. It's tidied up nicely! The unnecessary extras are cleared out."

Thump!

The Head Librarian closed the book.

“Are you ready to be the protagonists now?”

Chapter 57:

Bibliomania (2)

The hunters gathered around in the library.

"Um..."

Hunters sat in a wide circle, and in the middle of them were hundreds of [Apocalypses] piled up. Now, they had to choose one, but no one dared to approach the pile hastily.

It was understandable. Just moments ago, their comrades were devoured by books, fifty of them. Everyone was either fearful or gloomy.

In such a situation, who would dare to laugh cheerily unless they were a lunatic of sorts?

"Ahaha!"

Surprisingly, such a lunatic existed.

"50 deaths right at the start. That's quite a blow."

The blond boy, recognized as one of the top lunatics in our world, stroked his chin. The Heretic Inquisitor spoke up.

"But, sacrifices are part of advancement. We must not forget their sacrifices and strive harder in our conquest!"

"Let's lift our spirits! It's fortunate that only 50 were lost instead of a potential 100. Instead of mourning what's lost, we should be happy for what's preserved!"

As the Heretic Inquisitor spoke more, the atmosphere grew heavier.

Bookmark Maids were still serving around us. They brought hot coffee and tea, yet of the 250 hunters, only the Heretic Inquisitor accepted it with a cheerful "Ah! Thank you!"

"Hmm?"

Sipping tea, the Inquisitor looked puzzled.

"Aren't you drinking, everyone? It's quite delicious, you know?"

"Firstly..."

I interrupted the Inquisitor.

"A lunatic like you should just stay quiet."

"Why is that?"

"The more you talk, the more our morale drops. If our morale falls any further here, it'll be a disaster, so please, just shut up until I say otherwise."

"Ah, that would indeed be a disaster."

The Inquisitor laughed heartily.

"Understood, King of Death! I'll gladly shut up!"

Hunters looked at us incredulously.

Don't look at me like that. I just figured out how to handle this lunatic.

"Now."

I raised my voice to change the mood.

"Everyone, you must have realized by now. We can't rashly challenge the librarian. For now, we have no choice but to follow the quest given by him."

The hunters' gazes slowly shifted to me.

I swallowed the instinctive feeling of pressure.

'I am now ranked third.'

In this place, I'm the third most influential hunter!

I maintained a stoic expression and spoke.

"But just because we follow the quest doesn't mean we're at a disadvantage. Everyone, take a look at the quest window."

Following my cue, the hunters looked into the air.

The same hologram I saw must be appearing before their eyes.

+

[Remake The World, Volume 1]

Difficulty: Undecided

Objective: There are countless worlds, and countless destructions. The 'Holed-Up Head Librarian' refers to this as 'serialization cancellation.' He wishes for the worlds that have faced unjust cancellation to resume their stories.

First, choose one of the canceled apocalypses!

If you succeed in saving the world, it will be registered as your 22nd floor.

*However, if you fail, the 22nd floor will not open.

+

"Have you all read it?"

The hunters nodded. Some even verbally affirmed. Maybe it was the effect of silencing the Heretic Inquisitor, but it seemed there would be no challenge to my authority for the time being.

"The most important part is the last sentence. [If you succeed in saving the world, it will be registered as your 22nd floor]. Do you understand what this means?"

The hunters looked confused.

They didn't realize the immense reward it represented.

I explained.

"Depending on which world we save, the rewards can vary greatly. Imagine if we save a world laden with diamonds! Then that world becomes our 22nd floor."

'.....'

The hunters' faces began to change.

"Diamonds are just an example. We, who live in the tower, have no need for such coal chunks. But what if it's a world rich in food, water, and various ores?"

"Self-sufficiency..."

The Witch murmured.

"We can truly become self-sufficient."

"Exactly."

I stood up and walked towards the pile of books, the Apocalypses the librarian had left for us to choose from.

"Wait, King of Death!"

Viper called out from behind.

"If you touch them recklessly, more tentacle monsters might..."

I picked up a random Apocalypse. Gasps! Hunters screamed and closed their eyes, fearing another outbreak of tentacle monsters. Some even ran away.

But nothing happened for one second, two seconds, three seconds.

The Apocalypse lay quietly in my hand, just like an ordinary book.

"Eh?"

Viper cautiously opened one eye.

"Nothing happened...?"

"Hehe."

The librarian, floating in the air, laughed.

"That's right! Unless I exert my power, Apocalypses are just ordinary books. Of course, there are forbidden books that become dangerous by mere touch. But those are sealed deep away, so don't worry."

"Hmm."

I nodded and opened the book I held. Another hologram popped up, this time with information about the book.

[Tales of the Sormewin Academy]

Genre: Romance, Fantasy

Difficulty: D

Required Participants: 4-5

*The serialization has been discontinued.

Description: Sormewin is an academy of ancient magic. A normal school where friendship, competition, love, and jealousy intertwine. This Apocalypse could have remained a typical school story if not for the world-ending artifact sealed underneath the academy!

Reason for Discontinuation: The Villainess Lady loses her fiancé (the Crown Prince) to a second-time reincarnated female student. In a fit of rage, she unleashes the sealed artifact, freeing the Great Demon and causing world annihilation.

The reason for discontinuation, in short, the cause of world annihilation, was rather pitiable.

Better than worlds destroyed by meteorites or tsunamis.

'Pitiful. A world destroyed over petty romantic squabbles of kids...'

No wonder the librarian was angry.

Imagine this.

"Ah."

As if a crack formed in a blue gem, the ice-like eyes of the Crown Prince began to understand.

The long misunderstanding that had separated them melted away, now in their second life.

"My other half was here all along. Lady Silvia, you are my other half."

The prince, murmuring as if sighing, knelt on one knee. Silvia silently sobbed into her heart.

They both realized they would never forget this moment, even at death's door.

At that moment.

Bang! The Crown Prince burst open.

"What?"

In the next instant, Silvia also burst open.

The chaotic screams echoed in the fading consciousness of Silvia.

"Aaaah!"

"The demon! A demon has appeared!"

"Just my luck."

The world.

It was the moment of its demise.

Imagine a gripping romance novel abruptly ending like this.
Any reader would be infuriated.

And if it's a real world, even more so.

'Anyway.'

That's not what's important right now.

"Everyone! Come over and take a look at these books."

I shouted to the hunters.

"The difficulty and content of each book vary. We need to select books that we can clear and those that will benefit us the most!"

A few hunters stood up.

But still, the majority just stared at each other blankly.

-Idiot. You're being too polite. That's why they're like this. Do you still not understand how stubborn these hunters can be?

The Sword Emperor commented.

-The more you level up, the more [Your existence becomes better defined.] is heard. Know what that means? [Your pride grows stronger.] The higher the hunter's level, the stronger their pride. They hardly listen.

Indeed.

I let out a roar filled with aura.

"Read the Apocalypses! There are hundreds of them, how the hell can I read them all alone! Come and read!"

Startled.

Finally, the hesitant hunters got up.

"Listen up!"

I continued commanding.

"Divide into groups. Those who've read novels or history, go to the left! If you're clueless about either, go to the right! Hurry! Quick!"

The hunters' steps quickened.

Rustle!

They divided into two groups.

"Readers, divide by your favorite genre! Romance lovers, go to the romance group! Fantasy fans, to the fantasy group! Mystery enthusiasts, form a separate group for mystery! Hurry!"

Finally, the library atmosphere became busier.

Under my command, hunters began scurrying around.

"Now, we'll all read!"

I tapped the Apocalypse in my hand.

"We'll distribute hundreds of books by genre. Romance group, read romance books. Other groups, read according to your genre! Read and determine whether it's a hit or a flop."

"Uh! Uh!"

The Heretic Inquisitor waved his arms, still following my order to keep quiet.

"Go ahead, speak."

"King of Death! I don't understand what a flop is! Can you explain the criteria? Is a story a hit if it's good and a flop if it's bad?"

"No, not at all."

I opened an Apocalypse to show him.

"Take this, for example. This is a flop."

+

[Surviving in a Volcano!]

Genre: Survival, Romance

Difficulty: D

Required Participants: 2

*The serialization has been discontinued.

Description: This world was devastated by a nuclear war. However, the tenacity of human life is remarkable! Even on the post-war surface, the protagonist and his lover survived. The protagonist couple, overcoming all adversities, vowed to become the new Adam and Eve.

Reason for Discontinuation: On their last day of camping, the protagonist couple unfortunately chose a volcanic area. A volcano erupted in the middle of the night. Rocks hurled from the volcano killed both the protagonist and his lover. Humanity perished.

+

I spoke with a sense of tragedy.

"It's not just a bad work, it's a disaster."

"Why?" the Heretic Inquisitor tilted his head.

"New Adam and Eve. Isn't that romantic and nice!"

"This world is useless to save. It's already a world after a nuclear war."

I sighed and closed the book.

"What's the use of getting a world contaminated with radiation as our 22nd floor? Do we want to die collectively from radiation?"

"Aha."

For reference...

In the past, the Flame Emperor cleared the Great Library with a brilliant strategy.

From the 22nd to the 29th floor, he exclusively chose worlds covered with [lava] or [volcanoes].

'Crazy.'

The Flame Emperor was immune to fire. In such dystopian worlds with flowing lava and erupting volcanoes, he could stroll leisurely.

He chose Apocalypses based solely on [how easily they could be conquered].

He didn't consider, not even a bit, what benefits rescuing each Apocalypse would bring us.

'An opportunity to acquire eight treasure troves!'

Such self-absorbed individuals are no help.

It's a loss for others living in the tower.

'This time, I'll pick Apocalypses that can maximize our gains.'

Apocalypses that bring forth monsters beneficial for hunters'

real-world experiences, worlds filled with rare minerals, ruins crammed with artifacts, worlds where seasoned chicken and sweet-and-sour pork frolic in forests and shrimp tempuras dance in seas.

No, let's cancel that last one. It'd be quite scary if it actually existed.

Anyway!

"Remember! It's not important whether the story is garbage or not!"

I shouted while distributing books to the hunters.

"Don't worry if the protagonist is annoying, or if the story is boring. Just read! Read from start to finish and calculate whether saving this world would benefit us all...."

I hesitated.

Paused while distributing books.

One hunter caught my eye.

"...Excuse me, Black Dragon Witch?"

"Yes. What is it?"

It was the Witch.

I slowly began to speak.

"This is the [Mystery] group."

A gathering of those who regularly read detective novels.

Somehow, the Witch was sitting there confidently.

Didn't her character window earlier show her as a fan of romance?

"I know."

The witch nodded as if it were obvious.

"You think I don't know where I'm sitting?"

"Um... Black Dragon Witch. Do you like mystery novels?"

"Of course."

Sipping her black coffee demurely, she replied,

"I'm an intellectual woman."

"....."

Insane.

Why is this guild master suddenly pretending to be ordinary? She loves dramas and romances, clearly a fan of melodramatic romance.

'Maybe.'

I had a realization.

'She doesn't want others to know she's into romance?'

Indeed, the [Romance] group had unusually few hunters. Not a single man was present. Strangely, the [Martial Arts] group was swarming with men.

I bet most of them don't actually read martial arts novels.

'Wow.'

My mind went blank.

'Are these people still pretending in this situation!?!'

-Didn't I tell you?

The Sword Emperor muttered dully.

-High-level hunters live by their pride. They've even received titles. They'd rather die than lose face. Didn't you see? Earlier, 50 of them attempted a suicide attack. They're all insane.

Going insane.

"No, Black Dragon Witch... even so..."

"What's the matter?"

She inquired calmly, her face impenetrable like a fortress.

Desperately searching for something to say, I cautiously continued,

"No... I just thought you were quite romantic... I always thought so. Seeing you not in the romance but the mystery group was unexpected...."

Her fingers around the coffee cup paused.

"Hmm. Is that so?"

Her voice remained unchanged.

"Do I look like someone who suits romance?"

"Yes. Actually, it feels odd seeing you elsewhere. Like wearing clothes that don't fit...."

"Ha."

Setting down her coffee cup, the witch stood up.

"If the King of Death says so, I can't argue. I've never read a romance novel, but let's see. A new genre to get acquainted with. It's the right attitude for a hunter to always embrace new challenges."

"That's a wise decision...."

"Okay. Got it."

The Witch walked towards the romance group, like a cowboy walking off into the sunset in a Western film.

I watched her leave with complex feelings.

"Amazing, King of Death!"

The Heretic Inquisitor looked at me with bright eyes. He too was sitting in the mystery group.

"The Black Dragon Witch rarely changes her mind. Aha. What a great new member we have!"

"...Temple Lord. Do you read detective novels?"

The Inquisitor smiled like an angel.

"I know Sherlock Holmes!"

"Oh. And Doctor Watson too."

I quietly recited a command in my mind.

'Character Window.'

The text appeared before my eyes.

+

Name: Heretic Inquisitor

Favorability: 50

Preferred Genres: [Fairy Tales] [Mythology] [Legends]

Disliked Genres: None

Preferred Characters: [Humans]

Disliked Characters: None

Preferred Plots: [Greatest Happiness for the Greatest Number of People]

Disliked Plots: None

Psychological State: 'I know Sherlock Holmes! Ah. And Doctor Watson too.'

+

Insane.

Chills ran down my spine.

'He's exactly as he appears?'

Moreover, he had no dislikes or hates.

'Is he even human!?'

A shocking and terrifying realization.

A pure, natural-born crazy psycho.

"Hmm? What's wrong, King of Death?"

The crazy psycho tilted his head.

I pondered briefly on how to handle him.

Then, pulling out a sign pen, I wrote on the Inquisitor's hand.

[Fairy Tales].

With a stern face, I spoke.

"Inquisitor."

"Yes!"

"From now on, you are part of the Fairy Tales group."

"Fairy Tales!"

"Yes. In this group, it's just you. You alone will have to verify and review all the books that come into this group."

"Oh! That's a heavy responsibility!"

The crazy psycho's eyes sparkled.

I nodded.

"Yes, it is. So please take care of it."

"Ahaha. Don't worry! King of Death. I'll thoroughly review them!"

Right.

Even though there wasn't a single Fairy Tale among the hundreds of Apocalypses.

I scanned again to ensure no hunters were pretending to be ordinary. The result was astounding. Over 100 out of 250 hunters were disguising their true reading preferences.

'These crazy people...'

It took three hours just to divide the groups.

I managed to relocate 112 pretenders to their rightful places.

But even I...

Upon reaching the last person, I couldn't help but fall silent.

+

Name: Viper

Favorability: 32

Preferred Genres: [Isekai], [Overpowered MC], [Absurd], [Harem]...

Disliked Genres: [Political], [Crime]

Preferred Characters: [Older Sisters], [Younger Sisters], [Married Women], [Innocent], [Sassy], [Cross-Dressing Boys]...

Disliked Characters: [Mafia], [Thugs], [Blond Tanned Delinquents]

Preferred Plots: [Summoned to another world, turns out I'm a pure cheat character with the blood of the strongest dragon and the demon empress, so I'll show what real overpowering is, any problem?], [Seems like my sister became the creator god for me, but as a normal high school student who just wants a peaceful life, this is troubling], [Cheat], [Unrivaled], [Harem], [Oh well, looks like I have to step up]

Disliked Plots: [NTR]

Mental State: 'Damn. What's with this Martial Sect? This is so boring. Every line is just about beggars, assassins, and sweaty men. Damn. Isn't this too inconsiderate of the readers?'

+

This individual wore an eye patch over one eye.

This individual was known as the Master of the Celestial Martial Clan.

This individual... was the Emperor of Light Novels.

"Huh?"

Viper turned to look at me.

"What? I'm busy reading."

And Viper was sitting in the [Martial Arts] group.

"No..."

I couldn't bring myself to say anything.

"Sorry for disturbing your reading. Please continue...."

"Alright."

I turned and walked away weakly.

This 21st floor made it clear.

Every top hunter was insane.

And I had to carry these insane people.

Chapter 58:

Bibliomania (3)

The task I set for the hunters was to find successful works.

"You understand, right?"

I moved among the hunters, instructing them.

"It's not good if the difficulty is too high, nor if it's too easy. Choose an Apocalypse with a suitable difficulty level! And one that provides appropriate rewards."

Following my directive, all 250 hunters read the Apocalypses.

Each book, chronicling the trajectory of a world, was immensely voluminous. Despite all hunters being engrossed in reading, the task was far from completion.

"King of Death, something is strange."

The Heretic Inquisitor, who hadn't received a single book, was the exception.

His hand still bore the word 'Fairy Tales.'

"What is it?"

"I'm not receiving any Apocalypses. Is 'Fairy Tales' a minor genre?"

"No way. There might be people who haven't read fantasy or romance, but everyone knows fairy tales. It's a major genre among majors."

"True. But why haven't I received a single one?"

The crazy psycho tilted his head.

'Because there's no fairy tale ending with world destruction, you weirdo.'

I swallowed such words and feigned ignorance.

"Who knows? Just wait a bit more. Surely, among all these books, there must be at least one fairy tale."

"Hmm. Perhaps I'm being too impatient. I'll wait patiently!"

The Heretic Inquisitor cheerfully sat in a corner. He, the Witch, and all other hunters knew that a day with a fairy tale book for him would never come.

"Hey, religious fanatic."

Correct that.

It seems the Emperor of Light Novels didn't know.

"Yes, Master of the Celestial Martial Clan? Did you call me?"

"This seems like a fairy tale. It was mixed in with the martial arts books."

"Oh! Thank you!"

The Heretic Inquisitor received the Apocalypse from Viper. His smile was radiant, as if made from grinding angels and saints.

It was a bit scary.

"Then, King of Death, I'll start reading too! Ah, I'm curious about the content of this Apocalypse!"

"What's the alias of the Apocalypse?"

"[Me and Our Scapegoat]!"

The alias was also a bit scary.

Eventually, all groups received their books and started reading.

How much time passed, it was mealtime.

"Ugh."

"My eyes feel like they're going to pop out."

Pained groans echoed around.

Even the sandwiches and tea served by the Bookmark Maids were devoured without complaint, showing the extent of their exhaustion.

"King of Death..."

The Witch, who took charge of the [Romance] group, was no exception.

"I think I can understand the sentiment of that librarian."

"Really?"

"These Apocalypses, they all have their climax interrupted."

The Witch's face showed considerable fatigue.

"The heroine confesses to the hero, and a meteorite falls. Just as they are about to kiss, aliens invade. Everything's a mess! I mean, I get the meteorite, but alien invasions in royal romance comedies? What's that about?"

And then, the Witch continued.

"It's even worse because they're so interesting until that point. The protagonists are charming, the story is captivating, but then the ending is garbage! It's like having a perfect course meal, but when you cut into the main dish, you find something unexpected..."

"Don't say what it is. Can't you see I'm eating a pork cutlet sandwich?"

"Ah, sorry, King of Death. It wasn't very delicate of me... But I have to say! It felt like..."

"This is all being broadcast. Are you okay with that, Witch?"

The Witch hushed, closing her mouth. Really, she has a temper at strange times, like when she was trying to match the eye of a one-eyed giant zombie.

Anyway, relieved, I was about to finish my pork cutlet sandwich when the Witch leaned in to whisper in my ear.

"It felt like..."

I wondered if everyone in Babylon Square was holding their breath, watching the Witch whisper in my ear.

Hearing the content of her whisper, I felt like my breath stopped. The details made me not want to look at a pork cutlet sandwich for at least a month.

Oh, God. Please save me...

[Shiny does its best to save you.]

I wish the goddess of her own world would just stay quiet...

Of course, the god of this Great Library didn't save me.

Instead, the Holed-Up Head Librarian floated around in the air, chuckling.

"At last, you too understand my pain."

The librarian's exterior was that of a child, but the laughter on his face was anything but childish. It was the laughter of a gourmet who had lost his taste after experiencing the sweet and sour combo of life.

"Why hide it? The 683 Apocalypses I allowed you to read are the most bizarrely destructive Revelations in my library."

"Revelations?"

"Yes. So interesting and captivating that readers can't help but love them."

His laughter grew eerier.

"But that's all! Despite their excitement, you will never be happy. Because these Revelations all have crappy endings!"

The Witch swallowed hard.

"Did you deliberately choose these works to give us the same pain...?"

"Feel free to think so."

"I can't think otherwise..."

"Ah! Join the hell of interrupted serializations. And like me, struggle in eternal pain! Go on! Suffer quickly!"

The librarian roared with laughter.

Some hunters trembled in fear.

"Could he be a demon?"

"Making us read masterpieces that were intentionally interrupted. He's insane."

"It's a sin deserving of divine punishment...!"

Later, it turned out they were originally novel enthusiasts. I don't quite understand, but to them, the librarian's words seemed to be very frightening.

Then...

"Ah. Hunter."

"Hmm?"

A familiar voice called out.

Looking around, I saw a woman from the [Fantasy] group waving. It took me a moment to recognize her, but then I remembered.

"Oh, isn't that the alchemist?"

The hunter who would later become the Master Alchemist.

The Apothecary who made me an elixir was there.

"Ms. Alchemist, you got an alias too?"

"Well, somehow. 'Apothecary' is not that glamorous, but... Hehe."

The shy Alchemist turned into the Apothecary, smiling awkwardly.

I was surprised.

'The Master Alchemist already has an alias?'

Even for a hunter destined for greatness, the woman before me had just recently been wandering the slums. 'Alias.' It seemed too early for her to achieve something that the Tower would recognize. Even I, armed with cheat-like skills, only got an alias after repeated insane acts. Was it true that promising sprouts show their potential from the start?

"You're truly amazing, Miss. How did you get an alias so quickly? I knew it; I was right about you. It was worth investing in you."

"Oh, no! I'm not that great!"

The Apothecary waved her hand modestly.

"Really. I'm not being humble... I just got an alias without doing anything."

"What?"

"I don't know how it happened either. A few days ago, I suddenly heard 'Your created item contributed to saving the world,' and then I was given an alias. I'm sorry. I really don't understand..."

'Ah.'

The Apothecary looked as perplexed as she sounded. But I realized the truth upon hearing her words.

"It's because of the Elixir you made for me!"

The cause was the Elixir I took to fight the Demon King.

During my fierce battle with the Demon King, the Elixir had greatly enhanced my senses. It allowed me to observe the Demon King's sword strikes in slow motion.

'So, that means...'

Essentially,

'I've been supporting her all along?'

I unintentionally helped someone rise to prominence.

The Apothecary twiddled her fingers, unaware of this.

"It's not me who's remarkable, but you, King of Death! Oh, I should call you King of Death now... You're truly amazing. Just a few days ago, you were outside the rankings, but you shot up to third place! It's a huge, huge honor to know someone like you! I've always wanted to tell you this!"

"Ah, it's nothing. I was just lucky..."

As I awkwardly scratched my head, the Apothecary chuckled and clasped her hands behind her back.

"King of Death, if there's anything you need, just let me know! I'll help with anything I can!"

Wow.

What's with her?

Is she an angel?

-Zombie, can't you raise the bar a little before seeing people as angels?

'I just believe in people, Sword Emperor. Even if I'm betrayed, I can't stop believing in people. It's not my fault for having such a passionate heart.'

-Hot dog sound for your hot nonsense today.

Let's ignore that last bit of nonsense.

On the fourth day of reading, we finally succeeded in reading all the Apocalypses.

Every hunter declared they had finished reading.

"The Romance group recommends four books."

"The Sci-Fi group will recommend two."

"The Mystery group..."

Each group announced their recommended works.

Suitable difficulty. Suitable rewards.

A list of recommended works with a perfect blend of both was presented.

"In my Fairy Tales group, I recommend this! It's the only one I have!"

+

[Me and Our Scapegoat]

Genre: Fairy Tale

Difficulty: A

Required Participants: 2 or more

*The serialization has been discontinued.

Description: Humanity in this world succeeded in creating a utopia. However, to maintain it, a special power source was needed. The screams of innocent children who had committed no sin. Sadly, to ensure the perfect happiness of 17 million people, one innocent child must endure. Thanks to advanced torture techniques and life-sustaining treatments, about five years of screams can be extracted from one child. Efficient!

Reason for Discontinuation: 118,000 years after the creation of utopia, all innocent children were exhausted. The utopia, having lost its power, came to a halt.

+

This Apocalypse is a must-visit regardless of difficulty and rewards.

However, there was another Apocalypse that caught my attention right now.

"The Martial Arts group strongly recommends this work."

The Sword Saint spoke.

He was the team leader of the Martial Arts genre group. Unlike someone who was outwardly a martial arts enthusiast but inwardly the Emperor of Light Novels, Sword Saint was truly knowledgeable in martial arts.

He opened one of the Apocalypses.

"This book right here."

+

[The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon]

Genre: Martial Arts

Difficulty: B

Required Participants: 2~4

*The serialization has been discontinued.

Description: In the world of martial arts, where martial arts are revered and utilized to reach enlightenment! Here, a Heavenly Demon appeared, aiming to unify the martial world. The Demonic Cult, united under the Heavenly Demon, and the opposing forces clashed over the fate of the world... or so they would have.

Had it not been for a sudden super pandemic.

Reason for Discontinuation: An unidentified pandemic spread, leading to the death of the Heavenly Demon. The Demonic Cult was annihilated. All other forces perished. The end.

"The reason for recommending The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon is simple," said Sword Saint.

"In this world, there exists a character called the Heavenly Demon. A martial artist who has collected every martial arts scripture in the Martial Realm. Thus, a massive secret library... um, sort of like a library, was established in the headquarters of the Demonic Cult."

Sword Saint looked embarrassed. Non-martial arts group members were all like, 'Martial arts scriptures? Secret library? What's he talking about?' Eventually, Sword Saint used simpler terms.

"Think of martial arts scriptures as books containing secrets of skills. If we succeed in saving this world, we'll get a library filled with the best skills in the world for free. It's an opportunity for our hunters to become stronger."

The hunters' eyes lit up.

"Martial arts."

"Gaining new skills?"

"Well, the chance to learn skills is really rare..."

"An opportunity to learn the ways of the martial realm!"

The atmosphere was positive. Especially for those like Sword Saint who valued individual strength, the response was particularly favorable. The priority was to strengthen ourselves. That argument gained traction.

And it was good news for me too.

'Not bad, right?'

I stroked my chin.

'In a martial world, there must be many flying masters. If I die to each of them at least once... Wow. Wouldn't I gain at least one A-Rank skill?'

-Zombie, are you only thinking about gaining easy benefits?

'I've found a world I want to conquer. But with my current strength, it's difficult.'

The Sword Emperor quietly closed his mouth.

Instead, another being spoke.

[Shiny detects a presence.]

The sword on my waist suddenly vibrated.

'A presence? What kind of presence?'

[Shiny says it feels the presence of its sister very close.]

'Sister?'

Shiny, aka the Goddess of Protection, was split into five swords and sealed. One of those swords was on my waist.

Even Shiny didn't know where the other swords had gone.

'Where? Where do you feel it?'

I looked around.

The Great Library of All Knowledge. Bookshelves stretched to the horizon. Each shelf was enormous. Looking up, they were as high as towers. Naturally, I saw nothing but books.

[Shiny advises not to look around aimlessly but to focus on what's in front of you.]

'In front of me? There's only the Sword Saint in front of me... Wait a minute.'

Apocalypse.

A book containing an entire world.

'Is it inside that?'

The holy sword vibrated.

[Shiny positively responds, 'Yes, brave hero!']

[Shiny says it feels the presence of its sister in the book Sword Saint is holding!]

That moment decided our next destination.

Chapter 59: The World Without a Constellation (1)

In the library's restroom.

"Okay."

After washing my face at the sink, I said,

"Before heading to the martial world... let's start by dying once."

Silence filled the space around me. There were no humans in the restroom besides myself. However, a ghost and a sword were present, and they reacted to my words.

-What's okay?

[Shiny cannot understand your intention.]

The Guardian Spirit blinked, and the holy sword flickered.

"Leafanta Aegim. The empire's first emperor, and the one who turned the Goddess of Protection into Shiny."

[Shiny points out that you are the one who named it Shiny...]

"That guy might be unknown, but he could travel between worlds."

I put on my coat. It was a tailored suit gifted by the Black Witch before a press conference. In the mirror, I looked like a new employee ready for work.

This appearance oddly provided a sense of stability.

"Think about it. Shiny was in the world of the Aegim Empire, right? But another part is in the martial world. This means Leafanta Aegim has the ability to 'cross worlds.'"

-Hmm.

"He must be a munchkin of some sort."

I fingered the hilt of the holy sword at my waist.

"He was capable enough to establish an empire, strong enough to split and seal a Constellation, and even capable of interdimensional travel. Just diving into [The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon] without a plan isn't wise."

I felt the need to be more cautious.

"I'm not invincible, after all."

Indeed.

Lately, I've been feeling a bit tense.

Is it tension about myself?

Just a bit of relaxation, and 'confidence' might turn into 'arrogance.'

"Having climbed to the 3rd hunter rank, almost single-handedly defeating the Demon King, people in the city talking only about me, and now even commanding hunters with titles..."

-So what?

"I'm just worried I might become complacent. That's all."

The Tower has 100 floors.

I've only reached the 21st floor.

It's too early to relax with my recent successes.

'The Flame Emperor also became complacent and got hunted by me.'

I had the skill [Returner's Winding Clock], which prevented me from dying. It seemed unbeatable. But what happened to the Flame Emperor Yoo Soo-Ha, who had such an overpowered skill?

'He died.'

And after dying, he even did a full Cossack dance in front of the continent's armies.

No matter how strong a hunter, complacency is dangerous. It was a great example.

-That's more about you being somewhat devilish....

"Anyway, I won't just jump into [The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon] without a plan. I need to know what kind of person Leafanta Aegim is first. Right now, I have no information."

Better safe than sorry.

Why is a fragment of the holy sword in a completely different world of martial arts and not in Aegim continent? What was Leafanta Aegim's intention in scattering parts of [Goddess of Protection]?

I want to gather at least some basic information before entering the stage.

-Not a bad mindset, but exactly what are you planning to do? Like you said, you have no information about that Leafanta or whatever. There's no way to find out, either.

"Well, I might not know anything, but..."

I tapped the holy sword lightly.

"There's certainly a way to find out."

-What?

"This sword is the [Goddess of Protection], a Constellation, though divided into five pieces."

I grinned.

"Here's the question. If I stab myself with this sword, is it suicide or homicide by a Constellation?"

The Guardian Spirit's eyes widened.

-Unbelievable.

"Could be either. It's a fifty-fifty chance, and I don't know which it is yet... but it's worth a try."

Shiiing!

I drew the holy sword from its sheath, and an urgent voice reached me.

[Shiny urgently requests you to reconsider.]

"Why?"

[Shiny is embarrassed for others to see its past and strongly requests privacy.]

I twisted my lips.

"Ah, come on, where's the privacy between us? I'm under 24-hour live surveillance anyway. It should be fair."

[Shiny pleads desperately not to...]

Thump!

The holy sword pierced through my body.

In the next moment, I was confident I had won the fifty-fifty gamble.

[You have died.]

[The condition for your skill has been fulfilled by your death.]

[The skill of the Goddess of Protection is currently sealed and cannot be acquired.]

It was a bit disappointing that I couldn't copy the skill.

However, what I was seeking at the moment wasn't a skill.

[You are currently a D-Rank Hunter.]

[You are penalized by the skill.]

[Re-enacting the trauma of your killer.]

[The level of penalty is medium. Hungry Ghost Realm.]

Woosh!

The scene I had been hoping for unfolded before my eyes.

•

•

-

-

-

-You have finally completed your long journey.

A beautiful voice spoke.

-You've done well, Hero.

She was a woman I had never seen before. Yet, somehow, I immediately understood who she was.

The [Goddess of Protection], not confined in a blade.

A Constellation with her full powers intact.

-Yes.

The man addressed as the hero responded.

A silver-haired nobleman. The first emperor of the Aegim Empire, Leafanta Aegim, sat on a heavy throne. His face, resting on his hand, showed a hint of fatigue.

‘So that's Leafanta Aegim.’

The man spoke.

-It feels like just yesterday when I was suddenly summoned here. Now, I've become an emperor who unified the continent. Life is unpredictable.

-Haha. It's also surprising for me. At first, you were just an ordinary person who knew nothing. Now, you're stronger than me. In fact, most deities and evil spirits wouldn't stand a chance against you...

That's when it happened.

-Hey? What's this?

Watching the trauma scene with me, the Sword Emperor spoke out.

-That silver haired guy. He looks so familiar. He's definitely the Constellation Killer.

The Guardian Spirit remarked curiously.

I was shocked to learn that the Sword Emperor and Leafanta Aegim knew each other.

‘What's the Constellation Killer?’

-It's his alias. He's a lunatic who goes around beating up Constellations.

Beating up Constellations?

-You've seen it. The Tower is connected to various worlds. From the 50th floor, you have to compete with hunters from other worlds.

‘Really?’

-Yes. And that [Constellation Killer] is one of those crazy regulars on the 50th floor.

The Guardian Spirit explained.

-He never climbs the Tower. Just hangs around on the 50th floor and, whenever a Constellation appears, he immediately knocks them down. At least hundreds of Constellations have died by his hands.

‘So, Leafanta Aegim is a hunter?’

-Yes. I wondered from which world such a madman could have emerged. So, he's from Aegim.

Guardian Spirit murmured.

-Who would have thought I'd see an old acquaintance here.
Hmm.

‘What was your relationship with him?’

-What relationship? We had a proper fight. He was strong, but not strong enough to be on par with me.

As we talked, the trauma scene continued to unfold.

The Goddess of Protection spoke.

-What do you plan to do now, Hero? There are no more deities or evil spirits to block your path. Your long journey is now...

-Saintess.

-Yes?

-Not deities or evil spirits. Constellations.

Leafanta Aegim stood up from his throne.

-The world belongs not to Constellations but to humans.

Leafanta Aegim turned to the Goddess.

Dark red aura rose from the emperor's body.

-...Hero? Why are you suddenly...

The fatigued emperor seemed to ponder.

It wasn't long.

-I won't kill you since you've helped me till now.

The red aura engulfed the Goddess.

-Your existence will be split and sealed. This way, you'll never regain your power. And without Constellations...

His words were drowned out by a tearing scream.

The Goddess's existence was literally being torn apart.

-I'm sorry.

Leafanta Aegim spoke.

-But this is the right path.

With the Goddess's scream, the trauma abruptly faded from us.

[Trauma re-enactment complete.]

[The target's ego has remained intact.]

[Penalty Finalized.]

.

.

•

•

•

•

“What... Who is this guy?”

Returning to the day before, I found myself mumbling in the restroom.

“I thought peering into the past through trauma would give me some insight into him... but even after seeing, I still don't understand. Hey, Shiny. Why did your old master seal you?”

[Shiny gloomily responds that it also doesn't know.]

The scene of her traumatic past had provided more questions than answers. The mystery of Leafanta Aegim and his connection to the Constellation Killer only deepened.

The Holy Sword emitted a faint light.

Was it just my imagination?

The light from the Holy Sword seemed particularly weak.

[Shiny states that the Leafanta Aegim it remembers was a taciturn but just hero. It has no idea why he sealed it away and left the empire he established.]

The mystery only deepened.

-Didn't I tell you? The higher a hunter's level, the crazier they are?

Guardian Spirit shrugged.

-Don't try to understand madmen. Gazing into the abyss turns you into the abyss. Just become strong like me, and crush any nuts you don't like, whether it's the King of Death or anyone else!

I sighed.

“True. At least knowing his face is a gain.”

And one thing became clear.

Leafanta Aegim, also known as [Constellation Killer], would be hostile towards me on sight.

After all, I was carrying around a fragment of the Goddess of Protection he had sealed.

“Hmm.”

I narrowed my eyes while looking in the mirror.

“If I'm going to meet him on the 50th floor anyway, I want to prepare in advance...”

-Forget it. With your current skills, you don't stand a chance! He might be weaker than me, but he's still among the top fighters. And if you're already worried about the 50th floor, focus on conquering the 22nd first, weakling!

“Ahem.”

He wasn't wrong, so I quietly spent the day the same as before.

The next day, after reading all the Revelations, the hunters chose the '22nd floor'. The choice fell naturally on [The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon] as Sword Saint had recommended it.

“Oh? Choosing martial arts as the first genre, I see.”

The Head Librarian watched our choice and smiled meaningfully.

“Not a bad choice! Although it may not be exactly like the martial world you know, it still has martial arts and a world of martial artists. Depending on how you lead the story, you might encounter extraordinary opportunities and gain invaluable martial arts... or in your terms, ‘skills’.”

The hunters excitedly buzzed.

The atmosphere heated with enthusiasm, and the Head Librarian immediately doused the flames.

“However, high risk brings high return! The ‘enemies’ in this Revelation will also be powerful. Of course, if you lose your life in the Revelation, you’ll actually die. And until you properly ‘finish’ the ending, you cannot escape from the Revelation!”

The hunters fell silent.

Understandable. Unlike me with my unique skill, death was always a silencer with its formidable power.

“[The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon] allows 2 to 4 people. So! Who wishes to become a character in this Revelation?”

The hunters’ gazes naturally fell on the top rankers, especially me. The reason was simple; for the past few days, I had been giving orders and instructions to the hunters as if I were their representative.

Power naturally comes with responsibility.

“I will do it.”

And I had no intention of shirking my duty.

My prompt response pleased the guild masters, who seemed to think ‘as expected,’ while most hunters looked at me in surprise.

“I will join as well.”

Sword Saint followed up.

“As the one who recommended this Revelation, I cannot be absent.”

He spoke with a stern expression, but a slight smile played on his lips. His body seemed to itch with excitement. Perhaps, as a fan of martial arts, he was thrilled about entering a real martial world?

“Good, the minimum number of participants is met!”

The Head Librarian chuckled.

“There's room for two more characters... What will you do?”

“Actually, I had another reason for recommending this Revelation.”

Sword Saint confidently continued.

“Everyone, look at the reason for its discontinuation.”

+

[The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon]

Genre: Martial Arts

Difficulty: B

Required Participants: 2~4

*The serialization has been discontinued.

Description: In the world of martial arts, where martial arts are revered and utilized to reach enlightenment! Here, a Heavenly Demon appeared, aiming to unify the martial world. The Demonic Cult, united under the Heavenly Demon, and the opposing forces clashed over the fate of the world... or so they would have.

Had it not been for a sudden super pandemic.

Reason for Discontinuation: An unidentified pandemic spread, leading to the death of the Heavenly Demon. The Demonic Cult was annihilated. All other forces perished. The end.

+

Revisiting the ridiculous reason for discontinuation, it still didn't reveal what the pandemic was.

The main text of the Revelation only stated, [An unidentified pandemic spread, leading to the death of the Heavenly Demon. The Demonic Cult was annihilated. All other forces perished. The end].

‘We'll only know once we enter that world.’

It was clear that the martial world was doomed due to an unknown pandemic.

Sword Saint nodded.

“As you can see, this world was destroyed by a pandemic. Naturally, we need to take not only strong hunters but also those knowledgeable about diseases. And there's one person here who knows best about diseases.”

Sword Saint beckoned someone from the same martial arts group.

“Medicine King, will you join us?”

A cranky-looking old man stepped forward.

The Sword Emperor seemed to recognize him.

-Oh! That guy!

“Who is he?”

-You know, that place. The one I first tried to take you, zombie. The owner of the pharmacy that Marcus frequents.

Ah, indeed.

-He's good at making medicine... But, well, he's good at it, but...

The Sword Emperor trailed off, but I knew the reason just as well.

“Don't worry. I'll handle most of the fighting, and if I'm not enough, the King of Death will help. And this [Medicine King] will solve the disease problem. With just the three of us... King of Death, do you have something to say?”

Sword Saint, who was confidently speaking, looked at me curiously as I raised my hand.

“Yes. There's someone I'd like to bring along.”

I lowered my hand and pointed to a hunter.

The hunter, caught off guard, was startled.

“Uh, me?”

It was the Apothecary.

I nodded.

“Yes. Right.”

The Apothecary trembled as if struck by lightning.

“Ki-King of Death... I've only had the alias for less than a week. I'm, I'm so weak! I won't be of any use if you take me. Why...”

“I know you're the most capable pharmacist and doctor among the people I know.”

“Ye-yes...?”

“And you said it earlier.”

‘King of Death, if there’s anything you need, just say the word!’

‘I’ll help with anything I can!’

I smiled broadly.

“If you weren’t just making empty promises, you’ll help, right, Apothecary?”

"....."

The Apothecary looked at me with a gaze of despair, as if staring at a demon.

Why? I helped her gain the alias.

If you've been boosted, you have to pay the price.

Chapter 60: The World Without a Constellation (2)

The hunters murmured among themselves.

"Wait, does that mean all four are here?"

"But who is that woman?"

"That's what I'm saying. I understand about Medicine King, but..."

Sword Saint looked perplexed.

"The lady from last time."

"Gasp...!"

The Apothecary hid behind me.

During the time Sword Saint mistook me for a murderous fiend, she had stood with the Paladin to confront Sword Saint. His aura was so menacing back then that just seeing him now seemed to revive those memories for her.

Sword Saint himself seemed to recall that time, clearing his throat.

"Hmm-hmm. No need to be so frightened. I've resolved my grudge with the King of Death."

"Is that so...?"

"Yes. Well... But, you see."

Sword Saint looked at me awkwardly.

"King of Death. The place we're about to go is extremely dangerous. Didn't the Constellation say so? Dying in the Revelations means actual death. Is it really okay to take her to such a perilous place?"

"Yes."

I nodded confidently.

"She's the best Alchemist and medicine maker I know."

And probably the best currently alive.

-Ugh...

Even the Sword Emperor had acknowledged her.

Using the same ingredients, she produced items that were 15 times more efficient and more potent than what was offered at the store I originally planned to visit – the store of that guy, what's-his-name, Medicine King.

- That guy knows how to make medicine, but... he's not the best. Not anymore. Not with her around...

"Indeed."

However, Sword Saint's expression was subtly complex.

"The best Alchemist you know..."

I opened the Character Window to read Sword Saint's thoughts.

"Hmm. Unusual recommendation from an unusual young man. There must be something special about her, but there are bigger fish in the sea... Ah, I see, Sword Emperor. Making a valid point after so long. Even a king carp in a small pond realizes it's the smallest koi in a river. Yes, I should take this opportunity to enlighten these young ones and Medicine King."

Wow.

Despite our past interactions and Sword Saint's promises made in front of me, he held back from speaking outright. Though I could tell there was goodwill behind his attitude, his old-fashioned tendencies were unmistakably present.

The other Sword Emperor with Sword Saint, just like our Sword Emperor here, seemed to be underestimating the Apothecary based on her appearance.

And there was someone present openly displaying their old-fashioned views, without any hint of goodwill.

"Ha! The best you know!"

It was Medicine King.

"This is what's wrong with brats! Oh, it's laughable. Just like when I was young, feeling proud after overcoming a single hurdle, thinking they've conquered a mountain. Reminds me of my youth in Silicon Valley, earning a billion dollars. The same rotten attitude! And they're oblivious to it."

"Cool down a bit..."

"Ha! I've been holding back, you know. Tolerating that brat's behavior, all for the sake of Marcus. And now? You're taking some girl, who knows where from, as if she's some trophy.

Like a young billionaire from Silicon Valley flaunting their arm candy."

"Medicine King, he's not that kind of young man..."

"What do you mean he's not! You, old man! Look me in the eye and tell me! Is he really not!?"

Incredible...

What's incredible is that someone exists who can make even the great Sword Saint squirm. It seems in the world of the old-fashioned, a greater one devours the lesser.

I was astounded by this newly discovered ecosystem.

Perhaps that's why it wasn't me who retorted to the greatest of the old-fashioned.

"It's okay to call me a brat, but..."

The Apothecary squeaked out, clutching my coat.

"King of Death is definitely not a brat! He's an amazing person! To say he has a rotten attitude..."

"Ha, look at that, Marcus. She's defending her man like that. This is what's wrong with the youth today. Sigh. I suppose when I was young, I thought the same of my youth..."

"Defending her man like that..."

The Apothecary's mouth twitched, seemingly overwhelmed by the absurdity.

The Paladin stepped forward to defend the Apothecary.

"Enough. This 'Apothecary' is indeed outstanding. I came to know her through the King of Death, and she has provided the Vigilante Corps with countless effective medicines."

Medicine King snorted dismissively.

"That might be true for the standards of the Vigilante Corps."

"What did you say?"

"Plain truth. With your funding, you couldn't even afford to visit my store. You don't know the sky, so you think the ceiling is high. Not realizing that ceiling is just the lid of a box. It's exactly the same as when I was young, tsk..."

The Paladin bit her lip.

Though called one of the Five Great Guilds, the Vigilante Corps always struggled financially. The Medicine King had cruelly hit a sore spot.

The Medicine King waved his hand dismissively.

"Ah, why bother talking? Let's just stop. It's tiring for you and for me."

Hmm.

He's not wrong.

'Sword Emperor.'

-Yes?

'Isn't it enough listening to this nonsense?'

-It's more than enough. Why are you subjecting yourself to this?

I glanced around the library.

'It's not self-inflicted.'

As I've said before, this whole scene is being broadcast live to the hunters gathered in Babylon Square.

In other words, for both a [debut] and a [retirement], this moment is the perfect timing.

I spoke to the Medicine King.

"How about a challenge?"

If the Sword Saint's look was awkward, Medicine King's was immediately inflamed.

"Ha! See that, Marcus. He can't win with logic, so he goes straight for the sword. Just like his rotten mindset! Reminds me of when I became a boxing world champion in my 40s."

"No, I don't mean a fight with me."

I took out some medicinal ingredients.

"I'll provide the ingredients. Both of you make a medicine each. Then we can compare their effects and see who's really the best, right?"

"Eek...!!"

The Apothecary jumped in shock.

"Ki-King of Death! I'm really angry that that old man insulted you... but he's known as the Medicine King! A famous person recognized by all hunters... And compared to him, I've just gained my alias less than a week ago, kyaa,"

The Apothecary shivered.

I held her shoulders firmly.

"Apothecary."

"Yes, yes!"

Our eyes met, separated only by her glasses, as I spoke.

"I believe in you."

"...King of Death."

"So, believe in yourself too."

"....."

The Apothecary took a deep breath. Behind her glasses, her eyes regained their sparkle.

Firmly gripping her fists, she nodded vigorously.

"Yes, King of Death! I'll do my best! No,"

She immediately shook her head, correcting herself.

"I will win!"

The Medicine King looked at us with a disdainful expression.

"Huh."

He shook his head in disapproval.

"Always like that, aren't they? Have to taste whether it's ketchup or blood to be satisfied. Just like when I was about three years old. Tsk, tsk..."

"Are you tired of talking? Had enough?"

"Oh yes. Kiddo. Prepare yourself to see that girl's tears. I have no mercy for the young."

Medicine King vs. Apothecary.

A legendary contest began.

At the start of the contest, the hunters' reactions were cynical.

"Obviously, the Medicine King will win."

"That old man's medicine is so expensive, and it's booked for nearly a month."

"What's their relationship, really? It seems the King of Death is overreaching."

"King of Death and Medicine King. Even with the same alias, experience makes a difference."

Typical responses.

"Place your bets here! Who thinks Medicine King will win? Who's betting on Apothecary?"

Meanwhile, the Countess, not missing a chance to make money, had set up a betting pool. Bookmark Maids stood quietly, holding the collection boxes.

"King of Death, are you sure? The odds are 1.08 to 47 right now."

The Witch whispered to me.

"Sounds good. Think of it as pocket money. Bet just enough on Apothecary so the odds don't drop too much, maybe?"

"...You do realize this is all being broadcast live, right? It's your doing."

The Witch looked seriously at me.

"What if the Apothecary you recommended gets utterly defeated? If that happens..."

"It'll all be broadcast in Babylon, and to the world. Right now, the internet must already be buzzing."

What would the old me have commented?

Would I have wished to be like Medicine King or something?

Lost in such idle thoughts, the Witch pressed her forehead.

"King of Death, if that happens, it'll damage your reputation. ...Are you really okay with this?"

"I do feel a bit sorry for that old man, Medicine King."

Not really. Not sorry at all.

If he's made bold statements, he should be prepared to face the consequences, right?

That's the true spirit of living and letting live.

The Witch looked at me and the Apothecary alternately, her expression indecipherable. Just as I was about to open her psychological window, it happened.

"It's done, kiddo!"

Medicine King.

He triumphantly raised the medicine he had created.

"Bow before my magnificent creation!"

+

[Epic Recovery Potion]

Rarity: Epic

Creator: Medicine King

Description: It tastes a bit bitter, but it can heal even severe wounds. Naturally, being a recovery potion, one should consider the after-effects of healing and rest safely after consumption. Nonetheless, to create such a potion is truly a remarkable feat!

+

Cheers of "Wow" filled the library.

"An Epic Recovery Potion!"

"Incredible. He actually made an Epic Recovery Potion. Truly, Medicine King. The king never dies."

"Medicine King! Would you consider selling that to me?"

"Don't cut in line! Medicine King! I have the highest reservation! I'll buy it!"

The Medicine King raised his chin, looking back and forth between me and the Apothecary. His face seemed to say, 'Now you both have provoked the tiger, and you will face utter humiliation for it.'

That's when it happened.

"Uh... I'm done..."

The Apothecary lifted her own creation.

+

[Soma Strawberry]

Rarity: Quasi-Mythic

Creator: Apothecary

Description: What? It tastes like strawberries! There's not a single strawberry in it, so why does it taste like strawberries!? And what about this effect? As long as it's well-preserved, it can reattach severed body parts without any side effects! What have you created!?

+

Silence enveloped the library.

Chapter 61: The World Without a Constellation (3)

The two looked silently at the medicines they had made.

Everyone else was speechless too. The same ingredients had yielded such vastly different results that they were all stunned.

"Heh."

The first to move was the Apothecary.

With her slender fingers, emphasizing her knuckles, she adjusted her glasses and tilted her head.

"Is this the medicine you made, elder?"

The Medicine King remained silent.

The Apothecary picked up Medicine King's potion, examining it from all angles.

"Hmm."

She tilted it,

"Heh."

and even turned it upside down.

Then, handing the potion back to Medicine King, she adjusted her glasses again.

"Is this it, huh?"

Hmm.

'Is she the type who becomes infinitely bolder when she thinks she has the upper hand?'

In other words, does she have the seed of a lunatic, like all other high-level hunters?

That can't be.

It just can't be...

While I was reaffirming my trust in humanity, Medicine King finally reacted.

"Hmm..."

The height difference between them was significant.

The woman's stature was as vibrant as the days ahead of her, long and lively, while the old man's figure had shrunk as much as the years he had lived.

Thus, the Apothecary looked down at Medicine King, and he looked up at her.

"Could it be, elder..."

"Could it be, youngster..."

Both spoke at the same time.

"Is your skill lacking...?"

"Is it just good luck...?"

Hmm.

"What?"

As the Apothecary tilted her head, Medicine King nodded.

"Lucky, indeed."

"What?"

"Tsk. That's the problem with the youth. Reminds me of when I made about 1.7 billion dollars in Wall Street in just 10 minutes in my 30s. I thought it was all thanks to my skills."

"....."

The Apothecary tilted her head, and her glasses followed suit.

A genuinely annoyed voice came from her slightly slanted lips.

"Shall we try again...?"

"Would that be wise? Luck rarely smiles twice. Tsk, the impertinence of youth..."

Three minutes passed.

"Luck is on your side, indeed. But fortune doesn't smile thrice. This time, my experience and years will shatter your mere stroke of luck..."

Another three minutes passed.

"Your luck is remarkable. But fortune doesn't smile four times..."

"Enough..."

Finally, the Sword Saint grabbed the Medicine King's shoulder.

"Enough, Medicine King..."

"Marcus, what are you talking about!"

"You're being disgraceful now..."

"No! This time for sure! This time, my skills! My experience will crush this novice's luck! Can't you see it, this is my victory road, as Shawn McCallister!"

"I'm sorry, young lady. You truly are the best Apothecary. It was my fault not to trust the King of Death's word."

Sword Saint bowed his head in apology.

The Apothecary, looking down at Medicine King with an expression as if seeing a water flea, cleared her throat with a 'Hmm'.

"It must be hard for you... because of your friend..."

"Well, this friend of mine... He's not completely useless. He can make medicine... not as well as you, but still..."

"Yes... Well, better than nothing, I suppose... He has the basics, so he might be usable as an assistant..."

It was at that moment when the Apothecary adjusted her glasses and mumbled to herself.

"You there!"

With the agility of a cat pouncing on catnip, the Countess of Sang-Ryun, sprang forward and grabbed the Apothecary's wrist.

"Contract!"

"What!?"

"Contract! Right now! Exclusive contract! Make a contract with me!"

"Uh, uh..."

"Top industry treatment guaranteed! I'll even let you pet a cat! No, you can roll around in a field of cats! How about that! Isn't it great?"

The Apothecary was too bewildered to respond.

But the Countess was just the beginning.

"Me too!"

"Apothecary! The King of Death has recognized you, you're the Apothecary King!"

"No, without the fake, just Apothecary!"

"Goddess of Medicine! Please provide us with your medicines!"

What I faced when I soloed the 10th floor.

Countless requests for handshakes now enveloped the Apothecary.

"Okay, everyone!"

The Apothecary struggled to push the people away.

"If you want to trade medicines with me, please go through King of Death! Ah, of course, the Paladin can continue as is! But for others! I'll only sell to those approved by the King of Death, so please... don't inconvenience him..."

With that, everyone's gaze, including the Countess', turned to me.

The Paladin alone quietly raised her hands in a victory pose, then lowered them back down.

I smiled slyly.

"Let's think about that after clearing the Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon."

"Ah! Yes, yes!"

The mention of ascending the tower always worked on hunters.

Even the Countess retreated with a bitter face.

'Good.'

Now the team was complete.

First, there was the Sword Saint.

Then, the Apothecary.

And above all, there was me.

"No! It can't be! It can't be! My experience! My years can't be mocked by a mere youngster's stroke of luck!"

Medicine King, or rather, the Jade Emperor as he was known, might be... well, as the Apothecary said, better than nothing.

"Hmm! It seems all the characters are in place."

The Holed-Up Head Librarian, who had been watching our show, spoke brightly.

"Let me remind you again. Dying in the Revelations means actual death. There's only one way to safely escape! Overcome the crisis of cancellation in any way. And face a proper [ending]!"

"What does a proper ending mean?"

"That's up to you to decide."

At my question, the librarian grinned.

"Perhaps you'll save the Martial Realm by eradicating a pandemic. Or maybe you'll use the pandemic to become the masters of the Martial Realm yourselves. The possibilities are nearly infinite! What the [best ending] is, is for you to decide."

In other words, it's entirely up to us.

I nodded.

"Okay. Then send us to the Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon right no..."

"Wait a minute!"

Someone shouted.

"Isn't the clan leader coming?"

"Yeah, if it's martial arts, it's a perfect opportunity for the Celestial Clan Master!"

The Celestial Martial Guild.

The hunters from the guild led by Viper were speaking up.

Viper, who had been quietly blending in with the martial arts group, blinked.

"Huh?"

As the Celestial Martial disciples threw in their two cents, Viper looked confused.

"It's a world made for our clan master..."

"In my opinion too. Clan master, it's your duty to uphold the martial way, right?"

"I think so too, master. You should step forward."

Viper narrowed his brows.

Then, slowly, he crossed his arms.

His thick eyebrows and the determination in his one eye showed a manly resolve.

"Alright. I was planning to step in anyway. You guys, you haven't forgotten me, have you?"

"....."

I was speechless.

Strange. That guy shouldn't be interested in a martial world.

Something felt off, so I opened his character window to read his psychological state... And, as expected.

「Damn these disciples!」

「Why are they sending me to the boonies!?!」

Viper was internally screaming.

But outwardly, he maintained composure. As if he had been waiting for his disciples to give him a push, the one-eyed swordsman spoke softly.

"Those who revere martial arts and chivalry. The world of warriors and heroes, that is the Martial Realm! Though I was born elsewhere, my heart has long belonged to the Martial Realm."

「There won't even be a modern toilet there. I suffered so much because of that in the Aegim Empire, damn it...」

Oh my.

"Why is my sect called the Celestial Martial Clan if not for this reason?"

「 So, was there something wrong with me being a 32-year-old unemployed 'Mu' (Martial Artist) before I obtained the cheat skill 'Unrivaled Under the Heaven'? I mean, it's all in the name, right? Everyone thinks it's Chun-Moon (Celestial Martial), but it was actually spelled differently. Even the sign maker got it wrong. Can't even explain this now, damn it... 」

Incredible.

"I must go."

「 I absolutely don't want to go! 」

I was at a loss for words.

It seemed that my Aura, which shared my consciousness, was also at a loss.

[Shiny reports that it too is at a loss for words.]

An entity that could leave people, ghosts, and Constellations speechless was before us.

The hunters cheered, "Woah!"

The members of the Celestial Martial Guild were especially overjoyed.

"As expected of our leader!"

"I knew the master would step up!"

"Our idol! The true hunter of this era!"

"I will follow you for life, leader!"

If I didn't have the ability to read minds... I might have been impressed too. To anyone's eyes, Viper looked every bit the devoted swordsman, just like Sword Saint.

Sword Saint crossed his arms.

"Hmm... Viper, you might indeed feel compelled to go."

"Without a doubt."

"But I see no reason for this guy to yield."

Sword Saint raised his Aura.

Viper was already in high spirits, their auras clashing. Bang! The air around them changed abruptly, like a balloon popping. Bookmark Maids either ran away or were flung around by the force.

The hunters were more thrilled.

"Sword Saint and Viper are facing off!"

"It's a battle of pride!"

A truly remarkable sight.

Knowing Viper's inner thoughts, it was a remarkable sight for a different reason.

Then, a clinking sound.

"Sword Saint. Celestial Martial Guild Leader. Let's stop this."

It was the Paladin stepping forward. The clinking came from her purse, swollen with the winnings from betting on the Apothecary.

With a gravely serious face, she said, "We can't have a sword fight here, can we?"

Her voice was earnest, always mediating fights like this.

'Wait, has it always been like this...?'

-Yeah, zombie. What if it's always been like this and we just didn't notice?

'This world is full of forbidden knowledge we're not supposed to know...'

Viper snorted.

"If a sword fight is needed, then let it be. Damn it, I'm a martial artist too. Let's fight and the stronger one goes, right?"

「Lose on purpose!」

「Lose but make it look close, so it's not embarrassing!」

「If I lose to the Sword Saint, even my disciples will accept it. Yes.」

A truly bizarre scene.

Unaware of all this, Sword Saint wiped sweat from his brow.

"Sorry, Viper... I must give my all against a strong opponent like you. Last time, it cost you an eye. I can't guarantee a different outcome this time."

"I should be the one saying that, old man. Come at me thinking of my past, and you'll end up in a coffin."

「Damn it! Damn it! Damn it!」

Viper's outward appearance was that of a valiant warrior.

My ghostly companion, Sword Emperor, also wiped sweat from his brow.

-Zombie.

"Yes, Sword Emperor."

-High-level hunters are all crazy, right? But among them, this guy, what do I say...

'He's the [real deal]...'

Sweat covered my forehead too.

'If only considering sweating from the forehead, we were all the same.' All hunters were watching this scene with sweaty foreheads.

Even those in Babylon Square watching the broadcast must be sweating.

Paladin's forehead was also sweaty, with drops falling onto her bulging purse.

"Viper, you are..."

Viper flashed a bold smile.

"A warrior has moments when he can't back down."

「Paladin, do something!」

Though his urgent heart's cry wouldn't reach him, Paladin indeed did something.

Specifically, she said to Sword Saint:

"Sword Saint... Can't you step back this time?"

「Why is she asking him to step back!?!」

'Why is she asking him to step back!?'

Ah, our thoughts overlapped.

[Shiny shivers and massages your waist with its blade.]

The Sword Emperor patted my shoulder.

While I silently received their consolation, Paladin continued to speak to Sword Saint.

"I know you always want to be at the forefront. But you've already joined the King of Death and the Witch from the 12th to the 19th floors. It would be shameless to push yourself into the 22nd-floor raid too."

Her tone was calm and logical. Her face was dead serious.

"The thing is,"

Paladin pointed to Viper and those who suggested that the leader of Chun-Moon should participate.

"The Celestial Martial Guild Leader is the head of a group. Though he may not care about face in front of his disciples, his situation is different from yours, who is alone. Can't you respect him a bit?"

"Hmm..."

Sword Saint, Marcus Callenbury, let out a thoughtful sound.

The seasoned old man furrowed, then relaxed his brows. His eyebrows moved up and down several times.

Finally, he crossed his arms.

"When has this old man ever cared about the face of your Five Great Guilds?"

Paladin clicked her tongue.

"Sword Saint, really..."

"However."

Interrupting Paladin, Sword Saint turned to look at me.

But why is he looking at me now...?

"Lately, this old man was thinking of showing a bit of discretion."

It was a good sight. The obstinate old man was bending his own stubbornness. The beauty of it made me wish that Medicine King, or whatever his name is, could learn even a tiny bit from him.

‘But why now...?’

"Understood."

Sword Saint took a step back.

His gaze, examining the Revelations, was filled with regret, but the old man cut it off and said,

"Viper. This time, this old man will yield to you."

Viper's eyes widened for a moment but soon, he smiled broadly, exuding more force. Like a gambler who had won just as he wanted.

"About time. Know your life's been spared, old man."

「No! Why the sudden yielding!? Marcus Callenbury! You're not one to yield to others! No, I don't want to go!」

It was an indescribable forbidden scene.

Paladin, too, with a face that said 'indescribable,' looked at Sword Saint. The Heretic Inquisitor, watching with bright eyes, jumped and hugged Paladin's arm.

"Amazing! Paladin, you persuaded Sword Saint!"

"Hmm. No. It's the Sword Saint who accepted my persuasion."

"Aha-ha! Is that so! Then I must hug the Sword Saint!"

"I firmly refuse."

Sword Saint put up an impenetrable wall. However, nothing stops a natural-born psycho, so Sword Saint had to endure quite a bit.

"Really... everyone is growing a little."

The Witch, touching her lips, chuckled softly, punctuating the scene.

It was as if a heartwarming story had just unfolded, and the three selected for the expedition to the Apocalypse [The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon] were ready.

"Tsk. If it's decided, let's hurry up and go. Wait any longer and the day will break. Just like when I was young... Can't help it, then. Ha, really. I have to go, don't I? Earlier, I was continuously outdone by that youngster's luck, but the unrivaled, universally acknowledged greatest pharmacist of ancient and modern times is me, Medicine King."

"Eek, King of Death. I'm scared... Is it really okay for someone like me to go along? Of course, I am at least better than that old geezer called Medicine King or whatever? It's a fact as certain as Galileo Galilei's heliocentrism, though strangely, that flea-like old man refuses to acknowledge it? But me, going along..."

"Non-combatants over there. Take care of yourselves in a fight. Losing your life, you know, happens in a flash."

「I don't want to go... Please, let's switch... Sword Saint, swap with me even now...」

I blankly stared at my fellow expedition members.

Rarely, the Sword Emperor spoke in a comforting tone.

-Don't worry, zombie. If it doesn't feel right, just die! Whether you catch a disease or throw yourself off a cliff, just reset to before this moment! I really respect this reset ability from the soul. Though I'm just a soul now.

I weakly nodded.

"Yes... let's go..."

"Good."

The Holed-Up Head Librarian chuckled and snapped his fingers. Snap! The Revelations flew from Sword Saint's hand into the librarian's. As if to say, 'I only lent it to you, but this book is originally mine,' he skillfully opened the book.

"King of Death, Viper, Medicine King, Apothecary."

Light burst forth from the book.

"I designate the four of you as new characters in [The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon]. When you open your eyes, you'll be in a world 10 days before the unfortunate cancellation of the Records."

And light enveloped us.

"I hope you'll present a splendid ending."

The moment the expedition, devoid of dreams and hopes, was dispatched.

Chapter 62: The Great War of Good and Evil (1)

I've never read a martial arts novel.

Not only did I lack the habit of reading, but in our generation, [martial arts] was already a declining genre. Occasionally, old martial arts films would pop up on the internet. But due to their crude CG technology, they were nothing more than a source of laughter.

In an era that mocks all seriousness.

The places for 'Martial' and 'Heroic' were scarce.

A genre that had declined.

A world that had declined.

Snow was falling there.

"Cold!"

We, the expedition devoid of dreams and hopes, safely entered the world of the Revelations. What greeted us was a vast snowfield. The snow crunched cutely under our shoes as we stepped on it.

However, the cold that enveloped us was far from cute.

"Everyone!"

I quickly shouted.

"Raise your aura to protect your bodies!"

The harsh winter cold.

Just standing still, our toes would freeze. Immediately upon hearing my shout, Viper raised his aura. But the non-combatants, Apothecary and Medicine King, didn't manage to do so in time.

“I... I can't... I haven't learned to use aura...”

“Ahchoo! Ah, choo! Oh, this old man's dying! Going to die of cold!”

Within just 20 seconds of arriving in the world of Revelations, the two of them had already turned pale. I, too, had struggled to master aura. How could support hunters know how to use it?

"Tsk."

I quickly took action.

“Viper! Take care of Medicine King!”

"Okay."

Viper lifted Medicine King. Whether he's the emperor of light novels or a man who lives and dies by his pride, Viper was undoubtedly a top-ranking combat-focused hunter.

The purple aura he emitted soon enveloped Medicine King too.

“Oh, I feel much better now...”

Medicine King sighed in relief, looking as comfortable as an old man entering a hot spring. I nodded and then took Apothecary's hand.

"Miss, you'll stay with me."

“Yes, yes?”

"Give me your hand."

Aura flowed from my hand to Apothecary's. A red aura. Whether it symbolized fire or blood was yet to be determined, but it was warmly wrapped around Apothecary.

"Ah."

Apothecary bowed her head.

“Th-thank you, King of Death. But this, it tickles a bit...”

"I understand it's embarrassing. I'm embarrassed too. But now is not the time to be concerned with that."

I looked around. A dense snowstorm like a fog. We managed to temporarily solve the issue of body temperature, but that was it. Where we were, where we should go – everything was unclear.

“The Holed-Up Head Librarian easily used words like [Work] and [Cancellation] because he's a Constellation. But this is a real world, not just a book. We've come to save a world. You know that, right?”

"....."

Apothecary widened her eyes.

“...Yes. That's right. I think I took it too lightly. I-I'll do my best.”

“Everyone just needs to focus on their role. Right now, I'm protecting us with aura, but when it's time to cure the pandemic, it's you and the Medicine King who need to step up. Please.”

“Yes, King of Death.”

Whoosh...

The snowstorm brushed past our ears. We squinted, trying to discern the surrounding landscape. I recalled the last line of The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon.

「An unidentified pandemic spread, leading to the death of the Heavenly Demon」

「All other forces perished」

A brief sentence.

In those less than 50 words, there was no mention of 'skin-piercing cold' or 'snow rising up to the knees'. It only mentioned the world's demise.

Now, we had to find out.

What happened that led to the death of this 'Heavenly Demon' character?

What was this 'mysterious illness' that led humanity in this world to extinction?

"Ah."

Squeeze.

The Apothecary held my hand a bit tighter. She pointed towards the other side of the snowstorm.

"Look over there, King of Death! I think I just saw some people!"

We all looked in the direction she pointed.

She was right. It was hard to see through the heavy snowfall... but beyond the wind, shadows of people appeared.

There were many shadows, not just one or two. Dozens, maybe even hundreds.

A forest of human shadows.

"Okay."

I led the way.

"Let's head over there!"

The snow whirled around. It wasn't falling from the sky but was whipped up by the wind. In the blizzard, people appeared only as shadows, so we stayed close to avoid getting separated.

-Zombie.

The Guardian Spirit spoke. It was looking around for me.

-Something's off. I don't hear any noise from that direction.

'Is it because the blizzard is drowning out the sound?'

-Maybe.

The Guardian Spirit narrowed its eyes towards the forest of shadows.

-But it's not just that there's no sound... those figures aren't moving at all. Not even a twitch. They're more like statues than people.

Fortunately, the windstorm settled down after a while. As the snowfall ceased, our visibility improved. But the relief was short-lived.

The sight before us left us speechless.

"...What's with these?"

Viper exhaled a white breath.

"Why are all these people frozen?"

In the middle of the snowfield.

Hundreds of people were all standing, frozen solid.

"...They're really human."

Apothecary confirmed after examining a frozen person.

She, wearing latex gloves, plucked flesh from the corpse with tweezers.

"According to the [Life Diagnosis] skill, they've been dead for 2 years and 3 months. Cause of death: death by infection. [Moving Hospital] analysis indicates it's an unregistered disease."

"How strange!"

Medicine King also examined the frozen people closely, using skills to diagnose them, just as combat-focused hunters use skills to fight.

"The cause of death is the same for all. It's not death by freezing. They should've died lying on the ground... but they're all standing? Hmm, really. It's a crying shame. Back in Silicon Valley..."

"It's highly likely someone deliberately moved the bodies here."

Apothecary cut Medicine King off.

After hearing my earlier words, she had become serious.

"The cause of death is the same, but the dates vary. This person died 2 years ago, that one 3 years ago. It seems intentional..."

I furrowed my brow.

"Sort of a graveyard?"

"Hmm."

Viper stroked his chin.

"A graveyard, eh? From afar, it looks like an army of terracotta soldiers."

The poses of the frozen people varied. Some had their arms spread wide, looking up at the sky, while others were frozen mid-roar like beasts.

‘Character window.’

I looked at the nearest frozen person and whispered in my mind.

White letters floated up over the snowy field.

+

Name: Jang SeongPa

Favorability: -

Preferred Genres: -

Disliked Genres: -

Preferred Characters: -

Disliked Characters: -

Preferred Plots: -

Disliked Plots: -

Psychological State: 'Light.'

+

"....."

So this is what the character window of a deceased person looks like.

Perhaps the 'Light' mentioned in the psychological state was... the last thought of this person before dying. The psyche of the corpse, like an inscription on a gravestone, was fixed.

The group murmured, faced with the mystery.

"A graveyard... If this is a communal grave, why make it like this?"

"I don't know. But they all have weapons at their waists."

"Is there anywhere we can rest? I'm warm thanks to the aura but..."

At that moment.

"---Hahaha!"

Laughter echoed from a distance. Our group instinctively crouched down. The source of the laughter, unaware of our presence, shouted at someone.

"The reign of the Demonic Cult ends today!"

"Hah. Even the passing dogs would flip and laugh at that."

There were two voices, not one.

"As long as I, the leader, remain intact, the Demonic Cult's reign will persist. Great Axe Sage, it's time for you to bid farewell to the Orthodox Faction."

Clear and resonant voices.

One belonged to an old man, the other to a young woman.

The old man shouted.

"Nonsense! Your Demonic Cult's vaunted Blood Ghost Troops have already had their heads lopped off by my axe. Even those rotten council elders had their heads severed and sent to the netherworld! With five hundred loyalists of the martial world under my command, what sorcery could you possibly use to stop me?"

"Huh."

The woman chuckled softly.

"Such a long tongue for an old man. The Blood Ghosts merely left on my secret command. They're not weak enough to be killed by someone like you."

I raised my finger, signaling my group to be quiet.

'Shh.'

My companions blinked.

'Let's approach quietly. Okay?'

They nodded silently in agreement.

We stealthily moved through the cemetery of frozen humans, drawing closer to the voices. Soon, we could see the two of them.

"Worry about your own followers before mine, Great Axe Sage."

The woman wore a black martial outfit.

"Where have all your proud disciples vanished? The once revered old man of the martial alliance has fallen so low."

"Humph!"

The old man, draped in a white robe, retorted.

"None of your concern. They've spread across the world on secret missions!"

"There must be a lot of secret missions..."

"You've messed up the world with your needless meddling. If not for your damn Demonic Cult, things wouldn't have become this bizarre!"

"If we are fools, what does that make you, who have handed over the martial world to such fools? The fool above fools, a supreme fool."

"How dare you, woman!?"

"Come at me, old man."

A rather low-level squabble was unfolding.

Judging from their conversation, the man in the white robe belonged to the Orthodox faction, and the woman in black to the Unorthodox faction. The old man of the Orthodox faction and the woman of the unorthodox faction pointed weapons at each other.

"Enough! I can no longer stand the sight of you, demonic leader! I shall split your head in two, offering one to the Jade Emperor and the other to the King of the Underworld!"

"Hmph. I've been longing for a decisive battle. Today, I'll eliminate the last of the Orthodox bloodline and prove the strength of the Demonic Cult."

Despite their frivolous tones, it was a typical confrontation between martial artists.

Just as the two were about to unleash their formidable powers in a dazzling sword fight, a serious problem emerged.

-Zombie.

The Guardian Spirit muttered in disbelief.

-What are they doing with those twigs...?

Indeed.

The old man and the woman, these two martial artists, were holding slender sticks, resembling thin canes. These were their 'weapons'. The splendid weapons typical in martial arts movies were nowhere to be seen.

"....."

"....."

There was an awkward silence. The two seemed embarrassed at pointing mere sticks at each other. Finally, the woman in the black robe spoke softly.

"...Great Axe Sage, where have you hidden your prized Steel Cauldron Axe to come wielding such a twig? Your only merit was swinging that axe with such flair..."

"Shut up!"

The old man's face reddened.

"And you! Where did you toss aside your treasured Lethal Demon Blood Sword, resorting to such a cane!"

"Ah, a cane, you say."

The woman averted her gaze slightly.

"That's harsh. This is a wooden sword I carved myself. It contains the essence of a millennium of demonic teachings. I have even graced it with the name Demonic Heaven Wooden Blade."

"Putting the name of Demonic Heaven on a mere twig?"

"Hmm. Is that not acceptable...?"

"....."

"....."

Silence.

The old man spoke softly.

"Ahem. Even so, Demonic Heaven Wooden Blade is a bit much. How about calling it a simple baton?"

"Baton? That literally means a cane..."

"Literally a cane, and what you see is a cane! Foolish woman!"

The woman reluctantly nodded.

"Fine.

If you insist, I shall settle for a Demonic Wooden Baton."

"That Demonic again!"

The old man's white beard quivered.

"Why do you demonic folks obsessively attach 'demonic' to everything? Just in your followers, there's Blood Demon, Sword Demon, Hell Ghost Demon, Moon Shadow Demon, four demons! And they're collectively known as the Four Demon Lords! Did you learn the word 'demonic' before even the Thousand Character Classic!?"

"Hmm. Is there not an elegant ring to it...?"

"Ah! To think the martial world once fell to such buffoons!"

Then.

Dark clouds began to eat away at the sun. The snow-laden clouds were especially thick, casting a deep twilight over the snowfield. The world darkened as if it were early evening.

"Huh!?"

The old man flinched.

"Demonic leader, now's not the time for us to fight!"

".....!"

The two martial artists, who had been verbally sparring, suddenly stood back-to-back. The woman's forehead was slick with sweat.

"Damn it. The heavens have been unpredictable lately...."

"Woman, didn't you assure me the weather would be clear today?"

"Divinations can be both right and wrong. I only learned from Hell Ghost Demon's predictions. How can I possibly foresee the will of the heavens?"

"Ah! I've been misled by your words and ruined the plan!"

"Shut up and prepare to fight, old man. My energy's already draining."

Our group stood there, utterly bewildered.

Apothecary, sticking close to my side, whispered.

"Wh-why are they acting like this all of a sudden...?"

"I don't know either. I was about to say..."

Just as I was about to reply.

-Grumble.

Something stirred.

At first, I thought it was one of us making the noise. But when growling sounds began emanating from the left, right, front, and back, I realized something was terribly wrong.

-Growl.

-Squeak, growl.

-Grrr.

"Yikes!"

Apothecary clung to my arm in shock. Even through her glasses, her complexion looked pale.

Viper and Medicine King's faces weren't much different. My expression must have been quite grim as well.

-Squeal!

-Growl, growl.

The thousands of frozen humans.

What we thought were mere corpses began to move slowly.

-Groan.

A corpse nearby, previously frozen stiff, rotated its eyeballs. Its pupils were open, eyebrows almost gone, and parts of the iris eaten away by bugs. Yet, it stared right at us.

"....."

Our eyes met. Seeing the corpse's eyes, I realized the truth.

"Damn it..."

The Revelation named [The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon].

The book clearly stated:

+

[The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon]

Genre: Martial Arts

Difficulty: B

Required Participants: 2~4

*The serialization has been discontinued.

Description: In the world of martial arts, where martial arts are revered and utilized to reach enlightenment! Here, a Heavenly Demon appeared, aiming to unify the martial world. The Demonic Cult, united under the Heavenly Demon, and the opposing forces clashed over the fate of the world... or so they would have.

Had it not been for a sudden super pandemic.

Reason for Discontinuation: An unidentified pandemic spread, leading to the death of the Heavenly Demon. The Demonic Cult was annihilated. All other forces perished. The end.

+

What we thought were frozen corpses began to stir.

Their movements were sluggish, but the sight of corpses moving was terrifying in itself.

I belatedly realized what the 'unidentified pandemic' mentioned in the Revelation was.

"The pandemic was a [Zombie Virus]!"

As I shouted, the corpse's mouth opened.

-Ughhhhh!

The sun was obscured by clouds.

A thousand zombies descended upon us.

Chapter 63: The Great War of Good and Evil (2)

Apothecary's face turned pale.

Just as she was about to scream in terror,

"Hi-."

"Huhhhhhh!?"

A scream, far surpassing Apothecary's in volume, erupted. It was Medicine King.

The Sword Emperor's friend, quite advanced in years, could outshout most youngsters when it came to screaming.

"Run! Get away! I've never seen such a thing even in Silicon Valley! Ughhh, it's the end! The world is ending!"

"We're already in a world that has ended, you know!?"

I quickly drew out the Holy Sword and slashed at the nearest zombie. Unlike martial arts films, I was more familiar with zombie movies and dramas, and I had personally faced them on the 13th floor. Thanks to this, my blade instinctively beheaded the zombie.

-Kieeek!

The zombie's head soared through the air, still growling. The headless body continued to thrash about, lunging at me. Damn it. Was this the type that only stopped moving when the brain was destroyed? The worst-case scenario.

"Let's get out of here for now!"

"You, who are you people!?"

The two martial artists finally noticed our presence. The righteous old man and the demonic woman looked at us, just as shocked by our group as we were by the zombies.

"...Old man, my eyes must be going crooked. I see living humans, not just one, but four of them. Is the King of the Underworld calling me?"

"I see the same. After being mocked as the supreme fool by you, it seems I've truly become one."

"Quick, run away too!"

I quickly hoisted Apothecary onto my back.

"And if possible, tell us where to run!"

The two martial artists exchanged glances.

"Good heavens. They do seem to be living humans, old man."

"Perhaps we're already dead, observing the scenery of the afterlife...?"

"Then either we've gone to The Peach Blossom Spring together or plunged into hell. Since there are no peach trees or fairies here, and zombies abound, not to mention your presence, it's hard to believe this is The Peach Blossom Spring."

"So, it's not a dream but the living world."

"Are these living humans?"

"They're warm to the touch, so at least they don't seem to be zombies."

The two martial artists were casually bantering, which might have given it away, but we were already fleeing through the zombie forest. Viper took care of the righteous old man, while I carried the demonic woman.

"Where exactly did you all come from?"

The demonic woman looked up at my face with curiosity.

"You've mastered interesting Stepping Techniques. Are you youngsters from the Outside land? Are there still barbarians living on the frontier?"

"We are..."

I didn't fully understand what 'Outside land' meant, but I got the gist of it. Were we from outside the martial world? How should I respond to this? As I pondered, a sound from behind us answered my question.

-Kigik, kieeek!

-Ughhhhh!

It was the zombies. They had fully warmed up and were now chasing after us.

Actually, could this even be called 'chasing'?

What kind of zombies could leap ten meters in a single bound? 'Flying' was more apt than 'chasing'. Hundreds of zombies, like a flock of seagulls, flew towards us, a truly shocking and terrifying sight.

"What, what the hell!?"

Viper was astounded.

"Why are zombies flying in the sky!?"

"It's a Movement Technique I created. I borrowed it from the Kunlun riffraff and refined it."

The demonic woman boasted.

"Look at that. Beyond Traceless Snow Walk, reaching the Airy Void Path! Truly, my teachings have been well received by the Demonic Cult's elites. Even in death, they continue to use the Movement Technique, a true mark of demonic disciples."

"Hold on a second."

I interjected. Despite the bewildering array of unfamiliar terms, I couldn't overlook what was just said.

"They don't forget their martial arts even in death?"

"Huh? Being from the Outside, you're unfamiliar with the ways here."

The woman in my arms tilted her head curiously.

"Martial artists continue to use martial arts even as zombies. It's common knowledge."

"I've never heard of such 'common knowledge'!"

Indeed. Martial arts-wielding zombies!

Had this been a comedy, I might have laughed it off, but this was not a comedy. This was the world of genuine martial arts. This was no joking matter.

"These youngsters, in particular, directly received my teachings. Once they receive my teachings, even in their sleep, their bodies respond to killing intent. Ah, even as corpses, seeing them use the techniques is truly commendable."

"Huhhhhh!? We're going to be caught! We'll be caught like this, Guild Master!"

Medicine King, carried by Viper, screamed. The zombies, leaping into the air, swooped down like fierce eagles, nearly grabbing Medicine King's hair.

"Run faster! Can't you run any quicker! If I get bitten and turn into a zombie, I'll bite you first!"

"Damn, who brought these old men into the team!? And why am I stuck with old men while King of Death gets all the women!?"

"We're about to be killed by martial-arts-using zombies and that's what you care about!?"

"We're about to die! What else matters!?"

The Guardian Spirit, keeping watch behind us, yelled out.

-Zombie! Zombies!

Damn it.

"Weakness!"

I asked the demonic woman.

"Is there no weakness to these zombies!?"

"Crush their heads, and they stop moving."

"Not that, something easier!"

Truthfully, I was prepared to die at this moment. Ordinary zombies might be one thing, but zombies flying through the air and using martial arts? If they filled the world, even with Sword Saint, Witch, and Heretic Inquisitor combined, it would be a close call.

"Hmm."

The demonic woman nodded.

Then, she pointed over my shoulder.

"They stop when the sunlight hits them."

".....!"

Of course. It was simple when I thought about it.

The scene of zombies beginning to move, of them flying through the air with martial arts, was so shocking that I hadn't considered it.

"Unknown lady! And Apothecary!"

"Hmm."

"Yes?"

The demonic woman replied calmly, while Apothecary responded shakily. I concentrated Aura in my arm.

"Sorry, but I have to throw you! Please land safely!"

"Hmm."

"...Yes?"

And then I threw them as far as I could. Like an Olympian javelin thrower, with all my might.

The woman made no sound as she flew. She just plummeted headfirst into the snow. Apothecary, on the other hand, screamed grandly as she fell. Where she landed, a large 'Dai' (大) character was etched into the snow.

"Sorry!"

I apologized again, then stopped and turned back.

Hundreds of zombies were rushing toward me.

-Grrrrrrrr!

-Kiik!

-Ugh! Grrr!

Chills ran down my entire body.

I had fought zombies on the 13th floor, but these martial arts zombies swarming like mosquitoes from the sky were on a completely different level. Seriously, they were terrifying.

-We're going to die!

For some reason, Guardian Spirit was reveling in the situation.

-To think I'd see a zombie like you dying to real zombies again! Ah, this is great! Another item off my bucket list!

Was he keeping a bucket list even as a ghost?

"Not yet,"

In the middle of the snowfield, I faced the horde of zombies.

"I'm not dead yet!"

I drew the Goddess of Protection's Holy Sword.

Just as the zombies' teeth, clinging to the flesh of someone frozen solid, were about to reach me, I mentally commanded.

'Shine, Shiny!'

[Shiny responds to your call, Hero.]

'Shine brightly!'

Whoosh!

The fragment of the Constellation, the first of the five sister swords, the Idol, emitted a brilliant light. The snowfield reflected the sword's light, illuminating the surroundings brightly.

And I realized that I indeed had a talent for naming. Calling Shiny "Shiny" was a truly apt choice.

-Ughhhh!

-Groooooo.....

Hesitation.

The zombies, hit by the Holy Sword's light, froze in mid-air. Just like mosquitoes hit by an insecticide spray, they plummeted to the ground. Since the zombies didn't know how to fall safely, the snow-covered ground was punctured with holes like a beehive.

"Huhhh!"

The Medicine King, who was almost caught by a zombie, moaned. The zombie was frozen in place, still holding onto his white hair.

"Did we, did I survive again? Ahhh, if it weren't for Marcus, I wouldn't have entered this tower. Oh, my fate..."

"Is everyone okay?"

I remained on high alert. It wasn't over yet. The sky was still covered with dark clouds, and the ground remained shrouded in darkness.

Only the light from the Goddess of Protection's Holy Sword served as our sole illumination.

If the light were to go out even for a moment, those terrifying martial arts zombies would resume their activity.

"Ugh, yes, my face hurts a bit, but I'm okay... Thank you for saving me, Sword King..."

"Damn it, whether it's the Sword Saint or this guy! I want to live a life away from old people!"

Apothecary and Viper informed me of their safety in their own ways.

I nodded.

"Viper, please take care of the others while I deal with the zombies."

"What are you going to do?"

"I'm planning to finish off these zombies while they're immobilized."

I aimed the Holy Sword at a zombie.

"It'll take some time to crush their brains one by one, but it shouldn't be too hard..."

"Hold on a moment, young man from the Outside."

The demonic woman stood up from the snow.

She slowly brushed the snowflakes off her martial uniform.

"I must thank you for saving me, a stranger. However, if you plan to annihilate those zombies, I must stop you."

"...Why?"

All sorts of theories crossed my mind.

Perhaps the zombies were cursed in a way that the curse would transfer upon killing them? Zombies are one of the most versatile monsters, becoming either minor mobs or formidable disasters depending on the world setting.

But the reason given by the demonic woman was utterly unexpected.

"They are all disciples and subordinates of my Demonic Cult."

"Excuse me?"

"They are my disciples and subordinates."

She was serious.

"The Great War to eradicate the Orthodox Faction is imminent. Every master is desperately needed. We're already short on numbers, so I cannot afford to lose more elites here."

What kind of nonsensical talk was this?

Our expedition team couldn't understand her words. A Great War? The world of 'The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon' was already on the brink of destruction. There shouldn't be any forces or humans left to wage war.

The Holed-Up Head Librarian had told us when guiding us to the apocalypse.

'When you open your eyes, you'll be in the world of 'The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon', 10 days before its unfortunate cancellation.'

'I hope you'll present a splendid ending.'

With only ten days left until complete destruction.

I wasn't sure how many survivors remained in this world... but after ten days, everyone would die. Neither the demonic woman nor the righteous old man could escape this fate.

Whether they knew this future or not, the two martial artists seemed nonchalant.

"The old man..."

"Head of the Martial Alliance. Call me the Great Axe Sage."

"...That old man and I have been engaged in a Great War for three years. Today marks exactly 989 days since the war's declaration. We both vowed in our names that we can't leave this place until one admits defeat."

The demonic woman spoke solemnly.

"Even though they've become zombies, if they use the martial arts of the Demonic Cult, they are still my people. I must protect my subordinates. Don't kill them recklessly. If you must kill, choose those in monk robes..."

"Absurd! How can I let the righteous warriors gathered by the Martial Alliance die!"

The righteous old man jumped up.

"Didn't you swear, demonic woman! That we wouldn't harm the zombies and that it would be just you and me who see this Great War to its end!"

"Promises are meant to be broken."

"This wicked woman! Then I too will crush the heads of those demonic zombies!"

"That's it. I've had enough."

I was dumbfounded.

"...The world is on the brink of destruction, and you're still continuing this Great War?"

"The order is wrong."

The woman addressed as the Heavenly Demon shook her head.

"The world began to destruct amidst our ongoing war."

In other words.

The righteous old man, Head of the Martial Alliance, and the demonic woman, the Heavenly Demon, were fighting a fate-determining battle. That was all fine. However, a virus suddenly spread, turning all their subordinates into zombies.

Ordinary people would have stopped the war and either fled or hid...

"But we can't delay a battle already begun!"

Martial artists are not ordinary people.

Head of the Martial Alliance and the Heavenly Demon... despite their subordinates all turning into zombies, did not stop their war.

In fact, they still regarded their zombified subordinates as their own and continued the Great War amidst the zombie apocalypse for three years.

"I will not stop until I defeat that old man. I still have five hundred zombie soldiers left. I'll lead them to crush the orthodox dogs."

"I'll say the same, demonic woman! The orthodox martial artists who fought you even as spirits are with me! I'll put an end to this wretched war that's lasted 989 days!"

Indeed.

The expedition team wasn't the only one without dreams and hope.

This world itself was devoid of dreams and hope.

Chapter 64: The Great War of Good and Evil (3)

Despite the world's destruction, the two martial artists didn't cease their war.

This was enough to baffle anyone, but a more shocking scene was unfolding.

It was the way these two were fighting.

"A scholar does not choose his pen, just as a warrior does not choose his sword."

The Heavenly Demon said to the Head of the Martial Alliance.

In her hand, she still held a wooden stick.

"Though I've accidentally left behind my Lethal Demon Blood Sword and now hold this Demonic Wooden Baton, I can easily send an old man like you to your grave."

"Right!"

The Head of the Martial Alliance brandished his stick and declared confidently.

"Let's see who will ultimately unite the martial world!"

Thus, the two warriors collided.

Perhaps 'collided' might be an overstatement.

Their struggle was nothing more than a scuffle, nothing more, nothing less.

"Heavenly Demon's Reigning Steps!"

"Hmpf! Sky Destroying Golden Axe!"

The Heavenly Demon and the Head of the Martial Alliance shouted impressive-sounding names as they clashed. However, just their words were impressive.

What they held in their hands were mere sticks, and the sound they produced as they struck each other was more playful than intense.

Thwack! Thwack! Thwack!

Soon enough, their sticks broke. Then the Heavenly Demon and the Head of the Martial Alliance lunged at each other, eyes bulging with fury. The Heavenly Demon grabbed the Head of the Martial Alliance's beard, and he, in turn, yanked her hair.

I was speechless.

"This is just..."

A situation beyond words.

While we all stood dumbfounded,

-Well, that's strange.

The Guardian Spirit had an unusual reaction.

-They have the right stances. Those guys.

'What?'

-Their techniques and breathing are spot on. Even in my world, they would be considered top-notch masters.

I looked again at the duel. The Head of the Martial Alliance was attempting to poke the Heavenly Demon's eyes, who hurriedly covered her face with both hands.

'That?'

-Don't you see the subtlety in that? The eye poke embodies the principle of the Azure Dragon's claw snatching the pearl from the Evil Dragon, which could be named Double Dragon's Battle for the Orb, and the face covering reflects the compassionate Buddha embracing the faces of all sentient beings, which could be called Thousand Face Covering Buddha...

The Sword Emperor continued with his lengthy explanation.

I raised a hand to stop him.

'But why are they fighting like children in a brawl?'

-That's what's so strange. If their form is that developed, their energy should follow suit, and thus their intent should be full as well, but...

There's no energy, no Aura in their movements now. Even if their dantian was destroyed, it shouldn't be like this...

As Guardian Spirit shook his head in confusion, I thought of a possible, perhaps the only possible, explanation.

'Sword Emperor, are you just teasing me?'

-Oh, zombie. I'm not such a prankster to jest about such things.

Guardian Spirit indignantly retorted.

-Oh come on, can't you really see it? If only you hadn't spent all that time in secluded training focusing solely on Aura, you would understand. Tsk tsk. Although, that training was precisely what you needed at that time...

Despite referring to the years I spent fighting the Demon King of Autumn Rain as secluded training, the Sword Emperor was serious.

And someone else became serious too.

"That old man and woman... they are quite skilled."

Viper squinted his eye.

"The technique in that bite, and in that sweeping away move, there's the principle of Earth King, and the grace of a leisurely passing dragon..."

-Aha, see, zombie? Unlike you, he has the eye for it. Like a giant snake, a graceful bite, and a dragon-like sweep! Did you see that?

I wordlessly opened Viper's psychological window.

The Head of the Martial Alliance crossed his arms, pondering deeply.

'According to the derivative techniques in my Unrivaled Martial Fighter skill... Indeed, it matches. Their movements. ['Cerberus of Earth,' reincarnated as the royal guard of the 'King'dom of Hell, sandwiched between a troublemaker and class president, also reincarnated, and how that bothers 'me'], and also ['Online' high school warrior decided with his younger classmate, a popular comic artist, to become a true 'Dragon' warrior together]. It's all there. No doubt.'

The Guardian Spirit was at a loss for words.

Unaware of the situation, Apothecary tilted her head in confusion.

"That... just looks like a child's fight, doesn't it, Guild Master?"

"Damn. If everyone could see it, what would be the difference between a master and a novice? Only someone like me can see such depth."

'Amazing. How many branches does the derivative technique tree have? Those two are way above the Sword Saint. Maybe

I'll level up just by watching. I've got something to teach my disciples when I return.'

Hmm.

'Sword Emperor.'

-Yes, zombie...

'What about the technique of Returning to the Origin, like multiple formulas for the same answer? For Viper, it's all about the martial arts perspective.'

-Yeah, thanks...

Faced with the Head of the Martial Alliance and the Heavenly Demon engaging in a childish fight, and seeing the Emperor of Light Novels gaining enlightenment from it, and above all, comforting the Sword Emperor in this bizarre situation, fortunately, didn't last long.

"Achoo! I'm freezing to death here!"

The Medicine King suddenly shouted.

"You kids! How long are you going to keep fighting! Don't you see us standing right in front of you? Tsk, tsk, such narrow vision! Just like me when I was young, exactly the same!"

The Medicine King's scolding even made the Great Axe Sage pause.

The Head of the Martial Alliance scratched his head awkwardly.

"Well, since we have guests, indeed, this isn't proper etiquette."

The Heavenly Demon also coughed lightly.

"For now, let me guide you to the cave where I reside."

Soon the clouds dispersed. There was no longer a need for me to illuminate the surroundings with Shiny.

The zombies, now exposed to sunlight, stiffened again, and we safely escaped the snowy field.

"Huu. Huuuuuuh..."

"Hack, huff... Hufff...!"

However, the Heavenly Demon and the Head of the Martial Alliance's poor stamina became a hindrance.

They were not ordinary martial artists but the leaders of the Demonic Cult and the Righteous Faction, the most powerful figures in this world. Even the Sword Emperor and Viper confirmed their martial prowess.

Yet, somehow... both had abysmally low stamina.

They were panting after just a bit of walking in the snow.

"Hm."

Seeing this, I cautiously offered.

"Would you like me to carry you?"

"Ah, please. Today, for some reason, I can't properly use my Breathing Technique."

Eventually, I ended up carrying the Heavenly Demon, and Viper carried the Head of the Martial Alliance.

Viper seriously said.

"King of Death. That's not right."

"Yes?"

"This is how it should be."

This time, Viper carried the Heavenly Demon, and I ended up carrying the Head of the Martial Alliance.

"It looks more fitting this way."

"Yes..."

We agreed to proceed this way, lacking the energy to argue further.

Then it struck me.

'Wait a minute?'

As I was carrying the Head of the Martial Alliance, I felt a peculiar sensation.

'Something's odd.'

The Guardian Spirit tilted his head.

-What's odd?

'It's warm.'

-Huh?

'...His body is incredibly warm. You know how cold it is right now? We'd freeze if we didn't draw upon our Aura... But this person, his body is warm.'

-.....

The Sword Emperor was silent, lost in thought. I followed suit, pondering.

Could they be using their internal energy, their Aura, to keep warm? But, we hadn't felt any such energy during their battle.

'This doesn't add up.'

Something was off.

However, unable to pinpoint exactly what, we continued across the snowfield.

"This is my residence."

The Heavenly Demon led us to a cave not far from the snowy plains.

There was a huge hole in the ceiling, allowing the sunset light to pour in brilliantly.

"Wow..."

Apothecary gaped, her eyes sparkling behind her frosted glasses.

"Oh, is that a hot spring?"

Indeed, there was an open-air bath in the cave.

A deep pool formed on the cave floor, with steam rising from its surface. The natural hot spring countered the harsh cold of the winter, creating a comfortably warm environment. With the sunset above and the flowing hot spring below, it was truly a breathtaking sight.

"This is a sanctuary I found long ago."

The Heavenly Demon smiled contentedly.

"Never thought I'd entertain guests from beyond our realm. Go ahead and bathe first. I'll join the old man in searching for something to serve as a meal."

"Eh? Do we have anything else besides the nutrient pills?"

"That's why I'm saying let's search. Old man, have you gone deaf with age?"

"Always calling me old, but there isn't much age difference between us!"

"Then why don't you undergo a Bone Transformation too?"

The Heavenly Demon and the Head of the Martial Alliance bickered as they disappeared into the cave.

We remained by the hot spring, looking at them with mixed feelings.

"It's, it's amazing. They were ready to fight to the death just moments ago..."

"They've been fighting for three years. Maybe they've developed a strange bond."

The Medicine King grumbled.

"Still, it's warm and nice here. Eh, it's embarrassing to have been holding men's hands since we got to this world. Now, let's have some distance, Head of the Celestial Martial Guild."

"Why did the Sword Saint befriend such a man?"

"Hey! Watch your words. It was me who befriended Marcus!"

"Whatever... Birds of a feather, I guess."

So, we took a break in the hot spring.

After our bath, the two martial artists served us food.

"I'm sorry we don't have much to offer."

"Here are the nutrient pills. Eat plenty."

The Heavenly Demon and the Head of the Martial Alliance presented us with thick pellets. They were pills.

They looked like larger versions of a heart-soothing pill.

"I used to find prey like wolves to hunt, but these days, it's hard to find any animals. I don't even know how the world got to this state."

"No, thank you for your hospitality."

I accepted the plate politely. It had been three years since the world's destruction. It was unlikely to find any real food.

We cautiously nibbled on the nutrient pills.

"Yuck!"

"Ugh."

Viper and the Medicine King couldn't hide their disgust. I almost grimaced myself. It tasted like chewing on stale coffee beans – hardly palatable.

"Have you been surviving on these alone?"

Apothecary inspected the nutrient pill curiously.

"Mostly, yes."

"For how long?"

"Hmm."

The Heavenly Demon looked at the cave wall, where countless marks were etched. They seemed to have marked each day since they started living in the cave.

"It's been over two years just on these."

"Two years..."

Apothecary was speechless. They had been living off these pellets for over two years.

"It's unbelievable. How could you maintain proper nutrition? Without the right balance of carbohydrates, fats, proteins, vitamins, and minerals, the human body..."

"Hmm? I don't understand what you're saying, but we're still holding up."

"I can't take this anymore!"

The Medicine King stood up abruptly and rummaged through his spatial bag, pulling out a burner, meat, seafood, and other items.

"Move aside! You've been eating this stuff, no wonder you can barely walk. The human body is 70% water, you need proper water to stay healthy, not snow. Tsk."

Lighting the burner, the Countess poured bottled water into a pot.

Master Alchemist was surprised.

"Isn't that Bling H₂O? That's expensive..."

"What's expensive about it! I use it for cooking. Back outside the Tower, I wouldn't even glance at it. Tsk. If it weren't for Marcus..."

Watching the unexpected cooking scene unfold, the Sword Emperor was puzzled.

-Zombie, what's Bling H₂O?

'Maybe like Evian?'

-What's Evian? Like Gongcheong Suyu?

'What's Gongcheong Suyu?'

-Extremely expensive water.

Then it must be something similar.

Chapter 65: The Great War of Good and Evil (4)

While Guardian Spirit and I were chatting, the Medicine King boiled water using what seemed like an Evian-like bottled water. At the same time, he effortlessly laid out a frying pan and a cutting board, beginning to cook.

A savory aroma filled the cave.

“Hm, huh.”

The Medicine King was quick with his hands. In just 15 minutes, he had prepared a variety of dishes: a soup with mussels, a crispy fish steak on asparagus, a stir-fry of some unknown fish and long shellfish garnished with parsley, a cream-topped porridge with diced shellfish and mushrooms, and even a whole roasted leg of lamb. He served them up with a flourish.

“Here you go! It’s not much, but eat up. You should eat well when you're young. Tsk tsk.”

The Head of the Martial Alliance’s eyes widened at the array of dishes laid out in front of him.

“Well, the Heavenly Demon and I are quite old, but...”

“Did you two also consume some kind of elixir of immortality? Ah, if it were Silicon Valley, you would have patented it by now! Forget it, if you’re old, eat well! That’s how you keep your body going.”

While serving a large bowl of mussel soup, the Medicine King’s demeanor was like a feisty old man.

I too received a bowl of mussel soup. The aroma was promising, but I didn't expect much from a mussel soup. However, the moment I tasted it, I was shocked.

‘This is incredibly delicious!?’

Was it because we had just been eating those nonsensical Wall Barrier Pills?

First off, there was no fishy taste. The soup wasn't just boiled in water; it had a reddish hue, probably from some blended red vegetable, giving it a slightly tangy yet umami flavor. The mussels were perfectly chewy, their juices mixing exquisitely with the broth.

Absolutely delicious.

For someone like me, who lived modestly even after winning a huge lottery and considered a White Mocha Frappuccino Venti Quad Java Chip with Extra Chocolate Drizzle as the height of luxury, this was a revelation.

Apothecary, who had also lived humbly, seemed equally amazed. Her eyes widened in astonishment.

“Incredible. It’s so delicious...”

Apothecary began to describe the flavors.

“This shrimp is plump and firm. It tastes exactly like shrimp, not fishy at all... How can it taste like this? And this dessert, the mille-feuille, it’s like a baron being promoted to a duke, with a refreshing passion fruit juice infused yogurt ice cream underneath...”

The Medicine King's pride was evident.

“Well, I did receive a Michelin three-star rating as an owner chef in my 50s! Ah, if only I had a proper kitchen instead of this burner, I would have really made your bellies burst.”

Was the Medicine King, who talked about Silicon Valley and Wall Street, actually a genuinely remarkable person?

“Why did such a great person come to the Tower?”

Viper, curious too, asked while slurping seafood porridge (which seemed to be officially called Abalone Truffle Risotto).

The Medicine King scoffed.

“Why, can't a person like me come? Marcus came to the Tower too in his later years!”

Indeed.

“So, you knew each other from before?”

“Know him? He was just an annoyingly rich brat from a wealthy family. To someone like me, who made my own way in Silicon Valley, he was just lucky. Then in his later years, he suddenly got unlucky, took up a sword, and came to the Tower...”

His voice trailed off with a snort.

Apothecary, Viper, and I all looked at the Medicine King with renewed respect. Perhaps embarrassed by our gazes, he stirred the pot as if shooing a bird.

“Just eat, will you!”

So, we ate. And it was incredibly delicious.

That moment marked the appointment of the Expedition to the Heavenly Demon Records’ official chef.

“Truly a sublime taste.”

Even the protagonist of the Heavenly Demon Records, the Heavenly Demon, couldn’t stop shoveling the food into her mouth.

“Could you be a royal chef? No, this is different from Central Kingdom’s cuisine.”

The Head of the Martial Alliance also slurped his cream pasta.

“I’ve tasted various cuisines as the Head of the Alliance, but this is a first for me.”

“This richness and the elegance of the dishes... where exactly are you from, and why have you come here?”

“Could it be that you’ve found a cure for the zombie disease?”

Both martial artists’ eyes shone with hope.

Understandably so. We were the first humans they had met in years, and they wondered if we had discovered a cure.

I felt a pang of regret but shook my head.

“No. We’re still searching for a cure too.”

Their faces fell with disappointment.

“After all, every doctor and monk in the martial world tried to cure the disease, but no one succeeded.”

“The experts of the Maoshan School, who specialize in zombies, even gave up. So, it’s unlikely things would be different even in the outside world...”

“Was there really no cure at all?”

I inquired.

“Hm? Wait here.”

Shortly afterward, the Heavenly Demon and the Head of the Martial Alliance brought in a large coffin.

Opening the coffin, we saw a zombie lying inside.

-.....

Just like when we discussed the warmth of the Head of the Martial Alliance's body, the Sword Emperor fell silent, furrowing his brows.

The zombie, once as docile as if basking in the sun, was now bound with chains, and large pins were stuck in its joints.

I looked up.

“What's this?”

“The Sect Leader of the Wudang Sect.”

The Heavenly Demon spoke calmly.

“After being bitten by a zombie, he asked us to use his body for research. But the only method we found was to block all the body's meridians with needles.”

She reached into the coffin.

“Be careful.”

She pulled out a needle from the zombie's neck.

-uhhhh!!

Instantly, the previously docile zombie opened its eyes.

“Eek!?”

Apothecary jumped back in fright. The zombie tried to bite her, but its chains prevented it from moving.

“As you can see.”

Thump!

The Heavenly Demon reinserted the needle, and the zombie closed its eyes again, returning to a calm state. “Blocking the cervical meridian can suppress the zombie. But it’s a temporary solution, not a cure.”

“Once bitten, the body is infected with corrupt energy through the meridians and Ki channels.”

Corrupt energy. Could this be referring to the virus?

“No matter how much they meditated or practiced Ki circulation, it was unstoppable. Even those cultivating demonic energy or possessing the purest Ki would end up as zombies. The body heats up like fire, and soon they become zombies.”

The Heavenly Demon closed the coffin.

“The Shaolin Temple’s Head Monk lasted the longest after being bitten. He maintained his sanity for a year. But that’s an exception. Even the strongest usually don’t last more than two weeks.”

She sighed.

“Young ones from the outside world, can you really find a cure?”

"....."

Apothecary couldn't respond. Even the usually talkative Medicine King was silent.

As none of us could reply, the Heavenly Demon let out a bitter laugh.

"Alright. We thought we were the only ones left in the world, but meeting living people like you is a blessing from the gods. Stay as long as you like."

The Head of the Martial Alliance nodded in agreement.

"We'll prepare a place for you to sleep. There's much to discuss, but let's continue tomorrow."

On our first day in Revelations, we spent the night without any significant achievements.

"I can't eat anymore..."

"Marcus, you left me to forever be second best..."

During the night, the team murmured in their sleep, comfortably wrapped in their dreams.

We laid our beds near the hot spring, slightly damp but warm enough to fend off the cold.

-Why aren't you asleep, Zombie?

I looked up at the sky. The open ceiling of the cave offered a clear view of the dark night.

"I have something to check."

The Sword Emperor didn't press further, probably guessing my intentions.

As I pretended to be asleep, the night deepened.

Someone approached quietly. Two people, in fact. I remained still, feigning sleep. The footsteps lingered near us, then whispered softly.

"...Are they asleep?"

"...Seems so."

"...Then let's do it quickly."

The voices of the Heavenly Demon and the Head of the Martial Alliance.

Their footsteps receded toward the hot spring. I seized the moment.

Whoosh!

I sprang up and dashed towards the hot spring. Through the thick steam, I saw the Heavenly Demon and the Head of the Martial Alliance in simple robes, enjoying the bath. They were startled by my sudden appearance.

"Huh!?"

The Head of the Martial Alliance hurriedly submerged deeper into the water, his face showing surprise.

Just as I thought.

Observing their bodies, I confirmed my suspicions.

“What is this? You were asleep!”

The Heavenly Demon narrowed her eyes, quickly grasping the situation. She sighed softly and stared at me calmly.

“...You're quick-witted. When did you realize?”

“From the start, I thought something was off.”

I spoke up.

“Despite the freezing weather, you both wore light clothing. One in a simple robe, the other almost bare.”

In the biting cold, their attire seemed like they were nearly naked.

"You must be circulating Ki to keep warm. That means you're proficient in using Ki, but then why the trivial scuffles or getting tired from a short walk? It's strange."

I continued.

"There's only one explanation. Both of you are [focusing all your Ki elsewhere]."

"When you mentioned being bitten by zombies, it clicked."

I faced them squarely.

"Both of you have been infected, haven't you?"

Silence fell over the hot spring.

Splash.

The water rippled, and soon, the Heavenly Demon stood up.

"D-Demon. You..."

"Enough, old man. We've been found out."

She turned away from me.

The Heavenly Demon's pale back.

"We were bitten by zombies three years ago."

There, a purple, rotten wound was visible.

The Head of the Martial Alliance showed his neck as well.

"But you're wrong about one thing."

A similar rotting wound marked his neck, but it stopped at the spine.

“We’re not suppressing the corrupt energy.”

Rather, their faces were as normal as ever.

“We’ve blocked our cervical meridian with Ki to cut off the corrupt energy.”

The Sword Emperor clicked his tongue.

-Fucking insane. It's Ki Telekinesis.

‘Ki Telekinesis?’

-You know about the Flying Ki Sword Technique, right?

‘Yes, where you wrap a sword in Ki to make it fly... Are you saying?’

Exactly that.

-They've blocked their cervical meridian, losing sensation below the neck, becoming paralyzed. In other words, they are now moving every part of their body [with Ki].

Guardian Spirit added.

-Even the heartbeat.

Every beat of the heart.

-Even breathing.

Inhaling and exhaling air.

-Moving an arm, controlling joints, extending a leg, and managing the waist, knees, ankles, and feet.

In short, everything necessary for living and moving.

-They are controlling everything with Ki.

To prevent the zombie virus from spreading to the brain.

The martial artists had placed their own brains in a state of seclusion.

I remained silent.

-So, they've been essentially using the Flying Ki Sword Technique 24/7. No wonder a few steps tire them out. Crazy...

As if echoing Guardian Spirit, the Heavenly Demon spoke.

"That's how we've been fighting the Great War of Good and Evil."

The Head of the Martial Alliance added.

"And it's been three years since."

Chapter 66: The Heavenly Demon (1)

Lord Heavenly Demon,

This cannot continue.

...Lord Heavenly Demon, half of the Blood Ghost Troops have been annihilated! The elders declared martial law and dispersed across the world, but their whereabouts are now unknown. This is not the time to fight with the fools of the Orthodox Faction. It's a crisis for our sect, perhaps even for the entire world. The beggars from the Beggars' Sect are spreading rumors...

...Lord Heavenly Demon, as you ordered, we've built a medical facility without discrimination. The leaders of Tang Sect have arrived, along with the masters of Maoshan School. We've captured several zombies for experimentation, so we should see some results soon...

...Lord Heavenly Demon, even the Moon Shadow Demon and the Blood Demon have fallen. We eliminate a hundred zombies today, but a thousand more appear tomorrow. We can't cope with this plague! At the medical facility, they say blocking the Anmen and Chongmai meridians with large needles can subdue the zombies, but beyond that...

...Lord Heavenly Demon, please retreat to Nakdo Island. If you go into seclusion on the island, even if there are millions of zombies, they won't be able to cross the sea. Surely, the martial world is not limited to this place alone. Wherever our cult's banner is raised, that place becomes the martial realm...

...Lord Heavenly Demon, what does the great war promise matter now? It was a vow made before the world fell into chaos. With the ways of heaven changing, human morality cannot remain unchanged. Forget the oath made with the Head of the Martial Alliance and please make a triumphant return...

Lord Heavenly Demon.

Lord Heavenly Demon!

"How did you endure it?"

After a long silence, the first question I asked was this.

How did they survive all this time?

In a world where humanity has fallen and turned into corpses, even they have become half-dead. How did they endure three years, risking their hearts stopping if their internal energy flow was blocked even for a moment?

“.....”

The Heavenly Demon and the Head of the Martial Alliance hesitated to answer. They exchanged a glance that I couldn't understand, then nodded together.

"Follow us."

They left the cave.

I followed them.

There was silence as we left the cave, being careful not to wake the others. Thus, we walked in silence for a long time.

The silence was broken only as we emerged outside.

"People will eventually die."

Dawn was breaking.

"A fascinating tale is told in the martial world. Once there was a master who reached the zenith of Perfect Poison Immunity and Indestructible Iron Skin. He was impervious to any poison and immune to any blade."

The Heavenly Demon let out a long breath.

"Truly invincible. Impervious to internal harm, immune to external injury. How could one kill someone who can neither be poisoned nor harmed by the sharpest sword?"

The dawn sky was turning blue.

"In ancient stories, one thing is never tolerated: invincibility."

In the dim light, the world was just a pale shadow.

"Indestructible individuals cannot exist."

As they walked through the shadowed world, only their footsteps distinguished heaven from earth.

"Child from another world,"

The Heavenly Demon glanced back at me.

We were walking back to yesterday's snowfield, surrounded by martial arts zombies.

"Can you guess how that master died?"

"How did he die?"

"He was killed by a Lustful Demon."

The Lord Heavenly Demon smirked.

"Erotic pleasure is neither poison nor a blade."

"But excessive pleasure is a kind of poison, isn't it?"

"Correct. Hence, the Lustful Demon didn't start with a storm of pleasure. It was cunning, gradual, starting with the slightest pleasure and eventually leading the master to indulge in the most fatal pleasures. The master was tamed and re-tamed."

Dawn broke.

The snowfield became slightly brighter.

"During their intercourse, what the master perceived as palm strikes were not pain. The Lustful Demon's whips became pleasure. Even a small glance became a source of happiness for the master."

The Heavenly Demon raised her hand.

"In the end,"

She caressed her own neck.

"Just lightly, the Lustful Demon simply strangled the master."

"....."

"The master died engulfed in ecstasy. He was immune to poison and blades but not unhappiness."

In the middle of the snowfield.

There lay the bodies. Dead yet undead, frozen still in the dawn light. They were motionless, like a forest made of shadows.

"The lesson is simple."

"Don't get entangled with Lustful Demons!"

The Head of the Martial Alliance grumbled.

"It wasn't just a story; it really happened. The Tang Sect nurtured a master, and he was assassinated by a Lustful Demon sent secretly."

"Haha."

Zombies lay scattered in the snowfield, seemingly remnants from their pursuit of our group the previous day. The Lord Heavenly Demon approached these zombies.

"Youngsters entering the martial world often have this misconception. They think the goal of a martial artist is to reach invincibility, and the purpose of learning martial arts is to achieve immortality and eternal life."

With a grunt, the Heavenly Demon lifted a zombie.

"Move."

The Heavenly Demon and the Head of the Martial Alliance began moving the zombies.

"Those who reach Perfect Poison Immunity will die from something other than poison. Those who attain Indestructible Iron Skin will perish from something other than a blade. Understand this. Choosing a martial art isn't just about selecting a technique to learn."

The Heavenly Demon struggled to move the zombie.

"It's about deciding what kind of warrior you want to be and, at the same time, deciding how you will die."

Her movements were slow and labored.

Like a postman delivering heavy parcels, the Heavenly Demon took breaks, breathed deeply, and resumed moving the zombies.

"People will eventually die."

She continued this process.

"We understand this. How can we resent the fact that we die?"

The zombies had roamed around the night before. The Heavenly Demon and the Head of the Martial Alliance gathered them one by one.

"But we did not wish for a death like this."

It took a long time.

Their strength was minimal, and there were too many corpses.

"Being assassinated is fine. Being poisoned, too. Falling into a trap or being ambushed, or even being struck down by the monks of Shaolin is acceptable. Betrayal or death in a duel, all are welcome."

Midday.

By the time they finished placing the zombies back in their positions, the sun was at its zenith. Footprints filled the snowfield.

"However, such a death is intolerable."

The Heavenly Demon gasped for breath and looked at me.

"You asked how we endure?"

“.....”

"We just wish to die as we desire."

The old man of the Orthodox Faction lined up hundreds of corpses.

The woman of the Demonic Cult did the same.

The zombies appeared as two armies, poised to clash.

I remembered then.

"The causes of death are the same, but the dates are different."

When we first encountered the zombies upon entering this apocalyptic world.

‘Our observation that someone had intentionally moved the bodies.’

‘A kind of grave?’

‘A grave, yes. From a distance, it looks like a terracotta army.’

Zombies move on their own at night.

Yet thousands of them were gathered in one place in the snowfield.

"Indeed."

Unless someone intentionally moved them to that spot.

"Not many strayed far today."

Five hundred from the Demonic Cult.

"The moonlight was clear last night. It's not as strong as sunlight, but the moonlight affects zombies too..."

Five hundred from the Orthodox Faction.

The Lord Heavenly Demon and the Head of the Martial Alliance moved their respective followers. It was a whole day's work, but they did it silently.

As if it were a natural daily routine.

"We have been waging this Great War of Good and Evil for three years now."

The snow fell.

"The Orthodox martial realm will not fall to mere zombies."

People died.

"The destiny of our cult will not end being devoured by corpses."

The Ten Sect Alliance and the Five Noble Clans disappeared.

"Our Orthodox Faction will only fall by the treacherous hands of the Demonic Cult."

Even as all martial arts libraries gather dust unread.

"If our cult is to vanish, it will only be at the hands of the Orthodox Faction."

This world has not yet perished.

For it to end, two more people must die.

Even if a billion people exist, and all but one die of the plague, the cause of death for that world would not be illness, but simply suicide.

At least, that's how the Head of the Martial Alliance and the Heavenly Demon of the Demonic Cult saw it.

"The Head of the Martial Alliance. Supreme Leader of the Namgung Cla,. Namgung Woon."

The old man assumed a formal martial salute.

"I'm the Great Axe Sage."

"The leader of the Heavenly Demonic Cult. So BaekHyang."

The woman also saluted.

"And I'm the Heavenly Demon."

The sun passed midday.

Years had gone by with only two people left in this world.

Their only task during those years was to decide the cause of death for this world.

"I challenge you to the 990th duel."

Will the demise of the Demonic Cult be at the hands of the Head of the Martial Alliance?

"Is it a life-or-death duel or simply a duel to the death?"

Or will the Orthodox Faction perish by the hands of the Heavenly Demon?

"A duel to the death."

"Accepted."

The two martial artists dropped their salutes.

Five hundred from the Orthodox Faction and five hundred from the Demonic Cult faced each other in the middle of the snowfield, with the Head of the Martial Alliance and the Heavenly Demon charging at each other.

I still couldn't comprehend the martial arts they displayed. To me, they were barely stepping forward. Laboriously. Barely extending their arms.

Their movements were so slow that even a child couldn't have failed to catch them.

Their actions were so weak they couldn't have crushed a single tangerine.

“.....”

A genre in decline.

A world in decline.

This apocalypse had been slowly dying over 990 days.

"This can't be..."

I spoke up.

Watching the duel from afar, I muttered unwittingly.

"This isn't right."

My heart was throbbing.

"It's unfair."

“.....”

"It's an insult to them."

In a world ravaged by an incurable plague, the two martial artists were strong enough to cling to life. But they were too weak to take each other's lives.

"The Heavenly Demon and the Head of the Martial Alliance are mere shadows of their former selves, incapable of anything beyond childish brawling. They roll in the snow, flail aimlessly, grab each other's beards and hair."

"To you, the Sword Emperor, this may appear as a grand battle. Yes, I'm just a novice in swordsmanship. But no matter how profound the principles hidden in this scuffle, no matter how magnificent the logic behind it..."

The day turned to evening.

The Head of the Martial Alliance and the Lord Heavenly Demon did not cease their struggle for a moment.

"It's a mockery."

The sun set.

Yet again, no victor emerged today.

"It's an insult to both of them."

In this declining world.

In a world where people were decimated by an unstoppable plague, the two martial artists were strong enough to barely cling to life. But too weak to take each other's lives.

"We can't let it end like this."

A world where one cannot choose how to be born is cruel.
What then is a world where one cannot choose how to die?

An incomplete ending.

A life abruptly cut short.

-What are you planning to do?

The Guardian Spirit asked quietly.

-Are you going to kill the Heavenly Demon and the Head of the Martial Alliance yourself? Yes, that could be a merciful gift. I would do that. But remember, whether it's me or you, we're just 'outsiders.'

"I know."

The two martial artists don't wish for suicide.

If they must die, their only hope is to be killed by the other's hand.

The Demonic Cult should not perish from a mere plague but fall to the Orthodox Faction.

The Orthodox Faction should not succumb to a disease but be destroyed with the rise of the Demonic Cult.

Such an end.

A proper conclusion.

An acceptable terminus of life.

If I intervened and killed them, it wouldn't be an 'end' or a 'conclusion'. It wouldn't even be a merciful gift.

That would be nothing more than a 'doodle' scribbled at the back of a fairytale book by a child.

It can't end that way.

"I will,"

I told the Guardian Spirit.

"I'll conclude this world in my own way."

-And what is that way?

I didn't answer Guardian Spirit's question.

Dusk fell.

"Already evening, huh? Old Demon."

"Winter days are short... huh. Tomorrow we'll definitely settle this."

"We'll see who's talking..."

Evening deepened.

The 990th day of the Great War of Good and Evil naturally came to a ceasefire.

The Heavenly Demon and the Head of the Martial Alliance stopped fighting, looking more exhausted than the day before, and returned to the cave.

"Where have you been?"

The group greeted us.

Viper stood guard at the cave entrance, while the Apothecary and the Medicine King busied themselves researching the zombie, the Sect Leader of the Wudang Sect we had encountered yesterday.

"We were observing the patient. We couldn't yesterday due to the circumstances..."

"Any progress?"

The Medicine King and Apothecary looked at each other. The Medicine King sighed first.

"Not yet."

"It's, uh, a new virus for us..."

Understandable.

The Head of the Martial Alliance and the Heavenly Demon headed further into the cave to rest. I watched them walk away, then turned to the Apothecary.

"Miss Apothecary."

"Yes?"

"Be honest with me. How long do you think it will take to develop a cure?"

"Ah. Um, uh."

The Apothecary hesitated.

"To be completely honest... at least 120 days."

"Could be twice or thrice that. Schedules for these things should be set generously. Even then, it usually falls short."

The Medicine King added tersely. The Apothecary looked dejected.

"In the worst-case scenario..."

"Shortest, 100 days. Longest, 300 days, correct?"

"Uh. That's..."

The Apothecary lowered his head.

"We might not be able to develop it at all. The facilities and environment are too poor. I can't make any promises right now. I'm sorry, King of Death. After you trusted me and brought me to this stage... It's impossible to develop a cure within the time limit."

Time limit.

The Head Librarian had said when sending us to this apocalypse.

"If your eyes open, you'll be in a world 10 days before the tragic cancellation of 'The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon.'"

"Looking forward to a splendid ending."

Meaning, no matter what happens.

In 10 days, the world will truly end.

The Heavenly Demon and the Head of the Martial Alliance will die.

That ten-day period was what the Apothecary referred to as the time limit.

"I'm really sorry..."

"No."

I shook my head.

"That's enough."

"Ye-yes?"

"Don't worry, Miss."

I fondled the hilt of the dagger at my waist.

"I'll handle the time issue. Don't give up and continue researching."

“.....”

"Do you remember what I said when we first landed in this world?"

This isn't just a book.

It's a world.

We came here to save this world.

“.....”

The Apothecary cautiously nodded.

"We shared a certain look."

"...I, I remember. Of course, I do, King of Death..."

I nodded back.

"My words remain the same as yesterday. Forget all worries about the time limit or failing to complete this stage. I'll do my best in my position, and you do your best in yours."

"Forget all distractions..."

"Yes. I promise. I'll handle everything else."

I said.

To the one who would eventually be known as the Master Alchemist.

"Trust me and do your job."

Chapter 67: The Heavenly Demon (2)

The Apothecary closed her eyes tightly.

After a moment, her lips parted.

"If it weren't for the King of Death, I'd still be in the slums, stripped of my equipment. I can't even imagine what would have happened to me."

Slowly, the Apothecary opened her eyes.

Through her glasses, her gaze was much clearer than before.

"Yes. I want to repay the kindness the King of Death has shown me. I'll focus solely on developing the cure, without any distractions.But when I'm engrossed in my work, I really don't pay attention to anything else. I might come across as very rude. But still....."

"It doesn't matter,"

I nodded.

"Please exert your skills to the fullest."

Now wasn't the time to worry about trivial manners.

What was needed was the future Master Apothecary.

".....Understood."

The Apothecary adjusted her glasses.

She turned to the Medicine King.

"Old man."

"Huh? What?"

"Please support me with all your strength from now on."

The Medicine King furrowed his brows, his wrinkles as deep as his stubbornness.

"Support? Support, eh? What a cheeky request. Kid, there's a hierarchy even in cold water! Where does a greenhorn like you get off telling this Medicine King to merely 'support' you...."

"Skill card open."

"...Huh?"

Skill cards emerged from the Apothecary's hands.

One golden card and three silver cards.

Skill cards that even an ordinary Hunter would struggle to obtain, she had four, all above grade B.

The Medicine King's eyes widened.

"What, what is this? Are you showing off your skills to me? These young ones think skills are everything. True power is..."

"You can look if you want."

"What?"

"You can see what my skills are."

The Medicine King was flustered, unable to respond immediately.

Understandably. A Hunter's skills are their secret weapon, never to be revealed to others. Showing one's skills is akin to confessing one's strengths and weaknesses.

In short, a foolish act.

"Or should I just show you myself?"

The Apothecary was bold.

"This skill is 'Moving Hospital'."

She flipped the card herself to show the Medicine King.

"I can perform everything from blood tests to brain scans in real time. I can also use the medicines I've stored in advance. However, there's a 2% chance of misdiagnosis. This one is 'Life Diagnosis'. I can understand a patient's condition down to their genetic makeup. I combine these two skills to minimize the risk of misdiagnosis...."

"Wait, wait! Hold on!"

The Medicine King finally snapped to his senses.

"Kid! Why are you showing me your skills? What if I blab about them to the Apothecarys Guild or my colleagues!"

"It's okay. I've decided not to worry about such things."

The Apothecary spoke.

"You can share them if you want. But please support me thoroughly until we develop the cure."

"But why are you..."

"I need you if we want to advance the development even by a day."

"....."

"Do you find me unbearable?"

The Apothecary looked at the Medicine King with an indifferent gaze. Once always flustered, she now wore a completely expressionless face.

"Do you hate that a young thing like me is out of line and annoying? Does it irk you that I have talent? That I have more days ahead than you, and that I'll be revered longer?"

"....."

The Apothecary's voice was unique, unlike any animal. It reminded one of insects.

A humming of fire ants.

"If you help me with all your might this time,"

She adjusted her glasses.

"I'll give you all the medicine recipes I've developed. I won't claim they're mine. Take them. Use them. Tell people you invented them---."

Suddenly, the Apothecary's glasses slid off and fell to the ground.

The Medicine King had slapped her.

“.....”

The Apothecary picked up her glasses and silently wiped them with her sleeve. A red mark from the slap was on her left cheek. She put her glasses back on and quietly looked at the Medicine King.

The Medicine King trembled with rage.

"Despicable thing..."

"I'll analyze the zombie virus."

"You'll realize there's a higher level above you."

"Just do what I tell you."

"You'll rot from your wounded pride."

"I'll write down what I need and give it to you."

"Someday, you too,"

"You find it for me and bring it to me."

The Medicine King and Apothecary spoke simultaneously.

"Will meet someone better than you."

"And give it to me."

Then, both Hunters fell silent.

The Apothecary sat on the left and the Medicine King on the right of the zombie's corpse. The Apothecary muttered something and the Medicine King noted it down. Surrounded by a monochrome atmosphere, the two, more like a still life than a portrait, engaged only in business-like conversations.

"King of Death, I'm sorry but please leave."

The Apothecary muttered as she positioned a scalpel near the zombie's head.

"Your breathing is distracting. Very. Very distracting."

"Bring back six more zombies on your way out."

The Medicine King examined the dark mouth of the zombie. He pinched the purple and black tongue with tweezers.

"We need more samples. A child. A young adult. An elderly person. Different genders for each. And if I say I need a certain herb, fetch it for me."

I nodded.

"Leave it to me."

From that day on.

We entered a state of emergency.

Even meal times felt wasteful. Bathing was a luxury. Despite the hot spring nearby, the Apothecary and Medicine King didn't bathe. Day and night, the two Hunters pored over the zombie's body.

"The atmosphere has certainly changed."

The Heavenly Demon looked perplexedly at our group.

"Seeking enlightenment, young ones?"

"Are you not cooking conch soup or doryphor risotto anymore?"

The Head of the Martial Alliance lightly teased the Medicine King.

"In my time at the palace, even the royal chefs couldn't match your skills. If only the world were normal, I would have appointed you as the head chef of the Namgung clan."

"Get lost if you're busy."

The Medicine King retorted without looking up, throwing a bottle of Bling H2O.

"If you're hungry, fill up on water."

The Head of the Martial Alliance sighed, catching the bottle skillfully.

"Old Demon, let's not bother busy people. Let's go."

"Alright, alright. My body isn't listening to me these days."

The Head of the Martial Alliance grumbled tiredly.

"How far have the zombies scattered today..."

"Don't bother, just come."

"Fine."

The Head of the Martial Alliance grumbled and left the cave with the Heavenly Demon.

They were probably going to gather the zombies as they did yesterday, for the 991st day of the Great War of Good and Evil.

Another day passed.

The world moved closer to its end.

And another day.

One day.

One more day.

We were counting...

The days we spent waiting for doom.

The world was still like a music box that hadn't stopped yet.

"Hmm."

A week.

It had been exactly one week since we fell into the Apocalypse.

That day, the Heavenly Demon looked up at the cave ceiling.

"...It seems we can't go outside today."

A blizzard was raging outside. The wind whipped the snow around so fiercely that the sky and the ground became indistinguishable.

The world was nothing but a dark snowfield.

It was then that I realized that even white can be dark.

"Well. Such days happen."

The Heavenly Demon shrugged nonchalantly.

"It's rather fortunate that the weather has been clear these past few days. At its worst, the snowstorm lasted over 30 days. We couldn't move a step without sunlight."

"Then the zombies will keep moving, won't they?"

I asked.

"Is that okay? If they go too far, you can't collect them back."

"If that happens, we can't help it. We lose them."

The Heavenly Demon sighed.

"Originally, three years ago, my cult's forces numbered a thousand. The younglings that the old man brought from the Orthodox Faction were about the same. But over time, zombies that went too far to be found started to appear."

Naturally...

They had a lot of missing corpses. No, not missing, but lost. During each snowstorm, the Heavenly Demon and the Head of the Martial Alliance must have lost several corpses.

"That must be the scariest part for you."

"Hm?"

"Waking up and going out to the snowfield, only to find that yesterday's zombies have disappeared."

"....."

The Heavenly Demon looked at me quietly.

"Do you think I, the Heavenly Demon, would feel fear?"

Her pupils were dark as ink.

Her hair. Even the uniform she wore.

Her entirely black appearance seemed like a desperate resistance against this world that had turned into a white snowfield.

"Yes. I think you would."

"The world has indeed turned upside down. Normally, anyone who dared to talk like that would have lost their head by now. Young man from the outside world, you should be thankful the world has ended."

"The Heavenly Demon and the Head of the Martial Alliance are great masters. I'm embarrassingly far behind in martial arts compared to you."

I quietly shifted my gaze.

The Head of the Martial Alliance was sleeping near the hot spring.

"But even the greatest masters don't have infinite Ki."

"What are you trying to say?"

"When will your Ki run out?"

Hesitation.

"You're blocking the cervical meridian with Ki. Heartbeats, breathing, moving limbs, you're doing it all with Ki."

It was like using the Flying Ki Sword Technique 24/7.

I shook my head.

"No matter how much Ki you have, it's impossible to continue such an extreme act forever."

"Let me ask again. When will your Ki run out, Heavenly Demon?"

She once said,

"People will eventually die."

There was a resonance in those words. The resonance of someone who had realized something.

There is only one way for humans to realize something.

To experience it firsthand.

"...Really."

The Heavenly Demon groaned.

"Really, such a keen young man."

"How many days do you have left?"

"...Let me correct myself. You're annoyingly observant."

This world.

How does [The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon] reach its demise?

Upon reflection, it was surprisingly simple.

"When your Ki runs out, you both won't be able to move."

"Yes."

The Heavenly Demon looked up at the sky.

Through the opened ceiling of the cave, a snowstorm raged.

"First, the toes and fingertips will become numb. Then the calves and wrists. Knees. Shoulders. Waist. Gradually, we won't circulate Ki to those parts, and the parts without Ki will eventually rot."

Literally necrosis.

Like a building stopping operation gradually as fuel runs out.

At some point, they would become immobile.

"Heart. Lungs."

The Heavenly Demon pointed to her chest.

"Cerebrum."

And tapped her head.

"Except for these three parts, all other parts will rot. No. Other parts are left to rot."

"..You already knew."

"Yes. A monk from Shaolin Temple stayed with me for a year."

The Heavenly Demon smirked.

"To think he was a monk, he lay down and passed away. In his last moments, hmm, he was hardly different from a zombie. His body was blackened everywhere... He couldn't even chant Amitabha as his last words."

“.....”

"Do I fear death? Yes. I do."

Her voice was like a falling petal.

"I fear running out of Ki. I fear depleting my vital energy. I fear the snowstorm, the absence of sunlight, and the thought of my followers, once my followers, disappearing when day breaks. Every breath makes me worry about how many more I have left. Each heartbeat, how many more times will I feel it, I fear."

The Heavenly Demon sighed.

"I fear failing to kill that old man. I fear that he won't be able to kill me. I fear the day we both lie in bed, unable to move, just waiting for our Ki to dry up."

A meaningless death.

That even their last struggles become meaningless. Dying. Dying and disappearing into a world where only snow keeps falling, leaving nothing but a monochrome landscape.

"Ah."

This was the ending of [The Veritable Records of the

Heavenly Demon].

The ending of the world.

"The world is such a fearful place."

Another day passed.

The eighth day since we fell into the Apocalypse.

Only two days left until the world's end.

"Demon."

Lying in bed, the Head of the Martial Alliance muttered.

"I can't move anymore."

The Head of the Martial Alliance was smiling.

And crying.

"I'm sorry."

A soft whisper.

That was the sound of a world heading towards its end.

Chapter 68: The Heavenly Demon (3)

"I'm sorry."

The Apothecary said.

"With the current state, he can't be treated."

She was examining the Head of the Martial Alliance. Throughout the examination, her expression was faint. She seemed like a doctor who was examining a patient just to say 'there's no hope,' even though she already knew it.

“.....”

The Heavenly Demon silently looked down at the Head of the Martial Alliance. Perhaps she hadn't even expected treatment. With an expressionless face, she spoke.

"Stand up."

"I'm sorry."

"I'm not asking for your apology. Stand up. Head of the Martial Alliance, Namgung Woon."

In the dark cave.

The Heavenly Demon's breathing quieted down.

It was as if a poisonous fragrance was emanating from her mouth.

"Didn't we make a pact? You boasted that you would challenge the Demonic Heavens and raise the banner of the Orthodox martial realm. You planned to gather the Ten Sect Alliance and the Five Noble clans for a decisive battle. Such a person like you cannot die in bed. That's not possible."

"I'm sorry."

"Stand up."

The scent of poison grew stronger.

"Stand up and take up arms. You don't even need your favorite axe. Just grab a wooden sword, a cane, a bamboo stick, anything. Hold it. Hold it and face me in battle."

"I'm sorry."

"I said stand up."

"Demon."

The Head of the Martial Alliance took a breath.

He had aged more in just one night.

"I'm sorry that I am weaker than you."

“.....”

"I've tried to hold on for one more day, but it's difficult now. You must have felt it too. I was already using the innate true energy. My Ki has run out. My vital energy has worn out too. Maybe you could last another year, but this is it for me."

There was silence.

"I was weaker than you."

The old man muttered as he lay.

"Kill me."

“.....”

The Heavenly Demon's face contorted.

"I don't want to end up like the Monk from Shaolin. Kill me before my body rots and crumbles. Once turned into a zombie, even if I see, I don't really see; even if I live, it's not really living. So..."

"So, you want me to kill you while you lie in bed?"

The scent of poison reached its peak.

"You dare say that now?"

The Heavenly Demon was small, but from her small body, black flames rose. Ki took form and blazed.

Killing intent.

The Ki burned, emanating a scent of soot. It was the scent of the life she had lived, the life she had endured. The Heavenly Demon's fragrance was as pungent as crushed weeds.

"Is this the end you promised for the great war? Is this it?"

“.....”

"You should have chosen mutual destruction long ago, why hold on for glory? You should have ordered all the disciples of your sect and the orthodox faction to commit suicide together, why stubbornly hold on for a glimmer of light?"

The Head of the Martial Alliance couldn't respond. Tears that had dried on his wrinkled face now formed new trails.

"I am..."

"Namgung Woon. You were born with the Heavenly Martial Body, coveted and envied by many since you were a young master. You reached the peak realm at a young age and became the leader of the Namgung clan. When the Heavenly Demonic Cult rose, you were nominated as the Head of the Martial Alliance. All the essence of the Orthodox Faction resided in you, all their grudges lingered with you. Yet, you willingly offer your neck to my demonic claws?"

“.....”

"Fine. I'll kill you."

The Heavenly Demon got up.

"But you won't die peacefully."

She walked somewhere. After she disappeared, the smell of burning lingered. It was suffocating. The Apothecary and the Medicine King, especially, looked in agony, not adept in aura.

Shortly after, the Heavenly Demon returned.

In her hand, she held an axe.

"Namgung's old man. This is your beloved Steel Cauldron Axe. You haven't forgotten it, have you?"

"So BaekHyang..."

"Speak."

The Heavenly Demon raised the axe.

"Martial arts have forgotten chivalry, and chivalry has lost martial arts."

“.....”

"Say it. Say it and I'll kill you as you wish."

Martial arts have forgotten chivalry.

Chivalry has lost martial arts.

It signified the end of the Orthodox martial realm.

The leader of the Demonic Cult declared it. The Head of the Martial Alliance himself had to acknowledge the demise of the orthodox realm. Only then would she take his life. And with his beloved weapon, no less.

"Speak."

"Why can't you say it!"

The old man's lips quivered. His mouth opened, his teeth showed, but nothing was visible beyond them. He couldn't continue. It was as if he had lost his tongue. His mouth opened several times, and each time his tongue lost its way.

"I can't."

The old man exhaled.

"I can't do it... I can't say it..."

Tears again formed on the dried tracks on his face. Layer upon layer of tears accumulated on his old skin.

"I can't say it..."

“.....”

"I'm sorry. I'm sorry, BaekHyang..."

The Heavenly Demon swung the axe.

The blade did not cut the Head of the Martial Alliance's neck.

It just struck the hard ground.

Right next to the old man's face. There, the axe struck. The hard rock of the cave floor easily split like tofu. How much Ki the Heavenly Demon must have used to split the rock, I could hardly guess.

"Did you say living as a zombie is not living?"

The Heavenly Demon muttered.

"It doesn't matter. Right now, you are neither living nor dead. What's the difference between a life that is not life and a death that is not death? I can't see the difference. Meaningless. It's all meaningless..."

She turned her back.

"The world has become emptiness."

The next day.

Namgung Woon, the Head of the Martial Alliance, died at dawn.

It was a disease-related death.

Ten days since we fell into the Apocalypse.

The day the world was to end had arrived.

"...I've obtained valuable samples."

The Apothecary said.

"Only analyzing the virus from those infected for 2 or 3 years had its limits. This sample allowed us to observe the infection in real-time. This is a significant breakthrough."

In front of her lay the Head of the Martial Alliance.

A lifeless body.

The old man's body was tightly bound with chains.

"Death doesn't immediately turn them into zombies... There seems to be a slight delay before awakening. I guess it takes time for the infectious agent to spread throughout the brain."

"The research findings are compiled by me."

The Medicine King handed over a file.

He clicked his tongue.

"She may be good at making medicine, but she's terrible at explaining it to others. Really terrible. Ah, these self-absorbed types..."

"We did our best to research."

Unfazed by his criticism, the Apothecary continued.

"But it was impossible to develop a cure after all."

"Was there not enough time?"

"Yes. At least 90 days. Preferably around 120 days..."

Clang!

-Goooo.

The chains clanged, producing an unpleasant noise. We all turned our heads simultaneously. The body of the Head of the Martial Alliance was shaking violently.

-Grooo... Eugh, Uooo...!

For a while, we silently observed what used to be the Head of the Martial Alliance.

It kept flailing with its mouth wide open.

“.....”

It was then that the Heavenly Demon approached.

Thud.

The woman approached with quiet steps. The Heavenly Demon, clad in black with black hair, black martial attire, and black eyes, held a dark sword in her hand. Her sword was even darker than her shadow.

"---How pitiful."

The Heavenly Demon looked down at the body of the Head of the Martial Alliance.

"Decades of time, all in vain."

Instinctively, we stepped back from her.

The intensity of her poisonous energy was incomparable to yesterday.

Her Ki was surging, enveloping her entire body.

"In the end, when a layer is peeled off, humans are like this. What's the difference between us and beasts? Eating, consuming until the body can no longer move, and then disappearing. Martial arts have forgotten chivalry, and chivalry has lost martial arts."

The Heavenly Demon extended her left hand.

"Eat."

The zombie opened its mouth and bit her hand. Crunch! Blood splattered. Flesh tore, and bones shattered. The Heavenly Demon looked down at the Head of the Martial Alliance, now ferociously gnawing at her own hand, with an indifferent gaze.

"Hey, hey."

The Viper, shocked, took a step forward.

"Look. What are you doing? If you keep this up, you'll turn into a zombie too...!"

"Don't come closer."

I grabbed the Viper's shoulder to stop him.

"Huh?"

"It's already over."

"Over? What do you mean..."

A squelching sound of flesh echoed. Thump! The gruesomely violent noise made everyone flinch.

Slowly turning to look, there stood the Heavenly Demon with her hand torn to shreds.

And the Head of the Martial Alliance, now headless.

The Heavenly Demon had burst his head with her Ki from inside his mouth.

"Huh."

As we all lost our ability to speak,

"Heheh... Hahaha... Ahahaha!"

The Heavenly Demon began to laugh.

It was a manic laugh.

The blizzard continued to howl outside the cave ceiling. However, the Heavenly Demon's laughter swallowed the sound of the snow, reducing it to a mere background noise. The laughter filled the cave, echoed in the sky, and devoured the world.

-Zombie. Be careful.

The Guardian Spirit whispered softly.

-It's spiritual deviation.

At that moment.

The Heavenly Demon turned her head and looked directly at us. Gently, she wore a bewitching smile. A strange voice flowed from the gap in her lips.

"Oh?"

A chill ran down my spine.

"Have you come to assassinate me, righteous ones?"

Her eyes were no longer looking at us.

"Good. Come at me. Let's cross swords."

"Everyone, run!"

As I shouted, the Heavenly Demon swung her sword. Swish! A fountain of blood erupted. It was the Medicine King's blood. His head was precisely sliced off without even a chance to scream.

He died instantly.

Realizing his comrade was killed right before him, the Viper belatedly drew his sword.

"Damn it....!?"

He couldn't read her sword movements with his eyes. No, he couldn't even see her movements. It was just that [the Heavenly Demon swung her sword] and at the exact same moment [the Medicine King's head was sliced off]. There wasn't even a split second in between.

-She's gone mad.

The Guardian Spirit groaned.

-She's surpassed the stage of an Enlightened Demon. She must have exhausted all her Ki and even her vital energy... Right now, she is, even if temporarily, in the realm of life and death. Even if I were in my prime and came back to life, I'd lose 4 out of 10 times against her.

That was the Heavenly Demon.

Before she weakened due to the zombie infection.

The once supreme being of this world.

"Ridiculous."

The Heavenly Demon hummed.

"Monk of Shaolin, do you think such tricks can stop me? Taoist of the Wudang, do you really think you can bear the karma of my sect?"

The Heavenly Demon took one step, then another, towards us.

"The sorrow has overflowed in the world, submerging Mount Song. The grudges have flared up in the world, burning Mount Wudang. The Demonic Cult rules the martial realm, and I am the ruler of the Demonic Cult. Do you even have the right to discuss the heavenly realms?"

"Damn!"

The Viper raised his sword and charged.

"King of Death! Take the Apothecary and run!"

I was already doing so.

I picked up the Apothecary and ran. Though it was likely futile, I still ran. To struggle until the very end. To not accept this ending and this death as inevitable.

"You're not enough! You lowly minions of righteousness!"

The Heavenly Demon's laughter followed us from behind.

"Namgung Woon!"

Once, twice, thrice.

The sound of swords clashing resounded.

"Where is Namgung Woon!"

Then, no more sword sounds followed.

The Viper had perished after enduring three exchanges.

"Bring forth the Head of the Namgung clan, the Supreme Head of the Martial Alliance! No matter how dense the forests of the martial realm or how vast the heavens, there's only one person in this entire world who can receive my sword! Four Demon Lords! Bring Namgung Woon before me at once!"

Her laughter was persistent and unyielding.

With every step I took to escape, her laughter caught up tenfold. We stood no chance. Eventually, when the laughter almost reached my back, the Apothecary in my arms spoke.

"King of Death."

She looked up at me.

"I still believe in you."

And then.

Something sliced through both of us.

Piercing us.

"-----"

The sky tilted. The ground tilted. I lost my footing, losing everything below my waist, and fell into the snow with only my upper body.

That's right.

It was a white snowfield.

We had escaped the cave.

“.....”

A bit further away, the Apothecary lay fallen. Where she fell, the snowfield was unusually red. It looked like bingsu with strawberry syrup, I thought in my dazed mind.

"Ahaha. Heh, hahaha!"

Snow was falling.

"Ahahahaha! Ah, ahahahaha..."

As the snow fell, the sky and the earth became indistinguishable. A dark white. Only a cool and pale shadow was visible.

Someone was walking away in the snowfield, leaving footprints.

As footprints were made, the sky and the earth seemed to separate momentarily. However, the blizzard raged ceaselessly, burying even the last remaining footprints.

Silently.

Without a trace.

Without any scent.

The world that had scorched people and the people scorched by the world, buried and hidden until only the white snowfield remained. The blizzard of no color , no smell , and no sound continued forever.

The world had ended.

[You have died.]

But that was it.

For me, the end did not mean the end.

[You will return 24 hours back in time.]

Now.

Let's save your world.

Chapter 69: A World Where Constellations Died (1)

On a winter day,

So BaekHyang followed her mother across the snowfield.

The day was overcast. Snow poured from the cloudy sky. In the swirling blizzard, a person was barely a shadow.

Her mother's figure too, was like a faint shadow.

So BaekHyang raised her voice.

-Mom!

Suddenly, So BaekHyang felt afraid. The sound of the snow was too loud. Her own voice seemed to be drowned out by the noise of the snow.

-Mom!

Her mother's shadow remained distant.

So BaekHyang grew anxious.

She had to walk faster to follow her mother. But the faster she walked, the more breathless she became. The faster she walked, the quieter her voice got. What should she do?

-Uh...

Should she stop shouting and walk faster to catch up with her mother? Or should she stop walking and shout with all her might?

The young Heavenly Demon didn't know.

While she was uncertain, the shadow grew even more distant.

-Mom!

Finally, So BaekHyang stopped.

-Mom!

When she stopped, her voice gained a little more strength. Until now, she had been stealing the space for her voice with her footsteps. So BaekHyang thought now her mother would turn her head and look at her, and the shadow would become as distinct as that.

But why?

The shadow grew even more distant.

While So BaekHyang shouted, it grew more distant.

Eventually, her mother's shadow was buried in the blizzard, becoming indistinguishable from the snowfield.

-.....

Did her mother abandon her?

Was it a natural goodbye under the pretext of crossing the blizzard?

Or did her mother genuinely lose her?

So BaekHyang didn't know.

She couldn't know.

[You have died.]

When I closed my eyes and opened them again,

It was a space that was endlessly dark.

[The condition for your skill has been fulfilled by your death.]

[Randomly copying So BaekHyang's skills.]

My hell.

[Creating skill cards.]

Cards floated in front of her eyes.

But my immediate concern wasn't the skill cards.

I sighed and spoke to the Guardian Spirit.

'Sword Emperor, did you memorize the file?'

-Well, to some extent.

The Guardian Spirit scratched the back of his head.

The file containing the desperate research findings noted down by the Apothecary and the Medicine King was crucial. In the chaos caused by the Heavenly Demon's spiritual deviation, I hadn't been able to calmly memorize the contents of the file.

-If we combine what you remembered and what I remembered, we'll more or less piece it together. But we need to go back before we forget...

'Okay. Then let's quickly select the skill.'

-Um.

The Guardian Spirit moved in the air and read the backs of the cards to me. The Heavenly Demon had many skills, but one in particular caught our attention.

+

[Demonic Heavenly God Art]

Rank: A+

Effect: The Demonic Cult. They hate and curse the principles of heaven. They not only hate and curse but formed a sect and ultimately established a doctrine. Demonic Heavenly God Art is a martial art containing the essence of this doctrine.

Those who comprehend the Demonic Heavenly God Art can tear apart the heavens and crush mountains! However, one must deeply understand the hatred and curses contained in the techniques of the art.

The more you hate and curse the world, the more colorless the heavens will become. The one who attains the ultimate state of Demonic Heavenly God Art, that person will be the true Heavenly Demon, capable of overturning the heavens.

*However, using the art makes it difficult to maintain one's self.

+

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

A name as mad as any, but I couldn't scoff at it.

‘...This must be the martial art we saw earlier, right?’

Because it was indeed that powerful.

The Medicine King's head fell off with a swing of the sword from afar. The Viper couldn't even withstand three exchanges and died. Even I, who prided myself on having trained quite well fighting the [Demon King of Autumn Rain], couldn't follow the sword path of the Heavenly Demon with my eyes.

Truly the greatest technique of the martial world.

-It's typical of demonic arts.

The Guardian Spirit frowned.

-It all comes down to how you deal with the world, whether it's martial arts or formations.

‘Deal with the world?’

-Yeah. Those who accept the world generously are usually orthodox sects. Those who try to scratch at the world are demonic cults. So, martial artists of orthodox sects craft their bodies into vessels to accept the world, while those of the demonic cults shape their bodies into claws to scratch at it...

Hmm, the Guardian Spirit crossed his arms.

-Let me give you a simple example. Take the downward slash, a typical move where you bring the sword down from above your head. In some sects, this move is called Tiger Stance Sword Strike, likened to the posture of a tiger pouncing.

Whish!

The Guardian Spirit posed and swung his arms.

'.....!'

For a moment, I flinched. I truly felt the momentum as if a ferocious beast was charging at me.

He was strong.

Despite his demeaning manner and appearance, the figure before me was the Sword Emperor. A martial artist who almost conquered the tower wielding just a sword.

-Well, it doesn't really matter if it's a tiger, a bull, or whatever. What's important is slightly 'imitating' a tiger or a bull.

Imitating. Mimicking.

Thus, turning something of the world into one's own.

That's what the Guardian Spirit meant by 'accepting the world'.

-But demonic arts are different.

He assumed the same stance again.

-When teaching this technique, the demonic cults say this:

He stomped his foot.

-Remember the rage you felt when a thief stabbed you in the gut.

The empty air seemed to split.

Faced with it, I involuntarily stepped back.

His face.

It was the Sword Emperor's face that caused this reaction.

A frigid anger lingered in his expressionless face.

As if he had become a completely different person.

-Remember the moment your sister was taken by the commander. Remember your impotence. Recall standing numbly in front of the office all night long, only to be returned to your sister's cold corpse at dawn. Paint that image of your sister's face in your mind.

The Guardian Spirit performed a sword dance.

Even without a sword in hand, I somehow saw the Guardian Spirit's sword. That sword was as dark as the space we stood in.

-Recall digging your sister's grave. Was it winter? Was the ground so frozen that it was hard to dig? Did you finally scoop out the earth with your fingertips? Did your fingernails break? Did blood flow from your broken nails?

'.....'

-Did you eventually lay your sister's body in a barely dug hole? Did you bury her starting from her feet? Did you pile cold mounds of earth on her body? At the end, unable to bury her face, did you take the earth in your hands and sprinkle it over her, handful by handful?

I gasped for breath.

As the Sword Emperor's sword dance continued, the endless space seemed to shrink inch by inch. It was slightly dizzying. Despite being mere gestures, the Sword Emperor's resentment vibrated.

-Feel the texture of the soil. Grasp the sword with the hands that dug out the earth. Swing the sword with the same motion you used to sprinkle dirt on your sister. Lament your helplessness and curse the cruelty of the world.

I murmured as if groaning.

‘Claws to scratch at the world...’

-Exactly.

The Guardian Spirit retracted his arms.

Finally, I could breathe again.

-It's a method of using Ki, I guess? Literally, a way to stir up and intensify emotions. Whether you're a martial artist or a hunter, it all comes down to how well you use Ki or aura.

He shrugged nonchalantly.

-Basically, it's a battle of momentum. Demonic arts just have a bit more intense momentum.

'.....'

-Anyway, there's no need for you, a zombie, to learn it.

I quietly looked at the silver skill card.

-No, there's no need for you to learn any other martial arts. Who am I? The Sword Emperor, right? The greatest martial artist in this universe! You might not know it, but you're already slowly learning my technique! Demonic Heavenly God Art, whatever that is, compared to my martial arts, it's just garbage...

'I want to learn it.'

-.....What?

The Guardian Spirit blinked.

'I want to learn it. This. The Demonic Heavenly God Art.'

-Uh, uh... uhhh...

Blink. Blink.

It took about 3 seconds for the Guardian Spirit to find his words.

-Why!?

‘Because I want to.’

-My martial arts are superior, this is just trash compared to mine!

He began to rant.

-Don't tell me, zombie, you were tempted by that Heavenly Demon's swordplay!? Oh my god. That was just her pouring out her real energy for a momentary entry into the realm of life and death! It's a high, a real energy high! Zombie, a true martial artist must never be intoxicated with real energy highs!

I smiled faintly.

‘Are you jealous because I want to learn someone else's martial art, not yours?’

But this wasn't the first or the last hell I would cross.

[You have entered the Hungry Ghost Realm.]

I would have time to calmly describe the landscapes of the hells I had crossed.

After returning to the day before, I committed suicide eight more times to return to the 'first day' we fell into the Apocalypse.

"---It's cold!"

Just like the previous loop, Doksa exclaimed in surprise. Apothecary and Alchemist instinctively hugged themselves, overwhelmed by the fierce cold.

The blizzard howled fiercely. The Apothecary started coughing almost immediately.

"What's with this cold? Wasn't this supposed to be the martial realm?"

"Yikes. Is this some Siberian wasteland...?"

It was a white snowy field.

A scene I had grown accustomed to over the past ten days.

However, the others panicked and shuffled around, while I silently held Apothecary's hand.

"Ah."

She shyly bowed her head.

"Th-thank you, King of Death."

"....."

A recent memory flashed through my mind.

「I still believe in you.」

Apothecary's upper body scattered in the snowy field, turning it bright red. I thought of the snowfield stained with her blood.

"The reign of the Demonic Cult ends today!"

And...

"Hah. Even the passing dogs would flip and laugh at that."

I heard the voice of the Heavenly Demon too.

"....."

I held my breath and moved towards the direction of the voices. The snow crunched under my boots. The closer I got, the clearer the memory of the Heavenly Demon confessing her feelings became in my mind.

「I'm scared.」

"As long as I, the leader, remain intact, the Demonic Cult's reign will persist."

「The world is so terrifying.」

"Great Axe Sage, it's time for you to bid farewell to the Orthodox Faction."

「Bring forth the Head of the Namgung clan, the Supreme Head of the Martial Alliance!」

The most powerful being in the world.

The strongest in this world, and therefore, the last to survive to the end.

In a tragic sense, the person who achieved true supremacy in heaven and earth.

"Hmm."

That person was still smiling.

Still proudly laughing, standing in the middle of the snowy field, defying the world.

Like a single point in a blank canvas.

"Nonsense! Your Demonic Cult's vaunted Blood Ghost Troops have already had their heads lopped off by my axe.... Hm?"

I just hoped.

That single point would turn into a line.

"Who are you...?"

Heavenly Demon's eyes widened, unable to believe the sight of me walking towards her. For her, seeing a living person after many years must have been unbelievable.

"Ah, ahem. Am I seeing things right now? It looks like a living person is moving..."

"Heavenly Demon."

I reached in front of her and slowly knelt down.

The soft snow gently compressed under my weight.

"?"

"From a far land, I heard of your majesty, Heavenly Demon, and came searching for you. I have long admired the fame of the greatest of all times since ancient days."

No matter how long it might take, I was ready.

I called out to the Heavenly Demon.

"Please accept me as your disciple!"

"....."

The Heavenly Demon's mouth gaped open as if she had seen a ghost.

Chapter 70: A World Where Constellations Died (2)

‘It’s cold.’

In the midst of a snowy field, So BaekHyang thought.

Buried in the white snowfield, the world became colorless, odorless, and silent.

The world was merely a cold blank page.

‘It’s cold...’

The flesh was cold. The bones were cold. Even the blood was cold.

So BaekHyang thought.

‘My stomach feels frozen.’

‘Mom?’

‘It feels like my internal organs are filled with ice.’

‘Mom.’

‘It’s too cold here.’

Thoughts piled upon thoughts. As they multiplied, the insides seemed to freeze more. Eventually, even the head that thought these thoughts turned cold.

A world that was cold and only cold.

The disappearing back of a mother.

How much time had passed?

-...Ahem.

The silence was broken.

-How peculiar indeed. Truly peculiar.

The odorlessness was next to break.

-It's been ten days since the snow started and stopped falling here. Judging by the thickness of the snow covering everything, it should be about 5 feet. How is this child still breathing?

Finally, the colorlessness also broke.

So BaekHyang looked forward with young eyes. An old woman stood there. He had been digging through the snow, making noise. She had grabbed her wrist, bringing the scent of an old woman. The old woman's eyes looking at her were black.

-You're not an ordinary child.

The old woman was an elderly master of the Demonic Cult.

-Born with the Glacial Body. The cold of the world is your inner energy, your Ki. Peculiar, indeed peculiar. A child surviving more than ten days in a snowy field on snow alone, it's like the Extreme Yin Body mentioned only in texts!

-.....

-Child, what is your name?

So BaekHyang opened her lips.

-I don't know.

She couldn't remember his name.

-How old are you?

-I don't know.

-How did you end up buried in this snowfield?

-I don't know.

-.....

She couldn't remember anything.

It was cold. Thoughts froze, and the head that held these thoughts froze, making it seem like all the words stored in his head and heart had also frozen.

-Poor thing. Already buried in the Creation Realm at such a young age...

The old master sighed.

-But, you are a perfect vessel for learning martial arts. If the palace lord of the Northern Sea saw you, he would try to take you even if it cost him a fortune. What a peculiar fate! But what kind of fate is it? Will our cult be the fate for you, or will you be the fate for our cult? It's difficult to guess with my old eyes.

So BaekHyang didn't understand. She couldn't understand what the old woman had been saying since a while ago. The person in front of her only spoke difficult words.

The old woman stroked So BaekHyang's head.

-Child, will you follow me?

-.....

-I will feed you and give you a place to sleep.

Those were easy words to understand.

Slowly nodding, the old woman spoke.

-You have no scent and no known origin; you must be a child born from the snow. I will give you my surname and call you

BaekHyang, the fragrance of snow.

The fragrance of snow.

-From now on, you are a disciple of the Demonic Cult, So BaekHyang.

So BaekHyang was silent for a while.

Then she spoke.

-Where will I be taken?

The old master smiled.

-To a place where children like you gather.

"---It is impossible!"

The Heavenly Demon spoke.

"In my life, I have never taken a single disciple. Even though the world has degenerated to this state, the laws of our cult remain unchanged. A disciple? Preposterous!"

The Hot Spring Cave.

We had left the snowfield and arrived at the heart of the last survivors in this world. The Heavenly Demon and the Head of the Martial Alliance were surprised to find 'someone who has still survived...' but they welcomed us as guests.

But only as guests.

They had no intention of accepting us as disciples.

"Hey, Demon. Why be so stingy?"

The Head of the Martial Alliance chewed on his herb snack.

"It's admirable that these children from the Outside have survived. Not only did they survive, but they also made their way through this perilous martial world to seek your teachings. That's worth some praise and admiration. Why be so rigid like in the old days?"

"Admirable and cute, indeed."

The Heavenly Demon huffed.

"Nevertheless, the laws of master and disciple are strict! Our sect does not rashly accept anyone. Only those abandoned by their parents and the world can enter our Demonic Cult."

"Tsk tsk. They always call us old-fashioned, but they're even pickier than us."

The Head of the Martial Alliance shook his head.

"Child. So it is. Now that it has come to this, why not abandon that pretentious Demonic Cult and consider me as your master? I am Namgung Woon, the great head of the Namgung clan and the leader of the Orthodox Martial Realm. If you become my disciple, I'll shower you with love..."

"Why won't you accept me as a disciple, Lord Heavenly Demon?"

Ignoring the old man, I asked. The Head of the Martial Alliance seemed a bit shocked, 'Why! Has my name not spread in the Outside...!?' he exclaimed. It was a bit pitiful, but let's leave it at that.

The Heavenly Demon narrowed his eyes.

"Didn't I just say it? Only those abandoned by the world can enter."

"The world has changed."

I spoke.

"People have turned into zombies because of a mysterious disease. The martial sects and clans were destroyed. Since humanity has abandoned us, we are now all forsaken by the world. Whether we like it or not."

"Lord Heavenly Demon. Doesn't that automatically fulfill the condition for entry?"

The Heavenly Demon closed his lips.

Perhaps because my words were true.

Above all... I was a hunter. An orphan who abandoned the outside world to throw himself into the tower. It was a bit embarrassing to say I was abandoned by the world, but I could say that I had abandoned the world. The [entry condition] the Heavenly Demon spoke of should be sufficiently met.

".....Fine."

The Heavenly Demon stood up.

"If you are so confident, try displaying the Triple Calamity Sword Technique."

She looked down at me intently.

"Whether you are worthy of inheriting our sect's teachings, I will discern with my own eyes. It's obvious you'll only spout fancy words."

"....."

I also stood up.

"Thank you for the opportunity."

I drew my holy sword. Swoosh! The sound of the sword echoed in the wide cave. People were looking at me, quietly waiting to see what swordsmanship I would demonstrate.

Of course, I had no intention of showing the Triple Calamity Sword Technique.

[Activating skill.]

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

I had acquired this technique just for this moment.

"...Hoo."

As the divine technique activated, numerous movements unfolded in my mind.

Strange and miraculous Sword Paths.

But seeing the path before me and actually driving on it were two entirely different matters. I had yet to deeply comprehend the Demonic Heavenly God Art. If I showed off my swordsmanship as it was, I would end up torn apart, like a quail chasing a crane.

'If I'm going to be torn apart anyway.'

Thus, I remembered.

'I should be properly torn apart.'

The [Trauma] landscapes I had experienced up to now.

I drew them one by one in my mind as I swung my sword.

To unfold the Demonic Art.

Throughout my ascent of the tower, I had witnessed, unintentionally, groans and screams. Groans and screams were always raw and vivid, as if I had just heard them. I remembered these groans and screams, staining my heart with their voices.

「 "Please save me." 」

「 "Please, I'm so hungry. Something to eat, please." 」

In the basement of a certain mansion.

I remembered the voices of the children who were tortured there.

「 "I want to live." 」

The children were chained. When the mansion caught fire and burned. The children, seeing the flames rising before their eyes, were trapped in chains

My sword grew faster and faster. The Demonic Heavenly God Art I acquired through death took form. The trauma transplanted into me through death pulsed with intent.

Although I occasionally felt like I was losing my way, I drew upon my aura to forcibly connect my sword path.

-Look at this kid...

The Guardian Spirit said that demonic arts were like claws scraping the world.

But the more I executed the Demonic Heavenly God Art, the more my thoughts changed.

It was perhaps closer to screams and wails than to claws.

-Wow.

My sword path continued, eventually becoming a sword dance.

If I was born in the Martial Realm, he would have definitely joined the Demonic Cult. Now that I see it.

My sword dance was never beautiful. It was immature.

Clumsy. It didn't carry the fragrance of flowers, only the smell of burning flames. If swordsmanship had a face, mine would be that of a person with severe burns.

Only screams.

No matter how wondrous the principles of yin and yang, the world born from it is just sorrowful.

No matter how profound the writings of the Four Books and Five Classics, they cannot surpass the wail of a lowly human.

A sword technique containing the world's sorrow is sharper than one containing the yin and yang.

A sword swung following a single scream is stronger than one moved by profound principles.

The deeper the sorrow, the more wretched the scream, the stronger the sword becomes.

That is why we are strong.

The strong survive.

That was the teaching of the Demonic Cult.

「 "Speak." 」

「 "Martial arts have forgotten chivalry, and chivalry has lost martial arts." 」

「 "Say it and I will grant your wish to die." 」

The Heavenly Demon, that was the sky of such teachings.

The highest sky.

The Heavenly Demon must know all the screams of the cult members and should be able to unfold them into a sword path. Every line of the Heavenly Demon's sword path must be a scream towards the world.

Thus proving that somewhere in this world, there were those who screamed and wailed.

「 "The world has turned into emptiness." 」

「 "Decades of time, all in vain." 」

Even such a sky.

Even the Heavenly Demon screamed in the last moment.

「 "Ahaha. Huh, haha!" 」

When she laughed madly.

「 "Uhahahaha! Ha, ahahaha..." 」

With that laughter in my heart, I swung my sword.

"Stop."

I swung my sword.

"Stop it."

I swung my sword.

"Didn't I tell you to stop!"

Eventually, my sword came to a halt.

Not because I wanted to stop. A cane. The Heavenly Demon held a wooden stick, blocking my blade. My profound internal energy surged around the cane.

"You..."

The Heavenly Demon murmured softly.

"Where did you learn our secret techniques?"

Her eyes were pitch black.

"You can't fool my eyes! No matter how crude and immature it was, what you just used was undoubtedly the Demonic Heavenly God Art. The only ones who can master this art in this world are the demonic cultists, and I have never seen your face before."

"Speak. Where did you steal it!"

Only then did I realize I was more exhausted than I thought. I was out of breath. My whole body was drenched in sweat. The holy sword in my right hand felt as heavy as a rock.

I looked around. Not only the Head of the Martial Alliance but also our companions were silently watching me. Through the gaping hole in the cave ceiling, the stars of the night sky were pouring down. Maybe more time had passed than I had realized.

"So am I....."

I struggled to open my mouth.

"Worthy... or not?"

"....."

The Heavenly Demon was silent.

After a long silence, the woman turned her back. She walked towards the far end of the cave. Her back was that of someone rejecting others, and no one could follow her.

If I had just a bit more energy left, maybe I would have chased after her...

"K-King of Death?"

Thud.

My knees gave out.

"King of Death! Are you alright, King of Death!?"

My consciousness was blurry. I thought, with a dazed mind, it was because I had used too much aura at once. I would probably faint for the whole night like this.

I tried to smile at the Apothecary to reassure them, but even that was difficult. My vision was already dark.

-Tsk tsk.

Just before I fainted. I heard the voice of the Guardian Spirit.

-Unsuitable martial arts lead to early death. You're just a young sparrow. This is why I always say one must build from the basics.

Guardian Spirit sighed.

-Well, but still...

And then.

-Not a bad sparrow, though. A commendable little one.

I lost consciousness.

Chapter 71: A World Where Constellations Died (1)

Winter.

So BaekHyang had entered the mountains.

It was an event from when she was eleven years old.

-A child.

-No one will force anything upon you.

The main base of the Demonic Cult.

The place the old woman took her to was like heaven. Food was served morning and evening without asking. A warm bedding was provided. There was no whipping from the local officials.

-Eat whenever you want to. Sleep whenever you feel like it. Play whenever you wish.

-.....

-BaekHyang, just live as you wish.

So BaekHyang was bewildered.

Perhaps this was the legendary Peach Blossom Spring.

-Everyone here is so kind!

Children of her age smiled brightly.

-They don't make us do anything.

-Are they raising us as slaves?

-Idiot! It's been a year since I came here, and nothing like that has happened.

The Demonic Cult had many orphans besides herself. A lot, indeed. By a rough estimate, there were over 2000. Every day, one or two kids would join. During some years of famine, dozens came in a single day.

Were there so many orphans in the world?

-.....You guys.

So BaekHyang opened her lips.

-How did you end up here?

Silence.

The children looked at her intently.

Then, suddenly, they opened their mouths.

-The crops failed terribly!

-My mom worked in a brothel....

-I don't want to talk about it. Why should I tell you?

-Yeah. At night, thieves with knives rampaged through our village!

-Suddenly, people in the village got sick.

-They kept beating me. I ran away.

Hunger. Prostitution. Illegitimate birth. Thieves. Epidemics. Abuse.

Each time the children opened their mouths, poison flowed out.

-.....

So BaekHyang felt dizzy. The poison of hunger stung sharply. The poison of prostitution's resentment was sore. The poison of illegitimate birth was harsh. The poison from knife wounds inflicted by thieves was chilling. The poison born from epidemics was nasty. The poison marinated in abuse and beatings was rotten.

-You guys.....

What kind of poison in the world was this mixed? Were all the world's stings, sores, harshness, chills, nastiness, and rotten smells gathered here? If so, where was this place? Could this be heaven?

So BaekHyang recalled.

-Are you happy now?

The jar of Concentrated Poison.

-Are you okay now?

Into the jar, one would put toads, vipers, poison spiders, centipedes, fire ants, wasps, and various venomous insects. Then, they would seal the lid. The vipers would bite the toads, the toads would eat the poison spiders, and the venomous insects would devour each other until, finally, only one survived.

To boil down.

To create a single, extreme poison.

-Yes!

The children smiled brightly.

-We can eat every day.

-I don't have to work in place of my mom.

-I'm always okay.

-Yes. There are no thieves here, right?

-Even if we're sick, the doctor heals us.

-No one hits us. It's nice.

Toads. Vipers. Poison spiders. Centipedes. Fire ants. Wasps.

Though the children opened their mouths to smile, in So BaekHyang's eyes, her peers appeared as nothing more than venomous beasts and insects. Yes, this place was not something like heaven. It was merely a jar meant to cultivate a single Concentrated Poison.

-.....

So BaekHyang quietly placed her hand over her chest.

It was cold.

Something that could not be warmed with a hot morning porridge, evening soup, or thick blankets. An ice that would never melt, already embedded deep in her heart. It was her own heart.

Her mother was leaving.

Snow was falling.

Her mother did not stop leaving.

Therefore, the snow did not stop falling.

-.....

From that day on.

So BaekHyang no longer mingled with the children of her age.

「 Eat whenever you feel like eating. 」

Every morning and evening, she reduced the food she ate.

「 Sleep whenever you feel like sleeping. 」

She went to bed early and woke up even earlier.

「 Play whenever you feel like playing. 」

She didn't play. While other children ran around the hills laughing, neutralizing their venom with laughter, So BaekHyang did not join them.

The children whispered.

-So BaekHyang is strange...

-She only plays with the farmers!

-It's weird.

-Yeah. She deliberately doesn't eat.

-Why does she hang out with the farmers?

-I don't know.

She ignored them.

"Just live as you wish."

Time passed.

One day, an old woman came. She was the elder of the Demonic Cult who had brought her here. Although much time had passed, the old man had not changed since that winter day.

-It's been a long time, BaekHyang.

-Yes. It's been a while.

-I've come to ask you something.

Tap, tap.

The elder tapped the ground with his staff.

-I hear you don't mingle with children your age.

-Yes.

-I hear you help the farmers and harvest your own food.

-Yes.

-I hear you make your own clothes and bedding.

-Yes.

-Why?

The old man tilted his head.

-You could live in abundance here if you wished. This place is like the Peach Blossom Spring. Adults farm and pick fruits for you. You're just a child, why work by yourself?

So BaekHyang spoke.

-The Mao family, farming below the mountain, lost their two daughters to the county magistrate.

-Hmm?

-Choi, who works in the orchard, had his second son die after being summoned to build the city walls. Out of injustice, he filed a complaint but was interrogated and lost his eldest son too. After burying both sons in their hometown, Mr. Choi and his wife sought refuge here.

-.....

So BaekHyang recounted each story.

The farmers who brought crops to the orphans were all hurt by the world. Not a single one was without a grievous story.

-This place is not heaven.

After recounting the farmers' plight, So BaekHyang said.

-They're not fools to feed and clothe us for free.

-Then?

The old man asked.

-Why do you think you eat and sleep here for free?

-Hoping for someone to avenge on their behalf.

-They are too resentful. Unable to forgive the county magistrate and local officials who ruined their lives. They want revenge but have no power to avenge. So BaekHyang said.

-I've heard that martial arts must be learned and practiced from a very young age to be mastered. These farmers, the people who feed and clothe us, are already too old to deeply refine their martial arts.

However...

-But they can farm for [children who can learn martial arts].

-We're not eating and sleeping for free.

That was the reality of this paradise.

-We are here to avenge the world on their behalf.

It was the headquarters of the Demonic Cult.

The old woman fell silent.

After a long silence, the elder asked.

-BaekHyang.

-Yes.

-Do you have something to say to the world?

So BaekHyang nodded.

-Yes.

About the coldness.

About a blizzard one winter. About a mother who followed her child across the snowy plains. About the mother who hastened her steps despite hearing her child's screams. About the child left behind. About the coldness.

About someone's heart.

-Yes.

About hunger. About a child born in a brothel. About an illegitimate child. About a child who lost their family to bandits. About a child whose village disappeared due to a plague. About a child who suffered abuse and beatings.

About their venom.

-There's a lot.

The world was vast.

-So much.

What needed to be said was infinite.

The old woman quietly closed her eyes.

-Is that so..... It must be so.

It was quiet.

-Then, the world must listen to your words.

The elder opened his eyes.

-I am one of the Seven Elders of the cult. I am the Demonic Buddha.

-Is there a Buddha in hell?

-What use would Buddha be if he were not in hell?

Despite So BaekHyang calling this place hell, the old woman did not grasp his book. Instead, he replied as if it were obvious. It was then that So BaekHyang realized she had set foot on the right path.

-BaekHyang, you have passed the initiation test. You did not waver even in the face of abundant food and a cozy bed. Undoubtedly, your poison is clear. Take me as your master, and call me master when addressing me.

Master.

-From now on, your sword will cry out in place of countless screams.

The elder picked up her staff.

And placed it on the young Heavenly Demon's shoulder.

-Perform the Nine Bows Ceremony. My disciple.

That day.

So BaekHyang was initiated.

It was when she was thirteen years old.

“Wake up.”

I awoke in the early dawn.

A voice whispering in my ear.

When I opened my eyes, the face of the Heavenly Demon was right in front of me.

“Oh my. Can’t you get up?”

"....."

She was really close. So close I could clearly see the Heavenly Demon's eyelashes. When she blinked, they fluttered like a curtain of black.

I was lying on the ground. The Heavenly Demon looked down at me intently.

“There. Heavenly Demon.”

Maybe it was because I had just woken up. My mouth felt dry.

“If you keep standing there, I can’t get up. I think I’ll bump my head.”

“Hmm. Seeing you talk eloquently right after waking up, your body must be fine.”

The Heavenly Demon stood up.

“Go bathe in the hot spring. You must cleanse your body and mind with all your heart.”

“What?”

“I will wait at the entrance of the cave.”

The Heavenly Demon turned and walked away. I had no time to say anything. Her small back disappeared into the distance.

Left in the cave were me, standing dumbfounded, and the sleeping party.

“Umm, ugh...”

“Oh, hmm...”

“Heh...”

Perhaps they were immersed in virus research until late at night? The Apothecary and Medicine King, surrounded by tools, were sleeping soundly. The Viper was smiling contentedly, arms crossed.

What kind of dreams are they having that they sleep so sweetly?

I checked their psychological windows once.

"Yes, I'm right. Why do I even have to explain this simple thing? Even if I explain, you won't understand. Just do as I say. I'm going crazy with these dimwitted fools.... Ah, no, everyone, that's not what I meant to say.... Just try to think a bit harder, I mean, can't you understand this simple logic? Ugh, sorry sorry sorry...."

"Hmph, with this, I have secured my 100th victory, Marcus.... And as a bonus, I even achieved my 999999th victory against that Apothecary kid or whatever. Oh, is there no one who can block the victory road of this Shawn McCallister? I've achieved a lonely, unparalleled existence in the most sorrowful sense...."

"Mwahaha! Pffft hahaha!"

Hmm.

'I shouldn't wake them.'

Especially the last one, I shouldn't touch.

I carefully washed and came out. Shiny and the Guardian Spirit remained silent throughout. Dawn mixed with the cold wind, the white sky looked down upon us....

As I left the cave, a snow-covered world greeted me.

The Heavenly Demon stood in the middle of the snowy field. She crossed her arms and scrutinized me from head to toe.

"Did you scrub every corner?"

"Yes, I feel cleansed even in my heart."

"I dislike those who speak too well."

The woman frowned in displeasure.

"And you, you speak too well. Your tongue is too light, too light indeed. More like a swindler than a man of great character. It's worrying, like a mountain of concern."

"Oh."

Is that so?

I never felt particularly talented in speaking. Yet, the second-ranked Witch would nag me whenever she had the chance, saying I 'speak well.' Could it be an unknown talent I was born with?

Lost in thought, the Heavenly Demon furrowed her brows, seemingly displeased.

I also opened her psychological window once.

「Sly yet foolish-faced, a simpleton through and through.
You remind me of a Haomunju painted in a picture.」

What's a Haomunju*?

*Low-class Sects, they're small and comprise of people from low classes of society but are cunning.

"Follow me."

I followed the Heavenly Demon through the snow.

Crossing the snowfield, the Heavenly Demon said,

"To wear the Demonic Cult's robes, one must pass numerous tests. Even though you've proven your qualifications, it doesn't mean you've passed the tests. The first test of our sect is..."

"[Test of Comfort], right?"

"....."

Her footsteps faltered slightly, or so I felt.

"Free lodgings, clothes, and food. Those who are content and complacent become part of the outer sect, raised as farmers, artisans, and messengers."

They handle the livelihood of the Demonic Cult.

"However, passing the [Test of Comfort] leads to a different path. One is recognized as a disciple of the inner sect. Only the inner sect disciples are formally taught the demonic arts. This is when one truly joins the Demonic Cult."

"...How do you know that?"

I saw it as a trauma when you killed me in the last round.

I couldn't say that, so I just smiled.

"I know quite a bit."

"Oh, heavens are so heartless! To think the last connection brought to me would be such a sly one. To accept such a low-class scoundrel as a disciple of my sect..."

Guardian Spirit nodded in agreement.

-Yeah, this zombie guy really does have a low-class charm! The Heavenly Demon has a good eye for people.

‘No, what are you talking about...?’

-It's one thing if you were just a scoundrel, but you're intriguingly active at times, making it hard to ignore. That's what makes you even worse!

Is that a compliment or an insult? When others praise or curse me, I tend to take it as a compliment.

In a cold era, stingy with praise, shouldn't I at least receive people's words graciously? Yes, even if it's from someone as eccentric and bizarrely negative as a Guardian Spirit....

-That's exactly why you're like a scoundrel! Dumb bird!

I don't understand what he means. Really.

"---This should be far enough."

The Heavenly Demon led me to a pit. A huge pit. Like a colosseum, the center was deeply recessed, dark as night since the dawn's light couldn't reach.

"Rejoice."

The Heavenly Demon turned to face me.

"I wish to accept you as my disciple. In the world of demonic arts! As long as one is qualified, heaven does not refuse a disciple."

"Oh! Then..."

"However, I cannot yet accept you as a formal disciple."

What.

"No, Heavenly Demon, this is too much! I came all the way from the outside lands to become your disciple. I've shown you I'm qualified. And yet you say I'm still insufficient to be a formal disciple, what does this mean!"

".....Your words are highly suspicious."

The Heavenly Demon scrutinized my face.

"Even your claim of coming from the outside lands is dubious. Whether your admiration for me since ancient times is true is also questionable. According to my intuition, it all seems false... But your nature doesn't seem too malicious, so I let it be."

No.

Why is this martial artist's intuition so sharp?

"Honestly, considering only your nature, it seems almost saintly, which is truly bizarre. Yes, you are indeed a strange fellow. It's hard to say at this moment whether you will become a destiny for me, or I will become one for you."

"...What is the test?"

"Over there."

The Heavenly Demon pointed to the bottom of the pit.

"Down there, I have thrown a zombie. A once promising and notable figure in our Demonic Cult, a peerless expert who made a name in the martial world. Defeat that zombie. Do so, and I will accept you as a disciple of the Inner House. However,"

The Heavenly Demon, arms crossed, added a condition.

"Fight while feeling hunger."

"Pardon?"

"Exactly as I said. Battle the zombie, but your heart must be filled only with hunger. Only the agony of starvation should reside in you. I will not allow any other emotion or thought to creep into your heart."

The Heavenly Demon's voice resonated.

"Do you think you can do it?"

"....."

And then I realized.

She already considers me her [disciple].

Whether she says I'm not yet an official disciple, or that I am not her disciple at all, it's all meaningless. In the heart of the Heavenly Demon, I am a disciple destined to receive the teachings of the Demonic Cult, the successor of the Demonic Heavenly God Art.

"Every stroke of your sword must emanate from hunger."

The Heavenly Demon advised.

"Imagine the voice and groans of a starving person, their arm movements, footsteps – everything. Embed these in your heart. Make it your single-hearted resolve. Relying on this resolve, wield your sword driven solely by starvation."

"Only then will the Demonic Heavenly God Art reveal its true power."

I looked down into the pit.

-Groooarrr!

From the bottom of the pit, a zombie was howling. Dressed in black martial arts attire – tattered and worn but undoubtedly the garb of the Demonic Cult.

A pit resembling hell itself.

Perhaps this zombie could be considered my martial senior.

"If I can..."

I spoke up.

"What happens if I can swing the sword driven only by hunger?"

"You'll be able to cut down those who have never experienced starvation in a single strike."

The Heavenly Demon spoke calmly.

"With this, half of the orthodox martial artists will become mere one-move opponents."

Thus, it was said.

Claws that tear through the world.

"First, master the Art of Starving Death. Next, the Art of Parched Death. One must know how to swing the sword driven only by thirst and thus be able to cut down those never twisted by dehydration in a single strike. Following that, the Art of Submerged Death. You will learn nine sword arts in total, and with these nine swords, you shall have enough to cover the entire world."

I gripped the sword hilt tightly.

"That is..."

My heart raced.

"That sounds quite enticing."

The corners of the Heavenly Demon's mouth lifted.

This seemed to be the first smile I've seen from her in this life.

Perhaps my fighting spirit had pleased her.

"So why hesitate? Fall into hell without further ado.

And then.

I leaped into the zombie pit.

Chapter 72: The Reaper of Death. (1)

What word least fits with the concept of [zombies] in the world?

It's an odd question, I know.

But in a world overrun by zombies, where I suddenly found myself training in martial arts while fighting against them, I couldn't help but contemplate about zombies. And I just realized the word that least fits with them.

-Groooarrr!

That word was [Palm Blast].

-Woah, ahhhhh!

A zombie in black martial attire gathered its hands and shot a Palm Blast.

This is no joke. It's real.

Let me repeat. A [zombie], who lived as a martial artist before death, let out a strange yell and fired a Palm Blast at me.

"Damn, this is crazy---"

Whoosh!

The Palm Blast lightly pushed my body away. I floated in the air like a stick. The series of events had already stunned and overwhelmed me, but unfortunately, it didn't end there.

-Woahhhh!

The zombie stomped on the ground. A mysterious Stepping Technique. Smooth Movement Techniques unfolded, as if its body was filled with helium. The zombie soared into the air and swiftly flew right in front of me.

Crazy.

"Hey! Wait, this isn't right!"

I frantically swung my Holy Sword, but before I could slash the zombie, a voice halted my blade.

"Wrong! Don't swing your sword recklessly."

It was the voice of the Heavenly Demon.

She was watching my battle from above the pit.

"Didn't I tell you? Remember the hunger, the agony of Starving Death. Only ponder the sensation of starvation. Just swinging around will make the Demonic Heavenly God Art nothing but a shell."

"But, but!"

The zombie opened its mouth wide in front of me. Clack! I barely twisted my body to avoid its teeth. Without time to properly land, I fell to the ground. As I dodged, the zombie seemed angrier and lunged at me again.

"I'm not particularly hungry right now!"

"You are foolish."

The Heavenly Demon shouted, sounding frustrated.

"Just because you can't see the color red before you, can't you imagine it in your mind? Just because you're not hungry now, can't you recall the feeling of starvation?"

Grooooarrr!

Even as the Heavenly Demon spoke to me, the zombie ceaselessly swung its claws. If I got hit even once, it would be the end. I would be infected by the zombie virus, becoming a true Kim Zombie.

Clang! Clang!

The zombie's claws fiercely struck my sword. I could only defend myself, unable to attack. It was a dire situation.

"If you can't do it, it's because you're not yet familiar with the sensation of hunger. You must be stuffed to the brim. One who learns the Demonic Heavenly God Art must freely recall sensations!"

The sensation of hunger.

The memory of starvation.

"Recall the longest you've ever been hungry. Chew over that feeling. Where were you at that time? What did you most want to eat? How long did you starve?"

"The longest I've been hungry was maybe 3 to 4 days..."

"What? Three to four days?"

The Heavenly Demon was incredulous.

"...You're saying the longest you've ever starved in your life is just around three days? That's unbelievable. The world has long been in chaos, and famines occur with each changing season. Unless you're a child of a noble family, how could you have only starved for just three days?"

"Well, the place we lived in, the Outside Land, was much more prosperous than the Central Plains..."

Naturally, the Tower was more abundant than the martial world where martial artists roamed. It was, after all, a place enjoying modern civilization. Probably many hunters haven't even starved for more than two days.

"Oh, dear. Tsk, tsk."

The Heavenly Demon sighed.

"It seems we are not on the same page. Starvation is the most urgent sensation. It's a pain that cannot be skipped even for a day, an agony that no one can ignore. After all, the purpose of human existence is to alleviate hunger. The hunger felt by an emperor and a commoner is no different. How can you awaken the Demonic Heavenly God Art if you don't even understand this?"

No.

I've also starved quite a bit, living over 10 years as an F-Rank Hunter.

When I bought tteokbokki outside, I used to count the number of rice cakes in a single serving, only buying from places that gave four extra pieces.

"That's it."

The Heavenly Demon turned her back.

"It's my mistake! I had some hope, but it turns out you're just a glib talker."

I was at the bottom of the huge pit. Hence, the Heavenly Demon's figure quickly disappeared from my sight. Clang! Clang! As I barely blocked the zombie's teeth and claws, I shouted towards the Heavenly Demon, who had already moved away.

"Heavenly Demon!"

There was no response.

"Heavenly Demon!?"

Again, no response.

The Heavenly Demon, she was a resolute martial artist.

"Wait a minute, please! It's not an honor to be starved! How does it make sense that I can't learn martial arts because of that! Hey!?"

The Palm Blast zombie opened its jaws wide.

Ah.

"Damn it."

Crunch!

[You have died.]

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

"---Damn!"

I stomped my feet, having returned to a day earlier. I saw the Palm Blast zombie's skill card, experienced the trauma, and even received the system's confirmation that the target's ego remained intact. But none of that mattered right now.

"I've had my fair share of hardships!"

I fumed.

Anger. Competitive spirit.

Only these two emotions blazed like red and blue flames in my heart, burning fiercely.

-Wow.

The Guardian Spirit was calm by my side.

-Teaching in the traditional way, huh? Well, she's imparting a secret technique, the only one of its kind, so it makes sense. Zombie, humans become raw themselves when they always try to eat others...

"Fine. So this is how it's going to be!"

I ignored the Guardian Spirit and left the hot spring cave.

"You think I'll cower and surrender just because you act like this? No way. I'm someone who has died burning before! Burned from the head down! And you think I can't die of starvation!?"

-Uh...

The Guardian Spirit looked flustered for once.

-Zombie? What's wrong? Hey. Instead of learning from that Heavenly Demon or whatever, learn from me. I'm a more forgiving teacher...

"Let's see how long I can starve then!"

-Damn.

The Guardian Spirit muttered.

-This is serious. He's lost it. Ah, when this guy gets angry, he really becomes blind to everything else. This will set us back dozens of days... From that day, I entered the Hell Path.

'I'm going to find the item needed to clear this stage.' That's the lie I told my companions. And I left.

I went as far away as possible from the hot spring cave, settling in a mountain covered with snow.

Doing nothing. Just staying put.

-You crazy...

Did he know what I was planning?

The Guardian Spirit looked at me with cold, withering eyes.

-Are you planning to stay here until you starve to death? Is that it?

"Yes. What about it?"

-Oh, my.

The Guardian Spirit lamented.

-Everyone should know how crazy this guy is, not just me. Oh, my! I'm the only one who knows, oh my. Being a ghost after death is such a regret, such a regret.

Too noisy.

-Zombie. No, Gong-Ja, I beg you. It's fine if you are immersed in training out of anger, but why must I, who has done nothing wrong, keep watching over you?

"Ah, you're so noisy."

-Let me ask just one thing. How long do you plan to endure this?

I sat in a small cave on the snowy mountain, different from the cave where the Heavenly Demon and her group stayed. There was no hot spring, no wall carvings here. Just a dark, cold cave.

"I don't know. At least beyond 112 days."

-What?

"I saw it in the Heavenly Demon's trauma. She once endured for 111 days without eating anything, surviving solely on energy circulation. So, I plan to endure at least 112 days."

-This is utterly crazy....

The Guardian Spirit swore for about a minute. But it was futile. No matter what he said, it couldn't shake my resolve. I had already assumed a meditative posture.

-You won't last more than 100 days!

The Guardian Spirit shouted.

-Look at the weather. It's freezing! If you don't wrap yourself in Aura, you'll freeze to death right away. How do you plan to maintain your Aura for 100 days straight? Even with all your effort, 20 days is the limit.

Failing with curses, the Guardian Spirit tried to persuade me.

-Plus, Gong-Ja. Enduring more than 100 days isn't just about hunger anymore. You've never starved for more than 100 days, right? If you haven't, then don't talk about it.

"Have you starved before?"

-Yes. I also practiced fasting in my youth following the elders. For a few days, you feel like dying of hunger, but mostly, you don't feel hungry at all! It's not about starving; it's about mental cultivation. Mental cultivation!

"Then the answer is clear."

I spoke calmly.

"After starving for 15 days, I'll just keep repeating the 15th day.

-.....

The Guardian Spirit was speechless.

-What did you say?

"I won't eat anything for 15 days. I'll endure until hunger reaches its peak. Then I'll commit suicide and keep staying on the 15th day. Hunger will remain constant."

I looked at the Guardian Spirit.

"I'll repeat this until it reaches 112 days. What do you think? The Aura won't drop, and the hunger will continue. A perfect solution."

-You... are insane....

The Guardian Spirit was appalled.

-Just learn from me... Don't take that strange cult leader as your master. My martial arts are better, you know? Why are you driven to such madness?

"I will perfectly learn the Demonic Heavenly God Art."

My heart blazed.

"Do you know why the Heavenly Demon despaired of the world? Why this world, the 'The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon,' came to an end? Because she felt that living further was meaningless."

When the Head of the Martial Alliance lay on his deathbed.

The Heavenly Demon murmured to herself.

「The world has become empty.」

That was the end. If the world is considered a work of art, that was the last line on the final page.

Meaninglessness.

No matter what the characters say or do, where they go, what they feel, none of it carries any meaning. Hundreds of lines of dialogue, thousands of descriptions – all pointless.

It's just like a blank page.

Then the work dies, and so does the world.

Destruction.

That must be what the Head Librarian meant by [Serialization Cancellation].

-.....

I, for one, do not wish for this world to perish in such a way.

I never want the character of the Heavenly Demon to end like this.

"...Living like the Flame Emperor is easy."

I looked outside the cave. The white snowy landscape stretched out.

"I could have the thug skills, thinking I'm the best around. If I win, it's all due to my skill. If others, inferior hunters compared to me, lose, it's because they're fools. There's no need to care about such fools, so I could just choose the stages I find easy, mock and scorn whatever happens..."

As I sat in a meditative pose, I circulated Aura throughout my body.

"It might look cool to be that way."

And so, I began.

"Cynicism isn't childish, but living cynically is."

I starved.

"Being principled isn't childish, but living by principles isn't either."

I starved for a day.

"I'm human too. I need to live."

I starved for two days.

"So, the answer to how I should live is quite clear."

I starved for three days.

And kept starving.

Chapter 73: The Reaper of Death. (2)

Starvation.

What is starvation, really?

On the seventh day of my fasting.

"Hmm."

The first and second days were the hardest. After three days, the pain seemed to recede. The movement in my intestines slowed down. My thoughts became sluggish. My very life seemed to have diluted.

If a person's life is likened to a river, the flow had diminished. Like the shallow stream of a famine year, it had dried up significantly.

Drought.

Quietly drying up and vanishing. The stream diminishing and diminishing, until the stream of pain, of thoughts, of life itself, dries up completely.

Is this what [starvation] is?

Is this what the Heavenly Demon wanted from my training?

"...No."

I released my meditative pose and stood up.

"This isn't it."

I muttered softly.

"Just sitting still would be pointless."

I drew my sword. In my mind, I visualized the sword movements of the Demonic Heavenly God Art and swung my sword aimlessly.

-What are you doing?

"Exercising."

Winter was cold. I breathed in the cold air. Perhaps due to drinking snow for seven days, my breath seemed as white as snowflakes.

"I was wrong. The [starvation] that the Heavenly Demon spoke of isn't simply about 'not eating.' It's definitely not about just sitting in meditation and fasting."

As I moved my body for the first time in a week, I quickly became short of breath.

My muscles trembled. My breathing was rough.

"Starvation is about 'wanting to eat but being unable to eat.'"

Clumsy swordplay.

But I was sweating. Different from just sitting silently. My body started to come alive. The amount of sweat flowing from my body was probably equal to the amount of life in me.

"During this past week, I thought about a starving farmer."

What is starvation?

"What farmer wouldn't go to the fields just because he's hungry? Regardless of being hungry or not, whether he has eaten or not, he has to work. But there's nothing to eat even while working."

Perhaps that is starvation.

"He swings his hoe. He digs the earth. But due to the famine, due to the hard times, no matter what he does, the land bears no fruit. It's truly fruitless."

I swung my sword.

"Because there is nothing he can do—"

And then I closed my eyes.

The earth.

I visualized the dry, parched earth.

"—that's why he's starving."

A farmer struck the parched earth with his hoe. Thud! The soil would crumble like an old cookie breaking apart.

"It's been over half a year since the last rain."

-.....

The reservoirs were empty. The village well had dried up. Not a drop of water in the fields. In the daytime, an old man would sit at the edge of the village. Silently. Even the wrinkled face of the grandfather was dry.

"It's a drought."

The sun was hot.

Some villagers had already given up on farming. They abandoned their fields. Having abandoned their work and workplace, they had less reason to keep their homes. They took their children and left for the coast.

"But this farmer hasn't given up yet."

-Why?

"Because he thinks it won't be different at the sea. Because he doesn't know how to catch fish. People have to live on the thievery they've learned, and the farmer only knows how to steal from the land. His father, his father's father, and his father before him..."

One day.

Two days.

Three days.

The farmer goes to the fields. Without any reward, he goes as if commuting to work. In the evening, he climbs the back mountain and peels what's left of the edible tree bark.

"Now, there's not much bark left."

The villagers had stripped most of it.

Descending the mountain and looking back, the trees on the back mountain were all bare. From afar, it looked like a forest of birch trees.

Starvation turns the world white.

"But."

The farmer swung his hoe at the barren land.

And I swung my sword in the air.

"I can't eat these tree barks."

He has a family.

"It's been over a week since I even tasted the bark."

He has a child.

-So what?

As the hoeing and sword movements continued, the Guardian Spirit asked.

-So what will you do?

"I'll first go to the village well."

He scoops up a small bucket of water from the dried well.

"I'll boil the bark scraps with that water. Add some small leaves... and boil it."

The fresh scent of leaves.

The musty scent of the tree bark mixes with the steam and wafts through the air.

The farmer swallows his saliva.

'I'm hungry.'

I, too, swallow my saliva.

'I want to eat.'

I want to bite and tear the bark.

The tree bark boils. The bark, imbued with the scent of water and leaves, seems sweet. I want to bite and chew it. A rich broth would flow out, tasting of earth. A brownish meal.

Tree bark is edible soil.

'I want to eat.'

But I restrain myself.

'I have to give it to my children... Even this. I have to give it.'

The children whine. They cry.

The bark boiled by their father. The bark he didn't eat and barely brought back, the children dislike it. They throw tantrums. They complain while eating.

They spill it.

'Ah.'

Unknowingly, the farmer slaps his child's cheek.

Like the farmer swinging his arm, I too swung my sword.

'This isn't me.'

The farmer turns his back on his children.

'This isn't who I am.'

...I'm not someone who hits my children. I'm not that kind of person. It's just that the famine is so severe. It's been too long since I've had proper food, my nerves are sharpened. I'm overly sensitive. It's too much....

'This isn't the life I've had.'

The farmer picks up the tree bark.

What is starvation?

Since the world began, there have been numerous famines.

And with each, there have been farmers, farmers, farmers, countless of them.

Countless starvations.

「 Fight while feeling hunger. 」

Is there a gesture in starvation?

「 Every stroke of your sword must emanate from hunger. 」

Yes.

There is a gesture in starvation.

「 Imagine the voice and groans of a starving person, their arm movements, footsteps – everything. 」

That gesture was the farmer slapping his child.

That gesture was the farmer kicking out the tree bark and abandoning life.

That gesture was the farmer returning to give his children the bark again.

「 Embed these in your heart. 」

Since the world began, some farmers must have slapped their children, others gently caressed their cheeks and whispered apologies. Some farmers might have even killed their child in anger. Some survived until the next year, while others died with their children.

And so it has been, and so it will be.

「 Make it your single-hearted resolve. 」

But there was no gesture unassociated with starvation.

「 Relying on this resolve. 」

「 Swing your sword driven only by starvation. 」

I swung my sword with the gesture of slapping a child in anger and frustration.

I swung my sword with the gesture of throwing the tree bark to the ground, thus abandoning life.

I swung my sword with the gesture of giving the bark back to my children.

「 Only then will the Demonic Heavenly God Art reveal its true power. 」

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The First Form.

Sword of Starving Death.

""

I slowly opened my eyes.

The white daylight of the snowy plains had turned into a pitch-black night.

I was drenched in sweat. Only then did I feel hungry, starving. A desperate hunger gnawed at my stomach lining, as if it were a bug with sharp teeth, incessantly nibbling at my insides.

'This is hunger.'

It was painful.

'This is starvation.'

Demonic Technique.

The claws that scrape the world.

On the walls of the cave, marks of clawing were rampant. It looked as though a violent storm had passed through. My sword strikes were clearly etched into the stone walls. Stalactites and stalagmites had been cleanly sliced.

The stone walls and pillars were cut by my blade.

Despite hardly using Aura.

'But... it's still not enough.'

I had just grazed the edge of the technique.

I felt it distinctly.

The sword forms in my mind. The mental image I had drawn. The sensation, the feel of it, was undoubtedly caught at my fingertips.

That's how I knew.

"I'm still clumsy."

Where my fingertips barely touched.

That place was not the pinnacle, but merely the entrance.

-The madman...

The Guardian Spirit looked at me with an exasperated face.

"Ah, why are you calling me mad again? I'm properly training this time."

-Properly? You'd be better off practicing Color Technique like those lascivious monks.

The Guardian Spirit sighed heavily.

-This is why ignorance is scary. You, little bird, are a one-of-a-kind madman. Your heart belongs to the Orthodox path, yet you practice the techniques of Demonic cult. Ah, this is crazy.

"Uh, I still don't quite get the martial arts terminology. What's wrong with that?"

-This uninitiated kid...

The Guardian Spirit muttered.

-How bizarre it is, yet he has no clue. Ah, I'm going crazy.

"Explain it in a way I can understand, will you?"

-To put it simply, an expert of the Orthodox Faction is using Demonic techniques. Want more specifics? [An orthodox expert who only knows how to use demonic techniques]. You see? It's mind-boggling and unbelievable, isn't it?

"Hmm."

I covered my nose with my left hand.

"Seems like it's blocked?"

-This guy has gone nuts after a week in the cave... No, he was already nuts... What did I do in my past life to be possessed by such a lunatic...

The Guardian Spirit lamented.

-Due to this guy, I'm getting irritated for no reason. Ah, how am I supposed to teach him my martial arts? If I teach him the way I taught Marcus, it'll be a mess. What am I to do...

Ah. I'm hungry.

I want a Choco Pie.

A Choco Pie that tastes of chocolate when you bite into it, with chewy marshmallow inside. Drinking warm milk and slowly enjoying a single piece of Choco Pie.

What is starvation?

Kim Gong-ja says, starvation is a Choco Pie.

Delicious and good for the body, Choco Pie-.

---Hey. Are you daydreaming?

“No? I’m thinking about martial arts.”

-Don’t lie. You’re obviously thinking something stupid.

How does this guy know me so well? Is he a stalker? After all, the Guardian Spirit always follows me around. Translated to English, he would be a Ghost Stalker. Thinking about it that way made me feel a bit upset.

Such an annoying stalker.

"Really. Really really. Did you spend your life being deceived and then die?"

-Then tell me. What were you thinking about martial arts?

The stalker pressed on. Just like a stalker, nagging about trivial matters. Despite being as big as a gorilla. Hurry up and achieve enlightenment, Ghost Gorilla Stalker.

I put on a solemn expression.

"I was thinking of descending the mountain for a bit."

-Descending? Why? Are you finally going to show the Heavenly Demon what you're made of?

"Ah, no."

I waved my hand.

"I've just reached the threshold of the Demonic Heavenly God Art. If I commit suicide now and return to the Heavenly Demon, it wouldn't achieve much. I'll just get a response like [Hmm, seems like there's some potential]."

-So? Isn't it fine to be acknowledged?

"That's not enough."

I walked out of the cave.

"Do you know how humiliated and hurt I felt when the Heavenly Demon dismissed me for never truly experiencing starvation? I hold grudges. Just being acknowledged won't heal my wounds."

-This guy is upset...

"I want a reaction of [astonishment]."

The shock on their faces.

I want to see the Heavenly Demon in awe of my swordsmanship.

"[Incredible talent. Overflowing talent, even exploding! I failed to recognize you as my fateful disciple. My eyes must have been clouded, I apologize.]"

Hmm.

Just imagining it feels good.

The Heavenly Demon's face will be as sweet as a Choco Pie.

"How about that? Sounds good, right? Even Sword Saint would agree, right?"

-Such a distasteful lunatic...

I descended the snowy mountain and headed towards the snowy plains.

"While unfolding the Demonic Heavenly God Art, I realized something. Ah, compared to the people of this era, I really haven't experienced true starvation. While imagining a farmer boiling tree bark, I couldn't precisely picture which bark. I didn't know exactly how to boil the bark."

Because I've never done it.

"The clearer my mental image, the more powerful the technique becomes. The reason why my martial arts are still weak despite having learned the [Demonic Heavenly God Art] skill is simply because my mental imagery is clumsy. So...

I stopped on the snowy field.

"From now on, I'm going to fill in what's lacking in my imagination."

-What will you do? Boil tree bark for real?

"No. There's a much better way."

I smiled.

"Ghoul Reincarnation."

The moonlight shone. The snowy plains were silver.

Suddenly, clouds covered the moon. What was cloud in the sky became shadow on the ground. Little by little. The shadow, like a bug with teeth, bit into the snowy plains.

The moon swallowed by the shadow.

[Activating skill.]

After a while, the clouds cleared.

But the shadow cast on the snow did not disappear. Even in the moonlight, the snow was no longer silver. As if the moon once swallowed could never return, numerous shadows were strewn across the snow.

"My lord."

One of the shadows spoke.

"Did you summon me?"

Preta knelt on one side. The snow crunched under her knee. Behind her, thousands of skeletons stood.

"Hmm."

I nodded.

"Preta. I have a task for you."

"Your command?"

"This world is on the brink of destruction. Humans have become spirits and corpses, wandering aimlessly. Perhaps it's somewhat similar to the Aegim Empire you once destroyed."

"....."

Preta bowed her head a bit more.

"My order is simple. Disperse. Spread out and gather starving corpses."

"Starving corpses... what do you mean...?"

"Yes."

I looked out at the vast snowy night.

"There must be villages and rural areas somewhere here. Find them. Look for those who died of starvation and bring them here. The corpses will resist, but you are over four thousand. Overwhelm them with numbers."

"How many?"

Preta cautiously asked.

"How many corpses shall we bring?"

"112."

Starvation-traumatized humans. I will learn from their hunger.

Once I learn and master their starvation,

I will finally draw closer to the Heavenly Demon.

Chapter 74: The Reaper of Death. (3)

"My lord..."

Preta looked up at me cautiously.

"Bringing back 112 dead is excessive. You've become noticeably emaciated in just a few days..."

"Why? Has your loyalty grown to the point of worrying about my body?"

Preta hesitated. It seemed she was pondering how to respond.

Should she flatter or lay bare her true feelings?

"...If you disappear, my lord, I too will cease to exist."

Preta spoke up.

"I will no longer be able to dwell in my small paradise. My life, memories, meaning, everything will vanish. Everything depends on you, my lord. I worry about myself, hence I worry about your well-being too."

"I appreciate your honesty."

I smiled.

"How is it? Living well these days?"

"Excuse me...?"

"You're living in Ester's village now, aren't you? The people you treasured more than your life have also returned. How are you getting along?"

After gaining exclusive rights to the 20th floor, I had let Preta stay in the village. Except for times like now when I needed her, she would continue to reside there.

Preta answered nervously.

"I am... living well."

"Any troubles?"

"If you mean troubles... Ah."

Preta blinked.

"Hunters stormed in once, claiming there must be a secret behind the sudden surge in the King of Death's power, or a treasure hidden by the Five Great Guilds... However, the Witch you brought and the hunters following her intervened, preventing any major disturbances."

As expected of the Black Dragon Guild. Their after-service is reliable.

"No more meddling from the petty lords of neighboring kingdoms. They are dealing with epidemics brought by the nomads they invited... Even if not, both the empire and the temple have declared my village a holy place. Occasionally, Lizardmen and Elves come bearing gifts..."

It seemed things were progressing smoothly in this world.

"But, since I have lost my powers..."

"Hmm."

"Patients seeking my fame and pilgrims hoping for miracles, especially after the declaration of the holy place, have been coming. For now, the Heretic Inquisitor and the cleric hunters are taking care of them..."

"Don't worry, I have plans in mind."

I intended to establish a new branch of the Apothecary's pharmacy on the 20th floor.

'I've got the Apothecary's word that they will only accept new clients through me.'

Once this expedition concludes, the Apothecary's position will solidify.

'I need to manage the traffic properly.'

With patients continuously visiting, the Apothecary will gain a wealth of experience in various diseases.

'It won't be possible for the Apothecary to handle the workload alone. Hiring staff is inevitable. Attaching Preta as an assistant or accepting aspiring hunter pharmacists as apprentices could work. As the pharmacy grows, it'll naturally become a major branch...'

It wouldn't take long for the new pharmacy to be recognized as a branch of the Alchemy Castle and eventually evolve into a headquarters.

'I should take care of my people.'

I smiled.

"Anything else?"

"Nothing specific... Ah, Dajenna, a child from my village, has taken a liking to tteokbokki brought by the hunters. And Garchev, he's an old man guarding an orchard; he's been sharing fruits with the Black Dragon hunters guarding the village, and in return, they bring fruits from your world---."

The wind blew.

Snowflakes fluttered, and under the moonlit night, Preta's voice flowed like the snow. I listened to her story to the end under the moonlight.

Preta bowed her head.

"---That's the situation."

"Sounds like you're living well."

Preta cautiously replied.

"Yes, it is bearable."

I nodded.

"The people of this world should start living well too."

"....."

"Go and gather the corpses."

Golden hair cascaded down my shoulders. Preta bowed deeply. Her voice leaked from her pursed lips.

"I shall obey your command."

There's a saying about the right person for the right job.

Summoning Preta to collect the dead turned out to be a very good decision.

The Fallen Constellation, once known as the [Demon King of the Autumn Rain], who at one time brought destruction to this other world. She knew well how to harvest death.

"I will start with villages or cities that have offices."

Preta commanded thousands of skeletons with a gesture.

"There should be maps where the administrators work. They might be crude, but they should be sufficient for cross-referencing the geography. I plan to gather fragmented maps to pinpoint remote farming and fishing villages."

Three days into the search, zombies began to be delivered. They were not corpses of martial artists, but ordinary farmers and commoners. The corpses of people who once were just that.

"An instance where a mother, unable to bear watching her starving children, hung herself along with her children... I will bring her corpse."

The skeletons' bones were white. The white bones brought the corpses in a line. In the middle of the snowy plain. The whiteness of the bones and the snow was hard to distinguish. From a distance, it seemed as though the corpses were moving toward me on their own.

"In the morning, children who wake up to find their mother's corpse. Those who cried beside her until they died like wilted wildflowers... I will bring their corpses too."

The procession of corpses continued.

Deaths were lined up.

"Villagers who cursed the mother for failing to fulfill her duties as a parent."

"Those who hid under the well to avoid the pandemic but couldn't come back up."

"Prisoners who starved to death without ever getting a chance to escape."

Preta carefully and selectively offered the impoverished.

Like a vassal presenting only the most precious things to the emperor.

When a week had passed, Preta kneeled again on the snowy field.

"I have brought them, my lord."

I looked out over the snowy plains.

-Groooo...

-Ugh, ugh!

-Kiwooo...

Numerous deaths were lined up.

The corpses, once released from the skeletons' grip, rushed in. Instinctively. Toward the place where the scent of flesh was strong.

Toward where I stood.

"Alright."

I smiled.

"Come all!"

Wham!

A young corpse leaped at me. It bit into my calf. As the agonizing pain was about to surge up my leg, it was interrupted by an old corpse tearing at my thigh. The pain from my calf was cut off at my thigh, then intensified again in my abdomen.

"-----."

I must have screamed. But I couldn't hear it myself as a corpse had torn my ears.

My lips were devoured. My tongue was devoured. Unable to hear, unable to speak, I just watched as numerous shadows burrowed into my body.

[You have died.]

I looked up at the night sky.

The moon seemed eternally snow-covered.

[Re-enacting the trauma of your killer.]

The last night sky an old man saw was probably just like this.

He had spent his life fishing in the river. When the old man was bitten by a zombie, he didn't panic. He calmly steered his boat.

-Lying on this boat as I die won't be a burden to the world.

Near the riverside village, the old man's boat gently rocked.

He lay on the boat. As comfortably as if in a coffin. It would have been fine to die, capsized by the waves. To die as if falling asleep... The old man considered it a blessing to be born in the river and die in it.

The last moon he saw was peaceful.

[Re-enacting the trauma of your killer.]

How the world had come to such a state was a mystery.

The young castellan walked the city walls at night, pondering. He was never a local official. He was a scholar who ran a scriptorium. But the castellan died, and the castellan's subordinates died, and their servants died.

Death followed death. At the end of the trail was himself.

-Lord of the Castle.

A soldier approached. He too wasn't originally a soldier but a reputable innkeeper. Though rough, he had a quick mind and was useful.

-What is it?

-The granary is empty. In a fortnight, there won't be a single grain of millet in the storehouse. Fishermen occasionally catch fish, but it's not enough. What should we do...?

-Reduce the rations given to the elderly first.

The young castellan ordered.

-The zombies are numerous. We must conserve those who can still fight. Reduce the food for the old and children to one-third.

[Re-enacting the trauma of your killer.]

The young castellan was ruthless. Sometimes he seemed colder than the zombies. How the village scholar, who used to only recite scriptures, developed such resolve was sometimes baffling to the soldier.

-There will be much resistance...

-Reduce the food for the young by half too. If everyone cuts back together, it'll be bearable.

-But won't there still be complaints?

-I will fast first.

The castellan spoke shortly.

-I won't eat anything. If the leader abstains, the complainers will lose their strength.

---Are you sure?

-This place won't last long anyway. What difference will a few days of fasting make?

The moon viewed from the city walls was tranquil.

[Re-enacting the trauma of your killer.]

-We'll all starve to death at this rate!

A little girl frantically shouted. She was a beggar, and now that the distinction between rich and poor had vanished, she became the leader of children her age.

"The lord forbids the children from eating. It's like he's telling us not to live!"

"So, what should we do, sister?"

"We should eat something before we die, even if it means dying. Only then can we become good-looking zombies."

The kid spoke energetically.

"I know a recipe I learned from Beggars' Sect. It's called 'tohwa' (earth snack). It's literally a mud snack."

"A mud snack...?"

"It's a snack you can make with just mud."

The kid's eyes sparkled.

"Listen up! Kids who can swim keep catching fish. Don't offer them to the adults, let's just share among ourselves. The rest go to the riverbank and scoop up soft mud."

"What are we going to do with it?"

"Let me show you."

[Re-enacting the trauma of your killer.]

The children scooped up mud from the riverbank. The mud was mixed with sand. They sifted the mud through a sieve several times, removing the gravel.

"Roll this mud and spread it on a mat."

The kid leader busily worked her hands. She rolled the mud into a ball and thumped it on a mat. Then she spread the mud out wide like kneading dough.

"Good. It's done!"

"Done? What do you mean?"

"Just let it dry in the sun. Then you'll have mud snacks."

The children were incredulous.

"It's just sun-baked mud!"

"How is this a snack?"

"Quiet. It's a secret recipe passed down in Beggars' Sect. Just watch and learn."

The kid leader pulled out a pouch. It contained salt. Salt, already precious, became even more valuable since the rations stopped. To the kids, each grain was as valuable as gold. The kid mixed a little salt into the mud dough.

"Alright!"

After half a day, the mud dried up.

"Now it's done. Try eating one! But be careful. If you eat too much at once, it tastes bad! Just nibble it sparingly."

The children bit into the mud snacks with skepticism.

[Re-enacting the trauma of your killer.]

"...Surprisingly, it's edible?"

One child nibbled at the mud snack with his front teeth like a hamster.

[Re-enacting the trauma of your killer.]

"The saltiness makes it good."

Another child licked the mud snack. His eyes widened, savoring it like licking an ice cream. The edge of the mud snack turned soggy with his saliva.

[Re-enacting the trauma of your killer.]

"It's tasteless..."

Another child simply looked sad.

The kid leader giggled.

"It's fine. As long as we can eat. From now on, we have to take care of our food. Normally, we'll eat tohwa, and when we catch fish, we'll eat that too. Got it?"

"Yeah, sister..."

The children comforted their hungry stomachs with mud.

The human mouth is deceitful. Mud imbued with saltiness was accepted by the children's esophagus as food.

To swallow the mud, the saltiness had to deceive the tongue. So, the children didn't bite into the mud snacks right away. They licked them first, savoring the salty taste.

"Don't lick too much! The taste will be gone. You need to nibble while licking."

The children kneaded mud every day by the riverbank.

"Huh?"

The riverbank.

"Look over there. A corpse."

It was the same river where an old man had drifted away in his boat.

The old man, born from the river, died in it. He considered it happiness. He thought dying in his boat, turning it into a coffin, would be a way not to bother the world.

He hadn't thought about one thing. Sometimes, drowned corpses drift to the riverbank.

If dying in the river was the old man's happiness, then being washed up on this side of the riverbank was his misfortune.

And everyone's misfortune.

"Looks like an old man drowned."

"Poor thing..."

"Maybe a fisherman."

The children approached the old corpse with fear and curiosity.

"Huh?"

It was early dawn.

"Wait, just a minute!"

"Hmm?"

"It's a zombie! Not just a corpse!"

The children ran away as the corpse, smelling their tender scent, began to wriggle.

"Run!"

Some children managed to escape.

"Ah..."

And some couldn't.

[Re-enacting the trauma of your killer.]

That was the end.

[Re-enacting the trauma of your killer.]

A castle by the river, cut off from the imperial capital and nearby villages, perished that way. The old man died. The last lord died fighting. The soldier trying to flee the city gate died. The kid leader died protecting her younger sibling.

[Re-enacting the trauma of your killer.]

They fought to live.

[Re-enacting the trauma of your killer.]

They struggled.

[Re-enacting the trauma of your killer.]

They endured hunger because they wanted to live.

[Re-enacting the trauma of your killer.]

The children's fingers scooping wet soil by the river, their hands spreading the mud dough on the mat, and their fingertips tightly clutching the dried mud cookies.

[Re-enacting the trauma of your killer.]

112 deaths.

Among them, not a single gesture was free from hunger.

[Trauma re-enactment complete.]

[The target's ego has remained intact.]

[Penalty Finalized.]

I slowly opened my eyes.

"....."

The snowy plain was silent.

In the quiet night, my murmuring voice softly flowed.

"I thought about learning how to boil tree bark, but..."

Reality surpassed my imagination. In a world heading towards destruction, was tree bark not even worth being a trauma? Pushed to the brink, humans could eat even mud.

"Yeah. That's possible."

I stood up and started digging through the snow. I wrapped my bare hands with aura and dug through, reaching the frozen soil beneath the perennial snow.

The first ground I saw since falling into this world.

"Let's see..."

Digging up years-old frozen soil wasn't easy. I had to use aura. I scooped up a handful of soil and heated it with aura, mixing it with the perennial snow as if boiling a broth. After a while, the soil granules began to soften.

Literal mud.

I carefully sifted out the sand and gravel. I followed what I saw in the dream. I rolled the mud into a ball and spread it wide on my overcoat used as a mat.

"Hmm."

Time passed. The morning and noon sun baked the mud cookies. I carefully picked up the mud cookie, which looked like dalgona, with both hands.

".....I'll enjoy this."

I nibbled at it.

The sound crackled in my mouth.

"....."

I licked the edge of the mud cookie with my tongue. It softened a bit. But as I received the crumbling mud cookie with my tongue, the soil granules stuck to the roof of my mouth. My entire mouth crackled.

"....."

After a while, I got the hang of it. This food wasn't meant to be chewed with molars. It was to be nibbled with front teeth and then slowly swallowed. The warmth of the sun and the scent of the soil, a food that contained only these two elements, I slowly devoured.

Hmm.

".....It tastes bad."

I bit it.

"It's tasteless."

I nibbled it.

"Really, it's tasteless."

I swallowed.

"....."

My shoulders trembled.

My heart trembled.

An indescribable emotion enveloped my body. Was it anger? Sadness? Or perhaps hatred? Humans, originally born from the earth, why can't they eat the earth? Why are the scent of the earth and the texture of the soil so miserably poor?

Why.

"....."

Before I knew it, my right hand was tightly clenched. Whether it was anger, sadness, or perhaps hatred, the emotion clenched in my hand. That's when I realized. Emotions that can't be spoken are meant to be clenched in hands.

Not to be expressed but to be swung.

Martial arts was simply swinging what remained in one's hand.

"....."

Let's go back.

I drew the holy sword. I aimed the tip at the center of my neck.

I'll return and show my sword to the Heavenly Demon. No, not my sword. The sword of the nameless old men, soldiers, lords, and children who died.

I've never read a martial arts novel, so I don't know the subtle principles of yin, yang, and the five elements. If there is any principle in my martial arts, it's just their screams. If there is any heavenly principle in my blade, it's just the gestures of humans abandoned by the heavens.

Because it's resentment and grudge, it's Demonic.

Because it's the sky looked up to in mere resentment and grudge, it's Demonic Heaven.

I stabbed the holy sword into the center of my neck. Carrying the deaths of 112 people in my heart, I returned. What I had to do was no different from the previous loop.

I requested the Heavenly Demon to accept me as a disciple.

Just like before, the Heavenly Demon pondered for a night.

After one night, the Heavenly Demon presented me with a test.

"What is the test?"

"There."

The Heavenly Demon pointed to the bottom of a pit.

"I've thrown a zombie down there. A late-stage Ki master who was a rising star in our cult, a supreme expert who had made a name for himself in the martial world. Defeat that zombie. Then I will accept you as a disciple of my inner sect."

However, the Heavenly Demon added,

"Fight while feeling hunger. Fight the zombie, but only hunger should reside in your heart. The pain of hunger alone should occupy your mind. I forbid any other emotion or thought to infiltrate your mind. Can you do it?"

I didn't respond.

There was no need to articulate what couldn't be spoken.

Instead, I quietly jumped into the pit.

-Grooooooar!

A zombie charged at me.

I looked at the zombie with an indifferent gaze.

"....."

The scent of mud in my mouth.

The feel of a lump of earth in my gestures.

Only the hunger of the children encapsulated in my heart.

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The First Form.

Sword of Starving Death.

I swung my sword.

With one strike, I severed its legs.

With a second, its arms were cut off.

With a third, I beheaded the zombie.

In each movement, not a gesture was free from hunger.

The former supreme expert of the Demonic Cult lay silenced at the bottom of the pit.

"....."

I looked up.

The Heavenly Demon's mouth was agape. She was staring at me with an expression even more astonished than when she first saw our group. Her eyes wavered. After such wavering, her heart must have been tumultuous.

The meaning of life she thought she had lost forever.

She saw it beginning anew before her eyes.

Becoming visible.

"Heavenly Demon."

I slowly opened my lips.

"What kind of death shall I present next?"

Volume 4 – Chapters 75-99

Chapter 75: Song of Light and Shadow (1)

"The Demonic Heavenly God Art originally consists of nine sword techniques," the Heavenly Demon commented after watching my duel.

"The Sword of Starving Death you demonstrated is the first form. You must be aware of that."

"Yes."

"After the Sword of Starving Death comes the Sword of Parched Death."

Sword of Parched Death.

"Hunger from thirst."

"Indeed. You, the child from another world, have displayed the Sword of Starving Death quite decently. Thus, if you devote yourself to training, you might become a worthy disciple...."

"Just a moment."

I raised my hand.

"Please wait."

Sorry, but I couldn't bear it without raising my hand. The person sitting cross-legged before me seemed to be glossing over something important, but that wall, in my view, was quite high.

"...What is it?"

"What did you just say? 'Quite decently'?"

The Heavenly Demon's lips pressed tightly together.

“Strange, I thought I did quite well. To the Heavenly Demon, it was just decent.... Oh! Sorry. Suddenly, my pride vanished and my confidence started to wane. You know, when your spirit just gets crushed.”

“This brat....”

The corner of the Heavenly Demon's mouth twitched.

“...Alright, I admit it. You displayed the Sword of Starving Death skillfully. Just don't go around boasting that you've mastered the Demonic Heavenly God Art.”

“What? What did you say? 'Skillfully'?”

“Are you trying to mock me with wordplay!”

The Heavenly Demon exclaimed.

“Do I have to bow my head and offer you the Nine Bows Ritual for you to be satisfied? Really, such an impudent child! Just become the master yourself! I'll be the disciple.”

Okay. I've got a bite.

I acted nonchalantly, like a fisherman.

“So, you're saying that I've been acknowledged as your disciple, right? That's right, isn't it? Not an outer sect disciple, but a true, direct, personal disciple.”

The Heavenly Demon couldn't immediately respond.

One second. Two seconds.

After a slight pause, she finally opened her mouth.

“Refrain from digression. Child, I will now impart my teachings, so be attentive.”

Hmm.

‘As I thought.’

Just now, the Heavenly Demon deliberately ignored my words. Stubbornness comes from determination, and determination comes from sincerity. I could see where her hesitation stemmed from.

‘She won't outright say she'll take me as a disciple.’

The bond between master and disciple.

She had internally marked me as her disciple. However, she adamantly, absolutely refused to say aloud, "I accept you as my disciple."

I often failed to notice due to the bickering with the Sword Emperor.

For martial artists, especially the Heavenly Demon, the bond between master and disciple is that significant.

‘A heavy bond... can sometimes turn into a terrifying one.’

Therefore, the lady of the Demonic Cult refrains from declaring a master-disciple relationship.

She hesitates.

To take in a character like me, whom she had just met and who isn't even from the central martial realm. To allow such a child into her heart.

To hold a bit more hope in her life.

The Heavenly Demon, So BaekHyang, was wavering.

“Listen well. If you can execute the Sword of Starving Death to such a degree, at least you deserve to stealthily overhear and steal the teachings of our sect. But.....”

Despite her outward appearance of utter calmness.

‘Character Window.’

The inner feelings revealed to me were entirely different.

Name: So BaekHyang

Favorability: 51

Preferred Genres: [Martial Arts]

Disliked Genres: [Classics], [Mythology], [History], [Fairy Tales]

Preferred Characters: [Commoners], [Rivals]

Disliked Characters: [Oppressors], [Deceivers], [Playboys]

Preferred Plots: [Full-strength Battles]

Disliked Plots: [Escape], [Forgetfulness], [Meaningless Death]

Psychological State: 'A disciple, huh. It's time for me to make a decision. Ah, no, it's a terrible thought! I should be content with my rivalry with Namgung Woon. Thinking of having a disciple at this late stage in life, it's overreaching! It's a shameful old age.'

+

Yes.

I smiled inwardly.

‘Please contemplate.’

The Heavenly Demon's dilemma.

It was a green light for me.

‘Please waver more deeply.’

After all, I was the one who presented her with this crossroads.

To continue hopelessly with the martial alliance and the Great Orthodox-Demonic War, or to take a single disciple, ensuring the continuation of the Demonic Cult's teachings to the next generation.

Which exit truly leads away from a [Meaningless Death]?

‘Don't let go of life just yet.’

Words are light.

Vain.

How hollow it is to say, "Live."

'Even if the world falls to ruin and you're the only one left in the martial world, I still wish for you to live. It'd be good if you were alive.'

Does piling up words lend any weight to them?

'I hope to be a reason for you to continue living a little longer.'

Empty and vain words.

I didn't utter these thoughts aloud.

The Heavenly Demon didn't declare a master-disciple relationship for the same reason as me.

The lightness of words must be counterbalanced by the weight of actions. Only then can they be grounded.

Neither the Heavenly Demon nor I had yet put in enough effort to carry the weight of the words we wanted to speak.

"The time for a decision has not yet come," the Heavenly Demon thought to herself.

'I haven't yet managed to draw out that decision,' I thought to myself.

"....."

"....."

The Heavenly Demon and I faced each other.

“You, the child from another world. You don’t seem to be paying attention. Are you listening well to what I am saying?”

“Yes.”

Watching carefully.

“Of course, I’m concentrating. What are you talking about?”

“It seems to be a genuine concern.”

“Of course. I swear to it, whether it’s to the Jade Emperor or to the King of the Underworld.”

Our eyes met, interlocking yet diverging. Eyes, unlike hands, meet and miss at the same time. That’s why eyes are somewhat like human hearts.

After several missed connections, the Heavenly Demon spoke.

“Good. Seeing your overflowing confidence, you seem ready for the next test.”

The Heavenly Demon stood up and brushed off her eyes.

She left abruptly.

“Do not follow. I am in a hurry.”

With that, she left. Walking on the snowfield, she left no footprints, only her slender shadow gliding over the ice. She showed me the meaning of Printless Snow Walk, a term I heard on my first day in this world.

Then, suddenly.

-I want to fight.

The Guardian Spirit spoke up.

-I want to duel, even if it's just for one round. Seriously.

I involuntarily turned to look at him.

‘What?’

-I said I want a real fight, a duel.

And then, for the first time, I witnessed the Sword Emperor with such an expression.

-Dammit. Damn it all, damn!

The Sword Emperor was genuinely aggrieved.

-You know, zombie! In the martial world where I was born, the Demonic Cult was ridiculously weak! The only pleasure was to trounce those demonic lackeys! There was a guy pretending to be the Heavenly Demon, but ever since I planted his butt into the ground, he changed his title to Earth Demon! Damn it! Among all the so-called martial heroes I roamed around with, I must have changed the surname of hundreds. Ah, seriously!!

It was different.

It wasn't the same expression he had when he lost a bet to me.

Even though he was upset and struggling back then... The expression on the Guardian Spirit's face now,

-I'm so envious of the Martial Alliance Leader born in this world!

Was much more intense.

-If it were me, you know what? I'd fight a duel to the death with Life and Death Boundaries! Hey, let's see if this death is yours or mine and split the difference! After that, I'd climb up any snowy peak, gulp down a bowl of rice wine, and chew on a piece of boiled meat, and man, that's the real taste of looking down on the martial world!

Ambition. Pride. Fighting spirit.

His face was as vivid as raw meat.

-If only I weren't a ghost! Really!

"....."

I quietly closed my mouth.

Without realizing it, I had fallen into deep thought, supporting my chin with my hand as my head bowed. My mind was so filled with thoughts that I needed to support it with my hand.

-Huh? Zombie, why are you making a zombie face again? Are you upset because I'm calling you a sparrow instead of a zombie lately? Hey, should I just call you a 'zombie sparrow'?

".....That's it."

-Huh?

"That's exactly it."

I abruptly lifted my head.

"The Apothecary creates a cure for the zombie virus. I get officially recognized as the Heavenly Demon's disciple. All that's great. But... I felt something was missing. A finale, if you will? But just now, you gave me the final shot I needed."

-Uh....

"Nice play. Well done, Sword Emperor sir."

I grinned.

For some reason, the Sword Emperor backed away when he saw me smile.

"What's wrong?"

-No, it's just... every time you make that face, I get struck by bad luck. As if my dignity and status are about to be smeared.

"You know how much I respect you in my heart, right, Sword Emperor?"

-Thanks. Now, should I just throw up on your face?

“Hmm.”

I gazed at the distant sky with my hands behind my back.

“We have an unsettled debt between us.”

-.....

The Guardian Spirit hesitated.

-...Debt? What debt? I've never lived a life in debt to anyone. Eh, this young master is trying to cast some curse with his mouth again. Don't do that. Oh! You'll get hurt doing that!

“[Let's bet how many times I die before reaching the 19th floor].”

-.....

“You bet that I would die over 100 times. I bet on 99 times or less.”

-Well....

“Right?”

My smile became a bit more innocent.

-That's... How long ago was that...

“If my memory isn't failing, that bet concluded with 97 times, didn't it?”

-.....

“If my calculation is not wrong, 97 is less than 99. Right?”

-.....

“Sword Emperor.”

-Why do you keep doing this to me....

“Could you do me a favor?”

The Guardian Spirit made a sulking face.

-Fine, you wicked brat. Do whatever you want with me....

A complete surrender.

The Heavenly Demon returned.

When she left across the snowfield, she was alone, but not when she came back. She carried a zombie on her shoulder. Like the Palm Blast Zombie, this one was also dressed in black robes.

"In our sect, there is a unit called the Blood Ghosts, composed only of elites. They're the finest practical unit made up entirely of assassins. They exist solely to fulfill my orders."

The second sparring partner had arrived.

I took up the Holy Sword and assumed my stance.

"Last time it was a highly-regarded late-stage practitioner, now it's an assassin from an elite squad? The difficulty sure is escalating."

"Don't worry. I've brought someone suitable for your level."

Probably, the Heavenly Demon really did find [the perfect opponent] for me. Searching across the snowfield, checking hundreds of zombies one by one.

It was a thoughtful gesture.

A gesture filled with effort.

I gratefully accepted it as a compliment.

"What you have to demonstrate today is no different from this morning. Fight the zombie, but..."

"In my heart, only thirst. Only the pain of thirst must be present."

"Hm."

The Heavenly Demon smiled.

"Indeed. Allow no emotion or thought other than thirst to reside in your mind!"

"Understood!"

I charged in exuberantly.

"I'll show you something again this time...."

[You have died.]

[Returning 24 hours to the past.]

"So damn strong! Damn it!"

I did show something.

The fastest ultra-speed death scene in the universe.

Whatever.

"Medicine King, Miss Apothecary. The research on the zombie virus cure should proceed like this...."

"Good heavens! It's as if I did the research myself! No, it's like my research got dressed up and knighted, like it received a baronetcy or something!"

"What is this? Are you a Silicon Valley native too? This is organized just like how I would've done it...."

First, as always, I updated the research results on the cure.

"Ghoul Reincarnation!"

I decided to seclude myself in the snowy mountains for meditation again.

I summoned Preta and the skeletons to collect deaths, which was similar to before. Although the request was to find thirsty corpses instead of hungry ones, the command wasn't much different.

"Scatter. Scatter and gather corpses of those who died due to dehydration."

"Yes, my lord. Your command shall be obeyed."

But...

"There's one more task I have for you."

Here's where it differed from last time.

Preta tilted his head in curiosity.

"What would you have us do, my lord...."

"There must be zombies skilled in martial arts scattered around."

I wasn't talking about the 'Forest of Corpses' I witnessed upon falling into this world. In the last three years, the Heavenly Demon and the Martial Alliance Leader fought a lonely Great Orthodox-Demonic War, gradually losing corpses in the chaos.

When blizzards blew incessantly for days and nights lengthened, leaving no daylight. During those times, the Demonic Cult and the orthodox faction slowly lost their strength and went missing.

The 'zombies' I spoke of were these 'missing' people.

"Find them."

I said.

"Search for martial artists in black robes. Look for chivalrous warriors in white robes. Whether it's a hundred or three hundred miles away, release the skeletons and find them. No, make a map and mark the locations of the zombies."

Preta looked puzzled.

"What do you plan to do with those lives, my lord...?"

"There are still two people fighting a war in this ruined world. They want a proper conclusion, a proper ending. But sadly, from what I see, it's just a pitiful game of soldiers."

I looked up at the night sky.

The moon was up.

"If they want a real conclusion, let's give them a real war."

"A real war, you say?"

"Yes."

A smile came naturally to me.

I felt like Santa preparing Christmas gifts.

"Let's prepare a proper Great Orthodox-Demonic War."

Chapter 76: Song of Light and Shadow (2)

When I first tried to learn the Sword of Starving Death.

"What?"

The Heavenly Demon was disappointed.

"You mean to tell me the longest you've ever starved is just about three days?"

She didn't appreciate my effort. She gave up. Resigned. After briefly observing me wielding the sword, the Heavenly Demon quickly turned her back and left.

"We're not on the same page."

"How could you comprehend the Demonic Heavenly God Art without even knowing this?"

The Heavenly Demon only tested me to give up on herself.

Since there was nothing more to hope for in this world. Nothing should be.

"It's done."

"It's my fault."

That was when I learned 'hunger.'

But when it came to mastering 'thirst,' her attitude completely changed.

"Your swordsmanship is excessively simple."

The Heavenly Demon watched as I fought the zombie.

I could feel her gaze on me changing. Even when I clumsily swung my sword, she didn't turn her back, frowning instead. She even offered advice.

"There's no subtlety in your sword. No room for adaptation. It's straightforward and honest, yet that makes it vulnerable."

To me, a human, the Heavenly Demon began to pin her hopes.

"Your sword seems not to fight against humans but to confront the world. It's closer to the swordsmanship of the orthodox faction than that of our sect. How intriguing."

At first, I was killed by a martial arts zombie in a single blow.

But as time passed, I could easily handle the martial arts zombie. It was inevitable. Every night I was killed by the zombies that Preta brought.

The more I experienced the trauma of the thirsty dead, the stronger my sword became.

"I'll teach you a simple mind technique."

Once my swordsmanship improved, the Heavenly Demon finally began her teachings.

"A mind technique? What's that?"

"...It's like a secret technique or formula. Talking with you, a child from beyond, isn't easy."

The Heavenly Demon cleared her throat.

"Think back to when you used the Sword of Starving Death. What were you thinking about when you swung your sword?"

"I thought of hunger."

"Of course. But that's not all. Unbeknownst to you, you had already grasped the essence of demonic art."

The essence of demonic art.

"I will now teach you about it."

We sat facing each other on the snowfield.

"Now, imagine an [apple] in your mind."

"An apple... as in the fruit?"

"Yes, the edible apple."

I did as told and pictured an apple.

"Have you imagined it?"

"Yes."

"How does the apple feel to the touch?"

"Excuse me?"

The question caught me off guard. How could I know the touch of an apple when I didn't actually hold one in my hand?

Confused, I looked at the Heavenly Demon, who was keenly observing my reaction.

"Don't you know?"

"I could force myself to imagine it, but..."

"That's fine. Say you don't know if you don't know."

"Ah, yes. I have no idea."

"Hmm. Hmm."

The Heavenly Demon smiled. She seemed pleased.

"Honest, I see. Good! Now think of [hunger]."

"....."

I did.

I imagined a farmer tirelessly swinging a hoe on parched land. The motion of hitting a child. Children digging soft mud by the river and making mud cookies from it.

"Have you imagined it?"

The Heavenly Demon whispered.

"Yes, I have."

"What is the touch of hunger?"

The crunch of teeth on mud cookies. The taste. The dry texture.

".....It's dry."

"What is the scent of hunger?"

"The smell of dirt."

"Oh. What kind of dirt? There are different types. Soil for farming, clay for pottery. Black soil, red soil. I'm curious. What kind of dirt is your hunger?"

"Mud."

I said with my eyes closed.

"Any mud won't do. It must be mud with fewer pebbles and sand."

"I see. And what is the taste of hunger?"

"....."

"Child."

The Heavenly Demon's voice softened.

"I asked about the taste of hunger. Why don't you answer immediately?"

".....It's sad."

I replied.

"The children dry mud cookies in the sun. While drying, they have nothing to do, so they linger around the cookies. They just wait for the mud to dry..."

"Waiting children under the sun."

"...Yes."

"Hunger is like children waiting for the sun."

That's how it was. That's how it had been.

"Child. That's your poetry."

The Heavenly Demon's voice fell like gentle snow.

"When I asked about the touch of an apple, you said you didn't know. But what about hunger? You touched the mud. You smelled it. You chewed and ate it! You saw the flowing river, so you must have heard its gurgling sound as well."

An old man's last voyage. A ferry. The night sky.

A lonely death, not wanting to be a burden, yet ending up as one.

"An apple has a form, but hunger doesn't. An apple has taste, but hunger is tasteless. Yet you speak so well of hunger! To you, hunger is mud, sunlight, river, and children."

"Child! That's your talent."

The Heavenly Demon said.

"Now, open your eyes."

I looked.

The Heavenly Demon moved her hands while seated.

"The reason you don't know the feel of an apple is simple. You didn't stimulate your [memory]."

My memory.

"If you've eaten an apple before, you would know."

The Heavenly Demon smiled and moved her hands.

I soon realized.

She was mimicking cutting an apple in half.

"Apples have smooth skin. Slick yet slightly rough. I usually enjoy eating apples with the skin on, but if there's a sick child, it changes. Cut it in half..."

It was as if she actually had an apple in her hand.

"Scoop it out with a spoon. Feed the scooped apple to the sick child, bite by bite."

"....."

"Have you ever eaten scooped apple like that?"

Yes.

I remembered a teacher in the orphanage doing that for me. When I was sick with a cold, lying in bed, he fed me scooped apple with a spoon.

"How does the scooped apple feel?"

".....It's mushy."

"Exactly! But is that all? Did it just become tasteless?"

"The juice fills your mouth."

"That's right! And what else! If you scrape the peel thoroughly, the remaining apple skin becomes wrinkly. The mother's hands feeding the apple become wet from the juice. But then, child, among all these, what would you say is your apple?"

"....."

I was lost in thought.

The Heavenly Demon pressed on.

"Is it the whole apple? The halved apple? A spoonful of juice? The skin? The mother's hand? What is your apple?"

What is my apple?

"I've seen a mother who fed the entire apple to her child and only ate the remaining skin."

"....."

"To me, the apple is the leftover skin of the mother. The sick child. The mother's heart, grated spoon by spoon."

My heart felt warm, even sitting in the middle of the snowfield.

Maybe it was because of the Heavenly Demon's smile.

"---And then I think of children whose mothers never once scooped an apple for them."

But the Heavenly Demon's smile didn't last long.

"I think of mothers who couldn't afford apples. Mothers who could but didn't buy them. Children who lay sick but had no one to care for them. Children who died without care."

Malice.

The Heavenly Demon's black eyes darkened.

"In this world, there's nothing untouched by human hearts, thus, there's no place free from human resentments!"

I shivered.

"What is hunger without shape, taste, or scent? Thirst! Hunger is mud, river, and children. Even an apple is so. Child! Your hunger is mud, so make your thirst the same!"

"....."

"Feel the pain of thirst! Sense it. Satisfy the taste. Smell it. Eat it. Gesture it. Demonic art is memory! Memory is sensation. This is our sect's mind technique! The touch of scooping mud to eat, the feel in your hand, that's your hunger, your Demonic Heavenly God Art!"

A chill ran down my neck.

A cold current flowed through my body.

"The common folk may suffer unjustly, but that's all. They can't speak out. They can't express it. The unspoken grievances keep piling up in their hearts, eventually turning into deep resentment. But we of the Demonic Cult are different!"

The Heavenly Demon looked at me.

"We wield our swords!"

I instinctively gripped the sword hilt tighter.

"Like courtesans sing and scholars recite poetry, we swing our swords. What's the difference between a rogue of the green forests and a martial artist of our cult? They are controlled by the sword. But we control the sword! Just that, and all that matters."

The training began.

"How can a life just lived be called living? It's death! How can a sword swung at will be called a sword? It's a beast. Do you want to die? Do you want to become a beast?"

"No!"

I clenched my teeth.

"I am a living human!"

"Then yearn for thirst. Thirst like you hungered!"

I gathered 112 people who died from starvation.

Among them, there was a child who had gnawed on mud cookies.

I bit into the dry grains of earth in my mouth.

Thus,

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The First Form.

Sword of Starving Death.

"You have found the mud of hunger. Now you must find something of thirst. To you, hunger was the children waiting for the sun. What is thirst to you!"

I gathered 48 people who died of thirst.

Among them was an old woman who drank seawater continuously.

I pickled my internal organs in brine.

Thus,

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The Second Form.

Sword of Parched Death.

"To you, hunger was mud and thirst was the sea. But is the sea's pain only in thirst? There's the pain of drowning in seawater, drowning in a river. Child, what is water to you!"

I gathered 37 people who drowned.

Among them was a father who gave his last breath to his child.

I sank in water, sharing breaths with Preta.

Thus,

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The Third Form.

Sword of Submerged Death.

"Hunger is earth. Thirst is waves. To you, suffocation is the father's last breath! Land, sea, and air are already yours. Child from beyond! What is winter to you."

I gathered 96 people who died of cold.

Among them was a newborn clinging to its dead mother's body till the end.

I embraced the corpse until I froze.

Thus,

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The Fourth Form.

Sword of Frostbitten Death.

"....."

Dawn faded. Morning passed. The day progressed.

The world had spent a day,

And I had witnessed 293 deaths.

"Child. Your sword is..."

The Heavenly Demon slowly opened her lips.

"Truly, it's ever-changing."

The way she looked at me had also changed.

"Every person has their own tendencies. In martial arts, the life of the practitioner is reflected. It's an unchangeable habit. Especially with the Demonic Heavenly God Art, but you, child... are diverse. Truly rich."

"Ah. I often hear that I have a variety of charms."

"....."

"Sorry. Was that nonsense?"

"No. It was utter nonsense."

"That's a bit harsh."

"To be honest, it was completely nonsensical."

That so. Utter nonsense, then-.

If it's utter nonsense, so be it-.

"Understanding all human suffering is difficult. Even if understood, experiencing all sufferings to their extreme is... very hard. But watching you perform the Demonic Heavenly God Art, it's as if... ...hmm?"

The Heavenly Demon furrowed her brows. She turned her head.

"...Someone is coming."

Someone was approaching from where she looked. It couldn't be a zombie since it was still broad daylight, and in this world that had already ended, it couldn't be an intruder either. It was the Head of the Martial Alliance and Viper. Viper was carrying the Head of the Martial Alliance across the snowfield.

"Hmm."

The Heavenly Demon sniffled.

"What brings this old fool here? And what's with that pitiful state? Ha. Have you finally accepted that you're a senile old man?"

"Shut it."

Lying on Viper's back, the Head of the Martial Alliance spoke.

"I came here worried about you. Ugh!"

"Worried? Worried about me? Even a passing zombie would laugh. You're weaker than me, an old fool, and you think you're in a position to worry about me?....."

"Demon. Haven't you received the Nine Bows yet?"

"....."

"Ugh. I knew it, I knew it! I knew this would happen."

The Heavenly Demon clamped her mouth shut.

I wondered in my mind.

'What's the Nine Bows?'

-It's a ritual performed in the martial world when establishing a master-disciple relationship.

The Sword Emperor explained.

-Each sect has slightly different rituals. Some literally bow nine times, others three times.... I'm not sure how the Demonic Cult does it. It's a secret and sacred ceremony.

'How was it in your sect?'

-Well, you get hit on the head nine times by your master. If you endure, that's the Nine Bows. I lasted until the 63rd hit, a record in my sect's history. Cool, right?

I realized why the Sword Emperor was crazy.

Crazy ones start from the sect itself.

".....It's noisy. When to accept a disciple is my decision."

The Heavenly Demon spoke bluntly.

"It's not a matter for you to interfere."

"Nonsense. It's definitely something I must interfere with!"

The Head of the Martial Alliance got off Viper's back. He glared fiercely at the Heavenly Demon.

"Because you're not accepting a disciple out of guilt for me!"

"Huh? What are you saying....."

"We are the only two left in the martial world. You're the only demonic practitioner, and I'm the only orthodox. If you alone take a disciple, it means the martial world will be left only with a disciple of the Demonic Cult. What does that mean? It's as if you've won the Great Orthodox-Demonic War without fighting!"

"....."

"You and I vowed to settle this ourselves. Broke the oath out of guilt, aren't you, for not taking that young lad as your disciple!"

Hmm.

'...That's a reason too.'

Taking a disciple alone in the same situation.

Considering the Heavenly Demon's feelings, she might indeed feel guilty towards the Head of the Martial Alliance.

But,

"Tsk tsk, such unnecessary loyalty!"

"....."

"You knew I would do this, so you acted first."

The Head of the Martial Alliance patted Viper's shoulder.

Viper smirked and scratched his cheek.

"Well. That's how it is."

The Heavenly Demon's eyes widened.

"No, old man... you couldn't have taken that child as..."

"Yes! From today, he's my official disciple!"

"How dare you do this to me!?"

The Heavenly Demon lunged. Thud thud bang! The two masters rolled in the snow, fighting like dogs.

"How dare you belittle my earnest intentions! You treat it as nothing.....!"

"Quiet! If destiny has come, thank the gods and accept it! Avoiding it because you're wary of me isn't right!"

"What about the Great Orthodox-Demonic War!"

"Must it always be just us two in the Great War? If our disciples fight, that's also a Great War!"

"I won't accept it unless it's with you!"

"Always so extreme, just like a Demon! Just because it's divided, does the world really divide?"

"I see the world as an ocean, but what I see is ice! It divides as it's cut!"

"Then melt it!"

"That's why there's the fire of demonic way! A demonic practitioner is the kindling!"

"Then add more kindling!"

"Axe Sage, you...! Always like an orthodox, just hanging on to words...!"

"That's how it is!"

The woman grabbed the old man's collar.

The old man, in turn, grabbed her hair and glared.

Their argument went on like that. As they tumbled around, two different worlds clashed with a metallic sound. In the midst of such a petty dogfight, the worlds still found their place.

Leaving the two to fight, I looked at Viper.

"It's unexpected."

"What is?"

"Well, someone like you, a 'real' one, taking someone as a master, I mean... "

I couldn't say it directly.

I circled around it.

"You're the master of Celestial Martial Guild. Is it okay for a master to take a new master?"

"Damn. If there's a place to dance, dance. If there's a master to learn from, seek learning. I'm not idle enough to fuss over every detail."

Viper smiled, a manly smile settling on his rugged face.

Hmm.

"Viper."

"Why?"

"I'm being quite frank with you. If you were coerced into it, or if you took on the Head of the Martial Alliance as a master out of sympathy or half-hearted determination, you'll regret it."

The two martial artists are still clashing, making noise.

Viper's situation, being pushed by his disciples into the Heavenly Demon Records, is different.

Such actions would be an insult to these two sects.

Unforgivable.

".....I don't quite understand what you're saying."

Viper scratched his cheek and winked his one eye.

"Damn, what's this King of Death babbling about? If you want to check something, use your sword."

With a snap, Viper raised his sword.

"It won't be easy."

There was an easy way to check. If I opened Viper's psychological window, it would become clear.

But instead of doing that, I quietly said,

"Viper."

"What?"

"Have you ever experienced starvation?"

Viper blinked his one eye.

"What?"

At that moment, I dashed forward.

Chapter 77: Song of Light and Shadow (3)

I charged forward.

Raised my sword.

And slashed down.

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The First Form.

Sword of Starving Death.

My body became a starving farmer, my sword a pickaxe. As my blade struck, the air crumbled like dry mud.

Crumbling, crumbling, and in the crumbling void, Viper's head appeared.

“What.....!”

Viper flinched, his one eye filled with astonishment. His shoulders moved to counterattack but then stopped, and in the next moment, his hips shifted, choosing to dodge instead.

A farmer's pickaxe never misses the ground.

My sword cleaved through the air. Viper moved back, and as he did, the air he vacated sucked in with a whoosh.

Boom!

The air split and burst, and snowflakes swirled in a whirlwind. It was winter. The air that scraped the nostrils was terribly dry as the wind carried the snow.

"---Damn."

Viper lifted his sword. Between the flurries, his one eye shone through. In the sole eye of the surviving Head of the Celestial Martial Guild, shock swirled.

"What is this,"

I charged again.

Once more, I raised my sword.

And slashed down.

"This," Viper dodged my blade again. "This crap," Boom, the bursting sound and rising snowflakes. "Damn it," Each time I swung my sword, Viper dodged, forced to evade, "Damn," and whirlwinds rose in his place.

"Bloody hell!"

I was about to charge again but stopped.

Or more precisely, stumbled to a halt.

I wasn't breathing. I didn't realize it. "Huff," Dry air assaulted my throat. My lungs churned. "Huh," Each breath twisted my insides, causing pain. My body trembled.

But I did not let go of my sword.

A single exchange.

One clash had ended.

"Damn, almost died there..."

Viper, sweating profusely, looked at me.

"King of Death, I thought you were all talk... but your swordplay is quite something. Damn. What the hell? That was like a series of [Eternal Demon Swords]."

"That's right, my disciple! Truly, a demonic ferocity that freezes and shatters the world – [Eternal Demon Sword]!"

The Head of the Martial Alliance, who had been brawling with the Heavenly Demon, shouted.

The [Eternal Demon Sword] Viper spoke of and the [Eternal Demon Sword] the Head of the Martial Alliance referred to were separated by an insurmountable fourth-dimensional wall. That wall was imperceptible without the art of mind reading.

Heavenly Demon, too, was unaware of this wall. She clicked her tongue.

“Even with only one eye, you're quite perceptive.”

“Of course! Though slightly aged, I'm a true genius with the real eye of insight. Otherwise, why would this Great Steel Cauldron Axe take me as a disciple?”

The Head of the Martial Alliance boasted, then glanced at me slyly.

“Hmm. You, too, seem to have picked quite a talent. To think he could wield such a terrifying demonic sword after such a short time as your disciple, ha. He might surpass even the Four Demon Lords – a truly fearsome seed of a demonic ruler!”

“That's... I haven't accepted him as a disciple yet...”

“Come on! Are you still saying that?!”

"....."

Heavenly Demon fell silent.

‘Right.’

Breathing heavily, I thought.

‘This isn't about defeating Viper or him defeating me.’

The purpose of this duel.

‘To get Heavenly Demon to acknowledge me.’

In this respect, the Head of the Martial Alliance and I had the same goal.

To give Heavenly Demon, who was just waiting for destruction, a future.

The Head of the Martial Alliance chuckled.

“My disciple!”

“Oh, Master!”

Viper responded with vigor, and the Head of the Martial Alliance shouted,

“Let me give you some advice! Listen carefully!”

“What...”

Heavenly Demon opened her mouth.

“What, you old fool! What are you doing now!”

“Why? Is there a problem? If she's not your disciple, then what does it matter?”

“That's not the point... It's rude to give advice during a duel! Even in a game of Go, it's impolite for someone else to interfere, let alone during a duel between two warriors!”

“Two warriors?”

The Head of the Martial Alliance laughed heartily, stroking his beard.

“To my eyes, I see only a green demonic seed and a proud successor of the orthodox path. It's even stated in the great laws that you can team up to defeat a demon. No problem at all.”

“Just look at this old fool...!”

"Ha ha."

The Head of the Martial Alliance boisterously declared.

“My disciple! That green demon, though his strikes are profound, seems to lack the stamina to maintain his ferocity! Don't confront him directly. Evade and wait for his Ki to drop!”

“Hey hey, Master! Is that true?”

Viper smirked.

“I already figured that much out long ago! Got any more practical advice?”

“No. That's how you speak? Is that the dignity of a disciple of the orthodox path you're showing?”

Heavenly Demon gritted her teeth. She was fuming for several reasons.

“Is that really the style of the last disciple you're willing to accept, you demon? Will you still demand the elegance of the Central Plains from this foreign youth? Or are you worried that your green demonic seed will be crushed by my disciple...?”

“This...”

“My disciple! Use the [Filling Butterfly Sword] and [Order of Life and Death]! It will work instantly!”

Viper's thick eyebrows twitched.

Underneath, his one eye was filled with profound realization.

“Indeed. [Filling Butterfly Sword] and [Order of Life and Death].”

“Yes! And if you add the essence of [Divine Martial Heaven], that would be even better, but can you do it?”

“Damn, of course! Master. I am the Head of the Celestial Martial Guild, Viper!”

Viper, with a grand gesture, cleared his nostrils and grabbed his sword.

Meanwhile, I finally managed to catch my breath.

Repositioning myself, Viper teasingly asked me,

“King of Death.”

“Yes.”

“You asked if I've ever experienced starvation?”

“That's right. Viper.”

“Is that your martial art?”

A sharp question, as piercing as the look in his one eye.

I regulated my breathing and answered.

“That was the essence of my strike just now.”

“That seemed likely.”

Viper chuckled. Then he tilted his head, shifting that smile.

“Let me ask you in return, King of Death. What do you think martial arts are?”

A discussion about martial arts by the Head of Chun-Moon Guild.

It was like the Inquisitor discussing God, the Sword Saint discussing the sword, or the future Master Alchemist discussing medicine. It was something to sit down and earnestly listen to.

I would have done just that, had I not met the Sword Emperor, learned demonic arts from Heavenly Demon, and more importantly, not read the man's psychology before this.

“Answer me!”

Viper lowered his stance and raised his sword.

Like a venomous snake ready to strike with its fangs bared.

“To step forward! To swing your arm! To throw a punch!”

And he moved.

No---he flowed.

Like he himself became liquid, flowing smoothly and gracefully from a higher place to a lower one, he came towards me.

Flowing like that, then suddenly, Ka-ching...!

“Martial arts is...”

From below to above, he unleashed an upward slash which I barely blocked.

Immediately after, Viper turned his sword around. The blades sparked as they collided. Viper then straightened his sword, aiming it skyward in a straight line, and slightly twisted his wrist. Tilted it.

And poured it down.

“To land a blow on the punk in front of you!”

It poured down.

“That's all there is to it! Punk!”

A torrent of sword strikes enveloped me.

“Damn it,” Ka-ching! As soon as I blocked, “Ah,” Ka-ching! The next strike, “Uh!” Then another, “Damn,” The relentless sword strikes chewed at my blade, bit into it, forcefully creating a gap. “Uh,” And then, whoosh...! The blade that finally penetrated nicked my cheek.

“Oh no...!”

Blood burst out. I barely stepped back a few paces, but,

“I won't let you escape!”

Viper, like a snake sinking its fangs into its prey, smoothly coiled and clung onto me.

Again from below to above, I launched an attack.

“Uh,”

As soon as I blocked, he rode the momentum up, unleashing a shower of sword strikes.

"Damn it,"

Indeed, he is strong.

It's no wonder why he's ranked among hunters as a martial artist. This character Viper!

“Hey hey, King of Death! You started with the first strike but that's all you've got?”

Viper scoffed.

The fury that surged within me erupted from someone else's mouth.

“Damn it..!”

It was Heavenly Demon.

“You brat!”

She yelled at me.

“What are you doing! It’s a downpour! It’s water! Doesn’t his sword resemble pouring rain!”

Heavenly Demon, who had been grinding her teeth at the Head of the Martial Alliance's provocations, finally raised her voice. Clenching her fist, she shouted at me.

“What's there to be afraid of! Catch it and drink it!”

Heavenly Demon had accepted this duel.

Me, becoming the successor of the Demonic Cult, and Viper, inadvertently becoming the successor of the Orthodox Faction. She acknowledged our fight. This was a battle between the Demonic Cult and the Orthodox Faction, and we were the 'representatives' of Heavenly Demon and the Head of the Martial Alliance.

"Ha."

I laughed.

“Understood!”

Holding the sword in reverse grip, I raised my stance.

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The Second Form.

Sword of Parched Death.

I blocked Viper's pouring strikes before they could even start, and reversing them, I drew them in along the path I desired. I let them flow.

And poured them onto the bare ground.

"Ah."

A wasted move by Viper.

A move wasted by me.

As our gazes crossed for a moment, the voices of the old man and the woman intertwined.

"My disciple! Be like decomposed leaf soil! Become like wet earth..."

"Ha! Just turn it into a puddle!"

Viper crouched into a defensive stance and I twisted my sword to the side simultaneously.

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The Third Form.

Sword of Submerged Death.

Slightly angling it.

Diagonally horizontal, Ka-ching! Delivering the strikes, Ka-ching! Matching Viper's breath, Ka-ching! Syncing with his blink, Ka-ching! And then,

Off-beat at the end,

Shush, Bang...!!

"Damn!"

Viper, cut on the flank, gritted his teeth.

The Head of the Martial Alliance shouted.

“Harsh! Retreat!”

“Stick to him!”

Heavenly Demon yelled.

Viper followed the Head of the Martial Alliance's voice to retreat, and I followed Heavenly Demon's voice to stick close.

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The Fourth Form.

Sword of Frostbitten Death.

“Damn it!”

Viper got angry.

“This fight is crap!”

“Viper, you're no pushover either!”

“No, really, it's crap! King of Death, were you molasses in a past life? How do you stick so closely?”

“And you, Viper, were you a dog in a past life?”

As we both pondered each other's past lives, Viper and I exchanged blades. Snowflakes burst around us, and the winter wind howled.

The outside arena grew even hotter.

“Break it off properly, my disciple!”

“Strike now!”

“Don't block! Use Lazy Mule Roll to evade! Then follow with Ground Hands...”

“Aha! Don’t evade that! Let it hit!”

The wounds grew.

They deepened.

Blood spattered, flesh flew.

Both Viper and I became bloodied. The burst wounds quickly turned into scars in the cold wind.

“Ah, you damn demon! Always meddling like this!”

The Head of the Martial Alliance, still laughing, scolded.

“This snake-filled old fool...”

Heavenly Demon, also laughing, rebuked.

As their laughter intersected, Viper and I’s sword strikes intertwined.

Neither Viper nor I intended to kill each other. There was no killing intent in the exchange between Heavenly Demon and the Head of the Martial Alliance. Therefore, this was not a life-and-death battle.

It was not a fight to kill someone.

But definitely, it was a fight that killed everyone.

“Huff, hah! Ha!”

I became Heavenly Demon's sword. Fully infected, unable to fight with full strength unless she poured all her Ki, I fought on her behalf.

It was a landscape she had lost.

“Haaaaah!”

Viper became the Head of the Martial Alliance's sword. Fully infected, unable to swing his axe without breaking his vital energy, he charged with full force on his behalf.

It was a dream he could no longer dream.

"....."

Every landscape fades.

No matter how brilliant a dream, it eventually loses its color.

Humans decline.

"Uh....."

At some point.

The Heavenly Demon became silent.

The once-proclaimed greatest woman in martial arts slowly covered her face.

“Such annoying creatures...”

A declining genre.

And a declining world.

“I let it all go long ago. Why does it come back again...”

Only humans can abandon humans.

Only humans can choose not to abandon humans.

"What to do....."

How much time had passed?

When both Viper and I could no longer even lift a sword, our duel ended. There was no winner. Even more so, no loser.

"....."

I sheathed my sword.

Breathing heavily, I walked with heavy steps. Across the snowfield. Walking up to Heavenly Demon, who stood with her face covered, I bent my trembling knees.

"Heavenly Demon."

I leaned on the snowy ground with a shaking hand.

"I wish to become your disciple."

I want to be your landscape.

"I wish to take you as my master."

To be your unfading dream.

“My alias is the King of Death.”

To connect your landscape to mine, your dream to mine, your life to mine.

“My real name is Kim Gong-Ja.”

In an era mocking all seriousness.

To be the pillar that prevents anyone from ridiculing you.

“Please accept me as your disciple.”

Please keep living.

That's what I meant.

"....."

The sky was tinged with sunset.

Snowflakes were falling on the snowy field.

“I am the Heavenly Demon, So BaekHyang.”

From the sky to the snowy field, snowflakes fluttered in the wind for a long time. Countless snowflakes. Among them, one drifted and fell onto the black hair of a woman, melting the white into the black.

“Perform the Nine Bows.”

Heavenly Demon opened her lips.

“I will accept you as my last disciple.”

Chapter 78: The Scent of Snow (1)

.....Baraya, Baraya, Agabaraya.....

.....The mind is a candle; burn it here.....

An ancient prayer passed down through the ages.

Just as monks chant Amitabha, the people of the Demonic Cult recited Baraya.

.....Baraya, Baraya, Agabaraya.....

.....The mind is a candle; burn it here.....

No one knew what 'Baraya' meant. Not even So BaekHyang. Nor the old woman who brought her into the Demonic Cult. They recited it without understanding.

To So BaekHyang, Baraya was the song of the common people. It was a scream. Screams inherently lack meaning. Isn't it natural that the song of the common folk lacks meaning too?

The ability to recite without understanding.

The fact that one doesn't need to know much to scream in agony.

Thus, while people need to learn rituals to behave respectfully, and ethics to act justly, screams are the exception. Even the uneducated and untrained common folk can scream.

.....Baraya.....

.....Baraya.....

.....Agabaraya.....

Screams were a universal essence.

The world seen by So BaekHyang was screaming.

-There is nothing more for me to teach you.

The old woman said.

-Come forth.

-Where shall I go?

So BaekHyang asked. Her voice was soft. She had grown up now.

The 11-year-old child was no longer here. Dark hair, dark eyes, dark robes. The woman was as dark as a midnight well.

She wished to become hell.

To be the hell of people, the woman deepened herself that much.

-Where do you want to go?

-To where the hungry are. To where the thirsty are, where people are suffocating, where they are cold, addicted to drugs, ill, whipped in government offices, burnt to death.

So BaekHyang looked at the void.

-That's where I want to go.

-.....

Far away, far away.

The sound of prayers from outside the main hall reached them. The cultists were praying and bowing. Their voices. Their tremors. Baraya, Baraya, Agabaraya..... These vibrations traveled along the wooden floors.

-Then BaekHyang.

The old woman spoke.

-This entire world is your destination.

So BaekHyang, 21 years old.

Made her appearance in the martial realm.

That winter, 31 martial artists, 47 government officials, and 55 local nobles lost their heads.

"Our cult's rituals are special."

Heavenly Demon quietly dismissed everyone. She sent the Head of the Martial Alliance and Viper away. She and I headed somewhere alone.

"Do you know how to perform the Nine Bows?"

"No, I don't."

"In our cult, a disciple bows nine times to greet their master."

We were headed towards a cave. A cave with hot springs. It was a familiar place to me, like home, but where Heavenly Demon took me was unfamiliar.

A place never allowed for our group.

Deep within the cave, Heavenly Demon walked.

"Hmm."

Heavenly Demon waved her hand. Her wide sleeve fluttered once, and candles lit up in the darkness. Countless candles illuminated the cave's stalactites and stalagmites.

"But the ritual doesn't end with bowing. Whether to accept each of the nine bows is entirely up to the master. A master can demand the Nine Bows as many times as they wish until they are satisfied."

Heavenly Demon smiled faintly.

"It all depends on my heart."

“Is there a specific criterion?”

“There is.”

At the end of the passage.

“Originally, etiquette is more about the heart than appearance. Child, the reason we choose times and places in etiquette is merely because human hearts are fickle and light.”

There was a huge library.

As Heavenly Demon took each step, candles lit up beside her footsteps. With each candle, the true face of the library became clearer. The high cave ceiling, filled with books and bamboo slips piled up to the top.

“It's not easy to capture the lightness of heart.”

Heavenly Demon walked.

Her ankle was illuminated by a candle.

“That's why people rely on sacred times and holy places. They rely on time and place. Leaning on heaven and earth to capture their light hearts.”

“Heavenly Demon. What is this place?”

“This is the secret martial arts library of our cult.”

The Heavenly Demon spoke.

“And also of the Ten Sect Alliance and the Five Noble Clans. I call it the Heavenly Martial Library.”

The Guardian Spirit spoke.

-Wow, this is epic. A treasure trove! Zombie, I'll check out the martial arts manuals! Don't worry about me, do your thing. Drag it out if you can until I read them all!

The martial arts-obsessed Guardian Spirit dashed off.

-Woohoo! Now the martial techniques of this world are all mine! I'll sweep them all up! Hahaha!

Unaware or indifferent to the ghost rampaging in her library, Heavenly Demon remained calm.

“I debuted in the martial realm at the age of twenty-one. Do you guess what my first thought was upon entering the martial world?”

“Uh... maybe something like, 'I'll smash all those annoying Orthodox martial artists' heads!'”

“That was my third thought.”

“To prove the superiority of the Demonic Cult...?”

“That was my second thought.”

Heavenly Demon winked with her left eye.

“I mean this. I've always hated the term 'Martial Realm.' It refers to a place where martial artists are revered. But why only martial artists in such a world? There are boatmen, farmers, merchants, and prostitutes. A realm consists of numerous trees, each with its own name and grain. Yet, the Ten Sect Alliance and the Five Noble Clans dared to call it a realm of martial arts.”

She didn't like it.

Heavenly Demon murmured quietly.

“So I decided to take away their 'martial arts.'”

“Taking away martial arts means...?”

“They worshipped their martial arts manuals like holy relics, so I plundered them all!”

Heavenly Demon laughed mischievously.

Her smile was full of playfulness.

“Haha. I still remember the faces of those Kunlun Taoists.

They begged, saying they would twist their necks but pleaded to spare at least the manuals containing the mysteries of Cloud Dragon! As who I am, I gladly buried those Taoists in the ground, leaving only their heads sticking out. And then in front of their eyes, I grabbed the manuals and ran off!"

Wow.

Our master really has character.

"For decades, it was like that. Now this place is Kunlun, Wudang, Sichuan School, Jiegal Clan, Maoshan School. All martial arts of the world form a forest here. It's fitting to call it 'Martial Forest.' I..."

Heavenly Demon slowly sat down.

"I want to accept your bows here."

"I'll perform them."

"Yes."

“I won’t mind the form. Child from the outer land. Just bow as your body follows.”

So I did.

I took off my shoes and placed them politely. I knelt down. As I was about to touch my forehead to the ground, Heavenly Demon’s voice flowed.

“Perform all nine bows, but fill each bow with a different heart.”

Each different heart.

“The first bow shall contain the heart of starvation.”

“Understood?”

I see.

“Yes, I understand.”

The bond between master and disciple was indeed profound.

In the Demonic Cult, this ritual wasn't just about bowing nine times.

The Nine Bows.

It was no different from practicing Demonic Heavenly God Art.

“Hoo...”

Slowly, I took a deep breath.

I drew a picture in the center of my heart.

A farmer swinging a hoe. The riverside. The mud.

「Hunger is children waiting for the sun.」

I bowed.

Heavenly Demon nodded. She accepted my first bow. There was no deceit in my hunger, making it a sufficient ritual.

“The stages of the Demonic Cult are divided into four.”

Heavenly Demon imparted an old teaching to me, soon to be a disciple.

“The first stage is Novice Demon. A Novice Demon is one who can speak of their own pain. Cultists in our cult speak with swords, not words. Thus, the stage of Novice Demon refers to those who can express their pain with a sword.”

I performed the bow again.

Following hunger, it was time for thirst, so I drew seawater in my mind.

“The second stage is Extreme Demon. An Extreme Demon is someone who can speak of others' pain. Therefore, the stage of Extreme Demon refers to those who can empathize and alleviate others' pain with their sword.”

Heavenly Demon quietly acknowledged my second bow.

I then thought of a father who drowned while saving his child and bowed again.

“The third stage is Cathartic Demon.”

Heavenly Demon nodded again.

She willingly accepted my third bow.

“A Cathartic Demon understands everyone's pain. As they meet people while walking, they can feel what causes each person pain.”

I performed the fourth bow.

“Reaching this stage is extremely rare! In the history of our cult, there have been fewer than five Cathartic Demons. I am one of them.”

Heavenly Demon received my bow once more.

“The final stage is God Demon. A God Demon not only understands the pain of all humans but also of all beings. They can speak of the sufferings of the entire world. However, this stage is unproven! It's merely speculated that such a stage exists. No one has actually reached it.”

I was about to perform the fifth bow when she stopped me.

“Stop.”

“Do it again.”

“.....”

The fifth form of Demonic Heavenly God Art is the Sword of Noxious Death, symbolizing those dying from poisoning. I hadn't yet mastered this form. Heavenly Demon softly said,

“Bow again.”

I bowed.

“Bow again.”

I bowed.

“Bow again.”

Again. And again. And again. And again.

Sweat formed on my forehead. My back was drenched.

Heavenly Demon's expression remained calm.

“Bow again.”

It took 336 times to crudely contain the heart of those poisoned to death.

To conjure the heart of those who died from disease in my mind, 189 bows.

To express the heart of those beaten to death, 510 bows.

I was drenched in sweat.

Silently, I knelt and bowed.

“...A truly upright child.”

Heavenly Demon smiled.

“There are children who are naturally upright from birth and those who become upright through their will. Child from the outer land, you surely belong to the latter. What life have you led to become so pure?”

Her smile carried a tinge of sadness.

“Why strive to purify oneself in living...”

The candlelight flickered.

The flickering light made our shadows tremble.

As they trembled, Heavenly Demon's shadow overlapped with mine.

“If the sun represents life, then the shadow is pain.”

The lean shadow spoke.

“While each human's outline in life is separate, pain overlaps and multiplies. Thus, humans are not one through living but one through suffering.”

It was the doctrine of the shadow.

“If you say you wish to share pain with someone, it means you're willing to spend a lifetime with that person. Thus, those who get hurt by everyone only wish to be with everyone. Child.”

A doctrine to be passed on by the only remaining mouth in this world.

“Gong-Ja.”

The mouth spoke to me.

“People not only decide who to hurt but can also choose who to be hurt by. The commoners you seek will not be pure. The group you save will not be noble. The one you love will not be perfect.”

The shadow whispered.

The whisper of the shadow carried the warmth of the candle.

“Yet, if you willingly accept pain from everyone, if you bear your bare skin to them, when they scratch you, it’s just them holding you too tightly, remember that.”

“Life is pain. But it is uniquely human pain. Baraya, Baraya, Agabaraya. Your heart is a burning flame. Burn it and see the shadows of others.”

The wax dripped.

“The eighth form of Demonic Heavenly God Art is the Sword of Scorching Death.”

It flowed.

“Gong-Ja. Perform your bow with the heart of one burnt to death.”

I did.

「 But you know I'm the Flame Emperor. 」

「 My name is Yoo Soo-Ha. 」

「 Farewell. 」

I bowed.

" "

Quietly.

The shadow closed its mouth.

336 times for poisoned death. 189 for disease. 510 for beating.

For 1035 times echoing 'bow again' in the cave, this time, it didn't come. My Sword of Scorching Death seemed sufficient in just one bow.

".....So it is."

The trail of wax.

A voice seeped into where the mark lay.

"The last sword of Demonic Heavenly God Art is not set. It's a void form. Each leader of the cult engraves their own death into this final form. Thus, the ninth form of Demonic Heavenly God Art varies greatly depending on the practitioner."

The place for one's own death.

"Bow the Ninth Bow with your own death."

"....."

I...

During 4090 instances of suicide, I...

Felt pain in my neck.

My throat ached from stabbing it with a dagger. My hands trembled. My arms shook. Afraid that my trembling and shaking would cause the blade to miss its mark, intensifying the pain, I wrapped blue tape around the dagger's handle.

I wrapped the same blue tape around my right and left hands. Secured it. It seemed like it would stop the trembling. The day for my return had reached 4050 days. But I died 4090 times. I had to die. Because I almost gave up halfway. It was an escape for a few days.

But there was a person I couldn't forgive.

I couldn't live on forgiving that person.

So, I wrapped the tape again. The slower the death, the more my resolve faded, and my decision slowed down. The more it prolonged, the more days I had to die. I cut off any stray thoughts. Ignored any hesitations.

Desperately wanting to live, I desperately died.

Suicide.

I drew that as my final image and bowed to Heavenly Demon.

"....."

The shadow trembled. I realized a bit late that Heavenly Demon had stood up. By the time I realized, she was already embracing my shoulders.

“Gong-Ja,”

In the cave, our two shadows overlapped.

“My disciple.”

“.....Yes.”

“You are my disciple.”

“Yes.”

“Where you came from does not matter to me. Wherever you go, wherever you are, you are the disciple of Heavenly Demon So BaekHyang. Our doctrine is in your heart. Even if the martial realm perishes and the world comes to an end, as long as your heart does not stop, the Heavenly Demonic Cult will continue.”

I spoke.

“---Yes, Master.”

My throat hurt.

They were painful days.

Now, I knew.

Chapter 79: The Scent of Snow (2)

The Heavenly Demon and I were able to return to our companions after a long while.

"....."

"....."

Both of us were solemn.

While walking through the cave, the Heavenly Demon said, "...It's very dark in front of us, be careful where you step." That was her only remark. I simply replied, "Yes." That concluded our conversation. The face of the woman I glimpsed beside us was steeped in worry.

The Heavenly Demon, no.

What could Master be thinking?

‘Character Window.’

There's a saying that a disciple should not even step on the shadow of their master, but my curiosity was too strong to resist. Could it be that my Master has become cautious because I showed weakness? That was not what I wanted.

+

Name: So BaekHyang

Favorability: 85

Preferred Genres: [Martial Arts]

Disliked Genres: [Classics], [Mythology], [History], [Fairy Tales]

Preferred Characters: [Commoners], [Rivals]

Disliked Characters: [Oppressors], [Deceivers], [Playboys]

Preferred Plots: [Full-strength Battles]

Disliked Plots: [Escape], [Forgetfulness], [Meaningless Death]

Psychological State: 'Let's see. Judging by the remaining Ki... if I use it sparingly, I can live for another year and a half. One and a half years! Oh, it's tough! Within a year and a half, I have to pass on everything I know to my disciple...'

+

Hmm....

Hmm.

My face felt hot. I felt guilty for intruding on my Master's thoughts... but that wasn't all. Shame. A touch of emotion. I wasn't sure why, but my face was burning.

Ah. Am I really so weak to people's kindness?

-The heavens are with us today! It's our lucky day! What a break for us zombies!

Of course, the emotion didn't last long.

A non-human ghost had shattered all tranquility.

-What! Even in a different world, the heads of the martial world are no different. Reading a martial arts manual after so long feels refreshing. Ha! Oh, right. Did you properly perform the Nine Bows?

"....."

-What's with that glum face? Even your already unattractive face looks worse, zombie. You really need to work on your appearance.

If I had a favorability score, it would have just dropped by -10 points.

Ghosts really don't understand the human heart.

[Shiny has stopped sobbing and looks up at the Hero.]

Shiny, who had been trembling all this while, finally stopped.

Indeed, it's the Constellation that knows the human heart.

My favorability towards Shiny increased by 30.

“Oh, you're back?”

Viper spoke to us. His one eye immediately turned to look at me.

“Is the Nine Bows ceremony over?”

“Yes. I am now officially a disciple of the Demonic Cult.”

“Good. Congratulations.”

“So, how did you, Viper, come to form a master-disciple relationship with the Head of the Martial Alliance?”

Viper smirked and crossed his arms.

“Well, it just happened.”

“That’s what you said before.”

“What, you want to hear the whole story?”

“If that's possible.”

Viper crossed his arms, showing a sly smile that seemed to hold many secrets, then shook his head.

“Sorry, but it's impossible.”

Viper continued calmly.

“I just asked for his teachings. There wasn’t really anything special about it.”

Hmm.

Since the duel was over, I decided to look at Viper's psychological window.

『Tch. An old man nearing death... No, he’s now my master.

How could I refuse or say anything when he, knowing his life is short, wants to give a reason to live to the Heavenly Demon?

And that's from someone whose skills are far superior to mine...』

I looked at Viper feeling like I’d been hit on the head.

Viper.

He was a ‘real man.’

『Ah~, maybe because I lied, but the memories are flooding back.

The Head of the Martial Alliance and the Heavenly Demon occasionally spar, right? I've always thought those guys were something special.

So, we sat down and talked about martial arts.

Suddenly, the Head of the Martial Alliance goes, 'Wow! Really? To think there's such a talent in the outside land! How lucky can it be!' and he was shocked.

I was just scratching the back of my head, thinking, well, it's not much---

Then the Medicine King interrupts, saying, 'Ah, this Celestial Master Guild master might not look it, but he is a valuable [comrade]. It's only natural for someone of his skill, character, and looks.'

The Apothecary, her face turning red, chimed in,

'Yes... uh, Celestial Martial Guild ma... no, not that! I didn't say anything! Anyway, Celestial Martial Guild Master is a top-ranked person in our world... kind of like an idol! Ahaha, ha, ha, oh, I said something embarrassing---!' while covering her cheeks.

I could only stare into the distance amidst this sudden downpour of facts.

Then the Head of the Martial Alliance, as if everything made sense, nodded,

'Hey, hey, do me a favor! This genius, please become my last disciple before I die!'

Ah~ this is troublesome.

I just wanted to live quietly, but why is my life never peaceful...』

Yeah.

That's enough.

Viper.

He was, after all, a 'true man.'

A man of culture.

"King of Death. And the leader of the Demonic Cult."

The greatest 'true man' of this era shrugged his shoulders and spoke.

"I have one piece of good news and one piece of sad news to tell you."

"What is it?"

"We succeeded."

The answer to my question didn't come from Viper. It was a much more vague voice. The Apothecary's voice. Wearing thick-rimmed glasses, the Apothecary was walking towards us.

“The cure. We’ve successfully developed it. King of Death.”

"....."

The reason I didn't respond immediately wasn't because I was moved by the announcement of the development's completion.

The Apothecary is a genius. I had no doubt she would eventually develop a cure; it was just a matter of how long it would take.

I had spent a lot of time learning Demonic Heavenly God Art. With the Medicine King's help, it was about time for the Apothecary to develop the cure.

“What? A cure has been developed?”

Master looked surprised.

“Is that true? If you’re lying, confess now. I am forgiving of one lie.”

“...Yes. It’s true.”

The Apothecary said.

“In fact, it was developed yesterday. We observed it for one more day because we needed to observe the clinical trial.”

“Clinical trial? What’s that?”

“It's to see whether the cure works properly or not. We used a corpse donated by the Heavenly Demon and the Head of the Martial Alliance for a day... Sorry. It was the body of the former Wudang sect leader.”

The Apothecary seemed to be forcing a blank expression.

“It had been dead for a long time, so revival was impossible, but... the zombie virus... the pandemic was cured, and it returned to a normal corpse. Yes. There’s nothing wrong with the cure.”

“If that's true, it’s a huge cause for celebration!”

Master was overjoyed.

“Amazing! The doctors and taoists of the martial realm tried everything, but they gave up. To think that just two people found a solution, it's no ordinary feat!”

“No. It's thanks to the material you provided, King of Death...”

“Enough with the modesty. Immediately treat that old man, the Great Axe Sage!”

Master grabbed the Apothecary's hands.

Master's joy was palpable in his gestures and body language.

“That old man acts tough and proud, but he doesn't have many days left. He must know that, which is why he took a child of the outside land as his disciple. It's truly a blessing from the Jade Emperor that the cure was developed before the old man passed away!”

“Yes... Of course, I'll treat him. That's why I came here...”

Then I spoke up.

“There's a problem with the cure.”

"....."

“That's the case, isn't it, Miss Apothecary?”

The Apothecary bowed her head. Her complexion was as faint as her voice. From the moment she said, ‘We’ve successfully developed the cure,’ the Apothecary avoided meeting my eyes. I had been feeling uneasy since then.

“No, there's nothing wrong with the cure... I made it myself. It's perfect. But...”

But...

“But what?”

“The Dantian must be destroyed.”

Thud.

A light footstep sounded.

“Demon. I too witnessed the body of the sorcerer returning to normal. Just to be sure, I brought a few more infected with the zombie disease for testing, and the results were the same. The efficacy of this girl's medicine is beyond doubt.”

The Head of the Martial Alliance, the Great Axe Sage.

The elderly man, dressed in white buddhist robes, slowly walked towards us.

“But you know as well. The two of us are already half-dead. Our bodies turned into corpses a long time ago and were forcibly kept alive.”

"....."

Master's face had hardened.

The Head of the Martial Alliance chuckled and stroked his beard.

“Surviving against Heaven's will all this time was an achievement. But it's time to pay the price.”

“...It's been too long since both of you were infected with the zombie disease.”

The Apothecary spoke, opening her lips.

“If someone is not yet infected or was recently infected, a single vaccine dose could cure and prevent the disease. But for you two...”

The Apothary's head drooped as she spoke quickly.

“There's no abnormality above the cervical Ki points. After taking the medicine, you'll return to normal, as you were before the infection. But below the cervical Ki points, your internal energy, what you call vital energy, is indistinguishable from the pathogen... in other words, from the Corrupt Energy.”

The condition of the lower Dantian is especially severe, the Apothecary explained.

“The channels through which your vital energy flows coincide with the paths spread by Corrupt Energy. Simply put, it's like needing to clean a corridor. But the cure is not a delicate tweezer but a blunt broom. You can't separate the dust and sand while sweeping the corridor with a broom. Your corridors are too clogged with dust, especially the lower Dantian is in a terrible state...”

The Dantian is where vital energy and Ki accumulate.

For a martial artist, it's as important as life itself.

“We need to remove all of it.”

“...To remove means.”

Master spoke.

“What do you mean by 'remove'?”

“It has to be eliminated.”

The Apothecary’s voice was strained.

“We will perform surgery.”

“...To remove a tumor from the Dantian? That’s manageable. There will be a loss of energy, but at our level, it can be quickly restored.”

“No. We're going to completely clean the area.”

"....."

“You don't have to doubt the success of the surgery. We've already conducted clinical surgeries. I'm not a surgery specialist, but Medicine King is skilled. I can support it to a feasible extent. So...”

“Their skill in performing the procedure is remarkable.”

The Head of the Martial Alliance interjected.

“I realized that for medical treatment, we should look beyond the martial world to the outside world. Watching from the side, it was miraculous. Demon, take the chance to learn if you can.”

“Namgung Woon.”

“The decision is mine,”

The Head of the Martial Alliance coughed.

“I will undergo the procedure.”

"....."

“Anyway, what I'd lose in terms of Ki is just a handful. There's nothing to regret or lament. It's fortunate that I took a disciple in my old age. Even if my Dantian is removed, I'll have the mental clarity to teach my disciple, and the disciple is a genius who understands ten things from one word.”

The Head of the Martial Alliance looked at his long-time rival.

“We are martial artists. The Martial Way is about the heart. As long as the heart remains, the martial way continues. Isn't that right, BaekHyang?”

Master did not respond.

Throughout the night, the Head of the Martial Alliance underwent the procedure. By dawn, the Apothecary and Medicine King informed us that the surgery was completed.

The surgery was successful.

At dawn, the snowfield embraced the shade's color.

"Master."

"....."

Master stood alone at the entrance of the cave, looking down at the world turned into shadows. His long black sleeves fluttered in the wind.

The scenery was distant.

Master's back seemed even more distant than the landscape.

“Master.”

“...Has the result of the procedure been revealed?”

“Yes.”

“How did it go?”

“It was successful.”

“Is that so?”

“Yes.”

“That's how it is.”

Master's gaze was fixed on the void.

“My disciple.”

“Yes.”

“In my youth, I wanted to cut down all the cold of the world.”

Master spoke.

“Ever since I was young, I detested winter. The snow falling in winter was lamentable. Why should there be seasons in the world, and in each season, a winter that takes lives with its passing, I wondered.”

A world forever frozen in winter.

A woman born with a Glacial Body and Extreme Yin Body hated the season most similar to her.

“I was confident that I could execute those who freeze the world, even if I couldn't cut down the cold of the world with a single sword. I remember when I first emerged in the martial world. It was also in the heart of winter.”

I noticed something different about Master.

A Sword.

Master held a sword in his right hand. There was no crossguard, just the hilt and the blade. Unlike the other transparent swords, Master's sword was a dark ink color.

A sword that refused to become transparent.

I had never seen it before, but I guessed what it was.

“Lethal Demon Blood Sword.....”

“Yes.”

Master murmured softly.

“When I first emerged in the martial realm, I tried something. It was youthful folly. I literally took the world's cold as all things of the world and tried to cut down a snowy mountain.”

Master breathed.

His breath in the dawn was white.

In the white-touched sky, high mountain peaks soared.

“But back then, I couldn't even cut the fringes---.”

Master raised his sword.

“I wonder how it will be now. I'm curious.”

The sword swung.

It was a slow motion.

Master's long sleeves needed time to follow her movements. The black sleeves fluttered freely in the air as the world seemed to pause for a moment. Master's sleeve danced freely in the still air.

“Baraya,”

Sword dance.

“Baraya,”

Sword life.

“Agabaraya,”

The sword priestess swirled with the dance of the sword.

“My heart is a candle.”

And then.

“I shall burn this place.”

The snowy mountain was cut.

A snow peak that held no trees or rocks, meaningless beyond its mere existence, was sliced.

The mountain's scream resembled thunder. Following the echoing scream, a white snowstorm burst forth. The mountain crumbled from the peak, creating waves of snow, which rose and fell in layers. It collapsed and collapsed again. A blizzard, not of the heavens but created by that woman, swept over the dawn.

"....."

Master exhaled.

“Only the peak was cut, and it ended. Although I cut the mountain with my heart, I failed to sever it. This is my final realm.”

“My disciple.”

Master turned to look at me.

A single great mountain was crumbling into white.

“I will undergo the procedure.”

Chapter 80: The Scent of Snow (3)

Master couldn't undergo surgery right away.

"I'm sorry. I need to rest for a bit..."

The Head of the Martial Alliance's procedure had just finished. Both the Apothecary and Medicine King were exhausted from performing the surgery. The Apothecary collapsed from fatigue, and Medicine King silently slipped into a hot spring with his mouth agape.

"....."

Master frowned and looked down at the Head of the Martial Alliance.

"Old man. I came to see you because you lost your Dantian."

“What a remarkable first visitor to my sickbed. Sure, enjoy yourself with those eyes.”

“How do you feel?”

The Head of the Martial Alliance, lying on a straw mat, chuckled.

“I feel light. Like I could ascend to immortality.”

“You're delusional. How can someone who hasn't even undergone a complete transformation think about ascending...”

The Head of the Martial Alliance smirked.

“Your face looks lighter too. Demon, have you decided to undergo the procedure?”

“...Yes.”

Master sighed.

“I just spent a year’s worth of Ki to fully wield my sword. It was the last time in my life that I rampaged with my Ki.”

“Ho!”

The Head of the Martial Alliance’s eyes sparkled.

“That must have been a sight to behold. It’s a pity I couldn’t witness it lying here. So, what did you achieve?”

“I tried to cut down winter but failed. The realm of life and death was far beyond reach.”

“Oh, what a shame. But cheer up. It’s a realm unexplored in history, right? If it were easy, the history of the martial realm would have been overturned six times by now.”

The Head of the Martial Alliance laughed heartily.

Master looked down at the old man’s laughter and spoke.

“Namgung Woon. You...”

“I don’t regret a thing.”

The Head of the Martial Alliance cut him off.

“The world ended like this, but surviving three years was a miracle. Being treated by doctors from the outside world was a miracle. Taking a disciple at the end of my life and continuing the lineage of the orthodox martial realm, which I thought would be severed, was also a miracle! When miracles stack up, isn’t that a miracle itself? I’m just thankful.”

"....."

“Hmm. The only regret is that I couldn’t conclude the Great Orthodox-Demonic War with you, Demon. Well, a perfect life doesn’t exist. Our disciples will handle the rest.”

“Yes. They will.”

Master smiled faintly, a wistful smile. However, when he turned to look at me, his eyes held a firm belief.

“If this is where my life has led, I will accept it.”

Her face was not one of eagerness but of resigned acceptance.

Even the sweetest candy must be melted and swallowed several times.

Was Master savoring the end of her life, breaking it into smaller pieces?

"Hmm."

I nodded.

"Master, I need to step out for a moment."

"Huh? Where is there to go in this world now?"

"Think of your disciple catching some fresh air. Don't worry."

"...Telling me not to worry only makes me more concerned."

Master quietly furrowed her brows.

“Are you getting yourself involved in something dangerous?”

“I will return by the time your procedure is completed.”

I performed a formal bow.

My movements might still be awkward, but my heart was fully in it.

“Please take care during your procedure, Master. When you wake up, your unworthy disciple will be waiting for you.”

Master had accepted her end.

Now it was my turn to give back her life.

I left the cave and crossed the snowfield.

Crossing the snow, I recalled what this world looked like before its destruction. The Martial Realm. Were there thickets there? The Rivers and Lakes. Did water flow there?

“My Lord.”

Across the snowfield.

“I have carried out your command.”

Where once thickets may have grown and rivers flowed, in the middle of the snowfield, Preta was kneeling on one knee.

“Did you find them all?”

“Yes.”

Preta answered, her head bowed. Snowflakes clung to her hair, showing how long she had been waiting there.

“As you commanded, my Lord.”

I had given Preta a task previously.

“There should be martial arts-using zombies scattered around without direction.”

“Find them.”

“Find those in black martial robes and those in white swordsman robes.”

During the past three years of the ongoing Great Orthodox-Demonic War.

Many zombies had 'disappeared.'

The bodies of the Martial Realm were blown by the snowstorms and swept away in blizzards.

“439 zombies of the Demonic Cult. 478 of the Orthodox Faction. A total of 917 missing corpses.”

But that wasn't all.

“560 zombies of the Demonic Cult and 521 of the Orthodox Faction, not missing but gathered nearby, adding up to 1998 in total. All present.”

Preta bowed her head a bit more.

Beyond her slender shoulders.

“They have been brought here.”

The zombies were lined up on the snowfield.

My skeleton legion held the zombies on both sides. It was morning. The zombies, weak to sunlight, wouldn't move, but even if the sun was obscured by clouds, the formation wouldn't collapse immediately.

“Good. Well done.”

I nodded.

“Now, bring the zombies to me one by one.”

“Yes, my Lord.”

Skeletons dragged a corpse over. When it reached me, I had already drawn my holy sword. The winter was cold. However, the blade, sliding through the winter air, would be colder still.

.....Baraya.....

Somewhere, the wind blew. Like rain gathering in a lake, the wind gushed into the valley. In the valley, the wind of the world seemed to mimic a human voice.

.....Baraya.....

Far away. The wind chanted a scripture.

When falling, all sounds resemble human voices.

I overheard the sound tumbling in the wind and swung my sword.

.....Agabaraya.....

A clean cut.

The zombie's head split apart.

"Phew,"

I kept cutting through the corpses.

Relentlessly.

As the zombie's head burst, fragments flew.

"Next!"

"Yes!"

The skeletons quickly brought the next corpse. Preta coordinated the skeleton legion. As I found my rhythm, Preta quickly brought the corpses, and if I seemed tired, she slowed down the pace.

“Faster! We’ll finish all of them before dusk today!”

“Yes, my Lord!”

Our execution ritual flowed like the wind.

A total of 1998 corpses.

No matter how still and unresisting they were, slicing them with a single sword wasn’t easy.

“Huh, hoo... hoo...”

I had been pondering all along.

‘How can I achieve a perfect ending?’

What kind of ending would completely satisfy the Master?

‘How should a person's life turn out to be complete?’

I wanted it sincerely, without a hint of falsehood.

That's why I could come to a conclusion.

‘Just becoming a disciple isn't enough.’

Master going mad and rampaging would be a bad ending. A definite bad ending. But is my [Discipleship] truly a happy ending?

Literally, would the Master be happy and satisfied with this ending?

‘No.’

A Normal Ending.

[Discipleship] is not a complete ending. It barely satisfies the criteria for an ending.

Even if I declared it over now, the Constellation Librarian would probably accept it, and the 22nd floor would be cleared,

but...

“Huk! Huk...”

I couldn't be satisfied.

“My Lord, just a little more strength! We have only half left!”

[Shiny is cheering for the Hero with all her might!]

Eventually, dusk fell.

The sky turned red, and the snowfield purple.

“Hoo, hoo...”

I didn't know how much time had passed. Seven hours? Eight? Something like that. Anyway, I kept swinging my sword without rest. My clothes were drenched in sweat and gore.

“Last ten, my Lord!”

10 left.

I looked ahead. Indeed, only 5 from the Demonic Cult and 5 from the Orthodox Faction remained. I gripped the hilt of my sword tightly, gasping for breath.

Just a little more.

“Five left!”

Just a bit more.

“The last one! Really the last one!”

I crushed the head of a Demonic Cult member in a black robe. The frozen brain of the zombie shattered like ice. Right after cutting down the 1998th zombie, my knees gave out, and I collapsed into the snow.

“Haah, ha... Huh...”

“Your hard work is appreciated, my Lord! You have truly endured much!”

Preta cheered as if she would jump around in joy. It was mutual suffering, after all.

Preta, always stoic since joining my shadow, seemed genuinely happy for the first time.

“Why? What’s so fun?”

I caught my breath and asked. Preta realized her expression had softened for a moment and quickly returned to her usual stoic face.

“...Just thinking about the scene you will show us made my heart full. I haven’t personally met your Master, but I think she will surely be delighted. Not just happy, but really, very much so.”

“Right.”

I lay in the snow, smiling.

“I hope she is very happy.”

The cure was developed.

I was acknowledged as Master’s disciple.

Finally, I also obtained the permission of the Sword Emperor.

The journey here wasn't easy.

But finally--- I’m ready to witness the ending of this world.

A week passed.

“Hmm. Being without a Dantian feels quite empty.”

Master and the Head of the Martial Alliance recuperated together for a week. Fortunately, there was no need for a separate sanatorium. This cave, with its open-air bath, was the best place to relax.

“Even when I try to circulate my energy in meditation, not even a bit of Ki accumulates. Without Ki, I feel unnecessarily anxious. Ah, this must be how people who cannot use martial arts feel...”

“I rather feel more at ease now. Frankly, I haven't felt like I was really alive lately! All day, I had to block my cervical Ki points, keep my heart moving. Oh, my, oh my.”

The Head of the Martial Alliance sighed, soaking in the hot spring.

“Now that I can breathe without any thoughts, it feels like I'm truly living! All thanks to the children from the outside world.”

“Th-thank you...”

The Apothecary stuttered as she finished examining Master.

“That's it for today's check-up. Both of you show no abnormalities. At this point, you can be considered fully recovered. If... if you get bitten by zombies again, you won't get infected...”

“Thank you.”

Master raised his hand and patted the Apothecary's head. She flinched for a moment.

“Me and this old man owe our lives to you. It's not easy to help a stranger.”

“Oh, no, I... I just did what was necessary...”

“To think something is necessary is remarkable. To do what you think is necessary is even more remarkable. Child, you are truly impressive at such a young age.”

“Eek. But, no, that's not...”

The Apothecary was rendered immobile under Master's patting. She was quite shy but didn't seem to dislike it. Watching them felt heartwarming, like observing affectionate sisters.

"Hmm."

But I couldn't just keep feeling heartwarming.

“Miss Apothecary. So both of them can now move around without any issues?”

“Yes, yes! I set a longer recuperation period just to be safe. They can move and exercise without any problems.”

Okay.

“Master. Head of the Martial Alliance. Let's go for a walk with me.”

“A walk?”

Master tilted his head in confusion.

“I'm delighted to go for a walk with my disciple... but why with that old geezer? If I go with that old thing, even a pleasant walk will turn into a muck walk.”

“Look at that. I'd rather refuse a stroll where old demon and young demon are together. Go and enjoy it with your dull disciple.”

Their reactions were as expected.

“No.”

I shook my head calmly.

“You both must come.”

“Hmm...?”

Master and the Head of the Martial Alliance exchanged glances. They seemed to realize that this wasn't just a casual walk I was proposing. Both wore expressions as if expecting something interesting.

“Alright. Our disciple must have some scheme. I don't intend to stroll with that old thing, but I'll willingly play along with my foolish disciple.”

“Bah. Whatever young Demon has planned, it'll be trivial. I have no expectations.”

We left the cave.

It was cold. Like the first day I descended into [The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon], today was also winter.

The difference from that day was that both Master and the Head of the Martial Alliance could no longer use their Ki. Never again.

I held Master's hand with my right and the Head of the Martial Alliance's with my left. That way, I could use my Aura to transfer warmth to them.

“Master.”

“Yes.”

“Head of the Martial Alliance.”

“Yeah.”

“You both said that your only regret was not concluding the Great Orthodox-Demonic War. It’s regrettable, but that’s a problem we, as your disciples, have to solve from now on...”

The two leaned on my warmth as we crossed the cold winter path.

“But I think differently.”

Was it unfamiliar because it was their first time out in a week? Or was it their bodies, now unused to walking without Ki? Both Master and the Head of the Martial Alliance walked a bit clumsily.

“The Great Orthodox-Demonic War is your legacy. Even if the Celestial Martial Guild Master and I fight, it would just be an ordinary duel, never a great war. Only your duels can be the Great Orthodox-Demonic War. After all, you two have been the mainstay of the Demonic Cult and Orthodox Faction.”

“Disciple...?”

“Thank you.”

We reached the snowfield.

“Thank you for not giving up for the past three years.”

The place where once the corpses spread like a forest. The forest of shadows. Now, this place was just a clean snowfield, devoid of any bodies.

“Thank you for coming here every morning to gather the zombies again. If you both had given up and left the zombies as mere corpses to be lost, we would never have been able to recover them.”

The life you lost.

The scenery you should have enjoyed.

To return that to you, I slowly opened my mouth.

“Ghoul Reincarnation.”

My shadow spread across the snowfield.

[Activating skill.]

Shapes like snowmen rose from the shadows, one after another. Some shadows wore black robes. Some fluttered white sleeves. They gradually took on human forms, marveling as they looked down at their hands.

“Disciple, what is this...”

But none were as astonished as Master and the Head of the Martial Alliance.

“Think of it as a dream. It’s okay to dismiss it as an aftereffect of losing your Dantian. If you believe I have learned a strange magic that can temporarily bring back the memories and bodies of the dead, that’s fine too.”

“Master. Head of the Martial Alliance.”

Ghoul Reincarnation was complete.

“The Great Orthodox-Demonic War hasn’t ended yet.”

The Demonic Cult’s elite disciples. One thousand.

“Martial Arts hasn’t forgotten Chivalry, and Chivalry hasn’t lost Martial Arts.”

The Orthodox Faction’s elite warriors. One thousand.

“The fate of the Demonic Cult doesn’t end with mere zombies, and the orthodox martial realm isn’t devoured by corpses.”

The true Great Orthodox-Demonic War.

That was their wish.

“If the Demonic Cult is to vanish from this world, it should be solely by the sword of the Orthodox. And if the Orthodox Faction truly must perish, it should only be at the hands of the Demonic Cult.”

"....."

“To the leader of the Demonic Cult and the Head of the Martial Alliance.”

I smiled.

And performed a formal bow.

“Decide who the final master of the martial realm will be!”

Chapter 81: The Humblest in the World (1)

The murmurs flowed through the snowfield.

"What exactly is happening here!"

"Are we... alive?"

"Is this the Peach Blossom Spring...?"

Disciples of the Demonic Cult. Warriors of the Orthodox Faction.

Their last memory was their own death. They might remember being bitten by zombies, but not becoming zombies themselves. For them, it's as if years have passed in the blink of an eye.

"....."

Some had endured those three years entirely.

Master stood, staring blankly at the snowfield, disbelieving her own eyes.

"Disciple..."

"Yes, Master."

"Are you not from the outer world but from a world beyond...? This, this is not a spell a mere human can cast. It's the stuff of absurd legends, or have I died without realizing and ended up in the Peach Blossom Spring...?"

"No, it's not like that."

I shook my head.

"These people, like Master, can no longer use martial arts. They have become much weaker compared to their prime. But this is not the Peach Blossom Spring, and these people still have their memories of life."

"....."

"Go and see for yourself."

"....."

"Please, Master."

Thud.

Master walked. Thud, thud... light footsteps. They belonged to a martial artist whose Dantian had been destroyed. A warrior who had lost her Ki. A woman who bore the traces of a three-year illness.

The Heavenly Demon.

My Master.

She walked with light steps toward the disciples. They were trying to grasp the situation.

"First, let's assess the current situation. Stay calm! Send scouts to..."

"Blood Ghost Troop Captain."

Hesitation.

The disciples flinched. About a dozen of the Demonic Cult's followers fell silent. Then, with unfamiliar eyes, they looked at Master, their leader.

"Lord Heavenly Demon...?"

Master's breath grew whiter.

"Blood Ghost Troop Captain."

"....."

"Truly, the Blood Ghost Troop Captain."

Silence spread. At first, it was just about ten people. But as they fell silent, dozens around them did the same, and then hundreds.

A quiet snowfield.

"Moon Shadow Demon..."

"Yes."

"Hell Ghost Demon..."

"Yes, Master."

"Sword Demon..."

"Please give us your orders."

Master started calling the names of the disciples. Each named disciple simply knelt down without questioning. The snow crunched under their knees.

"I have lost you, again and again..."

Master reached out.

"My children..."

Her fingers trembled. Seeing the trembling of their leader, the disciples bowed their heads more earnestly. It seemed their loyalty was not to see what should not be seen. All thousand disciples turned their eyes to the ground.

Not only the disciples were wrapped in shock.

"...Ah."

An old monk stroked his beard.

"I must have laid down in a cave and crossed the river. I closed my eyes and there's neither paradise nor hell, just this snowfield..."

"Old Monk!"

"...And there's also a devil mixed in. Ah, even in death, I must roam with this creature. What does Buddha expect of me?"

"Damn, just hearing your nonsense makes me realize you're the real old monk!"

The Head of the Martial Alliance rushed over and hugged the old monk. I guessed who he was. Excluding Master and the Head of the Martial Alliance, he was the one who survived the longest. The Head Monk of the Shaolin Temple.

"You're alive and back! My friend is back!"

"I am not your friend."

"Ah! Surely the Jade Emperor has granted us a miracle!"

"Eating grass like a dog," said the old monk.

"Don't pollute my ears, mortal. I should never have fallen for your tricks and fought with those heretics. I should have quietly passed away in the temple."

"Ah! Just seeing you immediately cools my joy! Really, you're the monk I know! I want to punch you!"

While the Demonic Cult's warriors remained quiet, the Orthodox Faction's martial artists were noisy.

They were sharing this reunion in their own ways.

Time passed.

"....."

The first to turn and look at me was Master. Our eyes met across the snow. Dark eyes. Emotions rested in that gaze. My feelings were imprinted, engraved in her heart.

".....I am."

Master began to speak.

She spoke towards the Head of the Martial Alliance.

"I am the Lord of the Demonic Cult, So BaekHyang."

The Head of the Martial Alliance, who was sharing moments with his comrades, paused. He shook off his companions and looked towards Master from a distance. Master performed a formal bow.

"The Heavenly Demon."

"Today, even if this is just a night of blind dreaming, it's okay."

It was midday.

"Even if I'm just a sleepwalking patient, it's okay."

The snow in the snowfield wasn't eternal because it didn't melt in the sun, but because it kept being covered anew, endlessly.

"The Demonic Cult's destiny isn't a fleeting dream. Life belongs to those who share the same illness, and the world belongs to those who dream the same dream."

In the blazing sunlight, those who wish to remain white must do more than just be born white. They must continuously scatter whiteness into the world, ready to break, shatter, and spread endlessly.

"I haven't forgotten the name of the illness I chose to suffer from. I haven't lost the warmth of the dream I chose to dream. So, I haven't let go of any person or missed any world. Baraya! It's not the name of martial arts, but the name of an illness that proves my place, not the strength of Ki, but the warmth of a dream that proves me."

The sound of crumbling snowflakes.

"I am right here, and only while I remain here, I am myself."

With the sound of melting and falling anew.

"I think therefore I am."

Master recited a declaration of war.

"I challenge you to the 990th duel."

Silence enveloped the surroundings.

The noisy Orthodox Faction had quieted down.

They were the last small and great heroes of the martial world. They came thinking this was the end, to wage the final war.

How could they act rashly?

If the last words one chooses in life are a testament, then now they were about to speak the testament of the Orthodox Faction.

And the orthodox looked to the one who would speak their testament.

"I am the Head of the Martial Alliance- and the Namgung Clan-"

The old man performed a formal bow.

"Namgung Woon. I am Great Axe Sage."

One thousand of the Demonic Cult and one thousand of the Orthodox Faction faced each other.

"You Demonic Cult used the screams of the common people as doctrine. Screams became revenge, and revenge became bloodshed, staining the world red. Bloodthirsty avengers! The world has turned red, yet you still act like victims."

The man who rose to Head of the Martial Alliance, with his own voice, drew a line between the Demonic Cult and the Orthodox Faction.

"You cling to the Heavenly Demon's sleeves, crying endlessly. Begging him to dance for your lost souls, to avenge you. As long as you cling and beg, you are just the weak commoners, the sad people!"

The old Head roared.

"Thirst! You have legs and hands, why still indulge in the past's evil ghosts! The Huayan Sutra says, even a single tree must shed its flowers to bear fruit. What about you? You are merely flower sellers in a garden, profiting from your own pain!"

His words provoked the Demonic Cult's crowd.

The disciples clenched their swords, anger and killing intent rising. Against them, the Orthodox Faction's warriors began to match their energy.

Neither side had Ki, yet the air on the snowfield grew tense.

"Good."

Master smiled.

"I take that as acceptance of the duel."

"Of course."

"Is this a duel of life or a duel of life and death?"

"Life and death."

"Accepted."

Both warriors released their formal bows.

Swoosh!

At the same time, one thousand of the Demonic Cult and one thousand of the Orthodox Faction drew their swords. It was high noon. The blades of nearly two thousand swords, absorbing the sun, shone brightly.

"Children of the Demonic Heavens!"

Master clenched her fist.

"Even if today's event is but a vain dream, a delusion!"

"Baraya!"

A thousand disciples shouted in unison.

"Even if we are called a futile dream, it's fine!"

"Baraya!"

"Then we must live as if in a dream!"

"Agabaraya!"

"Our hearts are like candles!"

"We shall set this place ablaze!"

"For the Demonic Heavens!"

"For supremacy of the Common People!"

Master burst into laughter.

"Kill them!"

The war had begun.

A thousand disciples roared like beasts as they charged. Lacking the exquisite Stepping Techniques or the mysterious Movement Techniques, they attacked and tore at their enemies like animals. This was their holy war, as dictated by their doctrine.

"Warriors! I am the first of the Demonic Cult's Warriors, Moon Shadow Demon! Face my swordsmanship!"

Captain of the Demonic Cult's Shadow Corpse Troop.

Moon Shadow Demon.

"I am the Leader of the Wudang sect, HyunGong Jinin! A worthy opponent!"

Leader of the Wudang sect.

HyunGong Jinin.

The two clashed, shouting their titles. The fight was barbaric despite the formal exchange of names.

"Hyaaaah!"

Moon Shadow Demon King struck HyunGong Jinin's face with the hilt of his sword. Teeth. Blood. White and red fragments flew.

"Wooaaaah!"

HyunGong Jinin roared, baring his broken teeth, and thrust his fingers into Moon Shadow Demon's eyes. Moon Shadow Demon laughed wildly, covering the sound of bursting with his laughter. The monk's roar and the demonic laughter intertwined.

Another black and white pair buried their forms.

"Demonic Cult's Warrior, first rank, Hell Ghost Demon. I will claim your head."

Captain of the Demonic Cult's Soul Repentance Troop.

Hell Ghost Demon.

"I am JoMyung, from the Shaolin Temple."

Head Monk of the Shaolin Temple.

Zen Master JoMyung.

"As one of the four Demon Lords, I shall let you have the first three attacks."

"I hope you'll always be faithful to Buddha's teachings!"

Hell Ghost Demon attacked immediately after JoMyung's assault, ramming into his stomach. JoMyung chuckled amidst his groans.

"You said you'd allow three moves?"

"Did you believe that?"

"Did it seem like I did?"

"Yes." The sound of blood trickling intervened. "It seemed so."

Hell Ghost Demon collapsed to her knees, her nose broken from the impact. At the moment of impact, JoMyung had swiftly kneed upwards. JoMyung stroked his beard pleasantly.

"My acting skills haven't rusted."

"This damn stone monk..."

"Take the remaining two moves!"

Hell Ghost Demon grabbed Zen Master JoMyung's ears, intending to knee him again. But Zen Master JoMyung headbutted him instead. Their skulls collided, "Kuhuk!" JoMyung jumped up, clutching his knees in pain.

"Kahaha! You lot, without Ki, are just riffraff! True to your real skills! Good! The true faces of the Orthodox Faction are revealed to the world today!"

Captain of the Demonic Cult's Extermination Troop.

Sword Demon.

".....So vulgar, truly vulgar."

Elder of the Mount Hua Sect.

Chaos Flower Sword.

The two swordsmen clashed their blades. Clang! Simultaneous groans, clang! Swallowed gasps, clang! Trembling hands and shoulders. Both bled from their torn hands. Blood from their mouths and hands mixed.

Yet, neither let go of their swords.

The Sword Demon grinned, baring his teeth.

"Stop pretending and just let go."

Chaos Flower Sword replied through gritted teeth.

"That's something you should say to yourself....."

Their eyes met, and their swords collided again. Clang! Muffled groans, clang! Gasping for air, clang! The blood flowed.

Still, neither released their swords.

White robes fluttered. Black robes swayed. Under the bright sun, shadows formed. Between the sun and shadows, the Orthodox and Demonic Cults clashed. Blood splattered.

"For the Demonic Heavens! Honor to the peasants!"

"Uaaaah! Die! Die!"

"Moyong's scoundrels, come forth now!"

In a world devoid of all but grayscale.

What flowed vividly there was not the splendor of martial arts.

It was solely the red blood of humans.

"Huhu, haha... Ughaha."

Amidst it, a particularly crimson laughter erupted.

"Ughahaha! Ha! Hahaha!"

It was sheer madness.

"So many Orthodox dogs!"

The Master shouted.

"Good. Come at me. Let's see who's better with a sword!"

Amidst the Orthodox warriors, a dark shadow rampaged. The sun seemed to rise and set at tens of times its usual speed. A woman who had spent three years bedridden without any Ki, merely that, yet her movements stood out prominently among the martial artists, equally unable to use their martial skills.

"How ludicrous!"

The Master laughed.

"Shaolin's Head Monk, such tricks won't stop me. Wudang's charlatan, do you think you can shoulder the karma of my sect?"

These words were familiar to me,

"Despair floods the world, submerging Mount Song. Hatred flares up, setting Mount Wudang ablaze! The Demonic Cult is the heaven of the martial realm, and I am the heaven of the Demonic Cult! Do you have the right to discuss the beyond heavens?"

"You lot are not enough! Orthodox lackeys!"

The Master roared.

"Namgung Woon!"

Amidst the clashing of swords and colliding of flesh, the Master called out.

"Where is Namgung Woon?"

Laughing out loud, the Master,

"Bring forth the Supreme Patriarch of the Namgung family! Summon the leader of the Martial Alliance! No matter how dense the forests of the martial world or how vast the heavens, only one can withstand my sword in this world above worlds! Warriors, bring Namgung Woon before me right now!"

Her laughter was crimson and exhilarating.

"Hmm."

The old man took a step into the increasingly reddened world.

"I'm reminded of the first day the great war commenced."

The leader of the Martial Alliance stood bare-chested. The winter was cold, maybe due to the lack of Ki, yet he seemed to use it as his armor. His emaciated muscles were rigid as bone.

"We failed to conclude on the first day, leading the battle to continue on the second. Unable to finish on the second day, it was postponed to the third. In hindsight, we should have put in our full effort from the beginning."

Hoo...

The leader of the Martial Alliance took a deep breath.

He then assumed a stance and beckoned with his hand.

"Come at me, Lord of the Demonic Cult. Today, heavenly luck is with me."

Head of the Martial Alliance.

The Great Axe Sage.

"Heavenly luck, eh? Good."

Crunch,

The Master stepped on the snow.

"Today's heavenly luck will only be your fate."

Lord of the Demonic Cult.

The Heavenly Demon.

"....."

"....."

A single breath,

The two eyed each other intently.

Half a breath,

They closed the distance with their steps.

As their breaths intertwined,

They collided with a gesture.

"-----."

White...

Snowflakes whirled.

"-----."

Black...

Hair fluttered.

Red...

Blood splattered.

Chapter 82: The Humblest in the World (2)

"Aha!"

The Master laughed.

"Ughahaha! Hah!"

Her nose bled, coloring the white snow with her blood. Whoosh! The Master swung her bare fist.

"Huh?!"

The fist struck the Head of the Martial Alliance squarely on the jaw. As he staggered, the Master didn't miss a beat. She lunged. She pounced. She bit down.

"Ugh!"

Crunch!

"Cough, gasp! You, insane creature...!"

The Head of the Martial Alliance hastily pushed her away, but his ear was already soaked in blood. A ripping sound followed as flesh tore off. "Krhup!" A low groan flowed across the snowy field.

"Ptoo!"

The Master spat out the blood-soaked ear onto the snow. Her lips were also stained red. She smiled, seemingly satisfied with her prey.

A demon.

She was like a bloodthirsty ghost.

"Fu! What a foul taste! Is the high and mighty martial arts of the Namgung family useless in improving flesh quality!”

“You, demon! As if being a heretic wasn't enough, now you indulge in cannibalism!”

“You’re like an old, overcooked spinach, old man. But your words earlier weren't without merit.”

The Master wiped her mouth with the back of her hand.

“The Great Orthodox-Demonic War should have ended on the first day. Both of us faltered. We thought we were fighting with all we had, but in truth, we didn’t. We didn’t truly risk our lives!”

"....."

“Today's battle is a second chance that should never have been given.”

The Master looked at me.

Her dark eyes held a warm and gentle kindness.

“We can't foolishly repeat the same mistake. Great Axe Sage. Today, I will give my all.”

“...You intend to destroy your vital energy.”

“Yes.”

Innate True Ki or Vital Energy.

The energy everyone is born with, essentially life force itself. Unlike internal energy or Ki , True Ki cannot be accumulated artificially. Once used, it's over. And the fate of a martial artist who draws on 'life' is set.

Death or becoming a cripple.

For martial artists, True Ki is truly a last resort, akin to a final stand.

“...Demon. We are both weakened now anyway.”

The Head of the Martial Alliance spoke. Maybe due to losing an ear, his expression was fiercely grim.

“Even if we use True Ki now, we can only exhibit the skill of mid or low-level martial artists. Without internal energy, even our Dantians are gone. It's impossible to wield divine might. ...Do you understand?”

“I do.”

“Are you planning to break your True Ki just to show off the martial prowess of a mere mid-level warrior!”

“Of course.”

The Master smiled.

“Don't be angry, Namgung Woon. I'm not trying to abandon life. Not at all. I'm just hoping that my last moment comes today.”

"....."

“I feel an unparalleled joy in being alive right now. I'm thankful, ever so thankful. Grateful to have survived until today, and for this fate that allows me to die today.”

“The world has perished, yet you say this?”

“Yes. I'm thankful for every relationship I've encountered until this moment.”

The Master slowly assumed her stance.

Right hand forward. Left hand back.

“Looking back, I truly am a blessed warrior.”

Whoosh!

Snow swirled around. It wasn't snow from the sky. A small whirlwind formed around the Master. It was the flow of Innate True Ki. The wind spread from the Master as its center.

“...So it is.”

The Head of the Martial Alliance faced her wind with a bare face.

“Good. I too have long yearned for a day like today.”

The wind reversed its course.

“Let's die together, Heavenly Demon.”

The two charged towards each other.

And I saw the flow of two lives across the snowy field.

The Master deflected the Head of the Martial Alliance's hand. He tripped her foot. As arms interlocked and footsteps crossed, endless True Ki flowed from their bodies. It was a leakage of life.

The sun, unable to melt the eternal snow, melted in the lives of these two.

The Master struck the Head of the Martial Alliance's waist.

The wind blew. Where her fingertips pointed, where the wind passed, snow flowed.

In a world covered in snow, only the paths where the two had passed slowly revealed bare ground.

"....."

But that was not all.

Around the battleground of the Master and the Head of the Martial Alliance, slowly, rapidly, things other than white began to grow. Weeds. Bushes. While the rest of the earth remained frozen under snow, their path of struggle saw the birth of seasons.

-Their True Ki is feeding it.

Guardian Spirit commented.

- Such great warriors' True Ki is a feast. Albeit brief.

Even if it was only for a moment, their seasons were beautiful.

The earth drank the True Ki shed by the two. Thus, for a brief moment, the world returned to its state before being engulfed in eternal winter.

It was a forest of peach blossoms.

As if time sped up, peach trees grew and thickened. The peach branches resembled human fingers. The branches creeping up from the earth stretched towards the sky, as if trying to grasp something.

Flowers bloomed.

Among the pink petals and finger-like branches, the Master and the Head of the Martial Alliance continued their combat.

Hand gestures and footwork intended to kill each other.

Yet when momentarily obscured by the petals, it seemed like a dance, a Martial Dance, and as their lives intertwined, a Martial Destiny. Hidden by the petals, many things in the world shone brilliantly. Even killing intent. My master, even your venom.

-...This is quite rare.

The white snowy field.

Red peach blossoms fluttered.

-One born with an Extreme Yin Body, the other with a Heavenly Martial Body, perfectly aligning Yin and Yang. Around those two, it's already a different world. Even I haven't seen such a rare sight.

Peach blossoms bloomed and withered.

Spring lingered and then passed.

"Heavenly Demon's Dominating Steps."

The Master stepped forward. A blizzard rose, scattering peach blossoms.

"Sky Destroying Golden Axe."

The Head of the Martial Alliance twisted his wrist. The snowstorm ceased, and the peach blossoms bloomed again.

"....."

A petal drifted on the wind, landing on my shoulder.

I then realized.

Those red flowers are the blood of the Master. The blood of the Head of the Martial Alliance.

The petals blooming from the blood the two shed in their final moments.

"---I despise you."

Winter is bleeding.

"I despise you all."

The Master.

"I don't hate your happiness. Never did."

The Master.

"Creatures like you also feel pain,"

Peach blossoms bloomed and withered, seasons lingered and passed, but the rising petals grew fewer, and the lingering seasons shortened.

"Creatures like you also suffer in life, express pain, seek comfort, give comfort, pretending to be human in that way."

The Master is dying.

"I hate it."

The flowers wither.

"Why,"

The season fades.

"Why are you endless beasts to others yet endlessly human to yourselves?"

Countless peach blossoms obscured the shadows of the two.

Looking back, it was like a fleeting dream, a mere round of tea in a martial duel.

The branches dried up. No more peach flowers bloomed. Wind blew, covering the bare ground with snow again. In the center of the fallen petals, the Master and the Head of the Martial Alliance stood tall.

"....."

Stagger,

“...Cough, gasp! Pff, hup...!”

Above the red field of flowers, something even redder was coughed up.

It was the blood of the Head of the Martial Alliance.

The Master's tightly clenched fist was pressed against his chest. The old man wobbled like a mirage and then fell gently. Flop, and as his body met the ground, red flowers blossomed.

The Master stood quietly.

"Master."

There was no response to my call.

"Master."

I quickened my pace and ran to her, standing rigidly, and embraced her.

She was cold.

Her body was as cold as ice.

“Master...”

“We won.”

Her voice was clear. The warmth that had disappeared from her body still lingered in her voice. But she felt too light. Her fingers, her frame, it was as if she had aged rapidly, becoming feather-light.

“Yes, we won. You won.”

“I should have pierced through his chest with my fist and grasped his heart. I couldn't even do that; I just hit him. I have no face to show my disciple.”

“No, that's not true.”

“Yes. Even then, it's better to see my face than yours now.

Why such a face?"

I gently laid the Master in my arms. I used Aura to warm her body, but she didn't get any warmer. Her fingertips stroking my cheek were as cold as icicles.

"Don't worry, my disciple. I still have about two hours before I breathe my last breath."

Two hours.

"That is enough time for a proper farewell."

Only two hours remained to hear her voice, to listen to her breathing.

"...Yet you wear such a sad expression."

The Master looked sorrowful.

"A disciple troubling their master. But I have already troubled you. I wanted to convey everything over time, but due to this old fool's stubbornness, I couldn't. I worry about what I will leave in your heart, what I will be remembered as."

Afraid that I would become nothing to you, the Master, whispering, coughed up blood.

"If I'm remembered as a briefly bloomed flower, I could ask for nothing more..."

"King of Death!"

A frantic shout echoed.

It was the voice of the Apothecary. Realizing the Great Orthodox-Demonic War had taken place on the snowy field, the Apothecary and others from the tower rushed over.

"King of Death, what, what happened..."

"Hey! Master!?"

Viper was startled to see the Head of the Martial Alliance.

“Are you alright!? Hey, Master! Look at me!”

“He’s fine.”

The Master coughed weakly.

“The last punch was shallow. It didn't penetrate deeply. Bragging about his heavenly fortune... it seems his fortune is to live as a cripple for the rest of his life.”

“A cripple?”

The Apothecary was flustered.

“I won’t let it... Anyway, there’s no time for this! Both of you need treatment immediately!”

“I am done. Look after the old man.”

“But...!”

"I know my body best. It's already nearing its end."

The Master then said, "And,"

"I want to spend my last moments with my one and only disciple."

"Child, can you give us some privacy?"

The Apothecary was both a pharmacist and a physician. She came close, pressing the Master's pulse firmly. She used a skill to diagnose the patient's condition. The Apothecary's expression darkened.

"...Do you want painkillers?"

"No, it's fine."

The Master smiled.

"The winter wind is pleasant. My chest feels refreshed. I want to feel this wind fully as I go to the afterlife."

"....."

The Apothecary stood up. She bowed silently towards the Master. The silent Medicine King gestured for the group to leave. They soon carried the Head of the Martial Alliance back to the cave.

They respected our privacy.

"...Master."

"Come here."

The Master held my hand.

"What shall we do in the remaining hour? Are you curious about my childhood? Want to hear about the beauty of our cult's main temple?"

"I have a request."

I firmly held the Master's thin hand.

There's still time.

Her life hadn't reached perfection yet. For her to experience a truly satisfying ending, the ultimate moment, one more puzzle piece was needed.

“I have a request.”

“What is it?”

“Please engage in a duel with me.”

The Master's eyes widened.

“Unexpected. While a physical duel would guarantee your victory, in a verbal duel, you're sure to lose. I will freely display techniques as if I were back in my prime. How can you, who barely grasped a few strands of Demonic Heavenly God Art, compete!”

“I...”

I began to speak.

“I don’t think the duel you had with the Head of the Martial Alliance was your best. You said you should have pierced his chest and grasped his heart. ...Even if it's a verbal duel, I want the Master to achieve the most satisfying duel at the end.”

A duel without regrets.

The wish of every warrior.

“Can you show me that?”

“Yes.”

“Hmm...”

The Master seemed amused by my proposal. Maybe she thought it was the naive desire of a young disciple. She didn't seem to expect that I could really give her that duel.

“Alright. But I won’t hold back in a verbal duel. I’ll let you strike first, but don't resent me if I end it in one move.”

“Yes.”

“Once the duel ends, I'll tell you stories of my past! Now, show this master the fruits of your training.”

The Master smiled gently.

A smile fragrant with peach blossoms.

I looked down at the Master's face, then slowly, at a man seated opposite me. A warrior who had reached the pinnacle in another world.

-Hmm.

Sword Emperor.

-So it's finally my turn.

Another being who reached the peak of martial arts in another realm.

Though a ghost, unable to physically fight, he could participate in a verbal duel through my mouth.

‘Yes. Please fulfill the [promise] I lost in the bet.’

-Alright.

The Guardian Spirit grinned.

-I’ve been wanting to face this world’s Heavenly Demon.

He crossed his arms and sat down on the snow.

-I’ll give you the best duel. Tell her I’m conceding three moves.

Between us, two absolute beings of different martial worlds faced each other.

Chapter 83: Sword Dance (1)

Sword Heart.

It was only after several winters had passed, to the point where So BaekHyang could no longer remember their coldness, that she began to grasp this realm.

The Sword of the Heart.

It was when she no longer was known as 'The Fragrance of Snow' but as 'The Heavenly Demon' that So BaekHyang started to glimpse this realm.

.....I see it.....

The woman who was So BaekHyang, now the Heavenly Demon, muttered.

.....A realm untrodden by any warrior lies ahead.....

.....It seems as distant as the Pure Land.....

.....But if it's visible, is there any place unreachable?.....

Her heart pounded with excitement.

The Sword Heart is a realm known only in legends. Killing Heart: the mere intent to kill, the harboring of murderous will in one's heart, causes the target to die instantly. No need for a sword. No need for words. She, at last, had that realm before her.

.....Heavenly Demon.....

If only.

.....Our revered lord.....

If only she were given time.

60 years to dedicate solely to training.

If only that were possible.

.....Please relieve us of this resentment.....

People knelt before her.

.....The officials demand marten fur as taxes. My father went hunting and never returned, leaving us unable to pay. We are to pay taxes based on the number of family members, so my grandmother, nearing her end, has decided to disappear to reduce our taxes.....

.....Heavenly Demon.....

There were so many bowed before her.

.....Famine has hit last year and this year, leaving us nothing to eat. We were ordered to build reservoirs and embankments, supposedly to prevent next year's drought, but how can we lift stones on empty stomachs.....

.....My daughter was taken and has not returned.....

.....Heavenly Demon.....

They were numerous.

The Heavenly Demon quietly looked up at the snowy mountains.

If she had 60 years, a period solely dedicated to training, she would ascend to a realm no warrior in the history of the martial world had ever reached. It was an undeniable fact. But still.

.....Lead the way.....

The Heavenly Demon stood up, her dark robe fluttering.

.....There are so many I must cut down.....

Abandon the world or herself?

The Heavenly Demon easily discarded her personal desires.

Her Unyielding Martial Desire becoming Desirelessness.

That had always been her life.

That day, too, she cut down those who had frozen the world.

She just couldn't cut down winter itself.

-Originally,

The Guardian Spirit knelt down.

-A warrior using another's mouth for a duel is absurd. It's unprecedented rudeness and would become a laughingstock in martial history.

The Guardian Spirit sat respectfully in the snow, a posture I had never seen before. It was his own form of etiquette, reserved for those he recognized as worthy opponents.

-But even knowing it's laughable, I must request this duel.

The Sword Emperor looked straight at the Master.

-My alias is Sword Emperor. In the world known as the Ten Thousand Sword Realm, I was acknowledged as the number one. I implore your forgiveness for my rudeness and request a verbal duel.

Then, he bowed his head.

"....."

"Disciple?"

The Master blinked.

"Why don't you speak the technique? The duel has already begun."

Naturally, the Master couldn't see or hear the Guardian Spirit. She didn't see his etiquette.

“.....Master.”

“What’s the matter?”

“You must have known that I use strange magic.”

“You mean the magic that returned my children and the Martial Alliance’s zombies to their original states?”

The Master chuckled, her laugh fleeting as if it might vanish any moment.

“I’ve chosen not to ask anything of you. Silence is a virtue. I just thought you were a messenger sent by the Jade Emperor out of pity for me.”

The Master rested her head on my thigh, smiling. Her head shook slightly with each laugh, highlighting her diminished weight.

“...I know one more kind of magic.”

The Master's time was running out. I needed to be concise.

"One of them is a spell to summon ghosts."

"Hmm?"

"Right now, a ghost who is deeply versed in martial arts is beside me. He was once called the greatest in the outside world."

"Ah ha! The greatest warrior of the outside world! Impressive."

The Master giggled, apparently taking it as a joke.

"Fine. I shall duly acknowledge the ghost summoned by my disciple as an opponent for a verbal martial duel."

"....."

I looked at the Guardian Spirit.

He sat silently in a formal position.

“So, what technique will the ghost of the greatest warrior present?”

“...He says he'll concede the first three moves to you.”

"Uh-huh?"

“Master, he said he would yield the first three moves to you.”

The Master's expression lost its mirth.

“Arrogant. No disciple of mine would say such a thing. It's definitely a cheeky ghost. I'll strike with the fifth technique of [Twelve Cloud Dragon Swords], the Rising Swift Dragon Sword, at the Acupoint of Swift Water.”

1st move.

-I respond with the sixth technique of [Earth Dragon Martial Staff], Eastern River Cave Dragon as a feint, then step back with Divine Floating Step.

The Guardian Spirit immediately countered without hesitation.

I didn't understand what [Twelve Cloud Dragon Swords] or [Earth Dragon Martial Staff] were. My knowledge was limited to Demonic Heavenly God Art. I just relayed the duel verbally.

“He said he responds with the sixth technique of [Earth Dragon Martial Staff], Eastern River Cave Dragon as a feint, then steps back with Divine Floating Step.”

“Hmm...”

The Master furrowed her brows.

“I counter with the seventh technique of [Great Taichi], Torrent Flurry Kick.”

-I use the second technique of [Flesh Killer Fist], Double Ground Hands as a feint, then dodge with Steel Plank.

The Master's delicate eyebrows wrinkled further.

"I attack with the sixth technique of [Great Unmatched Swords], Thousand Cat Demon Flicker Strike."

-I respond with paired moves. Retreat with Plum Blossom Step and then...

"....."

Three moves passed in an instant.

I couldn't grasp the exchange that unfolded between them.

But the Master was now silent.

-You.

The Guardian Spirit spoke calmly.

-I can guess how you lived. After reaching the peak, you had no time for training, busy with cult affairs. You saw the threshold of the Life and Death Realm but didn't pursue it. Why? You were too busy. Managing the cult alone took up all your 24 hours. You were too occupied taking care of your family and sect members to spare time for training.

Then he continued.

-Do you know what's the most frustrating?

The corner of the Guardian Spirit's mouth twisted.

-That even with all that, you were still known as the greatest. There's no need to strive higher.

Because you're already at the peak. Comfortable, recognized by everyone. No need to make an effort. In your own words, you're heaven itself.

"....."

-Poor thing. Your misfortune is that you were the absolute strongest in this martial realm.

The Guardian Spirit crossed his arms.

-Let me show you what lies beyond the heavens.

I didn't relay these words.

It felt unnecessary.

"Hm."

The Master slowly lifted her head.

Leaning slightly against me, she assumed a seated position on the snow.

“Seems like he’s not just any random warrior.”

The Heavenly Demon.

Origin, The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon.

The Absolute Greatest of All Times.

The Demonic Sect.

-Of course. Who do you think I am?

The Sword Emperor.

Origin, Ten Thousand Sword Realm.

The Greatest Warrior of the World.

The Orthodox Faction.

“Alright. I won't treat you lightly.

-Come at me as much as you like.

A Martial Duel...

Commences.

"I'll start with the first technique of Flaming Blood Dragon, Explosive Ascension, striking upward at the chin."

-Suddenly mimicking the Orthodox Faction, huh? Counter with the first technique of Great Eight Techniques of the Cloud Dragon, once striking the ground, then upward with the fist.

One move.

"I'll switch Explosive Ascension to the third technique of Execution Blade, Gentle Fierce Strike, aiming for the Fountainhead Acupoint to kill the momentum."

-Oh, really now? Let's see, should I counter or... Alright, I'll mix in the principles of Order of Life and Death with Estuary Butterfly to match.

Another move.

"....."

As the verbal duel continued, the Master's breathing grew more labored.

In winter, her breaths turned whiter.

The Master clenched her left hand, grabbing her knee firmly. With her right, she tightly held my hand. She was trembling. Her tremors were transmitted to me through our clasped hands.

"...How long will you keep your filthy feet on the fingers of the Master? I'll tear you apart with the second technique of Demonic Leeching Dharma, Flaming Leeching Chin Strike."

-Just a mere strike back and you're losing your temper. I'll immediately retreat from the strike and roll in mid-air, Lazy Mule Roll, while simultaneously performing the fourth technique of Divine Chariot Spin, Hill of Life and Death, targeting the right Greater Bone, Sun Valley, and White Tiger Acupoints.

"I'll retreat three steps with Reigning Steps of the Heavenly Demon!"

The Master seemed delighted.

-Mimicking the Demonic Sect now? I'll counter with Sword of Frostbitten Death to follow suit.

Yes.

The Great Axe Sage of the martial alliance was never a [Match] for the Master.

Undoubtedly, the Great Axe Sage was the strongest in the Orthodox Faction of this world. He was the only one who could possibly stand against the Master. But wasn't it proven in the final Orthodox-Demonic Great War? If both gave their all in a duel, the victor would always be the Master.

A duel with a foregone conclusion.

Perhaps, that's why the Master delayed the resolution of the Great Orthodox-Demonic War to the 990th round.

Like a child savoring a candy that will eventually melt, cherishing it as long as possible.

"I'm sorry."

That's why the Great Axe Sage, in the timeline where he faced a bad ending, said to the Master.

"I'm sorry I was weaker than you."

"I was the weaker one."

"Kill me."

Squeeze.

Unconsciously, my grip tightened.

"Foolishness! I'll counter with the second technique of Execution Blade, Welcoming Person!"

-Impossible. I dodge with Steel Plank and retaliate with Explosive Ascension at the same time.

"Aha."

The Master finally broke into laughter. Not a sad one, nor a fleeting smile. It was a laughter tinged with the pounding of her heart, radiantly red.

"My disciple, this ghost you've summoned is indeed the best!"

".....Yes."

Now, I fully understood the Great Axe Sage's feelings.

"Among those I know, he is probably the strongest."

"Where did you hide such a powerful warrior, only to introduce him now!"

A bit of resentment.

"Such a powerful martial artist, I've never encountered in my lifetime!"

No.

I felt quite a lot of resentment.

"I'll mix in the techniques of Divine Martial Heaven to twist his arm and kill his momentum. Then, I'll retreat four steps with the Reigning Steps of the Heavenly Demon!"

-Oh dear. You've already retreated three steps and now four more? Seems like you've started to show your tail. I'll follow closely with one step using Divine Floating Step, then Midsummer Downpour with sword energy.

"Ah! Midsummer Downpour with sword energy! It seems you're tired of probing. Alright, I'll use Sword of Parched Death to draw you in and spill, then immediately switch to holding the sword in reverse grip for Shining Torrent Dragon from the first to the third technique, targeting the Heavenly Pillar, Great Push, and Body Pillar in order!"

I didn't understand the martial duel unfolding between them.

I couldn't even visualize the clash in my mind.

I knew what Sword of Parched Death was, but I didn't know what Shining Torrent Dragon was. I knew what Lazy Mule Roll was, but I had no idea what the stance for Life and Death of Divine Chariot Spin was.

Not knowing, and unable to picture it, I wasn't even allowed to try to fathom their movements.

Their swordplay and martial dance were beyond my comprehension.

-Then, I'll counter with a Butterfly Filling Sword mixed with Order of Life and Death, stepping back and then unleashing the Supreme Ultimate Heavenly Sword!

“Not bad at all. Not bad!”

Ah.

If only I could be your worthy opponent.

If only I could be the sole recipient of your hopes.

I wanted you to spend your last moments in life, happy only because of me.

But I can't see.

All I can understand at most is,

"Fine. Dodge with ■■ Technique and counter with ■■■ Sword!"

-■■■■ with ■■■ Technique, then aim for the throat with ■■■■!

Just this much.

I can't see your swords.

"I'll counter, then with ■■■■'s tenth technique, ■■■■, I'll strike at ■■■ and ■■!"

-Quickly, dodge with ■■■■ and then counter with ■■■■, using ■■■■■. After countering, whirl ■■ with ■■■■'s ■ ■ ■ ■ and strike at ■■.

“■■■■, ■■■ to ■■ and ■■■ to----.”

It was dark.

The realm where the two danced was so far beyond.

"Then, after countering..."

That's when it happened.

The Master, who had been gasping for breath, turned to look at me.

"....."

For a moment, time seemed to stop.

The Master's gaze.

Her dark eyes rested on my face.

".....Yes."

A small smile graced the Master's lips.

“My disciple, the day is cold.”

"....."

“The season repeats into winter, and this place becomes a perpetual snowfield. A snowfield is a harsh battlefield for martial artists. Every step sinks deep, requiring constant use of stepping techniques.”

The Master touched the snow.

Delicate snowflakes clung to her fingertips.

“That's why battles on snowfields always focus on destabilizing the opponent's stance. Understand, my disciple? There's no need to stubbornly aim for the neck or waist. Just pressure them into losing their footing.”

“You and your ghost are thus vying for each other's space. Limiting the room to maneuver.”

The Master.

“Using a lot of kicks serves the same purpose. Not just to strike the opponent, but also to scatter the snowflakes, obscuring vision a bit. Hmm, quite a desperate fight, isn’t it?...”

The Master whispered in my ear.

“I think I’ll close my eyes.”

Her left hand gently covered my eyes.

“I can see the opponent.”

“.....Yes.”

“A mighty and noble master. He must be quite large. Almost twice the size of me, right?”

I pictured the Guardian Spirit in my mind.

“Yes.”

“A huge bear-like master, breathing heavily. There he stands, confidently smiling, beckoning me to come at him. Given the difference in physique, he must be confident...”

As the Master’s whispers continued, the Guardian Spirit’s figure became clearer.

“How could I possibly overcome the natural difference in physique? I accept it. But I remember my strengths. I can move faster than him. Above all, I am familiar with snowfields. I’ll perform the Printless Snow Walk more skillfully than him...”

“Yes.”

“It’s a long-term battle. Understand, my disciple. I am aiming for a prolonged fight.”

Ah, the Master playfully commented.

“But that fellow has seen through my plan. His movements become hurried. His swordplay quickens. He charges at me like a wild boar---.”

Soon.

"But fear not. It's all as expected. I step back, lightly, retreating---."

Before my eyes.

"I draw him in."

The scene unfolds before me.

"Continuously retreating. My steps are light, ever so light. He, like a real wild boar, charges, stirring the snowflakes in all directions---."

As winter repeats, the world becomes an eternal snowfield.

The Master, she steps back.

The Guardian Spirit charged ahead.

“---With each of our steps, snowflowers bloom and flutter.”

To me as well,

The swords of the two started to become visible.

Chapter 84: Sword Dance (2)

Winter.

"The snow is falling."

The Master's steps were light.

"It has already been two days since the duel began."

Gliding lightly, as if sliding on ice, the Master treaded on the snowfield.

A world covered in white.

The Master's black robe flowed like brush strokes on a blank canvas.

-How long do you think you can run?

Another set of brush strokes followed.

Stronger, fiercer, and more aggressive than the Master's. Like a brush heavily loaded with ink, pressing down hard.

-I won't lose just because of your movement.

Guardian Spirit, with heavy steps, breaking the ice, bulldozing the snow, charged forward.

"I am confident that I can run away forever."

-But the end will come eventually.

"Don't you know? This world has become an endless snowfield. Though there's nowhere to go, there's infinite space to flee."

-I won't let you be.

Guardian Spirit leaped, kicking off the snow.

-If you were really in your prime, maybe you could run forever. But this duel is happening now. There's hardly an hour left of your life. The hourglass is running out. Still planning to run?

"Ah, how petty."

-Truth is often petty.

Guardian Spirit swings his sword.

"Alright, I admit."

The Master turns her neck, dodging lightly.

"My life won't last much longer. I can't keep running."

-Sooner or later, we'll have to face off.

"Then there's no reason not to make it now."

-You're finally talking sense, I see.

"Then."

The Master grips her sword hilt.

"I'll show you my greatest power."

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The First Form.

Sword of Starving Death.

"---Starvation can make someone exchange their own child with the neighbor's and eat it."

The sword cries out, cutting through the winter wind.

"Have you heard the story of an adult who preserved the neighbor's child as jerky and buried it in the snow? The tale of that village? In winter, if you dig through the snow, you find young human flesh caught on every shovel."

-How sad.

Clang,

The Master's blade is blocked by Guardian Spirit's sword.

-Famine must have struck.

"Yes. Famine is like a recurring plague."

-But it's just a coincidence.

Guardian Spirit, facing the winter wind, swings his sword.

-Coincidentally, there's a good harvest, and coincidentally, a famine. There's nothing in the world that's not by chance. Lord of the Demonic Cult, if you mourn for coincidental tragedies, by the same logic, you should laugh and be happy for coincidental joys.

"....."

-The depth of one's sorrow is surely equal to the height of their happiness.

Clang,

The two swords cross.

Red plum blossoms fall.

-That's why I'll sing of the joyful autumn harvest.

Snowflakes fall like fallen leaves.

-I remember a day I walked and saw the horizon. A golden sea of grains stretched to the horizon. Children, as tall as the rice stalks, were playing hide and seek. Their laughter echoed through the stalks, hiding and reappearing.

Autumn.

The wind blows.

The hills turn red with maple, and the horizon yellow with grains.

-You talked about children buried in snow? I speak of the laughter of children playing hide and seek under the grains.

In a world showered with red maple.

The Sword Emperor swings his sword.

-Whichever it is, it's just a coincidence of a coincidental day. If there's something I should enshrine in my sword, it's the laughter under the grains, and if there's a scene I should remember at my death, it's also the sight of children playing hide and seek. An obvious choice.

"Really,"

The Master cuts through the maple leaves.

"Such a blessed speech!"

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The Second Form.

Sword of Parched Death.

"Both are coincidences, you say? Yes. But happiness doesn't kill people. It's the agony of starvation, the torment of thirst that kills! Death is the end. It's all over."

The sun blazes down.

"I sing of the people who died without a sip of water!"

Summer.

A hot wind blankets the world.

The vegetation withers.

Weeds turn yellow. Fruits shrivel. The movements of the beetles slow, and on the riverbanks lie hundreds, thousands, millions of dead fish. Flop. The round eyes of the fish are devoid of moisture.

-Ah.

The Master's sword becomes sticky.

Even though Guardian Spirit counters, the Master doesn't retreat, instead clinging closer. A close-quarters battle. The breath of each can be felt, so close they are. Clang! Bang! The swords mix rapidly, blurring the sight.

-Washing your hair in summer is so damn refreshing.

Guardian Spirit counters all the Master's swift attacks.

-You're teaching Gong-Ja wrong.

"...What?"

-Sorry, that was a bit harsh. Not wrong, but too early.

Guardian Spirit's sword flows like water.

-It's good to sing of the world's pain. It's good to turn your eyes to others' suffering. But you can't keep doing that forever.

"Why not?"

-You just get exhausted.

Clang!

Red spider lily petals fade.

-Gong-Ja hasn't yet experienced the joy of the world.

Suddenly, the roles reverse.

-You should taste the delicacies of land and sea. Only then can you mourn for those who'll never taste them. Wash your hair in summer. Only then can you cry for those dying without water. The human heart is like a candlewick. It burns, and eventually, it burns out.

-Do you know? Heavenly Demon, this guy hasn't even fallen in love yet. Ridiculous! He's never even dated!

Torrential sword strikes pour down.

-Yet he already acts as if he's shouldered all the world's pain and sorrow. Acts! Ha. Don't even dream of it. Your cult's teachings are too early!

It pours like rain.

-I'll teach him how to be joyful.

The rain pours.

-To laugh without a hint of hypocrisy. To put an arm around others. To be so happy in someone's company it's inevitable. Only then can he truly mourn endlessly!

"You're..."

The dry land receives rain. The river soaks with rainwater. The dead fish bodies are swept away by the water. The morning glory opens its purple tongue, drinking the raindrops.

Frogs croak.

"You're planning to pretend to be my disciple's teacher!"

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The Third Form.

Sword of Submerged Death.

-Exactly!

"How dare you!"

Like an unending rain.

The sword strikes rain down.

"Who are you to covet my only true disciple!"

Midsummer.

The monsoon overflows.

Roses by the thousands drift in the river.

-You're hilarious! I was planning to become his master before you!

The reservoir breaks, flooding the village. The water level rises to the mountains. On the risen water surface, the Master and Guardian Spirit leap. Splash. Splosh! Waves bloom where their steps land.

-I'm the one who taught him how to behead orcs! I'm the one who awakened him to the use of Aura! I coaxed and comforted a talentless brat into something useful! And here you are, leader of heretics, meddling!

Winter.

"What, heretics?!"

-Yes! Aren't those of the Demonic Cult a bunch of heretics!

The two glide on the water surface.

Being chased.

Ripples spread with each step.

Chasing.

Rose petals gently crushed underfoot.

Their shadows cast upon the ripples and petals.

-Swinging a sword is a joyful thing!

The smell of rain, the scent of flowers.

-The Demonic Heavenly God Art should be taught later to the disciple! A sword that wields pain, by pain, for pain! What is that! Too demonic! Sing of the joy of smelling flowers, the happiness of being drenched in summer rain!

“The disciple! My disciple! Born to be the next leader of our cult!”

-That's why they call you a cult leader! Heretical leader!

Hundreds of millions of roses.

Suddenly, the flooded river fades. The surface fades. Covered by roses, petals.

The world turns into a red flower field.

"■■■■, ■■■. ■■■■."

-■■■, ■■, ■■■■. ■■■!

Spring.

Flowers flow.

Red peonies scatter, drifting in the sky.

“—With the sixth form of Peony Sword Chaos, Scatter Strike Chaos, I shall gouge your cervical acupoints.”

Clang!

Two petals, severed by the blade, fall apart.

-I’ll avoid that with Snow Amidst Orchids Steps.

They were visible.

“...With the seventh form of Demonic Heavenly God Art, Sword of Contusing Death, I will strike.”

And audible.

-I respond with the fourth form of Ten Thousand Sea Moon Strike, Autumn Night Falling Moon Strike.

Their swords become visible.

The crushed peonies, stepped on, their fragrance released, are seen.

"....."

Only when visible, can it be known.

The Master.

Lord of the Demonic Cult, Heavenly Demon, is losing.

".....With the eighth form of Demonic Heavenly God Art, Sword of Scorching Death, I resist."

Under the peony-filled sky, the Master bleeds.

Bloodied.

The difference in strength between the Master and Sword Emperor is clear. No matter how much she prolonged the duel, escaping the Sword Emperor's pursuit was impossible. The Master, trying the impossible, bleeds from her arms, legs, shoulders.

-Hm.

Guardian Spirit takes a stance.

-Strike with the first form of Falling Sun and Flower Sword, Moonlit Night Arrival Sword.

The Master's breathing becomes thinner.

Her internal energy is depleted.

Attempting mutual destruction with her remaining energy is overambitious.

"I..."

The Master speaks.

“Originally, I never completed the last technique of Demonic Heavenly God Art. There's one reason. Since childhood, my envisioned death was freezing. Abandoned by my mother in the snowfield, dying alone from the cold. That was the end I always saw for myself.”

The Master raises her sword high.

“However.”

The sword tip points directly upward, like a noon clock hand.

“Paradoxically, after the world ended, I was able to complete the ninth technique of Demonic Heavenly God Art.”

"....."

“I am my own lord, throughout heaven and earth.”

“Looking up to heaven, walking under the sky, only I exist. Baraya. Baraya. Agabaraya. The world becomes winter, a single candle flickers. My song alone is the world's song, and my death, the demise of heaven and earth. White, whiter, and even whiter.”

The sword,

Splits the sky.

"My Demonic Heaven will leave this as my final word in the snowfield."

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The Ninth Form.

Sword of Solitude Death.

"-----."

Winter,

Cuts through spring.

The red sky of petals splits. Through the gap, white winter storms in. The storming winter falls. Petals turn to snow, hundreds of millions of peonies become snowflakes, freezing the world.

A solitary sword.

A strike singing the lonely death of the Heavenly Demon.

-Indeed.

Facing the winter torrent rushing at him, Guardian Spirit quietly looks up.

-Lonely death. Is that the death chosen by the Lord of the Demonic Cult? Yes. I acknowledge it. A fitting strike for the last warrior of a destroyed world.

A melancholic smile appears on Guardian Spirit's lips.

-But when it comes to loneliness, I know it better than you.

Guardian Spirit grips his sword hilt.

-How long did you endure alone in that world? 3 years? 2 years? No, not even a day. Because you always had the Axe Sage with you. When he died, you lost your mind and went insane.

The sword tip moves.

-Sorry, but.

And.

-I endured alone for 130 years.

Martial Art .

No Form.

A Single Sword.

.

.

.

.

.

.

-

-

-

-

-

-

Peonies,

-

-

-

.

.

.

Winter, Spring, Summer, Autumn,

Autumn, Winter, Spring, Summer,

Summer, Autumn, Winter, Spring,

Spring, Summer, Autumn, Winter,

Plum, peony, rose, and spider lily,

Spider lily, plum, peony, and rose,

Petals, petals, petals, petals,

Red, redder, reddest, red,

Winter,

Turns red,

Again winter,

Winter,

Breath,

.

.

.

.

•

•

•

•

•

•

•

•

"-----"

I gasp for breath.

"----Ah!!"

It was imperceptible.

Unperceivable.

I couldn't even begin to comprehend that final strike.

“Ha, ah, uh...! Ha, ah...”

But...

Right now, there's something more important than understanding that sword.

“Master.”

"....."

“Master, are you okay...? Your body, is it okay?”

The Master gazes silently towards the winter sky, her eyes unfocused. Thump. My heart races. I fumble for the Master's hand, repeatedly feeling for her pulse.

It's beating.

She's alive.

Still alive.

“Master.”

"....."

The Master slowly speaks.

“So that is how it is.”

"So that is how it is," says the Master, looking into my eyes.

“Disciple.”

Her dark eyes.

“My disciple. From the start, you only ever sought to help me.”

“To claim that you came from another world out of admiration for me...A blatant lie. Why didn't I realize it sooner? My disciple is not one to be swayed by fame...”

Her voice trails off.

"Thank you."

"....."

“Disciple, were you happy that you met me?”

I nod.

“Yes.”

“Will I be remembered as a flower in your memory?”

“Yes, Master.”

“What type of flower, I wonder.”

“A peony...”

I embrace the Master.

“As a red peony. That's how I will remember you, Master.”

“Ah.”

The Master smiles.

“How pretty.”

The Master gently caresses my cheek.

“How pretty.....”

And.

With her remaining hand, she gestures towards the sky.

A delicate motion, reminiscent of a newborn bird testing its wings.

“My disciple...”

Silently.

Without a sound, the snow-laden mountain is rent asunder.

Split in half, the snow-covered peaks stand undisturbed; as if they were always meant to be so.

The Master breathes a white breath.

She dreams a white dream.

“Master.....”

I bury my face in the Master's shoulder. In her ceased breath.
In this frozen moment of time. In the scent of snow from one born of its fragrance.

“You have cut the winter, Master...”

“You have cut the winter.”

That day.

The winter of a world was severed.

Chapter 85: The Reader's Heart (1)

I held the Master in my arms for a long time.

Even when the breath ceases, the human body remains.

That's why death is so harsh and cruel.

"Sir."

After a while, I heard a voice calling me. Warriors in black martial arts uniforms, the elite of the Demonic Cult, gathered around me.

While I silently held the Master, the Great Orthodox-Demonic War continued. In the end, the Demonic Cult emerged victorious.

"During the battle, we were preoccupied, but many disciples heard the Master call you [Disciple]."

A warrior asked with a tense face.

"Could it be that you, Sir, are the rightful successor appointed by Lord Heavenly Demon?"

"....."

I looked around.

All the surviving disciples gazed at me. Even those whom the Master called the Four Demon Lords. Some had bleeding noses, torn lips, or severed arms. Everyone was soaked in blood, all silently waiting for my response.

"...I'm not sure if I've received the succession."

"Didn't the Master accept you as a disciple?"

"That's true."

I held the Master's cold body a bit tighter.

"I am the Master's disciple."

"....."

The warrior's face hardened further.

"If the Master truly accepted a true disciple, then surely, you must have been taught the Demonic Heavenly God Art. I must rudely ask this. Sir, please demonstrate a strand of the Demonic Heavenly God Art before us."

The tone was polite, but it was the same as saying [Prove that you really are the Heavenly Demon's disciple].

'Being the Master's disciple automatically makes me a successor.'

I realized why the Master hesitated so much in accepting me as a disciple. Becoming the Heavenly Demon's true disciple meant being the rightful successor of the Demonic Cult.

Now, with the Master's last warmth gone from this world, the Demonic Cult's teachings were mine.

"...Alright. Would demonstrating the Sword of Starving Death be sufficient?"

"Yes. The Master often said [Even if you miss a single hair, you won't be acknowledged as my successor]. We may be just ordinary swordsmen, but we have the ability to discern and judge from a glimpse of your swordplay."

Other disciples murmured around us.

"Hey, what's that Blood Demon ranting about?"

"Don't you get it? By seeing the first form of the Demonic Heavenly God Art, we can tell if he's really the Heavenly Demon's disciple."

"Really? But why's that guy representing us?"

"He's the most mannered among us, coming from the Moyong clan. Even though he's an illegitimate child."

“What? That guy's from the Moyong bastards?”

“Hey, why are you acting surprised? This story has been told dozens of times... Enough. A river is a river, a mountain is a mountain, and a meathead will always be a meathead.”

“What's that supposed to mean?”

“It means your mere existence is comparable to the toxic techniques of the Sichuan School. Sword Demon, considering I currently have cancer because of you, despite mastering the Thousand Poison Invulnerability, you're quite remarkable.”

“Oh? Is that a compliment?”

“Fuckin' blockhead.”

“Ahem.”

The warrior coughed and glared at the murmuring disciples. His eyes carried a stern warning to keep quiet.

But the Sword Demon and Hell Ghost Demon tilted their heads in confusion.

“What're you looking at? Wanna fight?”

“Annoying. Look somewhere else. It makes me sick.”

"....."

The warrior turned back to me. His eyes seemed to say, [Nothing just happened].

“Ah.”

I chuckled a bit.

‘Yeah. This place has always been like this.’

The Demonic Cult was originally a refuge for the uneducated. My Master was an orphan. It was natural for most disciples to be ignorant of manners.

"Starvation means---"

I didn't draw my sword. I didn't want to swing a blade while holding the Master. I just channeled Aura into my left hand and gestured.

A strike engraved itself on the snowfield.

"---children waiting for sunlight."

Startled.

The representative warrior and the murmuring disciples all fell silent. My strike created a deep ravine in the snow, like a wound on someone's body.

I didn't stop at just demonstrating the first form. I performed the second, third, fourth... all the forms I had mastered to the extreme.

Silence fell around us.

Thanks to witnessing the Master and Guardian Spirit's fierce battle, each of my strikes seemed sharper than before. This, too, was the Master's arrangement.

"I haven't fully mastered the remaining forms yet. It would be embarrassing to show them."

"Is this enough?"

Rustle!

The warrior knelt on the snow.

"I greet the rightful successor of the Demonic Cult. Our new Heavenly Demon."

Following him, the Hell Ghost Demon, Moon Shadow Demon, and Sword Demon knelt in succession. Rustle, crunch. Their knees crushed the snow. All the surviving disciples from the Great Orthodox-Demonic War bowed down on the snowfield.

"We greet the rightful successor of the Demonic Cult! Our new Lord!"

I slowly spoke.

"The title of Heavenly Demon is too grand. I already have the alias King of Death, and I wish for the Master's title to remain forever in her name alone."

"Then..."

"The title of Lord also feels too weighty."

I turned my head. Guardian Spirit, arms crossed, quietly closed his eyes, probably recalling the battle with the Master. I glanced at his face, then spoke to the disciples.

"I still have much to learn. How can I be the Lord when I have nothing to teach you? A title for the sake of a title."

The warrior looked perplexed.

"...In his lifetime, the Heavenly Demon never erred in choosing a person. If she accepted you as a true disciple, you're undoubtedly fit for the role of Lord."

“Thank you. But by my judgment, I am still lacking to carry on the teachings of the Demonic Cult.”

The disciples murmured.

“Then, how shall we address you, Sir? We can’t just keep calling you ‘Sir’...”

“Vice-lord.”

Someone blurted out.

“Call me Vice-lord.”

It was the Hell Ghost Demon. The disciple who lied about giving three moves to the Shaolin monk. His broken nose hadn’t fully healed, leaving dried blood on his philtrum.

“In the martial world, it’s common to call someone Junior Master or Junior Clan Lord. If it’s too burdensome to assume the role of Lord, but not outright refusing it, calling you Vice-lord is appropriate.”

“Hmm.”

I nodded. That was acceptable.

“Yes. Let it be so.”

The disciples sighed in relief. Their faces visibly relaxed as they looked at me.

“Vice-lord. We sincerely thank you. We don't know what miraculous technique you used, but we all remember being bitten by the zombies. If it weren't for you, finishing the Great Orthodox-Demonic War and paying respects to Lord Heavenly Demon would've been impossible!”

The warrior saluted me.

“The top of the Demonic Cult's Four Demon Lords. Blood Demon here. I, along with all of Blood Ghost Troops, pledge loyalty to you, Vice-lord.”

Others followed suit.

“The top of the Demonic Cult’s Four Demon Lords. Hell Ghost Demon. I, along with all of Soul Repentance Troops, swear fealty to you, Vice-lord.”

“Moon Shadow Demon here. I, along with all of Shadow Corpse Troops, commit our loyalty to you, Vice-lord.”

“Sword Demon! Along with Extermination Troops, I vow my allegiance.”

Dozens more followed.

"....."

I gently laid the Master down.

The Master, like a flower born in the snowfield, matched perfectly with the white snow.

I saluted the disciples.

"As long as my life endures, the shadow doctrine shall be immortal."

Just then.

[Stage Cleared.]

[You have cleared Volume 1 of the quest 'Remake The World!]

It felt like forever since I heard this voice.

[Today, the 22nd floor stage has been cleared.]

[Announcing once again.]

[Today, the 22nd floor stage has been cleared.]

It seemed so long since I heard it.

[Assessing raid participants...]

[Assessment complete.]

Without releasing my salute, I spoke.

"Please arrange the Master's funeral."

[Announcing the 4 raid participants.]

The mountain split in two by the Master's gesture.

Letters carved into the sky above the mountain peak.

+

[Raid Contribution Ranking]

1st place: King of Death

2nd place: Apothecary

3rd place: Viper

4th place: Medicine King

+

“Please don't hold a grand funeral. The Master wouldn't want it. Just being present until the end of the funeral will make her happy. Take care of the Master, Please---”

I didn't continue.

There was no need, and I couldn't.

When I blinked, my body was no longer in the snowfield.

“Welcome back, King of Death.”

The Great Library of All Knowledge.

"I've been waiting anxiously for you!"

The Constellation, the Head Librarian, smiled with his eyes and looked at me.

"Congratulations!"

The Head Librarian was floating in the air.

Her 5-meter-long sleeves fluttered like goldfish fins.

"Hmm. The last word of 'The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon' ended with 'please'. Hmm. The word 'please' signifies a wish for someone. A wish, a prayer. In the Demonic Cult, it's called 'Baraya'. 'Please' and 'Baraya' can be seen as the same. In that sense, it's quite an appropriate ending..."

"Wait a moment."

I interrupted the Head Librarian's lengthy explanation.

I felt a sense of [dissonance].

It was my second time in the Great Library. I had spent nights reading here before. I was quite familiar with this place.

However, compared to my last visit, something was glaringly different.

"...Why are all the other hunters unconscious?"

The hunters who participated in the Apocalypse strategy.

All 250 hunters with aliases lay sprawled on the floor.

"Hmm."

The Head Librarian raised the corner of her lips.

"Don't worry. They're just put to sleep temporarily."

"Asleep...?"

"Yes. I used a harmless fragrance."

The Head Librarian reached out his hand. Around the Constellation, dozens of books floated. Among them was one titled [Tale of a Lotus-Scented City].

"There are many worlds where people communicate with words, but there are also worlds where they communicate through song, and even through scent. In this Apocalypse, people converse using the scents of anger, sorrow, and joy."

"....."

"Of course, there's also a scent for sleep."

I was on alert.

"Oh, don't look at me like that. I just wanted to talk to the King of Death, so I quieted the surroundings for a bit."

A talk.

"What kind of talk do you want to have after knocking out my colleagues?"

"Ah, [colleagues]. That's just like the King of Death! Though you could see them as burdensome and useless baggage, naturally, you think of them as colleagues. I'm moved to tears once again by your noble heart."

"....."

"This place has seen every move and step of you and your companions. Like a movie. A crucible of emotions. Really. The people here would've greeted the King of Death warmly."

The Head Librarian giggled.

"But if I left them as is, I would only be able to talk to you much later, right? My turn would be far back in line." The Head Librarian shrugged.

"To create a moment for conversation, I had no choice but to calm people down for a while. Don't worry. I used the most gentle method available to put them to sleep."

I found it hard to believe at once.

I quickly looked around. The Witch was there, leaning against a bookshelf with her long hair trailing down. I approached her and gently felt her pulse.

Thump.

Thump.

Thankfully.

Her complexion looked relaxed, and her breathing was back to normal.

I confirmed that my colleague was safe and then looked up at the Head Librarian.

"...Finish your talk quickly and wake everyone up."

"Are you in such a hurry? I wanted to have a more leisurely conversation with you. I specifically summoned only you, leaving out the other participants."

"I still have unfinished business on the 22nd floor. A sword to find..."

"Later."

The Head Librarian's eyes smiled like inverted crescent moons.

"That can be explored later."

"....."

Tension filled the air.

Despite his small stature, the Head Librarian was no joke. He could summon the bizarre monsters of other worlds at will. Last time, he swallowed up nearly 50 hunters in an instant.

'Even with the mastery of the Demonic Heavenly God Art, facing him now would mean certain defeat.'

I swallowed hard.

"...What do you want to talk about?"

The Head Librarian's smile deepened.

"A very intimate conversation."

Flutter.

The Head Librarian fluttered his sleeves and landed on the ground. Approaching me, he took something out of his sleeve.

"Hmm."

It was a pair of scissors.

"Why the scissors all of a sudden...?"

"Your hair has grown quite a bit, King of Death. Let me trim it for you."

The Head Librarian hopped up and started snipping my hair swiftly. Not much was cut, just about half a palm's length from the back. He placed the cut hair into a red silk pouch.

"....."

"And your nails are long too. It's a big deal if a martial artist doesn't maintain their nails. Let me cut them for you."

The Head Librarian took out another item from his sleeve.

It was a nail clipper.

He grabbed my right hand and started clipping my nails, one by one. From the pinky to the thumb, he cut them all. Each nail was placed into different silk pouches.

Hmm.

"Excuse me, Head Librarian?"

"Yes."

"What exactly are you doing?"

"King of Death."

The Head Librarian bent down, kneeling on the floor. He started to remove my shoes as if it were the most natural thing.

"Imagine someone you like very, very much. So much."

"...I'll try. What about it?"

"That person doesn't exist in reality but only in the pages of a novel. An ideal character from a story."

The Head Librarian took off my socks.

"But then, voilà! What a twist of fate! The character from your dreams appears right before your eyes."

"Uh..."

"Imagine your feelings then."

The Head Librarian spoke earnestly, holding a toenail clipper.

"Yes. That's it."

"....."

"That's it."

What does he mean by 'that's it'?

"Ah, ah! Don't move! What are you doing! If you move, my toenail clipper might leave a terrible scar on your marble-like toes! That would be terrible!!"

"Why are you yelling at me! Leave now!"

"Wait! Wait! Just let me clip one little toenail! Just one toenail! I've compromised this much, shouldn't that be enough!"

"Why are you doing this to me?!"

"Ah! Ah! If not the toenails, then how about three eyebrow hairs? I'm fine with negotiating for that!"

At that moment, I realized the true nature of the [dissonance].

"You weren't someone who used formal speech!"

That's right.

The Constellation Head Librarian didn't use formal speech. He insisted on speaking in a haughty tone. He definitely did, but now she was using formal speech with me. That was the source of the dissonance.

"Use your usual haughty tone with me!"

The Head Librarian's lips quivered.

"It's impossible! How can I, a mere insignificant creature, dare to speak in such a manner to the Radiant Sir?!"

Insane.

[The Holed-Up Head Librarian wants your toenails.]

What insanity.

'Character Window!'

Struggling not to give up my toenails to the Head Librarian, letters appeared before me.

+

Name: Holed-Up Head Librarian

Favorability: 95

Preferred Genres: [Fusion], [Romance], [Mystery], [Adventure], [Horror], [History], [War], [Sports], [SF], [Mythology], [Fairy Tale]...

Disliked Genres: None

Preferred Characters: [Fictional Characters], [Constellation Killer]

Disliked Characters: None

Preferred Plots: [Story]

Disliked Plots: [Serialization Cancellation]

Psychological State: 'Toenails! I must obtain them, even eyebrows if possible! Ah, I wish he would grow a beard so I could pluck some hairs, but that's impossible. Ah, Radiant Sir, Light of Lights! Oh brilliant protagonist! How I wish to preserve you as a bookmark forever!'

+

Such madness.

Chapter 86: The Reader's Heart (2)

Goosebumps. A favorability of 95.

And now I was witnessing what happens when someone reaches a favorability of 95.

"Radiant Sir! Until I saw you, I was nothing more than a blind lowly being!"

While fiddling with my feet, the Head Librarian shouted out.

"Until I heard your words and dialogue, I was deaf!"

As he attempted to clip my toenails with the nail clippers, the Head Librarian's eyes shone.

"You are my light! You are my music!"

His gaze was frighteningly intense.

"I'll gladly convert to Confucianism since your name is Gong-ja! I will become a scholar solely for you! Ah, a King requires a friend-like subject that shares his vision! From today onwards, I am a Confucian scholar dedicated to serving you, Gong-ja!"

"Hey, hold on, stop!"

What kind of Confucian scholar covets someone's toenails?

That's what I wanted to retort, but looking into the Head Librarian's eyes, I realized. Those eyes were not normal. They were eyes that would gleefully ignore whatever I said. His breath was already heavy.

"If you keep doing this, I'm not entering any more Apocalypses!"

"....."

He paused. The Head Librarian stopped holding my foot, but the scary part was that his fiddling fingers continued their motion. Was she crazy?

The Head Librarian pondered deeply, like a troubled scholar.

“.....Indeed. That's a valid threat.”

For a moment, I felt relieved that my words had an effect.

"But that's impossible for Gong-ja. You know there are characters like the Heavenly Demon in other Apocalypses who are unjustly withering away. With your nature, you couldn't stand not helping them."

The Head Librarian smiled.

"Don't underestimate a fan. I know more about you than you know about yourself! I can describe which hand you used, your expression when you ate the Grain Pill on the first day of 'The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon', across two pages..."

Was he really crazy? This was madness.

"Okay, Gong-ja. Just hand over what I need to take from you! Even though I didn't put you to sleep with the sleeping scent, it's a testament to how incredibly conscientious I am."

"I'm shocked at your so-called conscience."

"You wouldn't understand, having never been someone's fan. Oh, the misery! To have never experienced being a fan in your life! How cold must a heart be that has never been passionate about someone? But I must still understand our Radiant Sir..."

"Back off before I say [I dislike you]."

He stopped immediately.

"Move five steps away from me. If you don't, I'll really say it."

"....."

The Head Librarian obediently backed away.

"Use your usual haughty tone. It's creepy. Honestly. And please give back my hair and nails."

"No way! That's utterly unreasonable!"

His usual tone returned.

The Head Librarian clutched the silk pouches and made a mournful face.

"Rather, take my head! No, wait, Gong-ja. That was an exaggeration. Don't seriously consider taking my head... It really hurts me..."

He mumbled like a deflated hamster.

Eventually, I managed to calm the Head Librarian down.

After burning the silk pouches containing the creepy contents (I heard terrible screams), the Head Librarian and I finally started having a proper conversation.

"It was tremendous."

The Head Librarian first reviewed the newly completed 'The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon'.

"Your heart for the Heavenly Demon was truly noble! Just by becoming his disciple, you could have seen the [Ending]. But you didn't stop there! The final battle of righteousness... The ultimate duel... Oh, it was like tasting a sweet chocolate ice cream bingsu."

"Does this mean the world of 'The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon' is now incorporated into the 22nd floor?"

"That's right."

The Head Librarian smiled.

"Other hunters can freely enter and exit the 22nd floor. They can even learn skills by viewing the martial arts manuals stored in the Heavenly Martial Library. All thanks to your contributions, King of Death."

"....."

I propped my chin.

"I've been curious about something while in the Apocalypse. I want to ask you, Head Librarian..."

"Ask anything! I'll answer almost everything!"

"Just stop trying to take off my shoes sneakily. Why is 'The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon' an Apocalypse?"

The Head Librarian tilted her head, seemingly puzzled by my question.

"Why? Hmm. Is there a specific reason why 'The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon' should be an Apocalypse?"

"In my opinion..."

I put my shoes back on.

"Do you prefer happy endings, Head Librarian? Or do you prefer bad endings?"

"Either is incomparable."

The Head Librarian answered immediately.

"An ending is the harbor where characters' lives ultimately arrive. Life can be happy or arduous! While readers generally hope for happiness, I want to embrace their sadness and failures too."

"So a bad ending is a legitimate conclusion too."

"Hmm. Of course."

"That's why I'm even more puzzled."

I grabbed the Head Librarian's wrist as he tried to come behind me again and snatched the scissors. The Head Librarian hopped trying to take them back, but couldn't reach them.

"Even if I hadn't intervened, 'The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon' had a proper ending. A bad one, but still."

"The Heavenly Demon, along with the Head of the Martial Alliance, did their best to the end. They tried. Even if the Head of the Martial Alliance died first and the Heavenly Demon went mad... That's the conclusion they reached."

I looked into the Head Librarian's eyes.

"Why is 'The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon' included in the Apocalypse? Is it because if the Head of the Martial Alliance dies and the Heavenly Demon goes insane, it's not considered a proper ending?"

In fact, this question arose when I saw the fairy tale 'Me and Our Scapegoat'. Regardless of whether I could accept it or not, it seemed like a world that had naturally reached its conclusion according to its course.

The Constellation was silent.

In the library, only the breaths of unconscious hunters flowed quietly. Amidst the rising and falling chests of hunters, the Head Librarian remained expressionless.

"Maybe I just wanted to see a happy ending. Is that reason not good enough?"

"If you don't like the ending, you could have changed it yourself."

"....."

"You are powerful. To me, you seem omnipotent. Yet, instead of directly changing the Apocalypse, you sent us."

Therefore, this Constellation is a 'reader'.

A reader who abhors meddling in stories and simply accepts them. Never wishing or daring to be in the 'author's position. Even if capable, they refuse.

A reader who never intervenes.

Namely, the 'Holed-Up Head Librarian'.

"I could analyze your character too, couldn't I? Someone as thorough as you wouldn't classify something as an Apocalypse just because it ended weirdly. There must be some other reason why 'The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon' and other Apocalypses are classified as such."

".....Indeed, you're not easy to convince."

The Head Librarian gave a bitter smile.

"Follow me."

He grabbed my hand. On his other hand, was a book he picked up.

The title was 'The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon'.

“---I will show you the truth of the Apocalypses.”

The Constellation opened the book.

And a light engulfed my vision.

When I opened my eyes, we were in the world of snowfields.

But there was no need to walk through the snowfields. The Head Librarian still firmly held my hand, flapping his long sleeves like the wings of a goose, flying through the winter sky.

“Suppose.”

We flew over the snowfields.

“Suppose the zombie virus was a naturally occurring epidemic in 'The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon'. If that were really the case. As you said, I would never have made this place an Apocalypse.”

We crossed the snowy mountains.

"That means..."

"The zombie virus wasn't a disease that occurred naturally here. It's a contagious disease introduced from the outside world. Much like the New World being invaded by external forces."

Ha. The Head Librarian let out a white breath.

"Look there."

We were at the peak of a high mountain.

The spiritual peak of this world.

At the top of the mountain, touching the ceiling of the sky, lay something enormous.

[Shiny detects an ominous presence.]

The holy sword at my waist trembled.

Noticing this, the Head Librarian said,

"Oh, your sword feels it too. Not strange, considering your sword was once a full Constellation. It's natural for beings in similar situations to recognize each other."

"Similar situations..."

"Gong-ja, have you ever seen a Constellation falling from grace?"

The Demon King of Autumn Rain. Preta.

"Yes, I have."

"But have you ever seen the corpse left behind by a dead Constellation?"

"....."

"Thought so."

The Head Librarian smiled sadly.

"It's a rare sight, so take a good look this time."

It was a dragon.

A dragon's corpse.

At the peak of the mountain lay a dead dragon.

What was once silky smooth skin was now charred black. The horns on the dragon's head crumbled like coal. The broken Spirit Orb was buried in the snow.

And then.

[Shiny senses the presence of its sister sword.]

A sword was stuck in its chest.

[Shiny says that it's the second sister sword, the Sword of Pity!]

Black corrupt energy flowed from the sword.

It could be considered Aura. But it wasn't ordinary Aura. It was similar, no, even darker than what surrounded the Demon King of the Autumn Rain. The swirling corrupt energy enveloped the dragon and covered the peak of the snowy mountain. As white snowflakes landed on the peak, they were immediately infected by the corrupt energy, turning black.

-It hurts.....

Black eyes.

-I feel wronged.....

From the lifeless eyes of the black dragon, moans escaped.

-It hurts. It's painful.....

-It's agonizing.

-It's wronged. It's bitter. It's stinging. It hurts.....

I momentarily lost my words.

"...You said it was dead. But that, it's still alive."

"It's already dead. What you see and hear there is nothing but the resentment of the corpse. When a being reaches the status of a Constellation, it can't die peacefully."

We both landed on the snowy peak.

The black dragon continued its endless moaning nearby.

The Head Librarian looked sorrowfully at the end of this Constellation.

"The epidemic you called the zombie virus is a curse."

"A curse....."

"Indeed. The curse left behind by the death of this world's Constellation, [The Golden Dragon of the Great River]. A grudge that can't die even in death. A body that continues to suffer, infected with a curse that makes its inhabitants turn into Jiangshi."

I looked up at the dragon's corpse.

-It hurts.....

The host of the epidemic. The source of the curse.

The disease that destroyed this world started right from that corpse.

Ultimately, it was because of this dragon's curse that my teacher passed away.

"...If the Constellation didn't stab itself in the chest, then someone killed it."

"That would be the logical conclusion."

"Who's the culprit?"

"You've already guessed the perpetrator."

I gritted my teeth.

"Leafanta Aegim."

"That's right."

The Head Librarian nodded.

"The Constellation Killer. A being who traverses the boundaries of worlds, slaying Constellations."

Constellations represent the essence of their respective worlds, as Shiny had explained.

"And a world that loses its Constellation is like a castle without its walls. Such worlds become highly susceptible to catastrophic destruction."

The Apocalypse.

A world where its representative is gone, and its inhabitants have disappeared.

"Why would someone who founded the Aegim Empire and should be content ruling as emperor wreak havoc on innocent worlds?"

"That, I cannot answer."

The Head Librarian scrutinized my face.

"I am but a mere reader. You called me omnipotent, but it's not true. If anything, I am omniscient but impotent. I can know the truths of worlds, but I don't interfere in them."

The Head Librarian spoke self-deprecatingly, then suddenly pointed at my waist.

"But you are different."

My waist, where I carried the sword.

"You can intervene, and you are intervening. Whether you want to or not, you are fixing things one by one that someone else has broken."

"Once could be a coincidence. Twice could be fate. But thrice becomes inevitability. You saved the empire abandoned by the Constellation Killer, collected the shattered Constellation, and now you have arrived in a world destroyed because of the Constellation Killer."

The Head Librarian said,

"The method used to kill [The Golden Dragon of the Great River] was vicious and cruel. Ordinary people can't even touch that sword. But you can. Gong-ja. You have turned coincidence and fate into inevitability."

I looked again at the corpse of the black dragon.

Muttering in my mind.

'Shiny.'

The holy sword vibrated slightly.

[Yes, Hero, Shiny responds.]

'How do I collect your sisters?'

[Shiny says to pull it out and touch the sister sword with it.]

'Alright.'

I drew my sword.

The winter air split.

I struck down on the sword embedded in the black dragon's chest with mine.

[The Goddess of Protection absorbs a fragment of herself.]

Instantly, my sword was surrounded by light.

Chapter 87: The Reader's Heart (3)

Light flowed from my sword, enveloping the black dragon.

[The Sword of Pity resists absorption!]

The resistance wasn't insignificant. Black venomous energy surged like sewage water in the summer monsoon. It was as if a black panther, quiet until now, suddenly woke up in alarm.

[The Sword of Pity is bewildered.]

[It rebukes the Goddess of Protection for betraying Leafanta Aegim.]

[The Goddess of Protection soothes her sister.]

My holy sword's light and the dragon's shadow tumultuously

intertwined.

[The Sword of Pity demands proof of the new master's worthiness.]

White and black.

Neither side seemed willing to back down easily.

[The power of a Constellation is immense. It must never be bestowed upon one who is unworthy. The Sword of Pity does not yet recognize you as its new master.]

"Fine."

I quietly observed the sword embedded in the black dragon's chest.

"There's logic in that. But how do you suggest I prove my worthiness?"

Corrupt energy leaked from the dragon's corpse. Dense venomous energy, more profound than ever before, took shape.

A dark angel.

An angel formed entirely of a murky substance from toe to head.

[A fragment formed from the Goddess's fallen compassion.]

[If you have proven to be someone's idol -]

[Now, you must prove your ability to feel compassion for others.]

The expressionless angel spread its wings.

Even the wings were tainted.

From the outstretched black wings, thick droplets of dark saliva fell.

[It requests to momentarily entrust your body and mind to it.]

"Why is that necessary?"

[To glimpse into your memories.]

The light emanating from my holy sword intensified.

[The Goddess of Protection disagrees. Traveling together will inevitably show whether you are a worthy master. There's no need to take unnecessary risks.]

"No, it's fine."

I sheathed my sword.

"I can't carry a sword that doesn't trust me, even if it's a world renowned blade. If it makes me uneasy, I can't bear it. Come! Come and steal whatever you like from my memories until you're satisfied."

At the moment I spread my arms wide,

[The Sword of Pity tests your compassion.]

The angel's wings enveloped my vision. Like a mother bird wrapping its wings around its chick, the massive black wings surrounded me.

Darkness encompassed me.

Then, dream-like visions flowed before my eyes.

「 Kind sir. 」

A garden engulfed in flames.

「 Just bear with it a little longer.... 」

「 Poor souls. 」

Paradise shrouded in smoke.

「 The world has become emptiness. 」

A peony blooming red in a snowy field.

「 My dear disciple. 」

The mansion, paradise, and snowy field rapidly passed by.

Suddenly, the darkness brightened.

The angel's wings that had covered my vision disappeared.

[.....]

The black angel hastily retracted its wings and looked at me. Although still expressionless, its black eyes betrayed an undeniable sense of bewilderment.

[You are.....]

"I am not perfect."

I spoke first.

"I'm weak to people's kindness. I desire their favor. I go out of my way for it. I love being praised and struggle to be seen as a 'good person' by others. That might be my weakness."

The fragment of the Constellation closed its lips.

"And your previous master was no different in being imperfect."

[.....]

"I don't yet know what grand purpose Leafanta Aegim has in killing Constellations. It might be a noble act. But, even so, I'll hold Leafanta Aegim accountable."

I drew my sword and pointed it at the black angel.

"If you think your previous master was perfect and made no mistakes, then don't follow me. I don't need such a sword."

The black angel slowly began to speak.

[Do you intend to kill Leafanta Aegim?]

"If he is a man deserving of death."

[Can you promise that your judgment will not be influenced by personal emotions?]

"I don't know."

I spoke honestly.

"My master died. The martial realm crumbled. Too many people were hurt and died; I'm not sure. But I promise to do my best."

[.....]

"Then, if I seem to stray, do your best to correct me. I will do my best. You do your best. That's what it means to be together."

The black angel's wings crumbled.

[My power is pain.]

[Those cut by me will feel pain, but their bodies will never be wounded, nor will they die.]

[Pain without injury is my true ability.]

The angel's form collapsed.

It turned into black water.

[New master.]

[I swear to serve you to the best of my abilities.]

Whoosh!

The black saliva swirled and poured into my holy sword, like a fierce flood. The sword absorbed all the water like a parched desert fox.

[The existence of the Goddess of Protection becomes more defined.]

The transformation didn't stop there.

-Oh, oh.....

The once Constellation of this martial realm, the divine beast.

Even the blade embedded in its chest flowed down and was absorbed by my sword, causing the black dragon to moan.

-Ohhh.....

The black dragon had been slain long ago. It no longer had the will to express anything verbally. It just groaned, tired of life, like an exhausted old woman.

-Ohhh, oh.....

Eventually, the dragon's corpse melted into essence.

Its horns crumbled like dry coal. Its scales melted like candle wax. A beast that once reigned as a myth in a world met its end.

And then winter crumbled.

The eternal snow of the mountains collapsed. It was an avalanche.

Standing at the summit, I could look down at the world as the snow crumbled beneath my feet.

"Winter is the season of death."

The Head Librarian looked at the earth beside me.

"You ended the lonely season by your own hands."

The white avalanche engulfed the white world. However, the land left behind after the avalanche was no longer white.

The brown color of the earth shone through.

The brown was the flesh of this world. Finally, after a long winter, the earth began to bare its skin.

"....."

Why does the spring breeze smell so different from the winter wind?

Did my master know where the scent of spring came from?

"...Head Librarian."

"Speak."

"I have a special ability from my clear reward that allows me to see people's characteristics. I can see what plots and characters they prefer."

"I am aware."

The Head Librarian exhaled.

"I oversee the 21st to 30th floors. The special reward you received was also prepared by me. Hmm. As it was a gift from me, of course, I would know."

"Your preferred character includes the Constellation Killer."

"Indeed."

"Why do you favor the Constellation Killer? Leafanta Aegim kills Constellations and wanders the world. It's more likely to be hated than liked. I don't understand why you would favor him."

"Hmm."

The Head Librarian closed his right eye.

"Since you've asked, I'll tell you. I have a long-held dream."

"A dream?"

"Yes. To appear directly in the novels I love!"

The Constellation's eyes shone with innocence.

I was perplexed.

"To appear directly... Can't you do that now? You can freely travel through revelations, right?"

"Haha. You don't understand a reader's heart. There's a difference between 'intervening' in a novel and 'appearing' in it. No, it's truly different."

The Head Librarian covered his mouth with his sleeves and chuckled.

"For me, as an outsider in these revelations, I am nothing but a foreign body, an invasive species... something that shouldn't exist in those worlds. Whether it's the Constellation Killer who killed the dragon of the martial realm or me, we're the same in being foreign bodies."

"....."

"I don't want to intervene in novels as such a foreign body! No, that wouldn't be right. Like a character who has always been part of that world, as an equal among other characters, I want to appear as a legitimate character! That is the dream of me, a reader of all thoughts."

I still didn't quite understand.

Noticing my expression, the Head Librarian smiled gently.

"Then, let me ask you. Why didn't you kill the Heavenly Demon?"

"....."

"The Heavenly Demon attained the realm of Killing Heart at the last moment. Though she couldn't retain her power from her life, had you collected her as a Ghoul, she would have undoubtedly become a powerful ally and an excellent master. Her affection for you was profound. Why didn't you kill the Heavenly Demon?"

"...That's because."

"Shh."

The Head Librarian placed a finger on my lips.

"It's okay. You don't have to say it. I already understand."

Gently.

The fingertip pressed against my lips.

"You didn't want to interfere with your master's final moment. It's the same for me. I don't want to directly intervene in the endings that these worlds have reached. Your heart and mine are not different..."

Gradually, the landscape melted to the horizon.

The ice on the lake thawed, and the sun shone over the water's surface.

"I refuse to intervene. Then, there is only one way for me to become a character in a story."

"What is it?"

"It's simple if you think in reverse. Instead of me going to the characters of the novels, the characters of the novels come to me."

The Head Librarian whispered.

"Leafanta Aegim, the Constellation Killer, constantly travels between worlds, killing Constellations. Someday, he will visit my world, the Great Library of All Knowledge."

The Head Librarian smiled.

"To kill me."

The Constellation pulled out something from his robe. A book. Unlike other revelations, its appearance was different. Above all, it was worn. Read dozens, maybe hundreds of times, like a seasoned author's notebook, its leather cover was frayed.

[Leafanta Aegim's Epic]

Such was the title embroidered in gold thread.

"....."

"I am waiting. For the day when the Constellation Killer visits the library. When he comes of his own accord, following the narrative of his story, standing before me. On that day, I will finally become a character in Leafanta Aegim's story."

"Even if that story's end is your death?"

"Of course."

The Head Librarian smiled brightly.

The Constellation gazed down at the thawed land.

A crane fluttered its sleeves like wings.

"To die at the hands of the protagonist, what a grand epilogue, no?"

There's an epilogue to tell.

"Ah, Vice-Lord."

Before returning to the library, I stopped by the congregation. I wanted to ensure that my master's funeral was properly conducted.

"Welcome!"

"Please, come in, Vice-Lord."

The congregation members greeted me with a bow as soon as they saw me. However, I sensed their apparent panic. It wasn't just one or two; all of them seemed flustered.

I tilted my head in confusion.

"Has the funeral already finished?"

"No, Vice-Lord. The funeral is yet to take place, but..."

"What happened?"

The congregation members glanced at each other.

"Well..."

"The Heavenly Demon's body disappeared."

One of the Four Demon Lords, the Blood Demon, spoke. He was a member often referred to as the Blood Ghost Troop Captain by my master.

"What?"

"It's best if you see for yourself, Vice-Lord."

I hurriedly followed the Blood Demon.

Shortly, we arrived at the spot where I had laid my master's body.

And there, I was at a loss for words.

"Suddenly, all the snow in the world began to melt. The Heavenly Demon's body also vanished... We are sorry. It happened so quickly that we had no time to respond."

Where the snow had melted.

My master's body was nowhere to be seen.

No matter where I looked, it was gone.

"Our guess is that the Heavenly Demon's internal energy was so pure that, over time, the body naturally melted into Ki and disappeared..."

Only red flowers were blooming.

In the spot where my master's body last lay. Where her arms reached, her feet touched, her hair fell. There, crimson peonies bloomed extravagantly.

-Remarkable.

The Guardian Spirit, silent until then, murmured.

-This world's Constellation left only a curse upon death, but your master left flowers. Better than that clueless Constellation.

I approached the floral circle and bent down. I gently stroked the petals of the peonies. They quivered slightly, rubbing their red cheeks against my index finger.

It was the first spring to bloom in this world.

"Of course, we are still preparing for the funeral."

The Blood Demon spoke from behind me.

"Please attend to honor the Vice-Lord..."

"No."

I shook my head.

"It's enough. Don't hold the funeral."

"No?"

"This is sufficient."

I stood up.

I looked around at the congregation members.

"Though I became the Vice-Lord and inherited the teachings, some of you may still not accept me. In our cult, the strongest warrior holds the highest position."

"Let's replace trivial funerals with martial arts. Offering the most valuable thing at a funeral is customary. What's more precious to us than our swords? Let's offer our swords to our master."

I smiled.

"Come at me."

Spring is coming.

As with all who live.

My next story will begin on a higher stage than ever before.

Chapter 88: Dead Ends are the Norm (1)

"We're moving the headquarters of Celestial Martial Guild to the 22nd floor."

Viper casually remarked.

This conversation took place a few days after we completed [The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon].

"Really?"

"We're moving, relocating the entire dojo. Like you who inherited the true lineage of the Demonic Cult, I've become a disciple of the Head of the Martial Alliance, haven't I? Since Celestial Martial Guild is mine, it makes sense to move it under the Martial Alliance."

Viper read a novel indifferently.

As seen before, Viper was an avid reader. His tastes might be eccentric, but this place was full of books satisfying even his bizarre preferences.

Viper, wearing non-prescription glasses (just for style, cost 9,800 won), flipped through a book with a magical cover (a Hero-class item that could be used on any book, allowing free change of title and cover design, cost 2,000 gold).

"My master became half a recluse, but he's still physically able. The Apothecary said he could still move around. So, I plan to honor him as the Supreme Guardian."

"The Martial Alliance's leader as the Supreme Guardian..."

"Yep. He was deeply saddened by the Heavenly Demon's death. It makes me feel depressed just watching him."

Viper bluntly stated.

The Guardian is a protector of a sect, literally someone who guards the law. And as the Supreme Guardian, Viper was essentially honoring the Martial Alliance's leader as the most respected elder.

"It's better to keep busy in such times. Teaching the younger generation will be beneficial, and it'll also help boost our guild members' strength."

I was slightly surprised. What a considerate action.

Viper seemed to notice my gaze and paused flipping the pages.

"...Hey, King of Death. Why are you looking at me like that?"

"No, it's just... I'm amazed. Being a leader of one of the 5 great guilds is not something anyone can do."

It was clear why he had deep loyalty from his subordinates. He really looked after his people.

"Is that so?"

Viper blushed and scratched his nose.

"Ahem. Well, don't get me wrong! I just did what was necessary. If you get praised for doing the obvious, the world would be a lonely place. Sigh, I can't have the world become lonely just because of me."

"Disappointing...."

"What?"

"I didn't say anything."

Anyway, after hearing Viper's story, I became contemplative.

Taking care of one's people. That was something I had been considering even before entering the [The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon].

Now, as the 3rd ranked hunter, was it enough to just have a high ranking and some martial arts skills? Respect, reputation. Perhaps it's time for such considerations.

Let's see.

Who in my circle could I call 'my people'...

-Ah, I want to fight a duel. I really want a fierce duel. An overwhelming, devilish duel. A life-risking duel is what I crave. Zombie, let's go to another martial world in the next revelation. This time, let's venture into a world where the Unorthodox Faction dominates!

Hmm.

No, not this guy...

"Vice-Lord! I have specially tailored nail clippers for your fingers and toes! Once you experience my clip-clip craftsmanship, you'll never want to trim your own nails and toenails again! Just 3 minutes! No, just 2 minutes! Please, just give me 120 seconds with your hands and feet!"

Definitely not this constellation-nut.

Even more so not this one.

[Shiny sings today as well. About the Hero's brilliant achievements. About the Hero's majestic roar from the ramparts of the Aegim Empire. About the Hero's fierce yet beautiful struggle in the martial world. Ah, Shiny is delighted to see the Hero's face today. For a thousand years. Ten thousand years. Forever.]

"....."

Wait.

Is there no normal person around me?

No one?

Seriously?

Strange. I'm normal. A model student trying to live a regular life. So why are there only crazy ghosts, mad constellations, and silly swords around me?

Thinking about it, all three aren't even 'human'. Crazy. Is this my destiny? If this is my destiny, isn't it a bit dog-like? Maybe the god is a dog? This Siberian Husky-like....

“Ah, King of Death! What are you pondering over?”

“The Heretic Inquisitor, I was thinking it'd be good if you could negotiate with the Aegim world's clerics on Floor 13. It'd be nice for the newbie hunters to receive quests there.”

“Oho! I was actually thinking along the same lines. It seems we share similar thoughts, King of Death! I shall head there!”

After sending off the blond Cozy Bear-like man, I became even more uncertain about my fortune.

“Umm. Ki-King of Death.”

A savior appeared before my despairing eyes.

“We've successfully mass-produced the zombie virus antidote. The ingredients are readily available. Taking a preventive shot should make it safe to roam around the 22nd floor.”

This is the one!

“Miss Apothecary.”

“Yes, y-yes. King of Death...”

“Have you ever thought about relocating?”

As I mentioned the plan I had considered after the Apothecary and Medicine King duel, the Apothecary blinked in surprise.

“Me?”

“Your current shop is too small. With your growing reputation after clearing this stage, you need to expand. Can you handle the orders with your current capacity?”

“Well. I have thought about expanding, but the real estate prices on Floor 1... As you know, it requires a huge loan. The Countess offered to cover it all with a contract, but...”

“Don’t sign that, no matter what.”

Where did this cat come from, meddling in other people's fish?

“Real estate. I'll cover all of that.”

I boldly declared.

“In addition to relocation and interior design costs. I'll take care of it all, so just bring yourself.”

The Apothecary's mouth dropped open.

“Re-really...?”

“Yes. Floor 20 is under my ownership, you know? I'll find you a prime spot. Just bring yourself.”

The Apothecary was speechless, seemingly unable to believe my offer.

But I was sincere.

‘Why leave land idle?’

Investing in someone who would become the Master Apothecary in the future didn't seem wasteful.

I smiled.

“Just make sure to prioritize any potions or medicines I request. Is that okay?”

“O-of course! I’ve already been doing that... Uh. What, what should I do? I owe you too much, King of Death...”

The Apothecary’s lips quivered. Despite the confusion, the joy was unmistakable.

Her clasped hands seemed to be shouting 'Yesss! Aja aja!' inside.

I felt content.

‘Indeed. This is the satisfaction of taking care of people.’

Then...

“Ahem. Hem! Khuhem. Uh, hum, khuup!”

"....."

“Oh dear. Young man. Aren't you forgetting something?”

The Medicine King had appeared behind me unnoticed. He must have mastered some sort of stealth technique in the martial world without me knowing. Astonishing skill.

“I too, in my old age, would appreciate some land...”

Glance.

“Ah, my shop is so old, it's damp and musty. Terrible for my back health! Climbing up and down the third floor every day, my knees are creaking...”

Glance.

“It would be great if some kind soul generously offered me a mere 100,000 acres in a nice place...”

“I'm sorry. My friend caused you inconvenience.”

The Sword Saint approached, grabbed the Medicine King's nape, and dragged him away.

As he was pulled, the Medicine King loudly protested.

“No! It's outrageous to interfere in a friend's business! Is that how they teach in Northern Europe! Marcus, you gnome! Even from a renowned wealthy family, your sense of business ethics is worse than a beggar's!”

“Friend. You're already pitiable being old, don't become disgraceful too... You already make enough money.”

“Deficit, I tell you! Orders have plummeted lately! Apothecary! Hey, Apothecary kid! Just say 'I lost the duel, I'm no match for the power of Shawn McCallister's Victory Road'! That's enough, so say it!”

Everyone in the Grand Library stared at the Medicine King.

Apothecary, who had come to respect him as an elder through joint research and surgeries, now looked at him with eyes as if seeing a water flea, exclaiming in awe.

Viper, quietly reading his novel, grumbled.

“Why do all the heroines die in the novels I read? Is this some kind of trend?”

It was definitely a group with no normal people.

Setting up the Apothecary's new shop on Floor 20 went smoothly. The construction materials were easily covered with the gold from the lottery. There were no issues with labor either.

"King of Death, I can get you a discount on the construction materials. And that's not all. I can also gather enough workforce for you. Just sign this contract with the Apothecary and everything will be..."

"Ah, that's enough!"

Shaking off the Countess who kept hovering around like a cat, I turned to Preta.

"How's everything going?"

"Yes, my Lord. The construction progress is smooth."

Preta, wearing a yellow safety helmet, a green armband, and a pink whistle in her mouth, directed the construction. Skeletons summoned through Ghoul Reincarnation took the place of the construction workforce.

"Damn it! Freakin' hell! Hey, you raggedy-ass bastard! What grudge do you have against me! Why do I have to be stuck here among bones, hurling stones around! Say something, you bastards!!"

A young man with a ponytail and a loud mouth was among them, but with the majority of the workforce being efficiently moving skeletons, the construction faced no issues.

Amidst the unproblematic progress, the Apothecary, Celestial Martial Guild Master, and I struck a deal.

"Alright, this should do it."

The agreement was as follows:

"There are still many zombies on the 22nd floor. And there are many ruined Taoist temples scattered around, meaning a lot of dungeons."

"Exactly. So our Celestial Martial Guild will establish a base there and..."

"Those who want to go to the 22nd floor will first stop at my new pharmacy on the 20th floor... to get vaccinated?"

"Exactly. We can charge a fee for that process... Of course, within reasonable limits."

It was a mutually beneficial plan for me as the owner of Floor 20, the Apothecary opening a new shop there, and Celestial Martial Guild relocating to the 22nd floor.

‘Never thought I'd be collecting real estate fees.’

I felt genuinely pleased.

However, as soon as the pharmacy opened, a problem with the plan became apparent: too many people flocked to Floor 20.

"God of Medicine!"

"Lord Apothecary!"

"Medicine Emperor!"

"Supreme Medicine Deity! Please sell me some medicine!"

People could travel to Floor 20 without an alias, so not just hunters wanting vaccinations for the 22nd floor, but many more headed there.

Administering the zombie virus vaccine required a somewhat complex process. Amidst that, trying to produce regular medicines continually led to logistical issues. Initially trying to cope within his means, the Apothecary eventually yelled.

"King of Death, this is unmanageable!"

Eventually, we had to call the last member of the 22nd floor expedition team. Viper, with his arm around the Medicine King, proposed.

"Medicine King. Isn't your business a bit dull lately? I'll give you a nice spot at the Celestial Martial Guild headquarters on the 22nd floor. Want to come over and be our exclusive physician?"

"Ah, Celestial Martial Master! What do you take this Shawn McCallister for!"

He protested loudly, but in reality, the Medicine King's business was struggling. His shop's merit was handling high-end medicines, but with the superior Apothecary present, his strategy had fallen into an awkward high-end approach.

Everyone knew it, and deep down, so did the Medicine King. After some persuasion, he grudgingly agreed.

"Fine. For a while, I'll give injections and treat emergencies on the 22nd floor, earning some fees."

"Thanks. We also need a personal physician to take care of the Supreme Guardian."

"Hmph. Well, that guy makes more sense to talk to than Marcus. Alright, I was getting bored anyway."

As time passed, the expeditions continued.

There were many hunters besides us aiming to conquer stages.

+

Floor 21: The Great Library of All Knowledge

the 22nd floor: The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon (Genre: Martial Arts, Fusion)

Floor 23: Chronicles of the Space Iron Knight (Genre: SF)

Floor 24: Daybreak Mountain Hut Diary (Genre: Mystery, History)

+

"Excellent. Truly, really, excellent."

The Witch smiled contentedly.

Before long, she was meticulously deciding which revelation to conquer, forming teams, and guiding hunters.

"King of Death. Your splendid conquest of [The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon] had a significant impact. Other hunters are burning with enthusiasm, not wanting to be outdone by you. If only they listened to me like this all the time! Ah, how nice it would have been if it had always been like this."

The Witch looked at me with affectionate eyes, as if seeing a golden goose. She was almost ready to say that everything about this tower was thanks to me.

"With this momentum, we might break through to the 30th floor before next month."

Unfortunately, the Witch's prediction missed the mark.

On the 2nd week after clearing The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon.

[Today, the 25th floor stage raid has failed.]

Hundreds of hunters, including the Witch, stared blankly into space.

[We announce once again.]

[Today, the 25th floor stage raid has failed.]

"Wh-what..."

The Witch was flabbergasted, shock evident in her black, flickering eyes.

"I arranged the best expedition team... and they failed...?"

In the Grand Library's holographic screen, hordes of demons cackled as they slaughtered humans.

Among the slaughtered were familiar faces.

Rank 4 Hunter, the Countess.

Rank 9 Hunter, the Paladin.

One managed Babylon's gold vein, the other managed connections. They were the best cards we had for economy and security.

Yet, they failed.

+

[Tales of the Sormewin Academy]

Genre: Romance, Fantasy

Difficulty: D

Required Participants: 4-5

*The serialization has been discontinued.

Description: Sormewin is an academy of ancient magic. A normal school where friendship, competition, love, and jealousy intertwine. This Apocalypse could have remained a typical school story if not for the world-ending artifact sealed underneath the academy!

Reason for Discontinuation: The Villainess Lady loses her fiancé (the Crown Prince) to a second-time reincarnated female student. In a fit of rage, she unleashes the sealed artifact, freeing the Great Demon and causing world annihilation.

+

It was a revelation of merely D-grade difficulty.

"The world was chosen because it was rich in magic and resources like mithril."

"Alas, it's a pity."

The Holed-Up Head Librarian looked down at the bewildered hunters.

"But spilled water is spilled water! If I could return the failed conquest, I would, but it's impossible for me. My friends, please understand my position."

He smiled with his eyes.

In other words, if there was someone capable of collecting the spilled water, he'd acknowledge it as an exception.

The implied exception was obvious.

"....."

I headed to the bathroom set up in the library. I had visited here before entering The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon. The mirror reflected a man with a hardened face.

"Damn it. I've never even read a romance novel."

-Well, you handled a martial arts story without ever reading one. Should be no problem.

"True, but still..."

I sighed, holding a dagger.

"I can't leave the Countess and Paladin to die. Sending someone else doesn't guarantee success. I guess I have to try it myself."

One might argue why not skip this revelation and go for another, but it's not that simple.

There's a reason why we absolutely can't skip this revelation.

[Shiny supports your decision, Warrior.]

Because another piece of the Holy Sword is hidden there.

".....Okay."

I fiddled with the hilt of the dagger, steeling myself.

"Let's give it a try!"

And so, I returned to the day before the raid team was formed.

My next stage was set to be [Romance].

Chapter 89: Dead Ends are the Norm (2)

As soon as I returned a few days earlier, I declared to the hunters.

"I will lead this stage."

"....."

The hunters were speechless.

Among them were the Count and the Paladin, who originally died attempting to conquer the 25th floor, but I had returned to a time before they embarked on that mission.

Of course, they had no idea about that.

"Uhm..."

The Paladin showed a troubled expression.

"I'm sorry, King of Death. I didn't know you were also versed in romance."

"No need to apologize. I am indeed ignorant about romance."

"...Yet you still want to take charge of this stage? Are you serious?"

"Yes. I really want to lead it."

The hunters murmured among themselves.

To not be overshadowed by the genre, I calmly said.

"While it would be ideal to have a hunter skilled in romance, that's not the only criterion. I've never read a martial arts novel, yet I successfully cleared The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon."

"That might be true, but..."

"I have a bad feeling about this stage. I sense something terrible will happen. Please let me take charge."

They were startled.

A reaction to the words "bad feeling" was noticeable among the hunters. The Witch and the Sword Saint believed in my prophetic abilities.

"...It should be fine, shouldn't it? King of Death's abilities have been proven several times."

"Personally, I think we should heed King of Death's opinion."

With the support of the Rank 2 and Rank 1 hunters, things became easier. The other hunters didn't resist us either. I successfully gained command as I wished.

"Now, I will select the team to enter the revelation with me."

Determined, I spoke.

"We're only taking the absolute best for this stage. Please don't hold it against me if you're not chosen."

"Hmm, the absolute best, huh."

The Witch glanced at me emotionlessly.

"Well then, I should go. I'm not familiar with romance, but if someone desperately needs me, I should be there."

"....."

"Romance is new to me, but I think my romantic sensibility matches well. I'm not claiming to be an expert in romance novels. Hmm. If the absolute best is needed, shouldn't I be included, just my personal thoughts."

The woman who introduced herself as a drama-watching lady was in a pretty bad state.

"Romance and romantic fantasy are somewhat different. If romance is a macaron, then rom-fantasy is a chocolate mousse cake. King of Death, an expert should step in for this, I believe..."

The quietly profound expert was the Paladin. However, in the last cycle, she had failed in the conquest. It was a burden to take her along.

"Isn't love ultimately convertible to money? People who spend money well are also good at love. Love is power, and power is money. An unchanging truth. In this context, I should be chosen."

The Countess fanned himself. Who on earth brought this woman into romance?

"Hmm."

I looked around calmly. At that moment, one person caught my eye. He was sipping orange juice served by the Bookmark Maid.

"Heretic Inquisitor."

I called out to him.

"Yes?"

"Let's tackle a romance novel together."

"Oho!"

The surrounding hunters looked at us in shock.

Heretic Inquisitor. The ruthless executioner. No matter the twists and turns, he'd torture and execute in any religious conflict. Even among our tower's crazies, he's considered a pure, natural-born psycho.

If you asked who was the least compatible with romance in the world, he'd top the list. Yet, this person smiled innocently like a young boy.

"Yes! Of course! Delighted to oblige King of Death's request!"

To the uninformed, his smile was angelic.

"King of Death, are you crazy...?"

In other words, to those who knew his true nature, it was a devil's smile. The Witch hurriedly whispered in my ear.

"The Inquisitor can't empathize with others! Objectively, he's a psychopath, and even if he seems supportive, he's a sociopath. Bringing such a man into a romance revelation, what are you planning?"

"Black Dragon Witch."

I whispered back.

"I might not know the 'R' in romance, but I know what's most important."

"What's that?"

"Looks."

".....Huh?"

"Looks."

"....."

I was serious.

"Uh..."

"First, you need to be good-looking."

"Aren't there many plain-looking characters in romance too?"

"But they cheat with the cover."

"Ah, you shouldn't have said that out loud... You..."

"Look. Who's the most angelic-looking person in our tower, purely based on appearance? It's the Inquisitor. Even I thought he was a real angel before I knew his true nature."

We sneakily glanced at the Inquisitor.

From afar, he was grinning blissfully.

"You agree, right?"

".....Yeah, his looks are intimidating. Contrarily, so is his personality."

"Plus, the Inquisitor is competent. He uses holy magic. He can handle most accidents, right? And he listens to what I say."

Above all, the Inquisitor's words and thoughts are consistent.

Consistency.

This could be a plus in romance.

"Looks and mindset matching, many find that attractive."

"---This might actually be a clever strategy."

Someone commented on our conversation.

It was the Paladin.

"In rom-fantasy, the more crazy characters, the better. The Inquisitor could be a decent 'mad man' in rom-fantasy. Lacking obsession in love is regrettable, but he has potential. This is interesting. Indeed, King of Death... even in romance, you have a ghostly intuition..."

The library fell silent.

"Hm? Did I say something odd?"

Again, the library was quiet.

Thankfully, no vocal opinions on this professional viewpoint were expressed.

Thanks to that, the romance duo of me and the Inquisitor was formed without issue.

Seeing our team, the Holed-Up Head Librarian's eyes sparkled.

"Oh, a unique combination for conquest. I'm quite looking forward to what story will unfold."

He picked up [Tales of the Sormewin Academy].

"The season of love! A time when praising love has become natural! Overcoming status, lineage, nationality, and seizing love is now called beautiful!"

The sleeves of the Constellation fluttered.

"Perhaps that's why love has become harder. Love is not just an emotion, but also an attitude and posture. Many are obsessed with romance."

The Holed-Up Head Librarian chuckled.

"Romantic reality or realistic romance. King of Death, it will be quite challenging for you to find a balance. Therefore, I have specially prepared a clear reward for you!"

Clear reward?

"Indeed, you cleared not only the normal stage of [The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon] but also its hidden stage. You've received the reward for the normal stage on the 22nd floor, but not yet for the hidden stage. I'll give it to you now."

"What is it?"

"Come closer, protagonist."

I approached.

"I will give you three cards."

Voila, the Holed-Up Head Librarian handed over the cards.

They were written as follows.

+

[Prosopagnosia Card]

[What a coincidence! Well-timed secret eavesdropping! Card]

[Oops! I shouldn't have said that! Accidental slip of the tongue! Card]

+

"....."

Great.

Just by their names, these cards sounded ominous.

I had no idea what effects these cards held, but they seemed incredibly suspicious.

"Excuse me, these are..."

"All these cards will prove to be extremely useful in a romance novel. They will surely become your army of a thousand. So, don't worry!"

But all I could do was worry.

"Not only this gift. I've prepared one more for you. Once you enter the revelation, you will naturally come across the gift."

"What is it?"

"King of Death. Heretic Inquisitor."

The Holed-Up Head Librarian didn't respond to my question. Instead, he opened the book. Whoosh! Light burst from the pages of the revelation.

"The above two are designated as characters in [Tales of Sormewin Academy]. When you open your eyes there, you will find yourselves 7 days before the unfortunate cancellation of the story."

Light enveloped us.

"I look forward to seeing a splendid ending from you! Lady! And Butler!"

Lady?

Butler?

Before I could ask what he meant, my vision was completely engulfed in white.

I had never been engrossed in romance.

Lacking the habit of reading and not having friends who were into romance contributed to that. To be more honest, I simply didn't have friends. Even now, I prefer to remain silent on how many people I could call friends.

But if asked about the [most frequently used onomatopoeia in romance genres], even I, a novice, could easily answer.

Slap!!

It's the sound of a slap across the face.

"---How utterly disrespectful!"

A clear voice reached the chandeliers in the ceiling. Before the chandeliers stopped swaying, Slap!! The all-time number one sound in romance echoed again.

As I leisurely observed the sounds, it was clear I wasn't the one being slapped.

".....Ah?"

It was the Heretic Inquisitor.

He tilted his head. Both his cheeks were red, yet he beamed a smile. Smiling towards the one who had slapped him.

"Have I done something wrong? Your hand is quite strong!"

The expression of his counterpart grew fierce. Perhaps she was a lady of noble birth, dressed in a gown embroidered with white lily patterns in silver thread.

For convenience, I mentally labeled her the 'Lady Silver Lily.'

"How dare you remain so calm....! You lowlife! Shameless!"

"Ah-ha."

And from here, the situation took a turn.

Not only the Lady Silver Lily was in a dress.

"Please point out my mistake! If it's reasonable, I'll correct it right away! It's better not to resort to violence!"

The Heretic Inquisitor too was in a dress.

Compared to the Lady Silver Lily's dress, his was much plainer. A dress resembling the inner flesh of lime – a mix of the innocence of yellow and the freshness of green. Yet, all that didn't matter. His face was the real deal. True to the hunter chosen almost solely for his looks, the naturally born face gangster smiled brightly.

"Ah! You, whose name I do not know. Let's have a conversation!"

Slap!

"You truly... truly mock me to the last..."

Lady Silver Lily seemed to be struggling with every word. Her voice seemed to wring out of her contorted spine.

The slapper was the lady, and the slapped was the Heretic Inquisitor, but strangely, as time passed, it was the Lady Silver Lily who grew increasingly breathless.

'Hmm.'

After a moment of disorientation upon entering the revelation, I began to grasp the situation.

'A social gathering? A ball? Anyway, it's during an event.'

A ballroom under the chandeliers.

Not just us, but dozens were dressed in gowns and formal suits. They looked at us from a distance, faces full of apprehension and tension.

It made sense. The peaceful ball had turned into chaos.

'Lady Silver Lily is the [villainess]...'

I observed the lady.

'Excluding the royal family, she's the highest-ranking person here.'

She's also the one responsible for bringing this world to ruin.

"You, see, look!"

The Lady Silver Lily staggered as she spoke, chewing each syllable. Her voice was a strain to listen to.

"Yes, Lady."

The servants in black tailcoats responded.

"Get rid of them... my eyes cannot bear it! Now!"

"Yes."

Their voices were far from loud. It was a quiet submission. A servant's voice must match the temperament of their master. The Lady Silver Lily was clearly frail, and loud voices were poison to her ears.

"Ah."

Thus, the Heretic Inquisitor was the complete opposite of the Lady Silver Lily.

"Are you perhaps unwell? That's serious! Let me assist you!"

"Quickly... get them out of my sight... lock them up..."

The Heretic Inquisitor, with his naturally loud & bright voice, was her antithesis.

Servants in tailcoats surrounded us like a military unit.

"Excuse me."

"I'm afraid you'll have to come with us."

Their manner was archaic, but their actions were anything but. The servants forcefully dragged us away.

Passing through the ballroom, down corridors, we were transported to a moonlit, pale warehouse.

"Excuse me?"

During the transfer, I spoke up.

By the way, I was dressed in the same type of tailcoat as the servants.

"Where are we being taken? Hello?"

No answer.

"Excuse me? Servants of the Duke's House?"

Bang.

"....."

"....."

The Heretic Inquisitor and I looked at each other. Then Clank! The sound of a key turning. We were locked in an unknown warehouse.

If my common sense was correct, a locked warehouse was essentially a prison.

"Ah-ha."

Bathed in the moonlight filtering through the iron bars, the Heretic Inquisitor spoke.

"King of Death. We're in big trouble!"

Despite his words, the Heretic Inquisitor's smile was as bright as ever.

"It seems I've become the female protagonist!"

Indeed.

And I was her butler.

Chapter 90: Dead Ends are the Norm (3)

"This is such a mess..."

I muttered to myself, feeling overwhelmed.

In the old warehouse, with moonlight streaming through the large iron bars, the Heretic Inquisitor smiled brightly, unsettlingly cheerful for someone essentially imprisoned.

"Ah, I've been cross-dressed in my childhood, but I never thought I'd actually take on the role of a female protagonist. It's quite an experience!"

"I wish I could borrow some of your relentless positivity..."

"The world is a beautiful place, King of Death! Think positively!"

Does this person ever not smile? Even if a meteorite fell right in front of him, he'd probably say, 'Oh no, the world is ending! But that's okay. We did our best!' and still smile.

"What's there to be so positive about?"

"Just this!"

The Heretic Inquisitor wiggled his fingers, forming hand signs, and whispered softly.

"Holy Technique, Transformation."

A light streamed between his slender fingers. It was the Heretic Inquisitor's signature holy technique. 'Transformation' likely meant changing something, but there seemed to be no visible difference at first glance.

However, as soon as he spoke, I realized what had 'transformed.'

"How about this?"

For a moment, I got goosebumps.

"Do I sound more like a lady now?"

"Your voice..."

"Yes! I slightly altered the structure of my vocal cords."

Grinning, the Heretic Inquisitor seemed pleased.

"I've often been told my voice is androgynous. With a little adjustment, it should fit the role. Ah-ha, I can't objectively hear my own voice, though! What do you think?"

"It's remarkable..."

I couldn't help but admire.

"You sound like a refined noble lady. Well, as long as you keep your mouth shut."

"Thank you!"

"Hmm."

I stroked my chin thoughtfully.

Unexpectedly finding ourselves embodying the roles of [Lady Protagonist & Butler], the Heretic Inquisitor and I were well-equipped to handle it. He had his holy techniques, and...

I had my return skill.

'Okay.'

It was definitely worth a try.

"....."

The Heretic Inquisitor peeked up, looking at my face.

"Your complexion seems a bit better."

"Really?"

"Since returning from the Celestial Martial Guild, your face has been quite dark. King of Death. You must have accumulated a lot of stress from conquering the revelations."

I lost my words for a moment.

"Well, losing a precious master would naturally do that! So, I was worried about this conquest too. What if you couldn't perform your best due to your gloomy emotions? But it seems I worried for nothing."

"...So, you can observe a person's face and speculate on their emotions?"

"Yes! I may not understand what 'feeling down' is, but I understand it conceptually! Ah-ha. Like a machine, if not properly maintained, it creaks. Stress is like human grime. If left unattended, it turns into stubborn dirt, so be sure to take care of it!"

Fascinating. He's trying to understand humanity in his own way. A psycho, but a commendable one.

"But, King of Death."

"Yes?"

"I've noticed something strange."

"What's strange?"

"As I understand, we are currently unjustly imprisoned, our freedom of movement restricted."

"That's how I see the current situation too."

"It's a relief we understand each other! And usually, in such cases, the power holder places guards or jailers to watch over the prisoners. If not, escaping would be too easy."

The Heretic Inquisitor tilted his head.

"But currently, there's no sign of anyone outside the door. Instead, we hear noises from the window. Is it customary in this world to place guards around windows rather than doors?"

At that moment.

"Damn it! Attack!"

Shadows burst through the window as the iron bars fell off.

"Kill the man if you must, but don't hurt the woman!"

The shadows wore masks. It was too elaborate for a ballroom dress concept. Clearly, they were uninvited attackers.

"Shiny!"

[Yes, Master.]

I unsheathed the Holy Sword. Clang! The attacker's sword clashed with mine.

No typical exchange of words seen in movie attack scenes like 'Who are you?' 'That's none of your business! But we're backed by immense power!' happened. Both of us were too busy swinging our swords.

But I had a trump card.

"Now!"

The Holy Sword glowed brightly.

"Argh?!"

Blinded momentarily by the sudden light, the attackers, who had adjusted to the dark, instinctively closed their eyes. In a swordfight, a moment can decide the outcome.

I blinked alternatingly to adjust my sight and then severed the wrist of the attacker.

"---Aaack----!!"

His scream was a blend of pain and shock.

"King of Death! Don't kill them! We need to uncover who's behind this!"

So, I held back.

The Heretic Inquisitor, too, was actively engaging, her dress billowing around her.

"This can't be! She's not just a normal girl!"

The attackers were astonished. They weren't particularly skilled. Or perhaps, our skills were excessively superior. They couldn't handle us without using aura.

Soon, all four attackers were subdued. One of them was killed by the Heretic Inquisitor during the fight.

"Ah-ha."

The Heretic Inquisitor casually wiped blood off her face with her dress sleeve. The attackers looked up at her, their faces pale with fear.

"We heard she was a frail noble lady... how could..."

"You have three choices!"

The Heretic Inquisitor, holding a dagger, grinned broadly.

"First, ask to be killed right here! Second, confess all important information while being tortured! Third, simply spill the beans without death or torture! Which will it be?"

"Huh..."

The oldest-looking attacker, who had lost his wrist to me, snorted.

"Crazy woman. Just kill me!"

"Alright!"

And the Heretic Inquisitor's dress got a little more red.

Thud, a dull sound echoed in the warehouse.

A head rolled onto the floor.

"Yeeek...?!"

Only two attackers remained.

"Have you made your choice?"

"Spare us, Lady. We were just doing our job!"

"It's tough to make a living. I understand."

"But then..."

"However, just as I understand your situation, you must understand mine! Why did you attack us? Tell me, and I'll let you go. I think that's a very generous offer."

The attackers hesitated.

"Ah. You're struggling to decide. Alright! I'll help you make up your mind!"

"Wh-What do you mean by help?"

"Torture."

The Heretic Inquisitor's smile remained unbroken.

"Pain proves that we are alive. When it peaks, so does our survival instinct. Now, I'll maximize your desire to live."

"Please, spare us!"

"Let us live!"

Insane.

The genre was about to turn into 18+ romance, so I intervened.

“Wait a minute, Heretic Inquisitor.”

“Yes?”

“There’s no need to go that far. Leave it to me.”

“Hmm...?”

The Heretic Inquisitor looked puzzled.

“King of Death, are you also skilled in torture? Unless you are quite adept, I recommend leaving it to me. I am a specialist in interrogation.”

“No, there's no need for torture. And wipe your face, please.”

I handed a handkerchief to the Heretic Inquisitor and approached the attackers.

They sighed in relief, but sorry, I'm not that generous towards people who attack first.

“Gentlemen, let me ask you something.”

“What is it?”

“When you attacked earlier, you came in through the window. The iron bars were cut too easily. Did you know in advance that we would be locked up here and pre-cut the bars?”

"....."

The attackers remained silent, just exchanging glances. However, not speaking doesn't mean I can't find out the truth. 'Character Window.'

Their thoughts were visible to my eyes.

「 We heard a lady would be brought to the warehouse. 」

「 Damn, we thought she was just an ordinary girl, but it was a trap! 」

As I suspected.

They knew in advance that we would be brought here.

“When attacking, you shouted, 'It's okay to kill the man, just don't harm the woman.' Were you trying to kidnap the lady here?”

“That, well... it's...”

The attackers blinked rapidly.

「 The task was to kidnap a woman from here. 」

「 We were strictly told by our employer not to harm her, so we came in a group of four for the ambush. 」

Hmm.

Got it.

“Sigh...”

I sighed. Turning around, I saw the Heretic Inquisitor diligently wiping his face. He resembled a little hamster nibbling sunflower seeds.

“I have an idea who the culprit might be.”

The Heretic Inquisitor perked up his ears.

“Really? Have you already figured it out?”

“Yes.”

“I’m curious to hear your deduction.”

The Heretic Inquisitor's eyes sparkled.

“Firstly, the culprit is someone with immense power, able to hire four assassins to infiltrate the academy. It’s not something achievable without deep knowledge of the academy's security system.”

“Indeed, that makes sense!”

But, the Heretic Inquisitor countered.

“Does the culprit really need to be [someone with immense power]? It's not a palace, but an academy. It seems relatively easy to obtain knowledge about its security system. Even a moderately powerful figure could do it!”

“Your point is sharp, but.”

I shook my head.

“There’s another suspicious detail. Heretic Inquisitor, do you remember what the [Villainess] shouted when she was having us removed?”

“Hmm.”

He pondered, putting the handkerchief into his sleeve.

“Yes, I remember. She definitely said, [Get them out of my sight, lock them up]. Why do you ask?”

“She never specified where to lock us up.”

"....."

“The Villainess only told her servants to remove us from the ballroom. But these attackers knew exactly where we’d be imprisoned and had prepared by cutting the bars in advance. Those who brought us here were the servants of the Villainess.”

“Oho....”

The Heretic Inquisitor's eyes narrowed.

“Indeed. The Villainess might be the mastermind behind hiring the attackers. She would have just needed to inform her servants about the place of confinement and the attackers about the location. Ah-ha. She is a lady of a duke's family, so she has the power.”

“Yes. But-”

“But, it’s too obvious.”

The Heretic Inquisitor stroked his chin.

“[I] am the protagonist in this world. I am a noble lady romantically linked with the Crown Prince. Would the Villainess really expel me and then attack in the same place? Even for a duke's daughter, that’s too scandalous and politically risky.”

He’s smart.

It's nice to have conversations like this that get straight to the point.

“That means the Villainess isn’t the culprit. Someone wants it to look like she is. The real culprit is someone else.”

“I agree!”

“And this real culprit, who told the attackers not to harm the Heretic Inquisitor at any cost, values you, the female protagonist, a lot. They didn't care about the male butler, me. Lastly, they have the power to bribe the servants of a duke's family.”

“Ah-ha.”

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled with his eyes.

“I'm beginning to see who the real culprit might be!”

“Probably the same person I'm thinking of.”

“Hmm. I don't understand the emotion of love. But I do know the behavior of those who love! If, as you deduced, the culprit truly values [me], they wouldn't really leave me in the hands of such attackers.”

“Yes.”

I nodded.

“They must be waiting nearby, ready to intervene at any moment.”

Bang!

That was when the old door of the warehouse shattered. Dust billowed, and a group of knights poured in.

At the front was a man who looked like he had never dirtied his hands in his life.

“Silvia! Are you alright, Silvia?!”

The man rushed over and tightly embraced the Heretic Inquisitor. His golden hair, like uncooked noodles, fluttered. Not as handsome as the Heretic Inquisitor, but the man was still good-looking. Maybe 0.6 Heretic Inquisitor in terms of looks?

“My goodness, you're covered in blood! I came here worried after hearing you were expelled from the ballroom... to think they would dare do such a vile act...!”

And probably about 0.6 Heretic Inquisitor in terms of being a psychopath.

Without blinking an eye, the man commanded.

“Listen! Capture those suspicious people! I will personally interrogate them and expose everything! I don't know which family did this, but I won't forgive them, even if they're heroes of the empire!”

The knights responded in unison.

“Yes! We obey the Crown Prince's command!”

That's right.

“Silvia, don't worry. I will protect you. No matter how wicked the daughter of the duke's family is, I, the sole heir of the empire, will protect you. You can rely solely on me...”

The man was the male protagonist of [Tales of Sormewin Academy].

And the Crown Prince in love with the Heretic Inquisitor.

Chapter 91: Falling (1)

Last year.

Two ladies received aliases from His Majesty the Emperor...

.....Silvia Evanair, Baroness.....

.....In the midst of the yellow garden, a golden blossom bloomed.....

.....From now on, people will call you.....

Lady Goldencup.

The female protagonist of this world.

.....Raviel Ivansia, Duchess.....

.....A flower coated in silver, refusing to bow its head.....

.....Child, from now on, the citizens of the empire will call you.....

Lady Silver Lily.

The villainess of this revelation.

Daughters of noble families usually get their aliases at debutante balls, where they make their social debut. Royals or high nobles hosting the ball gift them new names.

The grandeur of the alias depends on the nobility of the giver. An alias given by a baron differs in prestige from one given by a count.

The most splendid of all are aliases given by the Emperor of the Empire. Receiving a name from His Majesty is both an honor for the family and a personal triumph.

With two such ladies at the same academy, a tempest was inevitable.

‘Even so.’

I looked at the Crown Prince, who was embracing my colleague, who had assumed the role of Lady Goldencup, the Heretic Inquisitor. The way he tightly held her, her dress clung like fish scales between his fingertips.

‘Isn’t the Crown Prince too frivolous for the ruler of a nation?’

I found it somewhat disagreeable.

Our eyes met. As I was looking at him with a sense of disbelief, I had to quickly lower my gaze. But there was something odd about the Crown Prince’s look.

Contempt. Anger. Scorn.

His eyes harbored negative emotions.

“.....You survived as well.”

Uh.

Was that directed at me? Since I was the only one he was making eye contact with, it seemed so. But his voice sounded like someone chewing on spinach that was three days past its expiration date. It was irritating.

“Yes, Your Highness.”

I mimicked the tone of a historical drama.

“I was fortunate enough to preserve my life.”

“Lucky indeed.”

“How could it be the luck of a humble servant like me? It is all due to Your Highness's blessing.”

"....."

The Crown Prince's elegant eyebrows twitched. I had just subtly hinted that he had orchestrated the attack. A guilty conscience needs no accuser, as they say. Even a casual greeting can sting if it hits home.

“Your words are too much. Are you implying that everything happening in the world is due to my blessing? Your survival, protecting Silvia from the assassins, all of it is your luck. I appreciate it.”

Wow.

He took a step back and seemed to compliment me, but not really. He downplayed my 'skill' as mere 'luck.'

“Lady Goldencup is my master.”

Suddenly.

“And I belong to her.”

Words slipped out of my mouth before I realized.

“Your Highness. How can a sword protecting its master be considered mere luck? A tool simply fulfilled its purpose. Please retract your generous praise.”

I was surprised. Honestly, I just intended to brush it off casually. What’s the point of a butler of a noble family arguing with the Crown Prince of the nation? But my tongue kept moving on its own.

‘Have I finally lost it?’

Just as I felt a bit dazed, a voice reached me.

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

What?

[Your immersion rate is currently 1%.]

Crazy?

“.....Truly, I want to sew your eloquent mouth shut.”

While I was internally screaming in panic, the Crown Prince's face twisted. He was clearly holding back his frustration. I, too, wanted to unleash a string of curses. Seeing his distorted expression, a part of me felt strangely refreshed. The urge to stop was overshadowed by the thought, 'Serves him right.' Crazy. This is madness.

"These days, even baronial households seem to select servants based on their tongues, not their character. His Majesty would surely lament this trend."

Hold on.

Wait. Noodle Hair, the so-called Crown Prince of this world. Don't provoke me any further. Please don't stir up [my] emotions. This stage is....

"How could that be? How could His Majesty's discernment ever be clouded? As Your Highness grows more virtuous day by day in the academy, His Majesty's heart must be filled with joy."

In other words, it was a veiled jab saying, 'Your father would be thrilled to know you're hiring assassins, right?' But my hidden meaning wasn't important at the moment.

I realized the trap of this stage.

And why the Paladin and the Countess, the keepers of our tower's economy and security, were so powerless in their efforts to conquer it.

‘Both of them seemed increasingly consumed by their roles as time went on!’

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

No.

[Your immersion rate is currently 2%.]

This is madness.

“Hmph. Arguing with you is beneath me. I will thoroughly investigate tonight’s incident.”

“Your Highness, your trust is all I ask for. Please uncover the mastermind behind the attack and punish them accordingly.”

“Of course.”

Ah.

‘So this was it!’

This was the twist of this stage!

The Crown Prince glanced at me briefly and spoke.

“Silvia seems quite shaken by tonight's events. There might still be assassins lurking around. Tonight, I will protect her, so just keep that in mind.”

“Your Highness.”

My tongue had evolved into an auto-responder.

“Please forgive my rudeness. At a time like this, one should rest where they feel most comfortable. My master would prefer to stay in her private room as usual.”

“.....Are you saying that she would be uncomfortable in my presence?”

“I apologize. I am merely stating the truth to Your Highness.”

Save me.

Somebody, save me!

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 3%.]

Help me! Help me!

-Hey. What are you doing?

Sword Emperor! Or rather, Sword Emperor, sir!

-Eh. Has this guy gone nuts?

I feel like I'm going insane, so please do something!

-Uh... What do you want me to do?

I don't know. Just snap me out of it!

-Well, if that's the case.

The Guardian Spirit chuckled mischievously.

-Zombie. You seem to be annoyed by the Viper. But whenever you get the chance, you act more like a main character in his fantasies than anyone else....

Ah.

‘Enough. I'm back to my senses. Don't even utter the rest.’

-Okay.

The impudent actions of the Guardian Spirit, daring to joke about Viper, shocked me back to reality. Although he was ready to unleash a full-blown tirade despite my plea for any words, it did stop my immersion rate from soaring.

"....."

Meanwhile...

The Heretic Inquisitor, burying her face in the Crown Prince's chest, was also not normal.

".....? Huh.....?"

The Heretic Inquisitor tilted her head in confusion, repeatedly. For the first time, I saw her expressing 'perplexity.' The indisputable top lunatic, a pure natural psycho, was unable to comprehend the emotion she was experiencing.

Therefore, she pushed the Crown Prince away, freeing herself from his embrace. The Crown Prince, who was locked in a staring contest with me, looked surprised and turned his gaze to the Heretic Inquisitor, now Lady Goldencup.

"Silvia. Why are you acting like this all of a sudden?"

"Uh?Um? Oh?"

The Heretic Inquisitor cocked her head again.

"This is fascinating."

"What's fascinating, Silvia?"

"Right now, for the first time in my life, I'm feeling an unfamiliar emotion."

The Heretic Inquisitor beamed.

"My heart is racing!"

"....."

“It's pounding fast. Oh, wow. Indeed! This is truly mysterious...”

She closed her eyes and gently placed her hands over her heart. The Heretic Inquisitor, or rather Lady Goldencup, wore a faint smile, as if listening to a beautiful classical piece.

“It seems my body's owner genuinely likes you!”

“Si-Silvia....”

The Crown Prince was overwhelmed. His face was a mix of broth named 'emotion' and rice named 'sensation.'

Fortunately, I had just in time stopped myself from being further immersed. I was back to my senses.

“Lady.”

I firmly called out, "Lady." The Heretic Inquisitor opened her eyes and looked at me.

“Let's return to the dormitory. His Highness has promised to uncover the mastermind behind the attack. The night has grown deep, and you should rest in your quarters. You need to continue with your life tomorrow, don't you?”

We have our 'roles' and a 'purpose.'

The purpose of clearing the stage.

We must not forget this.

“Ah. Right. That's true.”

The Heretic Inquisitor blinked, understanding my meaning immediately. She curtsied towards the Crown Prince.

“Thank you for your concern, but I will return to my quarters with my butler.”

“Ah?”

“Have a good night, Your Highness. I shall take my leave

now!”

Leaving behind a dumbfounded Crown Prince, the Heretic Inquisitor easily turned her back and briskly exited the warehouse.

From behind, the Crown Prince’s voice echoed, “Silvia! Si-Silvia?!” but she just smiled and walked down the corridor without looking back.

“.....Things have become complicated.”

I muttered, closely following the Heretic Inquisitor.

“This immersion trap was unexpected. Damn.”

Now I understood why the Count and the Paladin had failed.

“Ahaha.”

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled mysteriously. Our footsteps echoed in the corridor, bathed in moonlight. The sound of footsteps resembled heartbeats.

“Indeed, this situation was unforeseen. Kim Gong-Ja, how high did your immersion rate go?”

“It skyrocketed to 3%. Barely managed to stop it.”

“Amazing. Mine shot up to 10 percentage!”

I was at a loss for words.

‘10 percentage? 10%?’

I was dismayed. Just a brief encounter with the Crown Prince, and 10% of her identity had been compromised?

The situation was more serious than I thought.

If we’re not careful, living normally is like walking through a poisonous mist. Slowly poisoned, we might find ourselves trapped with no escape.

“We need to establish a safety mechanism.”

“A safety mechanism?”

“Yes.”

I carefully fiddled with the hilt of my dagger. The familiar texture of the duct tape wrapped around it comforted me.

“Let’s set up a keyword. No matter the situation, no matter how severe, saying this keyword should snap us out of it. For example, if I say [Peach], you respond with [Carrot].”

“Aha. A secret code just for us!”

The Heretic Inquisitor laughed.

“I agree! I’ve seen something similar in a drama. Then, what shall our secret code be...”

Click-clack.

At that moment, the sound of heels echoed from the opposite end of the corridor. The sharp clatter of heels striking the floor was followed by a series of heavier footsteps. A person, followed by several attendants, approached us.

The moon shone.

The moonlight in the corridor was trampled by the sharp heels.

Hair as silver as the moonlight. Lady Silver Lily.

The daughter of the ducal family approached us, leading her retinue. Angered about something, the villainess lady furrowed her brow. Her eyes glared at us.

"Ah."

The Heretic Inquisitor let out a soft moan.

"Kim Gong-Ja."

She stood on tiptoes to whisper in my ear.

“I think I dislike that woman.”

Whisper.

Her voice sounded as usual.

"....."

Slowly, I turned to look at the Heretic Inquisitor.

“Hmm.”

She twirled around, her long dress creating a small whirlwind. The wind pressed against my chest.

“I'm curious, Kim Gong-Ja.”

Stopping, the Heretic Inquisitor spread her hands, folding all fingers except the index ones.

“Ah, truly curious.”

She pressed her index fingers against her lips, smiling as usual.

“What expression am I making right now?”

But her eyes were not smiling.

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 4%.]

Chapter 92: Falling (2)

Romance Fantasy Rule 1

"Any man near the protagonist is inherently suspicious."

Romance Fantasy Rule 2

"The most ordinary man is actually the most extraordinary."

My heart was pounding, filled with anxiety. Like a broken piano key, my heart beat erratically. To that extent, the Heretic Inquisitor's laughter carried a sinister scent.

A premonition of sliding further into the abyss.

I couldn't fathom the depth of this pit.

"Heretic Inqu---."

"Seems you're unharmed, Lady Goldencup."

Before I could fully address the Tower's Alias, Lady Silver Lily had preempted with her own world's naming.

She took the initiative.

"I heard you were attacked by assassins.... You're truly a girl raised in the outskirts. Tough as a weed. Are assassins a trivial matter for you?"

"Hmmm."

The Heretic Inquisitor curved her lips.

I realized a bit late that it was a sneer.

Words she would never usually utter had just flowed from her lips.

“Did you come all this way late at night just to praise my health? I sincerely thank you, Lady. Just like His Highness, so many care for me, an unworthy one. Tonight's misfortune feels almost like a blessing!”

Lady Silver Lily's eyes turned venomous.

There were two spikes in the Heretic Inquisitor's words.

'You're the mastermind behind the assassins, aren't you?'

Threat.

'The Crown Prince came to me personally out of concern.'

And provocation.

".....Your mind is as unkempt as a weed. There's a fine line between imagination and delusion. It's that boundary that determines human dignity. I hope you maintain the etiquette befitting a noble.”

“Ah, sorry! I didn't realize slapping someone's face at a ball was in keeping with noble etiquette. My mistake. I grew up in a family from the outskirts, unaware of the Ducal family's manners!”

"....."

“If it's not too rude, may I be invited to your salon someday? I wish to learn etiquette directly from you, Lady. Since I'm not accustomed to slapping people, I need to learn the correct angle and strength.”

Her tongue revved like a motorcycle engine.

Wondering where the engine sound came from, I soon realized, what the hell? It was my own heart beating.

Thump, thump.

An ominous premonition wrapped around my heart and then gripped my throat.

“You're impudent, Lady!”

“A lowly baron’s daughter speaking such nonsense...”

The Heretic Inquisitor's tongue waltz infuriated the Ducal family's servants. Among them, there must be some who betrayed their master and were seduced by the Crown Prince. Whether it's one or several, that's not important now.

“I'm sorry!”

I quickly interjected between gold and silver.

Lady Silver Lily's brows narrowed.

“You are...”

“Today's shocking events have greatly disturbed my lady. Considering the turmoil, rest is desperately needed. As it's late, Lady, perhaps it's time for you to retire? Any misunderstanding can be cleared tomorrow.”

"....."

Lady Silver Lily clamped her lips shut.

Behind her, the servants muttered, but that was all.

Once the master raised her hand, everyone stopped their actions. Silence suddenly enveloped the corridor. Such control over subordinates isn't possible unless they're strictly reined in usually.

“Wait, butler, what are you saying?”

To my surprise, it was the Heretic Inquisitor, now Lady Goldencup, who protested against me.

“I still have much to say to the Lady. Don't conclude our conversation so abruptly...”

“Be quiet, please.”

I grabbed the Heretic Inquisitor's wrist. Holding it, I practically dragged her away. She protested, "Ah, wait, butler! Just a moment, please!" but I never let go of her wrist. If we further deepen our immersion in these characters, we're in real trouble.

“Lady.”

Just before exiting the corridor, I looked back. Lady Silver Lily was gazing at us with an indistinct expression.

"...What is it?"

“I have always admired how well-mannered the Ducal family's servants are. Tonight's events proved again how dignified and proper they are compared to someone like me.”

I respectfully bowed my head to her.

“I have learned much. Although unworthy, I offer my respect to you, Lady.”

“Please excuse me now.”

And then, I pulled the Heretic Inquisitor out of the corridor.

Initially resistant, she had now quieted down.

The spring night's garden. Between the ballroom and the dormitory, a vast garden spread out.

Newly bloomed magnolias drooped their heavy heads. Beneath the white trees, the fragrance was thick.

A night insect, intoxicated by the scent, tapped a pale magnolia petal, causing it to fall.

“My goodness.”

The Heretic Inquisitor stepped on the fallen magnolia.

“Ah.”

She stopped, looked up at the night sky, and then turned to look at me. Her face was expressionless, almost stunned.

The hunter, known as the craziest in the Tower, murmured in disbelief at her own actions.

“King of Death..... What did I just say back there?”

As soon as I shut the door to the dormitory, I said,

“Let’s set a password.”

We were silent on the way to the dormitory. No words flowed between us. Silence wound around our ankles, making it slightly difficult to walk.

Was this due to the deepening immersion in our characters? The path from the garden to the dormitory naturally came to mind.

Perhaps as immersion deepens, the memories of the characters become clearer. Whether this is good or bad, it’s hard to judge right now.

“A password...”

The Heretic Inquisitor blinked.

“A secret password...?”

“If we leave it like this, we’re really in danger. We need to stay alert.”

“That’s right. King of Death. You’re correct. Yes...”

The Heretic Inquisitor seemed to struggle to keep her voice from slipping. The speed of her voice outpacing her thoughts was a red alert that the person in front of me was in danger.

I firmly grasped her face with both hands and forced our eyes to meet.

“When spring comes the magnolias fade.”

“Yes...?”

“When I say [When spring comes], you reply [the magnolias fade]. That’s our password. A signal to snap out of it. Now, repeat after me. When spring comes?”

“The magnolias...”

“Again. When spring comes.”

“The magnolias fade.”

The Heretic Inquisitor's focus gradually returned. Her gaze shifted from the distant void to the immediate front. After muttering "Hmm," and nodding "Hmm!" she confirmed.

“Yes! I'm back to my senses!”

“Okay. Good job.”

“Thank you, King of Death! Ah, what a storm of astounding events today. This day will be remembered forever.”

“How about a cup of tea to calm down?”

“Please!”

Good. It's not too late. This chapter isn't lost yet.

I wrapped a blanket around the Heretic Inquisitor and headed to the kitchen. Fitting for a dormitory of a noble academy, Lady Goldencup's room had a small kitchen. I easily found tea leaves and a kettle.

“Wow.”

I was astonished while brewing the tea.

“My body just moves on its own...”

I had never properly brewed tea with loose leaves before, always using tea bags. But now, as if I'd been handling a teapot for a long time, my hands moved automatically. A side effect of immersion.

Even worse, my body was actually enjoying brewing the tea.

'Lady prefers her tea with milk, mixed with a spoonful of honey.'

I hummed to myself.

'Got the precious honey by asking the academy's exclusive servant. Cost a bit, but since she's so frugal and doesn't waste, a little luxury like this should be fine...'

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 6%.]

No, it's not okay!

Not okay at all!

Damn it!!

Stupid romance! Why am I happy about adding honey to black tea? Should I crack open my skull and smear honey on my synapses?! Stuff a beehive in my head!

[Shiny is worried about your condition...]

[But as your weapon, Shiny thinks your butler attire is quite fitting and voices a minority opinion.]

My weapon was gleefully sparkling on its own. Maybe it's just my imagination, but its sparkle seemed even brighter. Its master, me, was crouching, gripping my head in agony.

'I can't let a butler's mentality consume me.'

I clenched my teeth.

'No way. After how hard I've worked to clear the stages until now!'

Determination surged within me.

Even while brewing tea, I resolved not to do it like the original character. I used a teapot I normally wouldn't, chose a teacup I usually wouldn't, and then served the tea to the Heretic Inquisitor.

"King of Death."

After a few sips of tea, the Heretic Inquisitor tilted her head.

“Yes?”

“The tea tastes weird!”

“So?”

“If my taste buds haven't dulled, this bitter, salty taste is salt, right?”

“That's how this tea is supposed to taste.”

“Oh, I see. So, this is closer to saltwater than tea? Objectively, it would be classified as plain saltwater.”

“Just shut up and drink.”

“Understood! I'll shut up and drink well!”

The Heretic Inquisitor slurped up the tea.

“Thank you for the drink! It was very salty!”

The Heretic Inquisitor beamed. Good. This is how it should be. Our natural psycho has finally regained her innocent self.

“So, what’s the plan now?”

“We need to either get Lady Silver Lily hooked up with the Crown Prince or completely shatter the love line between Lady Goldencup and the Crown Prince. Let's aim for one of these endings.”

“A smashing strategy...”

The Heretic Inquisitor whimsically named the operation.

I prefer the latter of the two endings.

I've never experienced romance myself, but---

‘Isn’t breaking them apart easier than pairing them?’

It might be hard to pair Lady Silver Lily with the Crown Prince, but it should be easy to break Lady Goldencup away from him.

On this front, the Heretic Inquisitor and I were in 100% agreement.

“So, to do that, Lady Goldencup’s affection from the Crown Prince must wane! Do you have any brilliant ideas?”

“I do.”

Realization struck while brewing the tea, nearly losing my mind. This stage calls for extraordinary measures.

‘There's a way.’

Not just decreasing Lady Goldencup’s favorability in the Crown Prince’s eyes, but also a method extremely effective in maintaining our sanity.

“What’s this brilliant idea?”

“If the Heretic Inquisitor acts more like [Lady Goldencup] and I act more like [a proper butler], our immersion rates will increase.”

On the other hand...

“What if we do [things Lady Goldencup would never do] and [things a butler would never do]?”

“Our immersion rates might drop. Even if they don’t drop, they won’t increase at least. What do you think?”

The Heretic Inquisitor’s eyes sparkled.

".....Ah, indeed. Simple yet effective. You’re truly a hunter who conquered the impregnable 10th floor and cleared up to the 20th floor in a row!”

"Thanks, but let's focus. So, our conclusion is simple.”

I snapped my fingers, activating a skill.

“From now on, let's become [Delinquent Lady] and [Delinquent Butler].”

The Heretic Inquisitor tilted her head.

“Huh?”

Then, Ghoul Reincarnation unfolded. There was no need to summon many ghouls like in the Chronicles of the Heavenly Demon. Right now, we only needed one particular ghoul.

My shadow wriggled and transformed into the form of one person.

"....."

Ponytail tied back.

Eyes more annoying than any other creature in the universe.

“Hey....”

The Flame Emperor - Yoo Soo-Ha appeared.

Immediately upon being summoned, Yoo Soo-Ha grimaced, his face crumpling like a used tissue, and he started talking.

“You damn brat, what kind of nonsense are you planning to make me do this time---.”

"Let's get along, shall we?"

“---Uhmp, uhmp!! Uhhhhhhhmp!”

As a ghoul, he couldn't defy my commands, even with his harsh language. Yoo Soo-Ha looked like a hostage caught by terrorists, his mouth sealed, grunting “Uhmp! Uhmp!”

Seeing the Flame Emperor in this state somewhat lightened my gloomy mood. How should I put it? Like closing the lid on a trash can? It felt like my heart's fine dust was being cleanly swept away. The Flame Emperor. He was like the dustbin of a vacuum cleaner.

“Heretic Inquisitor.”

“Yes, King of Death!”

“You look too much like a model student from the outside.”

I spoke with a stern expression.

“Whether it's gestures or behavior, it's all too pure. But to truly become a delinquent lady, your current state is far from enough. You're severely lacking.”

“Ah.”

The Heretic Inquisitor perked up her ears.

“Please enlighten me on my shortcomings! I'm eager to learn!”

“Yes, I'll teach you. A one-on-one specialized tutorial.”

I slowly looked at Yoo Soo-Ha.

“The best tutor will guide the Heretic Inquisitor on the path of delinquency.”

“Ah, I’m excited!”

“Uhmp---, uhmp!! Uhhhhhhhmp!”

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled like a puppy. Yoo Soo-Ha scowled like a scoundrel. Between the puppy and the scoundrel, I nodded seriously.

“Let’s become delinquents.”

The next day, Sormewin Academy exploded.

Chapter 93: Falling (3)

Romance Fantasy Rule 3

"If you want to nurture love between two people, first make them hate each other."

"Hatred is like lightning, affection is like thunder. When blinded by the lightning of hatred, the thunder of affection begins to rumble."

"Are you well?"

On the way to Sormewin Academy.

"Yes, I slept deeply. Were you at peace last night, my fellow student?"

“Thanks to you. I had a good dream, so I'm feeling refreshed. I'm thinking of having two slices of toast for breakfast today.”

“Oh, my. I'd love to hear about your dream. How about we have breakfast together?”

“Oh, what a splendid suggestion!”

“Hehe.”

Students exchanged greetings and smiles gracefully. The white path to school was filled with "Oh my" and "Hehe" amidst the blooming magnolias.

Peace. Tranquility.

Even a choir of baby birds couldn't be more peaceful, and a garden full of blooming tulips couldn't be more tranquil. The mere sight was purifying. Moments as sparkling as diamonds existed here.

“Ah, Lady Goldencup. Are you well?”

And then, the diamond turned out to be nothing more than a pretty piece of coal.

It burns really well when lit.

“No! I’m not well at all!”

"Uh."

To the lady who greeted her, the Heretic Inquisitor smiled broadly.

“How could I be? Last night I was almost killed by assassins. Couldn't sleep at all, already feeling wronged, and now you ask if I'm well! Do you even think?”

“Huh?”

“No, of course you don't. If you did, you wouldn't ask someone who might've been killed last night if they are 'well'. Ahaha. It's your brain that should be well! Is your skull safe? Is your brain alright?”

“Uh..... eh? What?”

“Ah! My, my, my tongue twisted because of restlessness. Don't worry. I understand! A healthy mind resides in a healthy body. How could your mental state be sound when your brain's damaged? Better rush to the infirmary. In other words, get out of my sight!”

“.....ah,ah?”

Staggering.

The lady fainted. Thankfully, her servant caught her, or she would have rolled on the school path. The students, who were politely exchanging morning greetings, screamed.

“Lady Magnolia Alba! Are you okay?!”

“My goodness! She's too pale...”

“Everyone, hurry and call the nurse!”

“Breathe! Can you hear me?! You need to breathe!”

“Lady Goldencup! What, what did you just say...!”

Chatter erupted.

Peaceful chirping birds flew away, and the tranquil tulip garden was hit by a bomb. The diamond burst into flames. Ladies from noble families, though adept at caring for their fainted peer, couldn't hide their shock.

The Heretic Inquisitor grinned.

“Why the fuss? I just countered someone's thoughtless ‘are you well’ with ‘is your head okay’!”

A nearby lady's mouth twitched.

“Head is..... okay.....?”

“Ah. You have beautifully red hair. Is it because your skull cracked and some brain leaked out? Ahaha. Pity if your already lacking intelligence drops further. Better scoop it back in!”

“.....haa.....”

Staggering.

“Lady?!”

“Kyaa! Lady Plum Blossom!”

“Where’s the nurse?! Hasn’t she arrived yet?!”

“That wage thief!”

“Someone fetch water!”

“Guard! Guard!”

Chaos ensued. An apocalyptic scene. Though the Revelations hadn't ended yet, Sormewin Academy's path to school was delightfully devastated.

“Ahaha.”

Having single-handedly created a disaster zone in a 20-meter radius, the Heretic Inquisitor smiled innocently, despite the dark circles under her eyes from the overnight tutoring.

“King of Death, you're the best! My immersion rate didn't rise at all!”

You're amazing too.

The effects of the Flame Emperor's one-on-one tutoring were phenomenal.

“I'll trust and follow you completely from now on! King of Death's strategies are always reliable!”

I bowed with a butler's elegance.

“Thank you for the compliment, Lady.”

“You’re welcome! But is stepping on my foot also part of keeping the immersion rate down? My big toe hurts a bit.”

“To behave like a delinquent butler, it can’t be helped. Bear with it.”

“I understand!”

That morning, 14 ladies were admitted to the academy infirmary.

The incident in front of the girls’ dorm quickly spread throughout the school.

The incident was dubbed the "Are You Well?" event.

Cafeteria, main building, garden.

Everywhere, students whispered about the incident.

“Lady Goldencup has lost her mind.”

“She changed completely after yesterday's attack.”

“She must be possessed by a devil.”

“Two ladies and one gentleman who boldly went to uncover the truth haven't returned yet.”

“Isn't she more attractive now?”

“So, who ordered Lady Goldencup's assassination?”

“The unofficial Sormewin club ‘All Younger Siblings’ welcomes the change. We urge our fellow students to shift their perceptions.”

“Lady Goldencup's butler was seen mixing salt in the tea. Many witnesses.”

“Dangerous.”

“Assassination.”

“His Highness the Crown Prince is handling it.”

“Lost her mind.”

“Going crazy.”

“Proper salt intake, good for health... Salt in tea, a wellness trend?”

“Lady Goldencup.”

The rumor snowballed into wild tales.

“Lady Goldencup! You have insulted the honor of my master and our family!”

Despite the transformation into wild tales, the fact that 14 ladies fainted was true. Naturally, their servants were enraged.

Though they dared not confront a noble lady, they could challenge me, an equal servant. By lunchtime, angry servants lined up to confront me.

"For the honor of my master and our family, I cannot stand by. Please allow me to duel with the Lady's servant!"

"Hooh."

The Heretic Inquisitor nodded.

"Alright! Resolve it amicably among yourselves---."

"Wait a moment."

I stealthily stepped on the Heretic Inquisitor's foot. She yelped.

"What's wrong?"

"If you've decided to act, stay a delinquent lady to the end. Don't just accept what others say. That's not delinquent enough.”

"Ah, indeed. So, how should I act more delinquently?"

"Just follow my lead."

We exchanged whispers. The servants who had requested the duel looked at us confusedly. Shortly after, the Heretic Inquisitor spoke with an enlightened face.

"Fine! I'll allow a duel with my servant."

"Ah, thank you. Then let's start right here..."

"Wait! If you want to duel, you need to pay me!"

The servants blinked in surprise.

"..What?"

"If you want something from me, you have to pay."

The Heretic Inquisitor sat on a garden bench, crossing her legs. Her face beamed with a forceful presence. If children saw her now, they'd instinctively call her 'sister'.

"My butler is a property of our family. I'm the only one from our family here at the academy, so he's mine too. What if my property gets hurt during the duel? Will you take responsibility?"

"Uh, uhuh....."

The noble servants were bewildered. Pay for a sacred duel? Too thuggish?

"How much should we pay?"

"Five gold coins will do!"

"....."

“Ahaha.”

Following my instructions, the Heretic Inquisitor delivered the last line.

“Everyone. Surely your loyalty to your young ladies isn’t worth less than five gold coins, is it?”

"....."

The servants began to reluctantly take out their gold coins. It was a bit pitiful to watch. Among them, there were some with saddened faces.

The worried expressions about whether paying for a duel in honor of their mistresses was truly honorable. Faces wondering, ‘Is this really the right thing to do?’

But once a few started paying, others followed suit.

“Here, Lady.”

“Yes!”

“Me too...”

“Yes, received!”

“Sorry, I only have silver coins right now. Can I pay with change...?”

“I’ll accept it all!”

The Heretic Inquisitor efficiently extorted the servants. The dignity of a lady bestowed with a title by the Emperor was buried under the jingling sound of coins.

Like master, like servant.

"Hmm."

I also cracked my neck like a gangster.

Over ten servants were awkwardly staring at me.

“Just asking out of curiosity.”

“Wh-what is it?”

I held up my holy sword still in its sheath.

“Has anyone here starved for more than a week?”

Exciting beating sounds echoed in the garden. It felt like drumming a set of drums as I knocked down the servants one by one. I beat them to dust.

"Ouch!"

“Huh, ack?!”

Many students watched as the servants screamed. Looking around, students gazed at me in horror. Behind me, the Heretic Inquisitor was rolling coins in her hand, humming cheerfully.

Screams, astonishment, and the sound of money.

These three melodies created a perfect trinity.

“S-”

Then, someone hurriedly ran through the crowd of onlooking students.

“Silvia! What on earth is going on here?!”

The man who could be described as the Noodle Hair of this apocalyptic world. The Crown Prince.

The blond Noodle was very flustered. Looking at his puffed-up noodle face, I felt a thrill of satisfaction. Last night, we felt discomfited because of this man, and today we returned the favor.

“Suddenly going berserk, I thought it was just a nasty rumor as usual. But now, what are you doing with the students... You!”

The Crown Prince mumbled in confusion and glared at me. Hmm. For noodle soup, his gaze was quite fierce.

“What are you doing! When the master is tired, the servant should do everything to calm them down! To recklessly wield a sword, you’re a third-rate butler and a disqualified servant! Disqualified!”

“My apologies, Your Highness.”

I sheathed my holy sword and bowed my head.

“I do not seek evaluation from anyone other than my Lady. If my Lady deems me third-rate, then I am a third-rate butler, and if she considers me disqualified, I will step down, but as long as she doesn’t, I remain a faithful butler.”

“You... to cause such trouble and still have the audacity to...”

The Crown Prince twitched his lips, then closed his mouth. He probably thought it was useless to talk with a servant like me.

“Silvia. Haven’t I repeatedly told you? You shouldn’t keep such a man as a butler. The imperial palace has several well-groomed eunuch candidates. If I ask His Majesty, I can bring one of them for you. Don't worry! His Majesty already holds you in high regard."

Wow.

The onlooking students let out soft gasps. Ladies with smitten faces were seen here and there. The Crown Prince had just expressed his affection too transparently.

The ladies sighed dreamily and whispered among themselves.

"What should we do? The Crown Prince is engaged to Lady Silver Lily..."

"But their betrothal was arranged even before they were born, right? It's such an old story. Since His Majesty cares for Lady Goldencup, perhaps..."

"Ah, what should we do!"

As they fretted, the ladies' eyes sparkled.

Nothing was hotter than a royal romance.

Their own diamonds burning would be a pity, but watching someone else's, especially the most splendid diamond of the empire, burn up would be worth a fortune.

“Silvia, what do you think?”

The Crown Prince approached and grabbed the Heretic Inquisitor's wrist.

“Will you grant my earnest request?”

The Heretic Inquisitor looked at the Crown Prince.

At this moment, I also tensed.

Would the [female protagonist] Lady Goldencup's love flare up more fiercely, or would the Heretic Inquisitor's self, acting as [the delinquent lady], prevail? I had done my best to support the latter, but ultimately, the Heretic Inquisitor herself was the main character in this battle of hearts.

We could lose this gamble.

“...Your Highness.”

The Heretic Inquisitor slowly opened her lips.

“What perfume did you wear today?”

“What?”

“I apologize for mentioning, but it’s a rather unfamiliar scent to me.”

The Heretic Inquisitor's face brightened with a radiant smile.

Swish.

Naturally releasing her wrist from the Crown Prince's grip, she unfolded her fan and smiled coyly behind it.

“Have the culprits behind last night's attack on me been identified?”

“Ah, no... not yet, the investigation is ongoing.”

“If my butler hadn't been with me last night, I might have been harmed! If Your Highness cares for me, please respect my butler as much. Didn't he protect my life and uphold the academy's honor?”

"....."

“Your Highness. I trust my butler the most!”

It was the moment the Noodle's face boiled over.

And the Heretic Inquisitor laughed behind her fully spread fan.

“O-hohohohot!!”

It was the most romantic laugh in the world.

Chapter 94: The Villainess (1)

Is there anyone who cherishes you as I do?

Has anyone else caressed you with such care?

Have you seen eyes more anxious than mine?

Have you ever felt a touch gentler than my hands?

There is none. There never was.

And I will ensure there never will be.

Oh-hohohoho!

A romantic laughter echoed through the garden.

Struck head-on by the laughter, the Crown Prince's face turned utterly crestfallen.

“Si-Silvia...?”

“Ohohoho! Speak, Your Highness!”

“Isn't your laughter somewhat frivolous? Of course, your voice is like a bird's song to me. It always sounds like music to my ears, but still, consider the dignity of a noble...”

“Oh-hohohohot! I am quite satisfied with this laughter!”

“Is, is that so?”

The Crown Prince mumbled uncertainly.

“That, that's how it is... Right... No. On second thought, it's not bad. Hmm... Um, Yes! It's fine. It's perfectly fine! Beautiful, indeed. Today, I've discovered a new charm in you.”

Look at this Noodle Hair!

He still doesn't lose his love for Lady Goldencup despite all this? The students watching all around us have their eyes turned sour, right?

-You're like a zombie.

The Guardian Spirit, who had been quiet since entering this apocalyptic world, spoke up.

-I've been watching your play this time and tried not to interfere, but it's too frustrating to stay silent. Hey, aren't you misunderstanding something?

'Misunderstanding? What do you mean?'

-You think breaking up love is easier than making it, right?

'Yes.'

-Sorry, but that's... it depends.

The Guardian Spirit said, with an expression like a mountain gorilla suddenly trapped in a zoo from ruling the jungle.

‘Depends?’

-Yeah. You exude strong forever-alone vibes, but love is different for everyone who falls in it, kid. No matter how much you try to cut it with scissors, there are loves that won't sever. From what I see, that Crown Prince seems to be one of those cases...

Before the Guardian Spirit could finish, the Crown Prince spoke up.

“Silvia! You are like a kaleidoscope, shining so variably. Yesterday, you were a snowflake, and today, you bloom like a plum blossom. Indeed, a person's laughter isn't determined at birth. Is a noble's laughter defined by law? I should also change my laugh. Eumhahahaha!”

This crazy guy?

And then, a stunning duet echoed high into the sky in the garden.

“Ohoho!”

“Eumhaha!”

“Oh-hohohoho!”

“Eumhahahaha!”

The couple of the century was born right there.

I was at a loss for words.

‘What even is love...?’

I was shocked.

-You’ve never been in a relationship. You don't know romantic feelings, yet you think you can untangle these kids' twisted relationships.

The Guardian Spirit clicked his tongue.

-People have ruined entire nations just to look good in front of their loved ones. Your idea to prevent immersion by becoming delinquent was good, but it's not enough to break love. Yep. It might be insufficient.

Suddenly, the Guardian Spirit seemed very mature. Was I feeling inferior because I'm forever alone? To this mountain gorilla?

Isn't that too damaging to my pride?

"....."

Stomp.

I stepped between the Crown Prince and the Heretic Inquisitor. Making it evident. Naturally, the Crown Prince furrowed his brow at this.

"You..."

“I have been trusted the most by Lady Goldencup.”

Let's see if your love still doesn't cool off.

“Your Highness, you are noble. I am lowly. But while Your Highness is far away, I am always beside my Lady. My Lady's family is my home, and my Lady's life is the life I serve. Your Highness.”

A scream of “Kyaaa!” erupted in the garden. It was the voices of the observing ladies.

-No. Hey. Crazy. Hey. Hey!

The Guardian Spirit shouted desperately.

-Stupid! Ah, this forever-alone guy! He doesn't get it! That guy's a prince of an empire; imagine how strong his pride is! If you act like that, the Crown Prince will only get more jealous...

“Ha!”

The Crown Prince gritted his teeth.

“So under the guise of a butler, you’ve been loitering around the Lady, acting all high and mighty. Fine. Then I’ll take care of Silvia! While at the academy, I’ll look after her, so you can go back to your countryside.”

No.

You’re a prince of a nation!

Have you gone mad with love?

"Oh-hohohoho!"

Heretic Inquisitor, you’re sane now, so stop laughing.

“---What in the world is going on here?”

That’s when it happened. The buzzing of the students suddenly ceased.

Just for a moment. For no more than a second, the commotion quieted down. It was only for a second, but that was enough.

The ladies and gentlemen of the noble families bowed their heads and made way.

“...Lady Silver Lily.”

Only the Crown Prince kept his frown as he watched.

There, a lady with moonlight in her hair was approaching.

“I heard you submitted a sick leave this morning.”

The Crown Prince spoke.

“So I thought you would be absent from the academy today, but it seems you have recovered. Ha. The Lady’s heart is quite mischievous, it seems.”

"....."

Lady Silver Lily didn't respond immediately. Instead, she scanned the crowd once.

Flinch.

When her gaze met theirs, the students bowed deeply. These were students who had been buzzing about the royal scandal. Only after they froze, did Lady Silver Lily finally speak.

"I've been well, thanks to Your Highness's concern. I had a peaceful night."

"...Is that so? That's good to hear. You spend half the year on sick leave, so a day like today must be precious. It's a nice spring day with good sunlight, perfect for a leisurely stroll."

An icy face.

[Enjoy a stroll] meant [Leave from here]. The Crown Prince, who had clung so desperately to the Lady Goldencup, was harsh with Lady Silver Lily.

Maybe even unusually harsh.

‘Even as royalty, it would be difficult to treat a ducal family so rudely, wouldn’t it?’

But Lady Silver Lily remained calm.

“A stroll sounds lovely. If the spring breeze gets just a bit rougher, the leaves of the magnolia will fall. I worry the flowers might feel lonely if I enjoy it alone.”

Unlike last night at the ball, where she struggled, Lady Silver Lily spoke smoothly.

“Your Highness. Do not soil yourself in such a noisy place. Why not join me for a walk and comfort the spring?”

“Ha. Why should I...”

“Lady Goldencup.”

Lady Silver Lily looked at the Heretic Inquisitor.

“Join us for the stroll.”

The Crown Prince shut his mouth.

All eyes were now on the Heretic Inquisitor.

“Hmm.”

The Heretic Inquisitor flicked her fan and sneakily glanced at me.

‘What should I do, King of Death?’ Her eyes asked. ‘Should I follow?’ She was entirely reliant on my judgment.

Is it okay?

Lady Goldencup and the Crown Prince. Both are dangerous. Being with them will only deepen our immersion. The Heretic Inquisitor would become more like the Lady Goldencup, and I would become more like a butler.

As risky as it is, doing nothing won’t solve anything.

“...What's your current immersion rate?”

I whispered so only the Heretic Inquisitor could hear.

“Has it increased?”

“Yes. A bit.”

The Heretic Inquisitor whispered back.

"Currently, my immersion rate is 17 percent. Ahah, it increased by 1 percent while listening to the Crown Prince and another 1 percent upon seeing Lady Silver Lily. It has increased by a total of 2 percent since last night."

2%.

Certainly slower than the skyrocketing rate last night. Should we risk entering the tiger's den now? If not now, then when?

I looked into the Heretic Inquisitor's eyes.

“When spring comes?”

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled brightly.

“The magnolia fades, King of Death.”

Okay.

I made up my mind.

“Alright. Let's follow, Lady.”

“I trust your judgment, butler.”

The Heretic Inquisitor neatly folded her fan.

“Oh-hohoho! How can I refuse when Lady Silver Lily herself invites me for a walk? I gladly accept your invitation!”

Lady Silver Lily frowned slightly and then casually turned away.

"Follow quietly."

She led us to her residence, not the dormitory. Evidently, due to her family's influence, Lady Silver Lily didn't stay in the dorms. Like living in a villa, she stayed in a separate building.

"This is where you suggest a [stroll]?"

The Crown Prince grumbled, having been somewhat forced to follow.

The Silver Lily Lady's residence was luxurious, unbefitting a student's dwelling. The Crown Prince, raised in the imperial palace, didn't seem overly impressed by such opulence.

"Of course not."

Lady Silver Lily spoke nonchalantly as she walked. Tap. Tap. Her shoes echoed in the hallway.

“The stroll was just an excuse.”

“What?”

“There were too many eyes in the garden. I couldn’t speak the truth. It’s a matter needing secrecy.”

“...Secrecy?”

"Yes."

Tap.

“This is about dealing with assassins who dared to invade the cradle of nobility. Your Highness, we cannot allow the public to be disturbed by speaking rashly.”

"....."

The Crown Prince was silent.

From what I deduced, the mastermind hiring the assassins was the Crown Prince. Although it might be my intuition, Lady Silver Lily's calm tone seemed to say, [I already know what you did].

“...You mean you've caught them? I haven't even grasped the leads yet. How did you?”

“The servant of Lady Goldencup provided me with a clue.”

Tap.

“I dismissed Lady Goldencup and her servant from the ball last night. It was an overreaction. But I never ordered to confine them anywhere. It seems some of my subordinates harbored ill intentions.”

The Silver Lily Lady's residence had stairs leading to a basement. Standing there, she turned back to look at us.

Her face was expressionless.

“Shall we go down, Your Highness?”

“...The servants are not in sight. Strange. Where have the ducal servants gone?”

“Are you worried? That’s likely. I shall lead the way.”

Lady Silver Lily, without waiting for a response, descended the stairs. Tap, Tap. Her steps echoed into the basement. Tap. Tap... She disappeared into the darkness.

The Crown Prince swallowed nervously and followed down.

We trailed behind them.

Descending the stairs, something became more intense. It was something too familiar to my nose, to my life. The smell of blood. The Heretic Inquisitor and I were unfazed, but the Crown Prince ahead of us twitched his shoulders.

“---I apologize for bringing Your Highness to such a humble place.”

In the basement, three people were tied to chairs.

All three were servants of the ducal house I had glimpsed last night.

“These are the masterminds behind the assassins who attacked Lady Goldencup.”

All three were soaked in blood.

"....."

The Crown Prince's hands trembled.

Even I frowned slightly. Among those who descended, only the Heretic Inquisitor and Lady Silver Lily kept the same expression.

It made sense for the Heretic Inquisitor, being the Guild Master of the Temple of the Omnipotent God, accustomed to torture and interrogation.

But the other was a ducal lady, seemingly fragile as moonlight, ready to collapse at any moment. Yet, she stood there as if familiar with such a place.

“After investigating all night.”

And then I remembered.

“These men acted out of personal revenge.”

The Lady in front of me, capable of destroying this world.

“Personal... revenge?”

“Yes. Shall I tell you?”

Lady Silver Lily grabbed the hair of one of the servants. "Aaack!" The servant cried in agony, only opening his left eye. Perhaps his right eye wouldn't open. He looked at us with just his left eye.

“His Highness the Crown Prince is here. Show some respect.”

“Miss, ugh... Miss...”

“You conspired with your colleagues to hire assassins. You targeted Lady Goldencup. Why did you aim for her life? Confess the truth to His Highness.”

“Miss... Miss...”

“If you tell the truth, your family won’t be harmed.”

This woman.

“That, Lady Goldencup, a mere daughter of an insignificant baronial family, had the audacity to allure His Highness... Miss, you’re the rightful... Yes, the fiancée. It was decided long ago. She’s ruining it.”

Is dangerous.

“Ruining it... and so... I acted foolishly in anger and frustration. I apologize. Apologies, Miss. Apologies, Your Highness...”

“Is there someone else behind this, commanding you to hire the assassins?”

“No, there’s no one else... no other mastermind...”

No.

“Is this all just your doing, the three of you?”

It was false testimony.

“Yes... yes, Miss. That's true...”

To protect the Crown Prince.

“Is that really so?”

“Yes, absolutely... Miss...”

“Then, that’s how it is.”

Lady Silver Lily intended to bury the truth underground.

For the Crown Prince.

The man who'd suffer the most if the truth was revealed.

“Your Highness.”

Lady Silver Lily looked up at the Crown Prince.

“Decide their fate.”

The Crown Prince flinched.

“To decide their fate...”

“Those who tried to kill Lady Goldencup, who invaded the cradle of nobility, are criminals. It's only right to punish them, and you have the power to do so. You are the foundation of this nation, Your Highness.”

"....."

“What hesitates you?”

Perhaps, Lady Silver Lily softly opened her lips,

“Is there a different truth behind this case?”

"....."

“As a subject, not as a student, I implore you. If my investigation is inadequate, postpone the punishment. The matter is serious, I'll inform the Emperor's special forces.”

The Emperor's special forces.

Upon hearing that, the 'butler's' memories resurfaced.

The dogs of the empire, second to none, the hunters who don't bow to any other name. Composed of the empire's finest swordsmen and magicians, they are granted absolute independent investigative authority.

The current Crown Prince secured his position precisely because they eliminated the previous prince involved in corruption.

“But if Your Highness is satisfied with my investigation, there’s no need to complicate matters.”

Lady Silver Lily bowed.

A sword lay on the floor, seemingly prepared beforehand.

“Execute them here,”

Lady Silver Lily rolled up her sleeves.

Her arms, revealed, were covered in countless scars.

“Punish me,”

Cut, slashed, scratched, bitten, whipped, burned scars marred what would have once been arms as white as lilies. Not just her arms. From a long gash extending to her shoulder, I sensed her entire body was battered.

The bowed Lady of the Silver Lily whispered.

“For failing to manage my family's servants.”

The Silver Lily.

The villainess of this world.

“As always, I shall bear the sins.”

The Crown Prince trembled.

Chapter 95: The Villainess (2)

...My beloved daughter.

...Do not harbor any expectations.

...Do not expect anything.

...Expect nothing, hope for nothing. That is the secret of life.

...Every time you whisper to yourself 'maybe this time,' the world will whisper back 'this time for certain.' Being deceived once is an experience, twice is a tragedy. But being deceived a third time is a comedy.

...My beloved daughter, you are a noble. Be careful not to turn your life into a comedy for others. Do not allow yourself three chances.

...Just two wounds are enough to be remembered forever. The ancient emperors mourned their deaths in advance. Do not repeat the folly of erecting monuments in the desert.

...Yet, if I were to entrust you to the world, remember this, daughter. You are not lending your life to others. Do not become someone's debtor. From the beginning, give without expecting anything in return. Give everything.

...Allow people to hold a carnival over your corpse. Give your hair. Give your fingers. From your most innocent sacrifices to your purest joys and hopes, give everything. They will greedily feast upon all you have.

...And then leave this world without leaving anything behind.

Nothing at all.

Mother said so and passed away.

The funeral was a cremation.

The basement was silent.

"Why do you hesitate?"

Only the low voice of Lady Silver Lily echoed. The air was cold. Though the interrogated servants bled, their pooled blood couldn't warm the basement a bit.

"Hurry and pass judgment as the foundation of this nation."

"Hah, ha."

The Crown Prince chuckled faintly.

Was that really a laugh? Barely lifting the corners of his mouth, it was a miserably failed smile.

He glanced at us as if fleeing, the Heretic Inquisitor and me. His eyes seemed to ask, [What do you make of this absurd situation?]

"Your Highness."

But his attempt to escape was cut short. The sharp voice of Lady Silver Lily brought back his gaze.

"Shall I report these crimes to the Emperor's special forces?"

The Crown Prince hesitated.

"Are you planning to follow the deposed Crown Prince's footsteps?"

"Are you testing the Emperor's mercy towards you?"

It was a threat.

Her tone was soft, polite, but Lady Silver Lily, the ducal daughter, was unmistakably pressuring the Crown Prince.

And it was an effective threat.

"Uh."

The empire's heir trembled, clutching the sword handed by Lady Silver Lily. But his resolve stopped at holding the sword. It didn't extend to wielding it.

"Silvia..."

The Prince, unable to act, stared at us. Perhaps hoping someone would step in and save Lady Silver Lily.

"Handle it cleanly!"

But the Heretic Inquisitor merely smiled.

"It's good that you involved us too. Ah, it's perfect. Everyone here becomes an [accomplice], keeping silent. The Crown Prince gets to cover his mistake, and I'm happy to see the Lady punished!"

"Si... Silvia?"

"The problem is, it seems only the Lady gains nothing from this arrangement."

The Heretic Inquisitor's eyes narrowed like an inverted moon.

"What benefit do you gain from this, Lady? Three loyal servants of your house will die. And even taking punishment on behalf of the Crown Prince. What's your real gain?"

"What do you mean? As I said, they are my house's servants, and as its lady, it's only right I bear responsibility for their mistakes..."

"Ah, how lovely! But it's inefficient for a discussion! Let's be frank for a more efficient discourse. Why would you take the punishment for the Crown Prince? Is that your 'love'?"

Silence filled the basement.

Lady Goldencup and Lady Silver Lily exchanged a glance for a moment.

"I'm just doing my duty as a future subject. That's all. Lady Goldencup."

Lady Silver Lily's voice remained calm.

"You might not understand, being from a family from the outskirts."

"So, you expect nothing in return?"

"If you expect any answers, give up. Whether you understand me or not has no bearing on my actions."

"Interesting..."

The Heretic Inquisitor exhaled softly. The meaning behind that breath was beyond me at the moment.

But one thing was clear. Her reaction wasn't what the Crown Prince had hoped for. The Heretic Inquisitor had no intention of stopping Lady Silver Lily. With despair coloring his face, the Crown Prince, who had clung to his love, looked defeated.

"...Please wait a moment, Lady."

That's why I had to speak up.

The Heretic Inquisitor looked at me, slightly tilting her head.

"Yes, Butler? What is it?"

"If these servants truly masterminded the assassination, we too have a right to revenge. It's not right to leave the judgment solely to the Crown Prince."

My mouth felt dry. I turned away. To overcome this politically complex case... I focused on devising the [best strategy], using the butler's knowledge without hesitation.

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 7%.]

My tongue felt parched. It's still manageable.

"...And the same goes for you, Lady Silver Lily. You were betrayed by loyal servants. You have every right to punish them."

"Ho. So?"

"Each person punishes each of the three servants. How about that?"

Silence.

"Hmm."

The Heretic Inquisitor narrowed one eye.

"....."

Lady Silver Lily silently furrowed her brows.

The Crown Prince's face lit up rapidly.

"That's right! The butler's words are wise. The Lady was betrayed by her subordinates. Silvia was attacked. I need to uphold the law! It's fair for each of us to take responsibility for one!"

"Your Highness, a ruler should not share responsibilities---

"Quiet!"

The Crown Prince irritably threw the sword at Lady Silver Lily. Thud! The scabbard hit her leg and bounced off.

Lady Silver Lily remained expressionless, even though the hit must have left a bruise.

"You only know how to kill! Punish! Execute! How many people do you think I've disposed of till now?"

"It's the duty of the future emperor."

"I'm not a murderer! A butcher! A monster! If you're so thirsty for blood, start with yourself!"

The Crown Prince fumed. Lady Silver Lily just stared at him. Time seemed to freeze.

The ice in the air shattered as Lady Silver Lily slowly bent her waist. She picked up the sword with practiced movements, left hand on the scabbard and right on the hilt.

"Your Highness."

The blade's color resembled her moonlit hair.

"Then at least give me an order."

"An order?"

"Yes. Your Highness, command me to execute. Why are you hesitating? Have you forgotten how to command? Are you renouncing your royal authority?"

The Crown Prince took a deep breath.

"Kill,"

He uttered, as if stumbling over the word.

"Kill them..."

But Lady Silver Lily did not falter.

Blood splattered.

The air in the basement split, followed by a more weighty severance of flesh.

"Hah."

With a sigh akin to a subtle shrug of her shoulders, Lady Silver Lily ended a life with a single breath. She then turned to look at us.

"....."

A sense of foreboding surged. My heart raced disquietingly.

I realized what I felt towards Lady Silver Lily.

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 8%.]

It was an instinctive intuition that [she will eventually hinder Lady Goldencup's path].

An obsession that I must deal with this person before me.

"Ahaha, I find you increasingly interesting! Well, alright!"

My immersion rate was rising crazily.

"It's problematic to leave the person who ordered the assassination alive. Hand me the sword. I'll take care of the second one. Shall we become accomplices?"

How many had the Heretic Inquisitor killed until now?

I didn't know yet, but it was clear she was no amateur in this area.

As soon as she received the sword, the Heretic Inquisitor executed the second servant with a swift strike.

Only one servant remained.

"Ah..."

Only one person left to administer punishment.

The Crown Prince stared, gaping at the Heretic Inquisitor, not expecting her to carry out the execution so easily.

"Ugh, ugh!"

Then, astonishingly, or rather shockingly, the Crown Prince began to retreat, attempting to escape. Before Lady Silver Lily could say anything, and just as the Heretic Inquisitor exclaimed "Ah!", the Crown Prince ran.

No one anticipated this, so the Crown Prince nearly escaped. If I, who had been at the back of the group, hadn't blocked the basement stairs.

"How dare you! A mere servant blocking my path!"

"You."

I grabbed and squeezed the Crown Prince's wrist firmly.

The Crown Prince struggled to break free but failed. A low whimper escaped him. He stood no chance against my grip.

"Let go at once! How dare you defy me!"

"This is your doing."

My voice sounded chillingly cold, even to my own ears.

"None of this would have happened if you hadn't foolishly ordered an assassination. Falling madly in love and kidnapping is one thing, but to shirk responsibility is another."

I glared at the Crown Prince.

"Hold it."

"Hold what...?"

"The sword. Hold it."

The Crown Prince flinched.

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 9%.]

Despite the deepening immersion, it didn't matter. My feelings were identical to the butler's. Rage against someone cowardly escaping.

I dragged the Crown Prince. He resisted, but I ignored his struggles and led him forward.

"Grasp the hilt properly."

"Release me! I command you! Is anyone there?!"

He didn't want to, so I forced him to.

"Raise the sword."

The Crown Prince was powerless against me.

"So much for blaming others for your life. You probably passed all the dirty, sordid, and distasteful tasks to Lady Silver Lily. For a prince of a nation, that's low."

"Silvia! Restrain your servant! I beg you, Silvia!"

"Strike down with the sword."

He didn't act, so I acted for him.

"Ah."

The scent of blood grew stronger in the basement. The bound servant's body slumped lifelessly from the chair.

The Crown Prince stood there, stunned. At his feet, Lady Silver Lily slowly knelt down, her skirt soaking up the blood, staining it red.

"The nation's foundation has righted the law, a blessing for all, Your Highness."

"....."

The Crown Prince didn't respond. He turned and left. I let go this time.

"Strengthen your resolve and continue to uphold the principles of reward and punishment."

The Crown Prince's heavy footsteps ascended the basement stairs. Thud, thud.... All the while, Lady Silver Lily continued her advice. Her voice gently echoed around the basement, striking the Crown Prince's back.

"The fate of the empire and its people depend on Your Highness's attitude. You may seem alone, but you are not. Your actions and decisions greatly impact the empire. Please..."

Footsteps faded away. We continued to look at the still bowing Lady Silver Lily.

"Become stronger."

I found myself wanting to understand this person.

Chapter 96: The Villainess (3)

Three days after falling into the Apocalypse, Lady Silver Lily was absent from the academy.

"She's bedridden due to illness," they say.

"Is that so..."

"Yes. She has always been prone to sickness. Moreover, she must have been exhausted from interrogating the servants all night."

The Heretic Inquisitor delicately sipped her sodium-rich healthy tea.

"Physical strength is power! No matter how grand the ideals one harbors, if the body is weak, it's hard to achieve them. Mm, it's regrettable. Lady Silver Lily is indeed a talent worth considering for the empire..."

"The Crown Prince has also been absent, I heard."

"Ahaha, yes, all thanks to the butler. He must be shocked, right? He might even consider taking a break from school."

In a corner of the garden, under the fully bloomed magnolias, we enjoyed our tea time. Other students who passed by were startled upon noticing us.

"Crazy master and servant!"

"That's Lady Goldencup!"

"Don't get too close!"

Ladies clutched their dresses and young masters rolled up their trousers as they hurried away.

Thanks to that, we had the vast garden to ourselves. Sweet.

"Heretic Inquisitor, you just called me [Butler] instead of [King of Death]. Be careful."

"Ah! My apologies. It was a mistake. With my immersion rate over 20%, things are not going as I wish. Oh, this salted tea is surprisingly charming! Another cup, please, Butler."

"There you go, calling me Butler again..."

Sighing, I still refilled her cup with tea.

Trickle.

"Hmm."

Humming, I realized the depth of the tea ceremony after taking on the role of a butler. The way the tea drops from the pot and settles into the cup, each droplet creating ripples, was beautiful. Truly a culture befitting the lady...

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 10%.]

"Aaah?!"

The Heretic Inquisitor jumped.

"Butler, why did you suddenly spill tea on me! It's hot! You've damaged my delicate hair!"

"[Aaah]?! You never screamed like that before! Are you really becoming Lady Goldencup? Say it once. When spring comes!"

"The magnolia fades, and so does the butler's hair!"

"Aaaaah!"

We experienced a moment of terror over hair loss.

We calmed down and ceased our quarrel. As a servant, I combed the Heretic Inquisitor's hair.

In just a few days, the back of her hair had grown a bit. Was it the effect of the Holy Transformation Technique or was she increasingly resembling Lady Goldencup?

"Your emotional expressions have become much more varied, Heretic Inquisitor."

My fingers brushed through her golden hair. I had never combed someone else's hair before, but my hands moved on their own.

"Before, you always smiled. But thinking about it, that's the same as never smiling. It felt more like smiling was just your default expression."

"Ah, has it changed now?"

"Yes, there's more emotion. It feels more vivid. Now, when you smile, I feel like I understand why. Whether you're genuinely happy or mocking."

"That's interesting. I'm aware of it too. Do you think this is a good trend, King of Death?"

I quietly looked down at the Heretic Inquisitor's small head, small body, small shoulders, small arms. How many had this small figure killed?

Heretic Inquisitor.

Originating from Bulgaria in Europe, a 1st-generation hunter.

Age unknown.

Number of killings unknown.

"Yes. I think it's a good trend."

I opened up.

"Honestly, I was wondering what to do with you."

"Hm? What do you mean?"

"You're a psychopathic mass murderer."

I gently tied her hair back, recalling how I cared for younger siblings in the orphanage.

"But I couldn't just kill you outright. Even the Black Dragon Witch, who probably hates someone like you the most, and even the Sword Saint kept you alive. There must be a reason not to kill you."

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled. Even when told I contemplated killing her, she wasn't shocked. She found it amusing.

"Accurate insight!"

"Why do you kill people?"

I asked the Heretic Inquisitor.

"You're a psychopath who understands others. You have your own way of understanding people. So why do you kill?"

"Hmm."

The Heretic Inquisitor tapped her chin, deep in thought. Laughter from students beyond the flower bushes softly reached us.

She turned to me and began whispering, audible only to me.

"First, I must tell you that I'm competent."

The Heretic Inquisitor formed a hand seal.

"Holy Technique, God of Cloaking!"

One of her gloves disappeared.

"This is one of the Holy Techniques I can use. It can make anything vanish from this world. Naturally, that includes murder evidence and corpses."

Her bare fingers danced in the air.

"If a ruler doesn't kill well, it's not because they're kind, King of Death! It's simply because hiding corpses and fearing discovery is troublesome. I don't have to worry about such annoyances and fears!"

"..."

"The tower was chaotic during the 1st-generation era."

The Heretic Inquisitor's face remained cheerfully bright.

"Resurgence of slavery. Racial and ethnic discrimination. Terrorism. Puppet forces. Massacres. Propaganda and fabrications. Ideological conflicts. It was like compressing human history into a pill and melting it in the mouth. The sense of crisis, 'If we continue like this, we'll all perish,' spread among the minor warlords, now the 5 great guilds."

Black Dragon. Sang-Ryun. Temple of the Omnipotent God. Celestial Martial Guild. Vigilante Corps.

"All five have gathered."

It was like a recitation of a hero's epic.

"The Black Dragon Witch spoke first!"

[Let's skip the nonsense. Let's form an eternal non-aggression pact.]

"The Countess set a condition."

[Guarantee exclusive rights to external world goods for Sang-Ryun.]

"I added!"

[It would be nice if each guild had its exclusive domain! That's the condition for cooperating in case concealment!]

"The Viper grumbled."

[The craziest ones turn out to be the most trustworthy. Tsk tsk. End times, indeed. ...But what's with this coffee? Why so bitter? Who ordered this coffee for me? Hey. Hey there? Hey?]

"The Sword Saint concluded!"

[We won't say 'we're doing what needs to be done.' Let's say 'we're doing what we want to do.' Tonight, we kill people based on our beliefs, our judgments, our methods.]

"That night, 4653 people died."

The Heretic Inquisitor's smile remained unchangingly bright.

"The next night, 10171 died. The night after, 8275. Then 7412, and the next night, 23781."

Died.

Died.

Died. Reciting this, the Heretic Inquisitor suddenly spoke cheerfully.

"And then,"

That day came unexpectedly, she said.

"That night, nobody died."

The end of the long cleanup operation.

That night, the Black Dragon Witch cried out loud.

And the Sword Saint.

[I will take responsibility and resign.]

The Sword Saint was the leader of the Vigilante Corps then.

[And never mention this incident again. I endorsed the massacre. Participated. I did it knowing I shouldn't. I'll hate you forever. And hate myself a little more.]

Separation.

After that day, the position of the guild master of the Vigilante Corps remained eternally vacant.

"Then the Paladin took over the Vigilante Corps."

The Paladin.

The Vice-Captain of the Vigilante Corps. Always introducing herself as such, and always referred to as such.

"The Paladin regretted it."

I suddenly remembered the night the Paladin and the Apothecary confronted the Sword Saint. Was that subtle tension because of this?

"I didn't regret it! It was a necessary sacrifice!"

The Heretic Inquisitor grinned brightly.

"But, maybe it's the influence of being immersed in Lady Goldencup, I now have a slightly odd thought."

"What is it?"

"King of Death. If you were there in those times, maybe things would have been different."

“It's fascinating. I've never been immersed in such feelings before.”

The Heretic Inquisitor lifted her head. The whispers had ceased. Above her, the magnolias bloomed in the sky.

“Is this how you always feel? Living adrift in thoughts of what could have been done differently then, or what might have been done at that moment. Wandering through such reflections, yet still managing to go on living.”

“That's impressive.”

The Heretic Inquisitor sighed deeply.

“Therefore,”

The 5th-ranked hunter spoke as if lamenting.

“That's probably why you all are so beautiful, and so endearing.”

“Heretic Inquisitor...”

“If only I were like you...”

The Heretic Inquisitor’s words paused momentarily.

“Hmm.”

They resumed.

"Umm."

And then.

“It’s difficult, Butler. I find myself increasingly wanting to stay in this world.”

The moment the Heretic Inquisitor smiled, a voice echoed.

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 11%.]

I realized something.

I probably won't be able to kill this person.

I can't kill someone who knows regret.

“Lady.”

“Yes.”

“When spring comes.”

The Heretic Inquisitor waved her hand. The glove that had disappeared earlier had returned, covering her bare hand. A white glove with a petal pattern. She smiled brightly.

“Spring is nice. Shall we go for a walk, Butler?”

It felt as if time had stopped.

I wasn't sure what expression I wore. The Heretic Inquisitor looked at my face, chuckled softly, then burst into laughter.

“Ahahaha! Ha! You look so pale, King of Death! You turned blue in an instant! You look like a corpse!”

“You... even your pranks...”

“I'm sorry. Gaining emotions has made me a bit of a prankster! Ah, I understand now. The kind of feelings you have towards me, King of Death! It's like looking up to a reliable older brother!”

“Older brother? You're a 1st-generation. Aren't you actually older than me?”

“No comment on that!”

But, the Heretic Inquisitor continued.

“It’s clear I’m rapidly immersing into Lady Goldencup! While we talk, my rate has increased by 1%. Currently, my immersion rate is 32%. Perhaps it will exceed 50% by tomorrow! That’s how addicted I am to experiencing these ‘emotions’.”

She fiddled with the hair I had tied up.

“I’m the protagonist of this Apocalypse’s story. But the end of the story belongs to you, King of Death. Before I drown in the identity of Lady Goldencup, swept away by emotions, please save the ending.”

“Yes.”

I nodded.

“I promise.”

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled.

“I trust you. My Butler.”

That night, the Heretic Inquisitor's immersion rate exceeded 50%.

‘The one who ultimately brings about the end of this world is Lady Silver Lily.’

I headed to Lady Silver Lily's residence, using the excuse of a sick visit.

‘She's the key. I need to understand her. Her love, jealousy, permissiveness, pride, possessiveness... I need to grasp it all to conclude this Apocalypse. And I will.’

The Lady's residence was bustling with servants, unlike yesterday.

“Excuse me.”

I spoke politely.

“May I see the Lady?”

“Who are you?”

“I’m here on behalf of Lady Goldencup for a sick visit.”

The servants' faces hardened. They were well aware of the bad blood between their mistress and Lady Goldencup. “Please wait a moment!” a servant shouted, rushing into the residence.

Shortly after, the servant returned with a reluctant face.

“...This way, please. The Lady has granted your request for a visit.”

“Thank you.”

I followed the servant's lead. The destination wasn't the Lady's bedroom or reception room, but her office. Many servants were coming in and out with reports.

“Letters from Lapanor region have arrived, Lady.”

“Put them on the left side of my desk.”

“Lady. Viscount Blue Waxflower has sent a letter in place of the head of her family. Considering the season, it seems to be a request regarding crop rotation...”

“Send it to the finance department for review, then bring it to me.”

“Lady.”

"Hm."

As Lady Silver Lily looked through documents at her desk, she lifted her head. Her red eyes briefly scanned me. Indifferently, she spoke.

“Guests have arrived. Everyone, leave.”

Lady Silver Lily flipped an hourglass on her desk.

“I’ll give you a 15-minute break.”

The servants hurried out.

In the spacious office, only Lady Silver Lily and I remained.

“So.”

She put down her quill.

“Lady Goldencup has sent a sick visit? That’s commendable. Just a few days ago, she would grind her teeth at the mere sight of me. People change so quickly.”

“I heard you collapsed from illness. I’m surprised to see you well. It’s a relief.”

“I’m a student, after all. Skipping classes requires a proper excuse. Not that I’d say I’m in good health, mind you.”

Lady Silver Lily coughed lightly.

“I’ve been watching your actions. You quickly noticed the spies I had placed under my command. You’ve changed too, not just Lady Goldencup. This time, the [Actor] chosen seems to have a good head on their shoulders. A blessing for the Empire."

"If I hadn't been smart enough, you wouldn't have accepted my visit."

Suddenly, I didn't understand.

"Excuse me?"

"Hm."

Lady Silver Lily narrowed her eyes.

"I thought you were smart, but you have some dull moments."

"What do you mean...?"

"I'm on my 14th round."

Her voice flowed calmly.

"Still, I'm just a returner repeating the last ten days of life. This is my 13th time facing an [Actor] like you."

Then, a voice sounded.

I was speechless upon hearing it.

[The silver-clad heart watches you.]

Lady Silver Lily.

"How many rounds have you been through?"

She was a returner of this world.

Chapter 97: Your Heart (1)

"Quite the dumbfounded expression."

Lady Silver Lily remarked.

"Didn't the Constellation that sent you explain anything to you? That's rare. Usually, when a Constellation sends an Apostle, they provide as much information as possible. Are you on bad terms with your Constellation?"

"Apostle...?"

"Truly clueless. Interesting."

Lady Silver Lily opened a drawer. Another hourglass, identical to the one she had just flipped, was inside. Clang! She lightly pressed the desk bell.

The office door opened.

“Did you call, Lady?”

“Add 15 minutes more. There might be further extensions, so everyone take a break.”

“Seems you’re enjoying the conversation. Shall I bring some tea?”

“Hmm. Zernis mountain tea.”

“Understood.”

An elderly servant bowed and left.

I stood there awkwardly, unsure of what to say next. Observing my demeanor, Lady Silver Lily slightly raised the corners of her eyes.

“Relax. Just stand comfortably.”

It wasn't an invitation to sit.

"Which Constellation sent you? Mutia? The Three-Horned Star? Hisimet Cretsu? Nasaro? Psyme? Hmm. Judging by your face, it seems you've never heard of them. Who are you representing?"

"The Librarian of All Knowledge..."

My head was spinning. I sensed the Lady wasn't ordinary, but this was beyond my expectations. I only managed to recall the Librarian's title, barely clinging to my last thread of sanity.

"No, the Holed-Up Head Librarian sent me."

"The library."

Lady Silver Lily twirled a quill in her left hand.

"The Holed-Up... Ah, Hamusutra?"

Hamusutra.

His true name.

She knows the true name of a Constellation.

“Did Hamusutra not explain anything to you?”

“...The Head Librarian tries to minimize intervention in the Apocalypse. Rather than giving us information, he prefers we find out for ourselves.”

“Apocalypse?”

“A world where barriers have fallen due to the absence of Constellations. A world doomed to destruction, as the Head Librarian calls it.”

Lady Silver Lily’s eyes narrowed with amusement. Even narrowed, her gaze was intense, overwhelming anyone she looked at. She possessed a dominating presence.

“Typical of a Constellation. Arrogantly naming others’ worlds as they please. Apocalypse, you say? Hmm. Not entirely incorrect. Eventually, all worlds face destruction. But I can’t simply hand over my soul so easily.”

I blinked.

“...Wait, you still don't understand? You, possessing a commoner and not a noble, have come to seek my soul?”

I shook my head. This was completely new to me.

"....."

Lady Silver Lily closed her lips. Her eyes began to show a hint of curiosity. Rattle. She opened a drawer and pulled out something. A third hourglass.

Clang.

“Did you call, Lady? I've brought the tea.”

“Take another 15 minutes.”

“The children will be very happy today.”

The servant left.

While sipping her tea, Lady Silver Lily continued to observe me over the rim of her cup.

“Look here, Butler of Lady Goldencup.”

“Uh, call me Kim Gong-Ja, please. That’s my real name.”

“No. How dare you ask me to address you by your real name? You’re not a noble, just a commoner possessing a Butler. Blame yourself for that.”

Isn’t this person subtly being snooty?

“Anyway, I see that you are a blank slate. You haven’t received a [Strategy Guide], it seems.”

Strategy Guide? What’s that?

“Something like this.”

Lady Silver Lily pulled out a paper from the drawer.

On an A4-sized paper, round handwriting was scribbled.

+

1. Lady Silver Lily is sensitive to sunlight. Prefer evening and night for dates rather than daytime.

2. She has a dull sense of taste and likes spicy food.

3. She likes white flowers, but she's tired of lilies. Keep that in mind when choosing gifts.

4. She's a pragmatist. Prefers politics, diplomacy, and money topics. Romantic poems won't work.

.

.

.

10. Lady Silver Lily is loyal. It's fine if she talks bad about the Empire or the Crown Prince, but she won't tolerate others doing so. Be careful.

+

I was speechless. Crazy. What is this?

“An Apostle who came to woo me during the 6th round had this, sent by the Constellation Mahos. He called it a [Strategy Route].”

My mouth dropped.

“A Strategy Route...”

“He was so unbelievable that I poisoned him and took it after his death.”

Lady Silver Lily spoke plainly.

“When he died in my hands, he screamed, [I followed the strategy to the letter, why didn’t it work?]. As if he was wronged. But I was the one wronged. Can a person’s heart be captured by a strategy guide?”

[The silver-clad heart expresses dissatisfaction.]

“How trivially people view others. If one truly wishes to win my heart, they should approach me honestly. But strategy guides and routes? Such rotten seeds.”

“That’s... true.”

“Finally, a sensible response.”

Lady Silver Lily set down her teacup.

“The reason I rated you highly is not just for your intelligence, but also because you view the people of my world as [humans].”

“That’s... obvious, isn’t it?”

“Many have failed even that basic criterion. Beasts who don’t view others as humans. Yet, they staunchly consider themselves human. Filthy creatures.”

I held my breath for a moment.

Lady Silver Lily noticed my reaction and leaned on her chin.

“Hmm?”

After a brief groan, she nodded.

“I see.”

Thump.

“This talk seems to mean something to you.”

Thump.

“Have you seen many of those kinds? Or have you been viewed that way?”

Thump.

“If not, then I see. Perhaps someone important to you once said something similar---”

“Lady.”

I cut in.

I couldn't bear it any longer, this sensation of having my heart dissected and examined under a magnifying glass.

[The silver-clad heart watches you.]

I couldn't let her take control anymore.

I spoke.

“But you, Lady, also looked down on me for possessing a commoner, not a noble.”

Lady Silver Lily didn't even blink.

“What? Are you so upset that I didn't call you by your real name?”

“It's just that you're not in a position to talk down to others.”

“Such a comment fits the rebellious Butler who blew up the Academy.”

Yet, the tone of Lady Silver Lily seemed oddly amused.

“But I acknowledge the validity of your point.”

So, shall we get back to the main topic? With that, Lady Silver Lily coughed lightly.

“So?”

“Yes?”

“What do you seek in crossing the boundary to this world? This is a world where the same 10 days repeat forever.”

[The silver-clad heart doubts your intentions.]

“Surely the Constellation didn’t exile you here out of dislike. Hamusutra is considered moderate. But then, you wouldn’t be here for a vacation or relaxation. Speak up, Actor and Butler of Lady Goldencup.”

“I am...”

“Don’t lie. The moment you utter even a shred of falsehood, regardless of your purpose, obtaining anything from me will become impossible. I don’t show my heart to those who don’t reveal theirs first.”

I pondered.

‘I want your world to become the 25th floor.’

Do I really need this stage? No. Choosing another stage wouldn't make much difference to our tower.

'I have a fragment of the Holy Sword in this world.'

Do I need to complete the Holy Sword? That's also a no. Finding its fragments would strengthen me as its owner, but it's just a power boost.

"....."

The reason for my stay in this stage.

"...I still don't understand love."

"What?"

"Romantic feelings, that sort of thing, I'm ignorant of them. This world's genre includes [Romance]. I think this is a fitting place to learn about love."

When my master fought her last duel.

The Guardian Spirit shouted at her:

「Gong-Ja hasn't yet experienced the joy of the world.」

「Do you know? Heavenly Demon, this guy hasn't even fallen in love yet. Ridiculous! He's never even dated!」

Those words were deeply etched in my heart.

"I want to learn about what I lack. No, I want to know. Leaving it unknown feels unfair. It doesn't feel like living a full 100%."

Lady Silver Lily observed my face intently. Her crimson eyes seemed, perhaps it was my imagination, slightly perplexed.

“So you want to learn about love?”

“Yes.”

“From me?”

“That... I’m not sure.”

“Explain.”

I gathered my thoughts.

“To be precise, I want to learn about love in this ‘world’.”

“The world.”

“Yes, I want to know what I lack. I want to feel it.”

“Then why not go to your Lady, Goldencup? Wouldn’t that be quicker?”

The Heretic Inquisitor.

Lady Goldencup.

“It won’t work.”

“Why? Do you dislike the character you’re possessed by?”

“No, it’s not a matter of like or dislike. That person is...”

‘If I were like you,’ she had said.

Said it.

“That person is even more inexperienced than I am.”

"....."

“To learn, one must seek someone more knowledgeable.”

Lady Silver Lily sipped her tea. A brief silence.

“Well, the current Goldencup doesn’t seem fit to teach love to anyone. Rather, she seems to be in a position to be taught.”

“Yes.”

“Yet, I still see no reason for you to come to me.”

“There is a reason.”

I said firmly.

The thoughts I had in the underground prison came to mind.

“I want to understand you.”

She seemed taken aback by my words. A splashed droplet of tea stained the hem of her dress.

She blinked and then said,

“Understand me...?”

“Yes. Whether it’s for the Crown Prince or for the Empire, I don’t know yet, but Lady, you are dedicating your life to loyalty. I wonder how you can do that. What feelings and heart drive you. If it’s because of love, I’d like to experience that too.”

"....."

"A bit embarrassing and awkward to say, but that's my honest answer."

Lady Silver Lily fell silent for a while.

"This is,"

Now it was clear.

"Truly a first for me."

Lady Silver Lily was flustered.

"To want to know love is already a fearless statement. And to want to understand me? One should not use the word 'understand' lightly. It's a word that can lead to poison. Understanding is not different from responsibility. Yet."

“Head Librarian.”

I looked up at the sky. Of course, the Head Librarian wasn't there.

But she would be listening to our conversation, and the hunters of the tower would be watching.

“Please pause the broadcast for a moment.”

The office air went still.

“I have something I wish to say only to Lady Silver Lily.”

After a brief pause, a voice responded to my request.

[The Holed-Up Head Librarian gladly accepts your request.]

[You are granted a ‘Scene Skip’ for 10 minutes.]

Okay.

I looked back at Lady Silver Lily.

“I’m also a Returner.”

I began.

“But my nature of returning is slightly different from yours.”

“How so?”

“You said you repeat the last 10 days of your life. I return to a day before upon death.”

"....."

“It’s not just a simple return. If someone kills me, I can glimpse into their trauma.”

“Trauma?”

“Yes.”

My voice softly flowed in the office.

“The deepest wounds, memories, scenes that people keep in their hearts. If the wound is about something precious being destroyed, I see that very moment of destruction.”

There was no need to carefully choose my words. As soon as I opened my mouth, let my tongue loose, the words I wanted to convey naturally flowed out. As I shared my secret with Lady Silver Lily, I suddenly realized.

“That is, I can [easily] understand others.”

Me.

I wanted to talk about myself to someone.

To someone in a similar situation, living a life like mine.

"....."

Lady Silver Lily was quiet. As my story continued, her eyes gradually became more serene. I could feel that she was listening to me seriously.

"It's kind of a skill, a technique. I'm afraid of becoming too accustomed to understanding others easily. One of the people I trust most said, [Never get too comfortable with your skills]. But..."

"That's so."

"Yet, if it's a one-sided understanding..."

"That wouldn't be understanding."

"That's right, and yet, I can't just ignore people. Because..."

"If I give up, they'll wither, twist, and die."

"....."

“Even if it’s hypocrisy, I want to let them know that I’m here, watching over this place, thinking about them. What a blessed life that is. Isn’t it?”

I suddenly choked up.

".....Yes."

"Foolish."

Lady Silver Lily closed her eyes.

"Understanding is momentary, but responsibility is eternal."

You’re willingly walking into hell.

After murmuring that, Lady Silver Lily fell silent.

[The Holed-Up Head Librarian announces the end of the ‘Scene Skip’.]

Lady Silver Lily opened her eyes.

"Very well, Butler of Lady Goldencup."

She picked up one of the upside-down hourglasses on her desk. Watching the grains of sand slide down the glass, Lady Silver Lily spoke softly.

"I shall teach you about love."

Chapter 98: Your Heart (2)

Lady Silver Lily began, "However,"

"From today for a week, until the world meets its end, you must become not the butler of Lady Goldencup, but my exclusive servant."

"Your exclusive servant..."

"Yes. I know my own love, but I've never taught love to others. The only way is to openly show you how I love. So, observe well and learn well. Watch and learn."

"....."

"It feels like I'm at a loss. No, I certainly am at a loss. I'm exposing my private life, something to be embarrassed about. Treat it as the fortune of three lifetimes, commoner."

Truly a haughty noble.

The next day, my dual contract life began.

Not only serving Lady Goldencup but now also Lady Silver Lily.

“Hmm. You’re here?”

"Yes."

Lady Silver Lily welcomed me in her dressing room.

5 AM.

The Lady was already awake. Four attendants simultaneously attended to her dressing. It was a big breach of etiquette to enter the toilette, the dressing room, but Lady Silver Lily dismissed it with "It's annoying, don't worry about it."

As soon as I entered, she said,

“Show him.”

“Yes, Lady.”

The white-haired butler crisply pulled out a board. It was decorated with lily patterns. Written on it was a sentence in elegant handwriting.

+

LESSON 1. (Basic)

Love begins by experiencing a bitch.

+

"....."

“Last night, I pondered how to teach you love. I’m not leisurely enough to focus only on you, nor can I find your first love for you. Right?”

I was speechless and dazed, while Lady Silver Lily spoke indifferently. Her attendants, mirroring their mistress, emotionlessly trimmed her fingernails.

“So I decided to gradually teach you the truths you need to know in advance. Listen up. Repeat after me. Love begins by experiencing a bitch.”

“Lo-love begins by experiencing a bitch...?”

“Yes. A bitch. Or maybe bitches.”

Lady Silver Lily drew a fan with her left hand. Whoosh! The fan unfolded with a crisp, clear sound. She covered her lower face with the fan.

“There might exist lovers who have a perfect relationship from the first love. People who know how to love and care from the first sight till they’re buried together, sharing a romantic love. But that’s not you.”

"....."

"Your lovers, with 99% certainty, will be bitches. Even if they're not bitches at first, they will become one eventually. Why? Simple. It's almost impossible for humans to not be a bitch all year round. Similarly,"

Swish.

Lady Silver Lily folded the fan and pointed at the white-haired butler. As if prepared, the butler emotionlessly flipped the board, revealing another message.

+

LESSON 1. (Advanced)

You're also a bitch.

+

"There's a high chance that you too are a bitch."

"....."

"Don't be too negative. Humans are creatures of experience. Those who have been betrayed by a bitch won't easily fall for another. Someone who's been a bitch to another might not be so next time. You should learn [what kind of person is a bitch], [when do I become a bitch], [how not to be a bitch]."

My mind was numb.

"Can't I just do well from the start?"

"Butler."

Lady Silver Lily was expressionless.

"Don't expect too much from humans."

"....."

"Humans forget their own words. They make resolutions and then give up. Forgetfulness and abandonment. These two words should be the basic principles of love. If you truly want to do well in love, learn how to [remember] and [make resolutions].”

“R-remembering and making resolutions are also learned?”

“You’re completely a child...”

Lady Silver Lily sighed. What did I do wrong? I really don't understand.

“Seeing is believing. I'll show you directly.”

Directly show me?

How?

"Even though you've seen it with your own eyes, you still don't understand."

Lady Silver Lily stood up. The attendants, like kittens around her, stepped back at once. Surrounded by her attendants, she declared confidently,

“The greatest bitch in the world is the one I love.”

Huh.

Why does it sound so cool?

“Come.”

Lady Silver Lily walked, and I followed. Not just me, but also her attendants. Though I didn't understand why, they carried buckets.

We arrived at the most extravagant residence in the academy. The place where the Crown Prince stayed.

“L-Lady Silver Lily.”

The Crown Prince's attendants greeted us nervously. They seemed overwhelmed. Even though Lady Silver Lily was from a ducal family, they seemed unable to raise their heads before her.

“Have you eaten?”

“I have.”

“It’s not even dawn yet...”

“Is there nobody there? Somebody help me...”

“Close the door.”

Thud. The door to the bedroom closed. There was not a single servant from the royal family inside, only the expressionless attendants of Lady Silver Lily. The Crown Prince was shivering in bed.

“Eek?!”

“Your Highness, it’s dawn, and you’re still in bed. That’s unacceptable. His Majesty wakes up every day at 4 AM to attend to imperial affairs. How can you, the heir to the throne, be lazier?”

“Somebody, anybody...”

Lady Silver Lily opened her lips.

“Butler.”

“Yes, yes.”

“I shall impart to you the second lesson.”

The Lady pointed her chin at the white-haired butler.

He then raised another prepared sheet of paper.

+

LESSON 2. (Basic)

If you can't avoid a bitch, enjoy it.

+

“En-enjoy it...?”

“If you’re going to fall in love, you’ll inevitably meet a bitch as your first love. My advice to you is, since that’s going to happen anyway, you might as well enjoy it.”

Lady Silver Lily snapped her fingers.

"And there is only one way to enjoy encounters with bitches."

The white-haired butler skillfully flipped the board.

+

LESSON 2. (Advanced)

Become an even bigger bitch than the other person.

+

Splash!

The attendants lifted buckets and poured water onto the bed. This was why they had brought the buckets all the way here.

“Huh?!”

The Crown Prince, drenched by the sudden deluge, jumped up. His noodle-like hair swelled up.

“---Love with a bitch is war.”

Lady Silver Lily calmly observed the prince.

"If possible, it's better to avoid war. Peace is of the highest value. Is your partner kind? Then be kind. Are they good? Then be good too. But if they're unavoidably a bitch, remember this."

Lady Silver Lily took out another fan. It was different from the previous one. Astonishingly, this fan too had letters carved on it.

+

Today's motto:

Don't be kind to bitches.

+

Crazy.

"Repeat after me. Don't be kind."

"Do-don't be kind."

"Humans want to appear good to others. Some want to appear smart, others want to appear knowledgeable, and there are those who want to appear kind. From what I see, you belong to the latter category. Restrain yourself."

But the Lady didn't restrain herself at all. Not in the slightest.

"Open the door."

The attendants opened the door. Outside in the corridor, the royal attendants were anxiously waiting.

"What are you doing?"

Lady Silver Lily spoke nonchalantly.

"The Crown Prince is wet. Despite the cool spring weather, I fear his royal health might suffer. Quickly assist him in changing."

"Yo-Your Highness!"

The royal attendants rushed in. They seemed prepared, each holding a towel as if they knew this would happen. It was clear this wasn't the first time Lady Silver Lily had used the water bucket strategy.

"Remember this. This is the equation of love."

Lady Silver Lily slowly walked down the hallway.

"Good-looking people lose to smart ones. Smart ones lose to bitches. Therefore, those who reach the pinnacle of love are beautiful geniuses who are as cunning as bitches. Butler, you must realize this truth and diligently refine yourself."

"Uh..."

I turned around to see the Crown Prince's bedroom still in chaos.

"The love I thought of is quite different. I imagined something more..."

"More romantic?"

"Yes, and..."

"Thought love was about the heart, not the mind?"

"Yes....."

"That's correct too."

Lady Silver Lily tossed her fan. Whoosh. The white-haired butler skillfully caught it and stored it away. We walked and talked on our way to the reception room.

"However, that depends on your fortune. It's not easy to meet someone at first sight and have your heart beat faster. It also depends on the life you've led, which determines whom you'll be attracted to at first sight. Falling in love at first sight, in fact, means seeing at a glance what kind of life the other person has led."

"Such a difficult concept..."

"Difficult indeed."

Her red eyes narrowed.

"If it's too hard, would you like to test it?"

A test.

"What kind of test?"

"Let's test if you can make my heart flutter.."

"How can I make it flutter?"

"Do something impressive."

Impressive.

"What does that mean?"

"Do I have to tell you everything? Should I find and bring you a lover myself? Think and ponder for yourself. Butler, you're smart, you might just succeed."

"....."

"I'll tell you for free whether it's right or wrong."

We reached the reception room. Despite being in the Crown Prince's residence, Lady Silver Lily walked around as if it were her own bedroom. She dismissed all attendants except me and sat in a chair.

A room with a red carpet.

Eyes the same color as the bottom looked at me quietly.

Hmm.

"Huh..."

I took a deep breath. The breath that entered my throat solidified in my lungs like a hard core. Even though it was just breathing, I decided to treat it as evidence of my resolve.

I took out a card from my pocket.

+

[Prosopagnosia Card]

[What a coincidence? Well-timed secret eavesdropping!
Card]

[Oops! I shouldn't have said that! I accidentally misspoke!
Card]

+

Before entering the Revelation, the Holed-Up Head Librarian gave them to me as gifts, saying they would be my 'mighty army.' Originally, these cards were intended for use in this stage. Lady Silver Lily tilted her head.

".....? What is it?"

"Cards given to me by the Holed-Up Head Librarian."

And...

"According to the Lady, these too would be a kind of 'strategy guide.'"

Ziiiik!

I tore the cards without hesitation.

The torn cards scattered like colorful sand grains, disappearing without a trace.

[The Holed-Up Head Librarian is amazed by your decision.]

Perhaps those cards could have really helped conquer the stage. But showing my sincerity to the human in front of me was more important.

At least, that's what I believed.

[The Holed-Up Head Librarian applauds your intentions.]

Rewards are just rewards.

Shortcuts only matter when they remain shortcuts.

There's no need for me to obsess over rewards or to find meaning in a path that's no longer a shortcut.

".....Wow."

Lady Silver Lily rested her chin and observed me.

"Indeed."

Impressive.

Lady Silver Lily lightly gestured.

"Come here."

I approached.

"Your chin is too high. Bow your head."

I bowed.

Lady Silver Lily whispered in my ear.

"Well done."

She took a vial from her pocket. At first, I didn't understand what it was. But when the lid popped open, I realized. A blue fragrance. Perfume.

Lady Silver Lily took off her glove.

She ran her pinky finger around the bottle's rim and then...

"I should tell you in advance."

She reached for my neck and, swish, dabbed behind my ears.

"I won't take responsibility for you."

Fragrance.

A strong floral scent that made my head dizzy.

"-----."

The scent of white lilies.

For a moment, my head spun.

"Do you like the fragrance?"

Lady Silver Lily held my right hand. I only realized a little later that our fingers were interlocked. The scent was clouding my mind, making time stutter.

"Yes....."

"Do you like it?"

".....Yes."

Lady Silver Lily's red eyes slanted.

"It pleases me too. It's my favorite scent. I love it."

Softly. Her voice crawled up my neck.

"Since you confessed and destroyed your secrets for me, I'm not displeased. Continue to serve me. Tonight, I too will share a secret with you."

My heart was racing.

[Your immersion into the character is intensifying.]

This is serious.

[Your immersion rate is currently 15%.]

I think I'm falling for this person.

Chapter 99: Your Heart (3)

Dazed.

-Zombie, hey, Kim Zombie.

In this world, there's an onomatopoeia "멍" (dazed). It signifies nonsense, as well as a state of being mentally stunned.

Dazed.

-Kim Zombie? Kim Sparrow? Vice-lord? Hey, King of Death, are you listening to me?

I am dazed. There's no distinction between '멍' and me. I am '멍', and '멍' is me.

The only scene coming to my mind right now is singular.

Red carpet. Red eyes. Blue fragrance. Voice. Touch.

-This guy's smitten. Seriously smitten. Those eyes, just like that rascal from the JeGal Clan when he fell for the Ice Palace Lord.

What is love...?

Confucius says, love is a lily flower.

Lady Silver Lily.....

-Sorry, Zombie. This is all my fault. It's a different level. Far too different. Because of me, you've fallen for someone way out of your league.

While staring dazedly, Guardian Spirit was picking his nose. What an absolute worst posture one could adopt while apologizing.

Ah, this guy is not a person, but a ghost...

-But honestly, it's hilarious. Keep going, more.

I muttered dazedly within.

'Suicide...'

-What?

'If I commit suicide, I can experience the same thing as a little while ago, right?'

-You're insane... But at least you haven't lost all your wits to mention suicide regression out loud. That's something, at least. Remember, this is all being broadcast inside the tower...

"Suicide....."

-There go your wits! You crazy guy! Hey, Shiny!

[Shiny leaps up and smacks the head of our hero.]

"Ouch!"

I rolled around the academy's lawn, holding my head.

"I know I'm not in my right mind right now! But I can't help but keep picturing the Lady!"

-Now she's already the 'Lady' to you. This is getting serious...

"Ah, I absolutely must not wash my face today. Even if I do, I mustn't wash behind my ears. The lily scent is still there, don't you think? Want to smell my ear?"

-That's twice...

"That Crown Prince with his noodle-like hair, what did he do in his past life to be loved by the Lady? Argh, damn it. Internet. I need the internet and a computer. Quickly, on every visible post, I must comment 'I want to become like the Crown Prince'..."

-That's three times...

"Ah, love! Sweet poison! Irresistible addiction! My heart!

-I knew it. This guy would be the most annoying in the universe once he falls in love. I saw it coming, yet I advised him, making me truly a terrible person.

"It's not just me!"

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 21%.]

"Look! Even the original butler's immersion rate is rising. It means he's harboring the same feelings as me. What does this mean? The butler is also falling for Lady Silver Lily!"

-Wait. Didn't that butler originally like Goldencup or whatever?

"Ha. You know nothing. Does love have to focus on just one person? Love isn't like that, you know? Love is... well, love is just... love."

-Wow. This guy, not even half a day into his first love, and...

I sprawled out on the grass. There was broad daylight. During academy class hours. Right now, the Heretic Inquisitor, the Crown Prince, and Lady Silver Lily must be in class.

"How can I save Lady Silver Lily? No, save her, what am I saying? Who am I to say such a thing? Just, how can I make the Lady happy?"

-As the one who unleashed your insanity into the world, I feel responsible and will give you advice.

The Guardian Spirit groaned.

-It's not yet time to think about that, young one.

"Then, what should I think about, elder?"

-You need to know more about the other person.

"I know the other person."

-When you're in a relationship, it's important to keep making an impression. It's embarrassing to do so in public, but you're currently her exclusive butler. Even if you do nothing, you have guaranteed time together. You have a geographical advantage.

"Geographical advantage....."

-Yes. So relax and observe her more.

"But..."

-But?

"The world is going to end soon. This world."

-Hmm.

The Guardian Spirit crossed his arms.

-That is indeed a problem.

His tone was subtly different. It seemed like the 'problem' I mentioned and the 'problem' he referred to were different things.

But since the bell rang signaling the end of classes, I couldn't ask why his tone was subtle.

The true nature of the problem was revealed that very night.

It was a night swallowed by clouds, dark as could be.

The candles lit in the dormitory struggled against the darkness to no avail. The Sormewin Academy was submerged in shadows.

"Consider this a reward for the impressive act you showed me."

In such darkness, Lady Silver Lily led the way, holding a lantern.

I carefully followed her, making sure not to step on her shadow.

"I will reveal my secret to you."

"....."

Lady Silver Lily was wearing her nightgown. The loose white dress fluttered with every step, making my heart skip along. Was it because, as Guardian Spirit said, I was primed for insanity? But this feeling was too tender to be just insanity.

"Follow me."

Lady Silver Lily walked on. The night corridors were deserted. I followed, staring intently at her fingers illuminated by the lantern light.

"What are you thinking about?"

Suddenly, Lady Silver Lily spoke.

"Me?"

"What are you thinking? I can feel your gaze. I'm curious."

"....."

"Although temporary, you are my exclusive butler. It would be disloyal to ignore a question from your master. Since I've expressed curiosity, you should rightfully respond."

I hesitated.

"Well, that's..."

"Speak."

"...I thought about holding your hand, Lady."

As soon as I spoke, it felt as if my heart, not my tongue, had leapt out of my mouth. It was the emotion of embarrassment.

Even when I heard the epic of the Hero from Shiny, it wasn't this embarrassing. Truly. My face burned with shame.

"Hmm."

At that moment, something wrapped around my left hand.

It was the hand of Lady Silver Lily.

Skin. Texture. Cool temperature. The moment her slender fingers interlocked with mine, I almost mistook it for my heart being captured. The scent of flowers clouded my mind.

Just from holding hands.

"Lady."

"Have you thought about me all day?"

My tongue was dry.

"Did you long for my touch and scent? Did you fantasize?"

"That's..."

"Answer. If you're not honest, I will let go of your hand."

"Ye-yes, I thought about it."

"Clearly."

My head spun.

"All day, I only thought about you, Lady."

The scent of flowers whispered in my ear.

"Well said. You are my loyal servant."

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 29%.]

Now...

I can't even tell what's what anymore.

I just don't know.

"This, this isn't right."

"What's not right?"

Think.

I must think.

"I am from beyond this world... merely borrowing the body of a butler,"

"And so?"

[The silver-clad heart looks at you.]

"You regard me as a 'human', don't you?"

"I..."

"Was it a lie?"

[The silver-clad heart looks at you.]

"Are you, like the other apostles, considering me merely a 'native' or 'indigenous'? Or, in the terms used by Hamusutra who sent you, a 'Character'?"

[The silver-clad heart,]

"I..."

I barely managed to speak.

"I am... or rather, my original master is Lady Goldencup."

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 30%.]

"As such, I only agreed to serve Lady Silver Lily temporarily for a mission, therefore..."

"That's also an odd thing to say."

Lady Silver Lily looked at me.

"You said you thought only of me today. Doesn't that imply you didn't think about Goldencup?"

"That's..."

"Was it a lie?"

[The silver-clad heart...]

"No, it's not a lie, I..."

My head.

My breath.

"Then, aren't I already your master?"

"That's..."

"Call me your master."

The grip of our interlocked hands tightened slightly.

"Just once is fine. Call me sincerely."

"If you can utter those words, I'll reward you."

A real reward.

"Why, upon hearing that, did my heart sweeten?"

On the brink of speaking,

-Kim Gong-Ja.

A soft call.

[Shiny trembles to bring back the hero's senses.]

A warning from the Sword Constellation.

Both their reactions, this languid addiction I'm feeling now,
I've had this premonition before.

In the basement, when I saw Lady Silver Lily interrogating the servants, the same sensation.

A feeling of danger.

"Uh-hm?"

Lady Silver Lily turned to look at me, still expressionless, her red eyes observing.

"Why are you hesitating?"

"The reward, do you not want it?"

The reward.

"Just once is enough."

Just once...

Once might be okay. Despite feeling danger, I have the power to turn back time if something goes wrong. Yes... I have that power. So, taking a risk once is justifiable. Even considering it a risk isn't quite right. It's more about gathering information by uttering those words. Like when the traitor appeared among the rankers, and when I first faced the Demon King of Autumn Rain, isn't this situation somewhat similar?

So, it's okay, right? Just uttering it once. If something goes wrong, I can just turn back time. It's just that simple. I have that ability.

Then once, just once, saying such a word...

"But you know I'm the Flame Emperor. So, you should just die."

"King of Death."

"My Lord."

"My dear disciple."

My neck cooled.

"Lord."

My fingertips froze.

"My Lord."

My head...

"My disciple."

Cleared up.

My mind was clear. Thoughts raced as if compensating for the previous standstill.

Am I someone who can easily submit?

Is the weight on my shoulders that light?

No.

I am Preta's Lord

And the Vice-lord of the Demonic Cult.

I have lived to not become like Yoo Soo-Ha.

That's why I didn't accept death as natural and fled across the snowfields from the Apothecary.

"I'm sorry, Lady."

I placed my palm on the back of Lady Silver Lily's hand. Even if it's just words.

Because it's just words.

"What are you apologizing for?"

"I cannot recognize you as my true master."

I want to learn the joy of love. I'm learning it. But even so, I don't intend to lose [myself] to that extent. At least, I can't form a one-sided relationship with anyone.

"If you truly want my heart, Lady, you must use a different method."

"Speak. I will listen."

"You serve me as your master, and I will serve you in return."

"....."

"I will value your judgment over mine, heed your advice more than my beliefs, and not hold myself most dear. I will follow you. But in return."

I looked into Lady Silver Lily's face. Our hands intertwined, we were very close. Red eyes. I knew they matched the color of the heart.

"Please treat me the same way."

"....."

"If you do something wrong, I will tell you. I will confess my sincere thoughts, views, and feelings to you, without any deceit. But I cannot be in a one-sided relationship. If I give you my heart, how will I breathe? I will suffocate and die. Only if you give me your heart, can I continue to live."

I gripped Lady Silver Lily's hand a bit tighter.

"If you want to see me go crazy, then go crazy for me too."

And then Lady Silver Lily shook off my hand. She stepped back two steps as if struck unexpectedly.

"...Indeed."

Yet her expression remained unbroken.

"You're different from the other simple-minded apostles. I thought you were just an innocent child... Perhaps I rushed too much, considering you're unfamiliar with love."

"You tried to seduce me to become your subordinate?"

"My mistake. I underestimated you."

Lady Silver Lily bit her lip momentarily. Even that face was terrifyingly beautiful. The night corridor. Even the moonlight became a shadow when it shone on her.

"Yes. I am not an easy man."

"Regrettable. It would have been easier for you to give yourself to me completely."

"You said understanding and responsibility are not different. One-sided responsibility is just one-sided understanding. I didn't approach you for that."

I felt my heart race but held back.

"So, what's this secret you said you'd tell me?"

"....."

Lady Silver Lily turned and walked away.

"...My family has an heirloom passed down for generations. A sword with a playful legend attached. A sword that grants any wish you make."

The end of the corridor.

Where even moonlight ceased to flow, a bundle of curtains

lay. Thick red curtains seemed to hide something.

"But there's a condition."

Lady Silver Lily's fingertips grasped the curtain. Whisk, the curtain was drawn. Behind it was a full-length mirror that seemed to belong in a toilet room.

And,

"You must stab your heart with the sword when making a wish."

A sword was embedded in the middle of the mirror.

Lady Silver Lily stood in front of it.

The point where the blade was stuck coincidentally aligned with her heart.

[Shiny senses the presence of its sister sword.]

My waist-bound holy sword trembled.

[Shiny identifies it as the third sister sword of the holy swords.]

Drip, drop.

Blood dripped from the mirror with the sword. The curtain that had been covering the mirror wasn't originally red. It was dyed red from the blood flowing from the mirror's heart.

[It's called the Sword of Prayer.]

"Before I became a returner. The Crown Prince was betrothed to Lady Goldencup. I was so heartbroken, I leaned on the family sword and made a wish."

"What wish...?"

Lady Silver Lily's lips moved.

-Please let my love last forever.

"And then, my life became eternal."

"I can't die. My feelings for the Crown Prince remain unchanged. Since that day, my heart has been stuck."

Lady Silver Lily grabbed my hand.

She pulled it towards her chest.

Where the heart should be. Where it should beat.

"Do you want my heart?"

But...

There was no heartbeat.

"Sorry."

Lady Silver Lily spoke.

"I have no heart to give you."

[The silver-clad heart looks at you.]

And from the mirror, the blood that flowed began to form a small figure.

Although smaller, it resembled the being that killed the Paladin and the Countess in a previous round.

A demon's shape.

Why the blood from the mirror formed such a thing, whether it was summoned or created, I did not know.

"Come."

But Lady Silver Lily confidently wielded the sword.

"Help me."

The sword was aimed at the little demon.

"It's time to take care of today's task."

Volume 5 – Chapters 100-125

Chapter 100:

Drama (1)

Blood flowed from the mirror, engulfing everything around.

Initially, only a few drops fell, like a tap not fully closed. But then, ding... ding... as the distant grandfather clock chimed, the flow of blood changed dramatically. Blood gushed uncontrollably from the cracks of the mirror.

Ding...

Midnight. Twelve chimes.

A single drop turned into a stream.

One stream split into six.

The corridor was covered in blood.

A sea of red.

The last bell tolled from the grandfather clock.

We stood in the middle of a carpet made of blood.

"Lady."

Instinctively, I wrapped my arms around Lady Silver Lily. Our ankles were submerged in the blood puddle. It felt slimy, an ominous sensation.

"This is..."

"My nightmare."

Lady Silver Lily whispered from my embrace.

"Don't let your guard down. Butler. This place is no different from another realm. Others do not know or see what happens here."

Burble!

Bubbles surged from the sea of blood.

Thousands of bubbles formed and burst.

However, some formed complete shapes instead of vanishing like bubbles.

[The silver-clad heart manifests itself.]

They were demons resembling lips. No, they were lips themselves. No face, no body, just red lips and tongues.

They snickered wickedly.

-Crown Prince.

-I despise you.

The blood bubbles' lips kept forming and bursting, their murmurs barely coherent, abruptly cut off. A discordant chorus.

-Gentle Crown Prince.

-When you were not yet a prince, you picked flowers for me.

-You wiped my tears with your sleeve. You're a good person.

-Kind-hearted, that's why.

-Even so,

Snap!

Lady Silver Lily thrust her rapier through a blood bubble's lips. The demon burst. But twice, thrice as many tongues surged from the blood sea.

The demons' laughter echoed in red.

-Lovely.

I swung my sword too.

-What's the point of loving someone born privileged?

The demons were weak in combat. They didn't resist us.
They meekly accepted the blade.

It's just that...

-Flawed, but...

-Embracing and guiding a flawed person is true love.

It was irritating.

It wasn't a physical attack, but a mental one.

-I love you, Your Highness.

-I too know how to love.

-I'm a noble in love.

I bit my lip. It was unpleasant. I slashed the blood bubbles faster.

-Will you kill me?

-Useless. Tragedy becomes sweeter the more it's trampled.

-Did you see Lady Goldencup flirting with the Crown Prince?

-Disgusting.

The blood sea laughed as it surged.

-The Prince is so naive, still dreaming of a romantic life. He doesn't love Goldencup. He just uses her as an escape from the throne.

-Pitiful Prince.

-Poor Prince.

Damn.

I've witnessed a similar phenomenon before.

'Demon King of the Autumn Rain!'

Before being taken in as Preta. Back then, the constellation was like this. The Demon King poured blood from the sky, freely summoning monster legions.

This is the power of a constellation.

These demons are Lady Silver Lily's familiars.

[The silver-clad heart's existence becomes better defined.]

Something other than lips emerged from the blood sea.

Hands.

Like a bride and groom at a wedding, two hands clasped each other.

-Raviel. Our families arranged our engagement.

-An engagement?

-Yes. But I don't want a political marriage.

The demons' hands intertwined.

-Disregard the engagement our parents arranged. Regardless of them, I will love you. I've come to formally propose to you today.

-Prince.

-Raviel. Once we're a bit older, will you marry me?

Dozens of lips surrounded us.

Simultaneously, they responded.

-Yes.

-I will definitely love you.

-I too will love you, Prince.

Such a bitch.

To say such things and not take responsibility?

-Probably the Prince has forgotten.

-A childhood promise.

-Can't be helped.

-People easily forget.

The lips of the blood bubbles laughed.

-Can't be helped!

I couldn't take it anymore.

I was boiling with anger.

Squelch! I stepped forward, concentrating aura in my forefoot.

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The Eighth Form.

Sword of Scorching Death.

As the blood wave spread, my aura expanded too.

I incinerated the blood sea covering the corridor with my aura.

-Oh.

Behind me, the Sword Emperor commented.

-Not even a challenge with these small fries anymore? You've grown a lot, my dear scrub.

Normally, I would have responded to his teasing. But not in the mood now. I swept the corridor. The demons burned up, vanishing without even a scream. Instead, they laughed to the end, infuriating me.

"Damn it."

I burned the demons in one strike, but my insides still boiled.

Anger and contempt for the Crown Prince.

That someone noble like Lady Silver Lily was hurt because of such a man, turning her wish into an eternal curse. That infuriated me.

"Since when...!"

I inhaled sharply, steadying my voice. I didn't want to raise my voice to Lady Silver Lily, no matter how angry I was.

"...Since when did you become a constellation? These are constellation's familiars. You created them, didn't you?"

That's why they recognized us as allies and didn't resist.

Lady Silver Lily nodded as if she knew this.

"It happened the moment I plunged the sword into my heart."

Gradually, the blood began returning to the mirror.

Squirming and squelching, the streams of blood crept back into the mirror's cracks.

Reversal. Lady Silver Lily watched the leech-like squirming blood droplets with a calm gaze.

"It seems this world originally had no constellations. Whether they were killed or never existed in the first place, it's hard to tell."

Probably Leafanta Aegim killed the constellations. But now is not the time to discuss that. I listened carefully to Lady Silver Lily's words.

"As time passed, the demons became stronger and their numbers vast. Their forms also grew larger. Controlling them as now becomes difficult. And on the tenth day..."

On the tenth day.

There, Lady Silver Lily paused, then shook her head slightly before continuing.

"...Anyway, as the tenth day kept repeating, I inadvertently became the 'Representative of the World.' Whether I wanted it or not, the world's clock revolves around me."

-Hmm.

The Sword Emperor stroked his chin.

-It's not a normal ascension. In terms of martial arts, it's not the orthodox path but the unorthodox. That sword stuck in the mirror, though just a fragmented relic, was once a relic of the 'Goddess of Protection.'

Sword Emperor muttered to himself,

-Sticking such a thing in your heart, you'll ascend to a constellation, albeit reluctantly... Especially if you keep returning, it's a karma that a human body can't handle. A half-baked constellation, but still, a result of many coincidences.

'Can one become a constellation against their will?'

-Yeah. Did you choose to be born a human, zombie?

Really, this man's way of speaking...

-It's about conditions, not will. There are many who suffer as humans and as constellations. It's easy to make life miserable. Understand, Vice-lord of the Demonic Cult?

"Huh..."

I suppressed the anger towards the Crown Prince within me. The suppressed anger left a bitter taste in my mouth.

Lady Silver Lily observed me.

"Strange. Aren't you disappointed in this ugly side of me?"

"Disappointed?"

I let out a breath involuntarily. It wasn't a sigh. It was a breath filtering my anger.

"Ugly? If there's one thing I know for sure, it's that you're not ugly, Lady. Truly ugly people, you see, never show their hearts to others. Always pretending to be calm and composed, only knowing how to hurt others."

Flame Emperor, the bastard.

"Rather, I'm worse. If you knew what I think inside, you'd be disgusted, wouldn't you?"

"I'm curious now."

"If you brought me here to drive me away, you thought wrong. Lady, I didn't start to love you because you're an untarnished person."

Lady Silver Lily hesitated for a moment at the word 'love.' I too felt my face burning, but I didn't hesitate to speak.

"I've only started to adore you today. How eloquent."

"Is it a problem because it's only been a day? Will it be okay if I love you for a year? After 1000 days? Should I come back then?"

"..."

"I can see what you despise and loathe. What you're hurt and pained by. I love how you live your life. Because we're living the same life."

Did my words reach her? Did I express myself correctly?

I don't know.

I've never said such things to anyone else. It's unfamiliar. But, I want the person in front of me. Lady Silver Lily wants me. I want us to share a life together.

"I like you as much as I like myself. I hope you'll come to love me as much as you love yourself."

That's my sincerity.

And I only know how to give my all to my sincerity.

"I'll definitely make you love me. I won't tell you to abandon the Crown Prince. Even without me saying, you'll eventually leave him."

"My heart..."

"Yes, whether your heart is mortgaged to the world doesn't matter. If that's the problem, I'll solve it. But if you still love the Crown Prince, I'll become an overwhelmingly better person than him and linger in front of you."

"..."

"Did the Crown Prince give you unforgettable memories in childhood? That doesn't matter either."

I whispered into Lady Silver Lily's ear.

"We're both returners. The only two in this world."

I knew my face was red. But I said what I needed to say.

"There will be plenty of time only you and I can enjoy in this world. During that time, I'll gift you memories so breathtaking that they'll outshine the Crown Prince's. I'll try my best."

"Hmm."

The corners of Lady Silver Lily's eyes rose.

"Planning to infinitely repeat the last ten days? You'll wear out and collapse."

"I'm not threatened. It's not my first time repeating the same days."

"What if I get tired of you and ask you to disappear from my sight?"

"I'll disappear, but..."

I moved my hand. Moving it, I caught the fingertips of Lady Silver Lily, who had lost her lantern during the fight with the demons. It required courage. A lot. Fortunately, I had enough courage.

"There won't be such a thing in the first place."

"Why?"

"Because you haven't grown weary of the Crown Prince, and I am a better person than him. If I'm troublesome, please tell me now. I'll disappear."

Silence.

Lady Silver Lily looked at my face.

"...How troublesome."

The Lady's lips parted.

"I should find you bothersome, but right now, I don't. I don't seem likely to easily get annoyed."

That moment.

"...ler! ..."

A voice echoed from afar down the corridor. It was urgent. Lady Silver Lily's quarters, silent with all the servants asleep, suddenly became noisy.

"...Where...! But...!"

Soon, footsteps thundered. The servants had woken up. Lights lit up here and there, and shortly after, one of the half-white servants rushed to us.

"I apologize, Miss."

Lady Silver Lily released my hand.

"What's this commotion at such a late hour?"

"I regret to report..."

Then, a voice, clearer than before, reached us.

"Butler! Where are you, Butler!"

My face hardened.

All too familiar a voice.

The half-white servant bowed to us.

"Baroness Goldencup is causing a commotion."

Chapter 101: Drama (2)

The moon was slightly reddish, tainted with sand.

The sky turns red when dust clouds it, and people turn red when they bleed. This coincidental similarity made me uneasy.

'It's as if the moon is bleeding.'

I walked, dragging my uneasy mind like a shadow.

From a distance, the chatter and murmuring of the servants were audible.

"You mustn't do this here, Lady!"

"This is the Ivansia Duke's residence!"

"Even if you are favored by the Crown Prince, at this hour..."

Lady Silver Lily, walking with me, muttered,

"There's no uninvited guest like her."

Her tone conveyed disdain for the Heretic Inquisitor, no, for Goldencup.

"Looking at the time she barged in, it's clear she didn't come to have tea with me. Butler, was this visit scheduled?"

"No."

I was also surprised. Wasn't it past midnight already? There was no reason for the Heretic Inquisitor to meet Lady Silver Lily at this hour.

Just the day before, we had talked.

'I'll work as the exclusive butler of Lady Silver Lily for a while,' I said. 'To gather information about her and to conquer this stage,' I added.

"Hmm."

The Heretic Inquisitor showed a brief, subtle expression.

Nevertheless, she beamed as usual.

"Yes! It's unavoidable for the mission."

"I'm fine with it. Go, King of Death!"

That's how we agreed.

We had an agreement.

"Bring my butler here!"

As we walked, her voice grew closer.

"Butler! I know you're here!"

The residence's garden.

The dark night sky couldn't completely hide the spring lingering in the flower garden. The white magnolias drooped, burdened by the weight of spring they bore. The moon was red. The moonlight reflecting off the magnolia leaves tinged red, making it seem as if red magnolias were in full bloom.

"Ah!"

A magnolia leaf fell.

"You were here after all! Butler!"

The Heretic Inquisitor pushed past the gate guards. Unable to roughhouse the Baroness, the guards hesitated.

During their hesitation, the Heretic Inquisitor, with her skirt hem rolled up, strode into the garden. Crunch. The earlier fallen red magnolia was trampled under the Heretic Inquisitor's shoe.

"I was worried because you hadn't returned despite the late hour."

"....."

"Really. Making your master worry and causing her to visit, isn't that a failure as a butler?"

My anxiety peaked the moment I saw the Heretic Inquisitor.

Hair.

The Heretic Inquisitor's blonde hair, illuminated by the moonlight, had grown longer than yesterday.

"Miss...."

"Not only your hair. Face. Appearance. Although traces of the Heretic Inquisitor remain, something about you feels unfamiliar."

'Did she use Holy Technique to change her appearance?'

Why?

"Anyway, you shouldn't be here. Even the flower garden seems poisonous. Come, butler. Let's go back together."

"Such impudence."

Lady Silver Lily stepped forward to block the Heretic Inquisitor's approach.

"How dare you make such a racket at night, deserving punishment just for that. Do you know where you are? How dare you raise your voice here. Kneel down and confess your mistake right away."

"Is that so? Will you whip my shins with a cane?"

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled slyly.

"If you're going to whip, do it hard and properly, Lady. If I show the Crown Prince the scars on my shins, I wonder what would happen. It will be another memory for the Crown Prince and me."

"How outrageous...!"

The Ivansia's servants shivered. Officially, Lady Silver Lily was the Crown Prince's fiancée. The Baroness was talking about her shins and memories in front of his fiancée. The servants glared at the Heretic Inquisitor with reddened faces.

Lady Silver Lily muttered softly,

"Is that so?"

The servants flinched at her voice.

I felt a chill in my heart for a moment.

"So it shall be."

Her voice was icy cold.

"You want to create school memories. How nice. After all, at the Baroness's age, even rolling in mud is romanticized. Since you desire sweet memories, I, as a noble of the empire, will assist you."

Lady Silver Lily raised her left hand.

"Bring the cane."

The servants trembled.

"Yo-Young Duke....."

"I told you not to address me that way here."

"If the Crown Prince learns of this..."

"Do you think I'll let this disturbance go unpunished? If I let her go, the name of our family will be tarnished. The law takes precedence over everything, and the Crown Prince himself must uphold it."

The servants swallowed, not quite convinced. 'But still,' their silent protest said, 'the Crown Prince isn't that kind of person.'

No one dared to voice their objection.

"My left hand is still empty."

Lady Silver Lily's voice flowed.

"Bring the cane. I won't repeat the same order twice."

The servants scurried across the path lined with fallen red magnolias to fetch the cane from the residence.

All heads were bowed, as if they feared their faces being illuminated by the moonlight. Only two people, Lady Silver Lily and the Heretic Inquisitor, stood with their heads held high.

"Lady."

I had no choice but to approach the Heretic Inquisitor.

"What's going on? Why are you here at this time?"

"I've come to take back what's mine. You're making me state the obvious."

The Heretic Inquisitor beamed.

"I waited all morning, but the butler didn't return. At first, I thought something urgent came up, but then I faintly heard that the butler was with the Lady. "

The Heretic Inquisitor tapped her cheek.

"I realized immediately. The Lady must have blackmailed the butler by exploiting his weakness. Poor butler, being tossed around because of the Crown Prince and me..."

"....."

I couldn't understand.

What was she talking about?

"Don't worry."

The Heretic Inquisitor's smile remained bright.

"I won't let the Lady take anything from me anymore. Whether it's the Crown Prince's affection or the butler's loyalty. A cane? Whip as much as you want. I'll save the butler. After all, the one who will be hurt by the whipping is the Lady."

"No... I'm sorry, excuse me for a moment."

I moved closer to the Heretic Inquisitor, ensuring our conversation couldn't be overheard by those around. Fortunately, no one tried to stop me.

"Lady."

"Yes."

I swallowed and whispered to the Heretic Inquisitor.

"Heretic Inquisitor."

Silence.

"Yes?"

My heart raced.

My lips were dry. My tongue wouldn't move. It was so hard to twist words into a sentence, to weave them into a line. Slowly, I opened my mouth.

"When spring comes."

"Yes?"

My heart.

"Heretic Inquisitor..."

"What are you talking about, Butler?"

"I'll be really angry if this is a joke like last time. I'm serious. I'm asking seriously, so please answer me properly. What is your immersion rate now?"

The Heretic Inquisitor blinked.

"Huh? Butler, you seem to be joking. Are you reminiscing about the past? Or did you become a bit strange after spending the day with the Lady? Butler, really. I'll understand with gentle leniency."

"When spring comes..."

"It has already."

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled.

"Spring is here, Butler."

No.

"What a beautiful season, isn't it?"

Goldencup smiled.

"We have brought the item you ordered..."

The servants who had dispersed to the residence returned. They bowed their heads and presented the cane to Lady Silver Lily.

It was slender.

I guessed they had frantically searched for the slenderest cane in the mansion. Perhaps that was the extent of the servants' loyalty they could offer to their master.

"Come back again."

However, Lady Silver Lily was ruthless. The servants flinched as they moved away.

"Come back again."

The command was repeated four times. With each repetition, the thickness of the cane increased. The servant, biting his lip, brought the fourth cane, and Lady Silver Lily grasped it in her left hand.

"Baroness Goldencup."

"Call me by my name, Lady."

"Silvia Evanair."

"Yes, Raviel Ivansia."

The moon and sun faced each other.

"You have recklessly invaded Ivansia's territory and caused a disturbance. You have not uttered a word of apology. In the empire, where there is a clear hierarchy, your insolence is appalling. In the name of the title granted by His Majesty, I will punish you."

"A crime? I know my crime best."

Goldencup smiled brightly.

"My crime is being favored by the Crown Prince despite my humble origin from a peripheral baron family."

That was not something to be said to the Crown Prince's fiancée.

"I apologize for being loved."

Goldencup lightly grasped her skirt. A single goldencup descended into the magnolia-filled garden, bowing to the lily in front of her.

Her manners were perfect.

"I apologize for being loved more than Raviel Ivansia."

"....."

"Is that a sufficient apology?"

The wind blew.

"But, Raviel Ivansia, I wonder. Is this really my crime? Love only has meaning when it is reciprocated. Am I solely responsible for the divide between the lover and the beloved? Maybe..."

Goldencup didn't finish her next words. Instead, she let out a laugh. A petal fell from a black branch.

Lady Silver Lily quietly raised her left hand.

"Despicable thing."

The night air was cut by the cane.

"-----."

Goldencup didn't scream or moan. She stood upright. Even the smile carved on Goldencup's face remained unshaken.

She, he, was certain of victory.

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

That's why the moon seemed to bleed to me.

[Your immersion rate is currently 40%.]

That day, the moon was slightly reddish, tainted with sand.

When the moon was buried in dust in the sky, it turned red, and when humans bled on the ground, they turned red. Cough, the air was acrid, and Lady Silver Lily coughed. It was a dry cough.

No one said a word.

Only the sound of coughing and the cane echoed in the night garden.

"Silvia!"

A torch flickered.

"Silvia! Are you there, Silvia!"

Footsteps broke the silence. Beyond the gate. The Crown Prince rushed in, holding a torch himself. The guards scurried around, attending to the Prince. Such a commotion couldn't have escaped the Crown Prince.

"Sil..."

The Crown Prince stopped at the gate.

"....."

He looked at the garden and fell silent for a moment.

"Raviel...!!"

He called Lady Silver Lily with a different tone than when he called Goldencup.

"Out of the way!"

The Crown Prince pushed past the Ivansia's guards. No one there could stop the sovereign's movement. The Prince immediately rushed to Goldencup's side.

"How could you... Even so... How could you...!"

"I'm fine, Your Highness."

"I'm not fine! Foolishly...!"

The Crown Prince checked on Goldencup.

Then turned his head to glare at Lady Silver Lily.

"Vicious woman!"

Words become wounds.

"How could you treat Silvia so harshly!"

Those who inflict wounds without seeing them don't know they've done so.

"The laws of the empire. Your Highness."

"Is the law more important than a person!"

"They're more important than an individual."

"That's why you're harsh! Witch-like!"

Perhaps the world is divided between those who know and those who don't, and the Crown Prince was among the latter.

Lady Silver Lily coughed and breathed.

"Will you punish me?"

"....."

The Crown Prince's face contorted. Just contorted. Despite shaking his head as if it wasn't worth answering, it was just an escape.

The Prince lacked the courage and ability to face or take responsibility for Lady Silver Lily.

"Let's go, Silvia!

You shouldn't be here."

"Ah."

The Crown Prince picked up Goldencup.

As she was held in the Prince's arms, Goldencup looked at me.

"Butler."

The Heretic Inquisitor.

"Butler, come with me too."

"....."

I didn't respond.

Looking at him, I murmured in my mind like a prayer.

'Character Window.'

Chararuk.

Letters bloomed before my eyes.

+

Name: Silvia Evanair

Favorability: 90

Preferred Genres: [Romance]

Disliked Genres: [Political Drama]

Preferred Characters: [Those who love me], [Crown Prince], [Butler], [Teacher], [Senior], [Junior], [Classmate]

Disliked Characters: [Raviel Ivansia]

Preferred Plots: [Victory of the Strong], [True Love]

Disliked Plots: [Defeat of the Weak], [Betrayal]

Psychological State: 'Raviel Ivansia. I will leave you nothing.'

+

The name Heretic Inquisitor wasn't there.

The words [Fairy Tales] that were displayed in the preferred genre section and the word [Humans] displayed in the preferred character section were no longer visible.

"Butler?"

The Heretic Inquisitor had been consumed by the role of Goldencup.

"Will you come with me?"

And I sensed the end of this round.

Chapter 102:

Drama (3)

"I will..."

I tried not to stutter as I spoke.

"I plan to stay by Lady Silver Lily's side for a while."

Silence.

"...That is truly incomprehensible."

Lady Goldencup's eyes, raised at the corners, froze. Was it because her emotions had frozen? Even the Crown Prince felt the chill in her voice and stopped in his tracks.

"I have requested your company to come with me. Butler. Although it's not my preference to boast of wounds, I even endured some humiliation to free you from under the Lady's control."

"Yes, I'm aware."

"And yet you reject my request?"

A bitter taste rose in my mouth.

It's hard to tell if this is my conflicted feeling of losing the Heretic Inquisitor or the rebellious spirit of a butler who's refusing his original master's request. Either way, it's painful to look into those blue eyes, now belonging to Goldencup.

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 42%.]

So I averted my gaze, bowing my head.

"I'm sorry."

"....."

"I still have things to do."

"A convenient excuse. Could it be that the Butler is simply enchanted by the Lady?"

I remained silent. "Ha," Goldencup laughed mockingly, not at me but at Lady Silver Lily.

"Understood, Lady. I don't know what grand scheme you might be plotting this time, but our friendship, between me and the Butler, will not waver. Please take good care of my Butler."

"Keep staying in your delusions. Get out of my sight, Baroness."

"Yes, I will leave."

Lady Goldencup, still in the Prince's arms, reached out her hand. She caressed the Prince's cheek, whispering, but loud enough for everyone to hear.

"Would you like to leave with me, Your Highness?"

"Ah. Aaah."

The Crown Prince blushed.

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 43%.]

The two left with the guards.

The disturbance past midnight thus came to an end.

The garden quickly became tranquil.

"Lady..."

The servants sadly worried about their master. Though the Ivansia's had initiated the expulsion, the atmosphere seemed as if they were the ones expelled.

"It's late."

Lady Silver Lily spoke.

"You've worked hard. You may go in now."

"What will you do, my Lady?"

"I'll watch the flowers here for a while. I wish to be alone, so everyone leave."

Lady Silver Lily, in her nightwear, gazed up at the night sky. She blended into the darkness as if born from the night. The servants, unable to disobey their master, returned to the residence.

"Lady."

Only I remained to approach her.

-Zombie. Look at her now! She's weakened! Can't you see the pitiful atmosphere? She looks emotionless, but she's vulnerable. Good for us! Crisis is an opportunity! The goalie's gone. It's already hard enough to romance a high-level player, so go for it now.

'Be quiet.'

The ghost was consistent, consistently failing to read the mood.

"You should rest too, Butler."

"I'm fine even if I stay up all night. Aren't you the one who's tired, Lady?"

"I want to deny it but... Yes, a bit."

Lady Silver Lily sighed.

"It's already the 14th time. For 140 days, I've tried to correct the Crown Prince. Even if I accept that my love won't be fulfilled, the Prince will ascend to the throne. If I don't at least hold him back, the country's safety will be in jeopardy... It's hard."

"You're not alone anymore."

"There's more than one returner in the world." I said that meaningfully.

"I'm here. Just having one person who understands you by your side, a person can endure anything."

"Is that so?"

"Yes, surprisingly."

Lady Silver Lily turned her gaze from the night sky to me.

"You're making one mistake."

A mistake?

"I repeat the final ten days. You return to a day before when you die. It seems like we're sharing the same cycle of return, but in reality, we aren't."

I let her continue. Our conversation was probably being broadcast to the people in the tower.

Even so, it's okay.

I've already decided to go to the next round.

"Butler, one of us will [return first]."

Lady Silver Lily bent down.

"If I return first, you will forget the current life. If you return first, conversely, I forget. Someone's time is consumed by the other."

Swoosh, swoosh.

She drew parallel lines in the dirt with the cane.

"We are parallel lines that will never meet."

My heart twinged.

"I can understand you. You can understand me. But that's it. We can't live together. You can't take responsibility for me, and I can't take responsibility for you."

Lady Silver Lily's voice was calm.

"Your confession about wanting to share the same time as me was passionate and beautiful. But it can't become reality. Perhaps that's why it sounded more beautiful."

"What if it could happen?"

I looked straight into Lady Silver Lily's eyes.

"If? There's no if."

"I keep my word. Always. I didn't propose using things I can't do just to win over your heart. I'm not the type to inflate empty words like a balloon to attract people."

"....."

"If I can help you escape these eternal ten days, will you do it?"

The nightjar cried out.

"...How presumptuous. I am enough for my life."

"You might think so. So do I. But I want to help you. Is it arrogant to want to help the person I love? Then I'll gladly be arrogant."

Lady Silver Lily closed her lips. She, too, in her own way, was trying to help the Crown Prince. Whether she admits it or not, we are similar.

"What do you want from me?"

"Be with me until this world ends."

"Is that all?"

"Yes."

After seeing the Heretic Inquisitor reach 100% immersion, I realized the trick to breaking this stage. It's a bit unconventional and tricky, but... it might be possible.

As long as I keep my wits about me.

"And if you could, make me like you more. If I could be so enchanted by the Lady that I can't escape, that would be perfect."

"You're asking me to do that?"

"It's fine. I'm an easy man. Just holding hands with the Lady makes my heart race."

Lady Silver Lily looked at me as if I were shameless.

"Bold... Fine. I did say I'd teach you love, so I should be responsible for that."

Lady Silver Lily took my hand. It was soft. Her bare hand wrapped around my right hand. I remembered her applying perfume last night, and my heart fluttered.

"Is this enough?"

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 44%.]

My face heated up.

"Yes. E-enough."

"My, I might have been charmed, but you seem a bit too naive. How did you survive in this harsh world?"

"I died. A lot."

"....."

"Does showing such a weak side make the Lady's heart flutter a bit? I read in a magazine once that sometimes acting weak works wonders."

"Ha."

Lady Silver Lily scoffed. Though her eyes did not smile, the laughter was still laughter. She must have been quite upset due to the Crown Prince's folly. If it lightened her mood even a little, I was glad.

"Are you picking a fight with a child who's barely known love for a day?"

"Seeing Lady Goldencup fight earlier, I realized something. The Lady is wise, but if provoked, you never back down. Is it pride? Even at your own loss, you crush provocations. So, I wanted to provoke you too."

"...Quite astute."

"Should I provoke a bit more?"

"Try it. If you dare."

We were close to each other.

We became closer.

Our shadows overlapped.

Neither of us intended to back down.

"Lady, you speak of yourself as a master of love, but is that really the case? Isn't it just as important to be loved as it is to love? Loving the Crown Prince and drawing his love are both crucial. However, you failed the latter."

"Hmm."

"In that sense, maybe Baroness Goldencup understands love better than you. After all, she's receiving love from the Crown Prince. If it's about who excels in love, surprisingly, Goldencup might be the superior one."

"Oh?"

"You know how to love, Lady. But you don't know how to be loved. At least not better than Lady Goldencup. So..."

Then.

"So?"

Lady Silver Lily's hand gripped my chin.

"....."

"Keep talking. Your voice isn't unpleasant to hear."

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 45%.]

"...So, it's natural that Lady Goldencup could snatch the Crown Prince from you. You should have more carefully understood the Prince's tastes and preferences."

"Your teeth are really white."

".....Yes. But you didn't do that. You were complacent. That's why Lady Goldencup has become so rampant, partly due to your responsibility."

"Your tongue is red and pretty."

Lady Silver Lily pulled my chin closer.

Her gaze lingered inside my mouth.

"Why did you stop talking? If you close your lips, I can't see your tongue. It's interesting to watch. Keep talking."

".....,"

"Are you surrendering?"

"Yes....."

"[It would be perfect if I get so entangled with the Lady that I can't escape.]"

Those were my words just moments ago.

"Choosing only the most terrifying words to say. How fearless you are. I'm not sure what brilliant plan you've come up with, but you really are bold."

Lady Silver Lily pulled my chin even closer.

I felt like I was being drawn in, as if I had lost gravity.

"14 rounds have passed, so maybe I should experience some deviation too."

"That means...?"

"An eye for an eye. A tooth for a tooth."

Lady Silver Lily's index finger brushed my lower lip.

"Starting today, I'll have an affair with you."

"....."

Uh.

"Do you love me?"

"No."

"Do you have even a slight intention of dating me?"

"No."

"Then why..."

"But you are Goldencup's cherished butler. Using her words, the only butler and childhood friend. If she hears that you're dating me, I wonder what face Goldencup will make. The Crown Prince will surely be startled too."

In other words.

"You're pretending to date me just to spite them...?"

"Why?"

Her breath came closer.

"Is that disagreeable?"

I couldn't respond. My heart pounded madly, my thoughts scattering. My love, my first love. The pounding. To do it this way. Romance should be more. Something more romantic.

"Sit."

I carefully sat down in the garden. The moon was hidden by clouds, casting darkness. It felt like kneeling in a bottomless swamp.

Lady Silver Lily and I exchanged gazes.

"I'll give you a choice."

Lady Silver Lily looked down at me.

"If you dislike my offer, close your eyes tightly. I'll quietly disappear before you open them. But if you accept my proposal to pretend to be lovers, if you want to play this act until this life ends---"

The red moon in the night sky was obscured.

More crimson than the moon, her eyes were right before me.

"Say my name."

Her name.

I...

"Raviel...."

Wait.

"Raviel Ivansia."

Why are my lips opening?

"Yes. Do you remember the first lesson I gave when I said I'd teach you love?"

"Love begins by experiencing being a scoundrel..."

"Well remembered."

Lady Silver Lily's hands covered my cheeks.

And.

"I'll be your first scoundrel."

The moon was swallowed by darkness.

"....."

The scent of lilies.

Soft and sweet.

A deadly, intoxicating fragrance.

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 50%.]

Breathless.

Beautiful.

-Both are crazy and fit each other well. After all, how could you possibly date a normal person? Birds of a feather flock together, an eternal truth. The voice of the ghost echoed from afar.

-Congratulations on Day 1 of your relationship, little bird.

Magnolia leaves fell around us.

-Even though it's just an affair.

Chapter 103: His Way of Loving (1)

In the white dawn, I woke up and washed my face. Now quite accustomed to the black butler's attire, I slowly stood in front of the mirror.

There, I still saw [myself].

"Hmm."

Once, Black Dragon Witch mentioned I had [a slightly sly impression].

The man in the mirror slowly opened his lips.

"Raviel."

Thump.

"Raviel Ivansia."

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 62%.]

I merely murmured my beloved's name. Yet my heart raced, breath quickened, and the man in the mirror's face slightly reddened. Even to myself, my expression was easy to read.

".....I really am in love."

It was surprising.

Amazed at my own emotions, I proceeded with the next task.

"Status Window."

Words slowly emerged before my eyes.

+

Name: King of Death

Rank: D

Skills (6/6)

1. I Want to Become Just Like You (S+)

2. Returner's Winding Clock (EX)

3. Sword Constellation (A+)

4. Goblin High Society (F)

5. Ghoul Reincarnation (SSS)

6. Demonic Heavenly God Art (A+)

*You have a Blessing from the God of Beauty.

*You have a Blessing from the Goddess of Death.

+

There lay the path I had traversed, the one I had passed by.

My jealousy. My secret. My fate. My humor. My will. Even my happiness.

The life of [Kim Gong-Ja] is expressed so plainly.

"....."

I took a deep breath.

"Character Window."

Then, letters I had never seen before were etched before my eyes.

+

Name: Kim Gong-Ja

Favorability: 90

Preferred Genres: [Martial Arts], [Romance], [Mystery], [Adventure]

Disliked Genres: None

Preferred Characters: [Master], [Lover], [Noble Hero], [Victim], [Hard Worker], [Child], [Sage], [One Who Doubts Themselves], [One Who Treats Others Well], [One Who Recognizes Me]

Disliked Characters: [Psychopath]

Preferred Plots: [Poetic Justice], [Friendship], [Love]

Disliked Plots: [Self-Loathing], [Giving Up], [Running Away], [Forgetfulness], [Distrust], [Monopoly]

Psychological State: 'I wonder how I show up.'

+

I swallowed hard.

"Okay."

I'm still Kim Gong-Ja. I haven't been consumed by a role like the Heretic Inquisitor. My plan should proceed smoothly.

Definitely.

"Sword Emperor."

-Huh?

The ghost, invisible in the mirror, responded.

"If I ever get buried in the role of a butler, I have a favor to ask of you."

-What is it?

"If my immersion rate reaches 100%, I might not even hear your voice. I might forget how to use my skills. No matter what, you must prevent me from exceeding 99% immersion. That's the absolute limit. If I ever seem to go beyond 99%, by any means necessary, stop me."

-Huh.

The ghost chuckled.

-You worry too much. Someone as prideful and egoistic as you reaching 99%? Unlikely.

"Yes, I will."

I adjusted my outfit one last time.

A perfect butler's appearance was reflected in the mirror.

"Because I intend to raise it that high myself."

-What?

The ghost was startled.

-Why? You'll fail the stage and get trapped in this world.

"I can't tell you now. In fact, no one else should know. I'm going to exploit a loophole in the Tower's system to conquer this stage."

The Tower is still watching us.

If it learns what my strategy is, it might quickly patch the loophole. That can't happen.

While the Tower still has a systemic error, an overlooked flaw, now is my chance. I must quickly clear [Tales of the Sormewin Academy].

"If I'm in danger, help me."

"I trust you. The one who promised to be my master."

And then I realized Black Dragon Witch was right.

The man in the mirror was grinning slyly.

"Then I shall go to help my beloved."

Though Lady Silver Lily and I became a couple, sadly, we couldn't enjoy outdoor dates. She ended up confined to her bed.

Lady Silver Lily was always frail. Weak to sunlight. Even in my memories as a [butler], she missed more days at the Academy than she attended.

And yet, she stayed up and overworked for the past few nights, so collapsing was inevitable.

"Don't worry. It's been like this since the first regression."

Lying in bed, Lady Silver Lily spoke.

"To be more precise, since birth. I could hardly ever go outside, spending most of my time in the mansion. After embedding the sword in the mirror and losing my heart, my condition worsened."

"....."

"Here's Hot tea. Please drink."

I handed her the prepared tea. Lady Silver Lily said, "Thank you," and took a sip. Her eyebrows raised slightly in surprise.

".....You added a lot of honey. It's exactly to my taste. How did you know?"

I smiled.

"You told me yourself, Lady."

Lady Silver Lily had shared this during her love lessons to me. During the 6th cycle, an apostle tried to conquer her with a strategy book. It was written in that book.

+

1. Lady Silver Lily is sensitive to sunlight.

2. She has a dull sense of taste and likes spicy food.

+

I simply remembered and used that information.

"Hm. So, you're using a strategy guide too?"

"It's more of a reference than a strategy guide since you shared it with me first. I appreciate your understanding."

"Turns out you're quite cunning too."

Lady Silver Lily tilted her tea cup.

The sound of tea echoed quietly in the bedroom.

"So, what's the plan you've come up with? Even sharing this cozy time now is just a fleeting amusement. One of us will inevitably forget the time spent with the other. There's no solution to that, is there?"

"You've never entrusted your life to someone else, have you, Lady?"

"Hm?"

"Trust me."

"....."

"Even if it's a fake romance, you've chosen to date someone. And that someone is no incompetent man."

Lady Silver Lily gazed intently at my face.

"Sometimes you need help from others in life. Right now, Lady, that's you."

I received help from Sword Saint and Black Dragon Witch to save the Aegim Empire, from Apothecary, Viper, and Medicine King to break through the Celestial Martial Chronicles. I'll never say it out loud, but I'm always indebted to the ghost too.

I've never thought of myself as alone.

Different from my lover before me.

"You, Lady, have taken on too much alone. [The empire must remain strong after my death], [I must correct the Crown Prince], [I have to deal with the Blood Demon]. You've been doing this for 140 days, haven't you?"

"Do you think I'm tired?"

"Yes."

"....."

"Please take a break."

I placed freshly picked spring flowers in a vase next to her bed.

"I don't like it when the person I love tries to bear everything alone. No, I dislike it. When I'm tired, I want my partner to take the responsibility, and when they're tired, I want to take it for them."

"We are merely enjoying a fake romance."

"It doesn't matter since I'm sincere."

".....Don't you feel humiliated?"

"Ah. You still don't know me, Lady."

How can someone be so adorable? I couldn't help but smile softly.

"I'm an optimist. Do you think I would be depressed or suffer from an inferiority complex because Lady is pretending to date me? Not at all. I see it as an opportunity. Eventually, Lady will fall in love with me."

"What on earth is the source of such confidence?"

"Because only I will get to spend time with you, Lady. Until you tell me that you're tired, I will never give up on you."

"....."

No matter what.

"I will strive to be your support."

Lady Silver Lily didn't respond. Instead, she quietly drank her tea.

Day by day, my lover became more emaciated.

The [Demons] that appeared every midnight at 12 grew stronger over time.

Initially, the demons barely possessed the form of [tongues] and [lips]. But with each passing day, they changed. [Arms] and [legs] emerged.

-Kyarrar.

When limbs appeared, I realized the demons resembled Lady Silver Lily. If Lady Silver Lily were simplified and shrunk, they would look exactly like these creatures.

-Are you going to kill us?

-Will you kill me?

Each night, I silently dealt with the demons. Lady Silver Lily wanted to help, but I firmly refused. She needed peace and quiet rest more than anything right now.

Paperwork requiring Lady Silver Lily's approval? I stopped it all.

There are only a few days left until this world perishes. If the empire collapses just because the Lady hasn't attended to it for a few days, then it might as well perish.

Rest.

A personal holiday.

That was the first gift I gave Lady Silver Lily.

".....It's my first time experiencing days like these."

Lady Silver Lily murmured, seemingly troubled.

"Is it really okay to just stay still like this?"

Right now, we were sitting under a cherry tree, leisurely looking at the lake. I carried Lady Silver Lily to this spot.

That's all.

No complicated paperwork, no Blood Demons, and no students gossiping about Lady Silver Lily.

"It's fine."

"But..."

"It's fine, Lady."

Lady Silver Lily closed her lips. She seemed to find it difficult to accept this peaceful time she had stumbled upon.

"I'll make sure it's okay."

"I don't want to rely on you."

"Did I ever say I would only help you forever? When I need help, please assist me. Let's help each other. Let's live by helping."

"....."

The day passed quietly.

It was the 'tenth day' as Lady Silver Lily mentioned.

"Are you thirsty? I made milk tea with a hint of honey today. It should suit your taste."

"Once the sunlight becomes milder, let's enjoy a boat ride on the lake. I'll row."

That day, Lady Silver Lily did nothing.

I woke her in the morning and helped her wash up. I served her a simple meal. In the morning, I read her favorite poetry book. In the afternoon, I packed a snack and we strolled to the academy's lake.

Whooooosh-

The spring wind whistled, scattering magnolia and cherry blossoms. Floating in the sky, the white petals were admired quietly by Lady Silver Lily. The lake's surface rippled with cherry blossoms.

"....."

For an hour, she said nothing.

Even when I carried her onto the boat, she remained silent. Quietly, she watched the flowing petals on the water. Splash. Slosh. The lake gently parted its way with my rowing.

"Spring is white."

Lady Silver Lily murmured.

"In the empire, this time is called [White Spring]. There's a period when magnolias fade just as cherry blossoms bloom. An old poet I admire said [White blooms amidst white, spring blossoms within spring. The white left by winter breathes its last breath]."

Her speech mirrored the pace of the cherry blossoms in the sky.

"It's a beautiful season."

"Yes."

The sunset reddened.

"How long it's been since I've seen such a season."

The gentle spring flowed.

"....."

"....."

We were intoxicated by the season. A pleasant daze. The drowsy spring air filled our minds.

[The silver-clad heart's existence becomes better defined.]

So when the time of world destruction approached, we were not at all perturbed. No. We didn't even exchange any words.

[The silver-clad heart manifests itself.]

The reddened sunset turned even more crimson.

On the other side of the academy, faint screams of students could be heard. Likely, the blood overflowing from the mirror rapidly engulfed the academy and tainted the edge of the lake red.

"Butler."

"Yes."

"It's comfortable being with you."

We were in the middle of the lake on the boat.

The red blood seeping from the edges hadn't yet invaded our sanctuary.

"Is it really okay to trust you?"

I let go of the oars.

"Lady said we're like parallel lines, destined never to meet, with the one who dies first always returning first. So, we can never be together."

"Hm."

"From now on."

I grasped Lady Silver Lily's hand.

"I will wrap my aura around Lady's body. Not just physically, but also in your mind. And I will do the same to my body and mind."

Then...

"We'll burst both our heads at the exact same moment."

"....."

Lady Silver Lily's breath halted for a moment.

Her eyes widened as her breath quieted.

"That means..."

"We die together."

After a while.

She nodded.

And so, we did just that.

Chapter 104: His Way of Loving (2)

Just like people manage their daily routines, I managed my death.

There was always an easier way for me to die. Wrap my brain in aura. Burst it. In an instant, I could end my life painlessly. Easy, simple, and convenient.

That's why I chose not to die that way.

'Because it's easy, simple, and convenient.'

Familiarity with ease, simplicity, and convenience makes humans complacent. Even the sharpest mind dulls over time.

'It was complacency that led to the Flame Emperor's death at my hands.'

I chose a more painful death, stubbornly relying on my dagger. To keep my senses and judgment vivid and raw. That was my way.

But today would be different.

"It's okay. It will be over in an instant."

I slowly channeled aura into Lady Silver Lily's hand. Perhaps because it was an unfamiliar sensation, she flinched slightly as she absorbed my redness.

".....It's warm."

"Yes."

"It feels like warm water seeping through my veins. If this resembles your body temperature, Butler, then you must be slightly warmer than me."

Lady Silver Lily looked into my eyes.

"I'm anxious."

"....."

"I've never felt anxious through all my returns. I was content as long as I didn't lose myself. But... today, I don't want to lose you. If I return first and you forget me...."

Would I be a bitch for being pleased by her anxiety? If I'm happy because she's anxious because of me?

Yes. Perhaps I would be a bitch.

"Don't worry."

But a bitch solely for her.

"I'll be with you."

Even as we felt each other's warmth, the world was ending.

Crack, crash! The ground split open. Blood gushed from the broken fissures.

Demons, once Lady Silver Lily's familiars, now rampaged beyond her control. Their numbers were like droplets in the sea, and each drop was as large as a mountain.

"Ah?"

Distant screams reached us.

"Demons! Demons have appeared!"

"Unfortunate timing."

People screamed.

The predetermined ten days. Lady Silver Lily's constrained love, a love that couldn't be restrained by a half-formed Constellation, was now running wild.

Yet, amidst this chaos, Lady Silver Lily remained calm, her heart as if coated in silver.

"I won't tolerate any mistakes."

"Yes."

"If I die even 0.1 seconds before you, or if you die 0.1 seconds before me, I will never forgive you. Remember my words deep in your heart. This is the only chance I give you."

"Yes."

"Again."

[The silver-coated heart watches you.]

"Live up to the trust you've inspired in me."

"....."

I held her hand a bit tighter.

"Okay."

As demons raged on the ground and invaders descended from the shattered sky, the sunset sky cracked like a mirror.

The flood of blood poured down.

The world turned increasingly red. The echoing screams drowned in a bubble-like silence.

It wasn't just Lady Silver Lily's rampage that led to the world's demise.

[The Apostle of 'Ruin-Harvesting Cow' manifests.]

The Apostles of the other half-formed Constellations she mentioned once.

[The Apostle of 'Warhorse of the Eternal Plains' manifests.]

[The Apostle of 'The Immortal Missionary of Happiness' manifests.]

Beings from another realm descended through the rifts in the sky.

The half-formed Constellation, Lady Silver Lily. As her barrier crumbled, these beings, ignoring any pretense of strategy, commenced a full-scale invasion.

"As usual, no sense of mood in these creatures."

Their forms were as varied as the Constellations that sent them.

"That's right."

And so, I could easily remember their appearances.

"A lesson is in order."

"What kind of lesson?"

"A lesson that intruding into someone else's love affair will lead to one's downfall."

"I like that."

Lady Silver Lily smiled.

"But that can wait for later."

Indeed. There was no time now.

"Lady."

The sky was shattering, blood raining endlessly.

Demons crawling up from underground, invaders descending from the sky - amidst this apocalyptic scene, Lady Silver Lily had borne it all alone.

Until today.

"Butler."

Lady Silver Lily spoke.

"Kill me."

In a world turned red, only Lady Silver Lily, me, our boat, and a 3-meter radius of water surface remained untouched by the blood-red paint. Countless tongues and lips emerged from the blood-tainted lake, mocking us.

There.

For the first time, I allowed a peaceful death.

I enveloped us both in aura.

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The Ninth Form.

Sword of Self Death.

Without a hint of error or deviation.

[You have died.]

We died.

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.

When I opened my eyes, I was leaning against a white tree.

It was evening.

The sky was ripening into a golden hue.

Waking up here wasn't strange. Ever since I decided to become Lady Silver Lily's exclusive Butler, I've been taking her for evening walks.

As I was about to get up quickly...

"---Have you awakened?"

Whisper.

A voice came from right beside me.

"You've finally come back to your senses."

I turned to look.

"Such a reprehensible Butler you are."

Lady Silver Lily stood there, her back to the bright sunset. Holding an umbrella, casting a shadow beneath her feet. The wind blew, tousling her silver hair, and I inadvertently held my breath.

'Did it succeed?'

My heart pounded.

'Or did I fail?'

I still couldn't tell.

Uncertain, I just looked at Lady Silver Lily.

Her fingers gripping the umbrella handle, the way she gently swept aside her wind-tousled hair, her lips tightly closed as usual. Each of Lady Silver Lily's movements resonated with me profoundly.

"Butler. You lied to me a little."

Lady Silver Lily began.

"You promised to spend the same time with me. But you returned nine days later than I did."

Ah.

"Even though it was a fake romance, leaving your beloved alone for nine days is a serious offense."

I succeeded.

"I waited for you alone for nine days. The anxiety I felt while waiting is entirely my burden. You swore to be there but failed to keep your promise. Isn't that negligence and dereliction?"

I succeeded.

"To atone for your sin this time, you'll have to suffer quite a bit."

I succeeded.

"Uhm. I'm thirsty. Butler, the tea you brought me..."

Lady Silver Lily couldn't finish her sentence.

Because I stood up and embraced her.

I couldn't bear not to hold her.

"....."

The wind blew. The umbrella Lady Silver Lily was holding fell and rolled across the grass.

Even though I was already holding her, it wasn't enough. More. More. I wanted to hold her even closer. I realized then, it wasn't just her body I wanted to embrace, but her heart.

"I'm sorry."

For making you wait alone for nine days.

"It's okay."

Lady Silver Lily wrapped her arms around my back.

"Now it's okay. Watching you not spend the last day with me wasn't completely unenjoyable."

"You're lying."

"Yes, it was a lie. It wasn't very enjoyable. But it's okay. I'm very good at waiting."

"I'm sorry."

"Forgive me."

Lady Silver Lily stroked my neck.

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 71%.]

I want to love you madly.

"Are you crying?"

"No."

"That's a lie."

"Yes."

"I dislike lies. Jokes are okay, but don't utter lies to me. I, too, will not lie to you. Not only in words but also in gestures and glances."

"Are you crying?"

"....."

"When you don't want to speak, use the right to silence. I won't pry. I won't press. If you wait patiently until the other person is ready to talk, that would be nice."

"Hmm."

I'm glad.

I'm glad to be someone who can love her.

"Lady."

"What is it?"

May I kiss you?

I held back.

"I'm really sorry, but could you wait a little longer?"

"How much longer?"

"8 days."

"Why?"

"7 days."

"Uhm?"

"6 days."

"....."

"I'll count down each day."

"....."

"Until we can be together on the first day."

Silence.

".....How audacious."

Lady Silver Lily whispered in my ear.

"So you're saying you'll kill me 9 more times?"

"Did it hurt?"

"It didn't hurt. Just like you said, it was over in an instant. But even after taking my life once, your intention to take it more is cruel."

"May I kiss you?"

"....."

"....."

Sorry.

I couldn't hold back.

Lady Silver Lily moved her head to meet my eyes.

Red.

The color I will come to love the most was there.

"I exercise my right to silence."

So I kissed her.

We embraced each other.

From breath to breath, from lips to lips, I offered the warmth of my heart, flowing my aura. I'm thankful my aura's color is red. Our breaths mingled.

And then.

[You have died.]

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

The next moment I opened my eyes, Lady Silver Lily was still by my side. We didn't speak. Maybe we had already said enough. Lady Silver Lily held my hand, and I kissed her.

[You have died.]

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

To get closer to you.

[You have died.]

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

To Lady Silver Lily, who said we would forever draw parallel lines, I tilted my head a bit more and kissed her. Before our times overlapped, our lips met.

In the cool corridor of the dormitory.

[You have died.]

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

In a dark basement.

[You have died.]

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

Under the white magnolia leaves.

"Lady."

I sighed deeply.

"Before you came, did you brush your teeth?"

"It seems like a question where I can exercise my right to silence."

"That's sly, Lady Silver Lily."

"There are two moments in this world when one can be forgiven for being sly. One is during war, and the other is when sharing love. Besides,"

I return 24 hours back to the past upon dying, but Lady Silver Lily goes back to the first day of the ball.

She calculated the difference in our time.

"You made me wait for 9 days, 8 days, 7 days... adding up to 39 days in total. My appropriate slyness will actually help lessen your guilt. You should be thankful."

"So, 39 days of kissing..."

"Stop being so frivolous."

[You have died.]

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

The next time I opened my eyes, I was in Viscountess Goldencup's private room.

"King of Death!"

The Heretic Inquisitor, who had not yet become Goldencup, laughed heartily. My timeline continued, and the Heretic Inquisitor's was not connected. Thus, while my immersion rate remained, the Heretic Inquisitor's immersion reset as it approached the first day.

"Lady Silver Lily came to visit! Ahaha. What could it be at this late hour? I heard she doesn't stay in the dorm but has separate accommodations. If she's come all this way at this time, maybe it's..."

"Where is she now?"

"Ah. She said she would wait in the garden in front of the dorm."

I opened the door and ran. The Heretic Inquisitor called out "Death King?" from behind, but I had no time to respond. Someone was waiting for me.

A little faster.

Just a bit more, hurry.

Lady Silver Lily was standing under the magnolia tree.

The white lotus blooming in the night sky.

The wilted lotus resembled a heart devoid of red.

"....."

Perhaps someone was secretly watching the garden from a dorm window. But we approached each other closely, embraced, and kissed.

I whispered.

"Do you know?"

"I don't. Brag to me."

"My name is Gong-Ja, and I call you Lady. When our names are put together, it becomes Lady and Gong-Ja. Of course, it sounds different in Lady's language, but still..."

"Are you saying we are a match made in heaven?"

"I'd like to think so."

"You're getting carried away over a coincidence."

"I love you."

Our lips met.

Breaths intertwined.

Time overlapped.

[You have died.]

Finally.

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

When I opened my eyes, I was at a splendid ballroom.

Chandeliers hung from the ceiling, draping down like weeping willows.

Below them, dozens of ladies and gentlemen paired up, dancing slowly.

Where we first met.

Where the Heretic Inquisitor was slapped.

Our time first intersected on this stage.

Day 1.

"....."

"....."

In the middle of the ballroom, we stood facing each other.

I moved my foot.

Lady Silver Lily also stepped forward.

Without distinguishing who was first, under the white chandeliers, amidst the swirling shadows, we kissed.

No words were needed.

Surprised voices around us were heard. I ignored them. The musicians at the ball stopped playing, and the ladies and gentlemen ceased dancing to watch us, but I ignored them.

Lady Silver Lily's eyes. Her voice. The outline of her existence was all that occupied me.

"We,"

I leaned my forehead against Lady Silver Lily's.

"Is it still Day 1?"

Lady Silver Lily smiled.

"Now it's Day 1. It's forever Day 1, if we wish."

"Forever?"

"If you and I wish it to be."

And we kissed again.

Savoring a moment as if it were eternity.

Only our low breaths echoed in the vast ballroom.

"Huh...?"

After a while, the Heretic Inquisitor spoke from behind us.

"Uh, did I miss something?"

No one could answer.

Chapter 105: His Way of Loving (3)

Being with you makes me happy.

It would be an exaggeration to say that I have lived my life for you. However, it's no lie that I will live for you. I'm fortunate to say this without a shred of falsehood.

"Are you crying again?"

I could be that kind of person.

"Let's make a promise."

I could be a person who cares for someone else.

"Speak. I want to hear it."

"Don't purposely ask if the other person is crying when they are. Honestly, Lady, you're just teasing me, aren't you? Right?"

"Hmm. I am occasionally surprised by you. Specifically, how unexpectedly clever you are. However, as clever as you may be, you cannot act cleverly towards me. It's rare to find someone as amusing to tease as you..."

"I wish you'd agree to the promise."

"No."

Ah. Lady Silver Lily saying 'no' to me is wonderful.

I really like it...

I love you...

-Aaagh! Kaak! Ah! My eyes! Aaagh! My eyyyes!

Sword Emperor rolled around dramatically.

-Save me! Save this ghost! Why do I, who couldn't peacefully pass away, have to suffer such misfortune even after dying! Why do I have to witness you blushing in real-time?! Damn it, my eyes! Save my existence!

'Ah, Sword Emperor. I pity you for not understanding the charm of love.'

-Shut uuup!

'Lady Raviel Ivansia, the mistress of my heart...'

-Stop it. Just stop it already!

Hmm.

Strangely, Sword Emperor's voice sounded more distant than usual. His voice, which used to reverberate like a steam train whistle, seemed slightly toned down.

'Is he finally starting to react?'

It wasn't just the Sword Emperor who began to react.

The ballroom froze at the sight of Lady Silver Lily and my kiss. The frozen air was slowly beginning to thaw.

"Uh, Lady Silver Lily. Wha-what are you doing...?"

Oh. Interesting.

Noodle-Hair can talk?

Looking again, he's like a trash can.

"My apologies for causing a disturbance."

Lady Silver Lily leaned heavily on my shoulder.

"It was inappropriate to behave in such a manner in public. I have carelessly ruined the modesty of the Sormewin ball and, on a larger scale, tarnished the honor of the royal family. My guilt is immense."

Lady Silver Lily spoke in a murmur. That was enough. Her voice always had a chilly yet attractive pull. Everyone present in the ballroom stared at her blankly.

"I am guilty, so please punish me. I'll accept it gracefully."

"Punish? But how?"

"Is it difficult to decide what punishment to give? I understand. It must be hard. Therefore, I'll take it upon myself to decide my punishment. From today, I will not attend the academy to avoid critical eyes, and I'll quietly reflect for a while. And also."

Lady Silver Lily pulled out a small paper envelope. The Crown Prince, still dazed, mechanically received it.

"What's this...?"

Lady Silver Lily slowly opened her mouth.

"A letter of withdrawal."

"....."

A second blizzard hit the ballroom that was just beginning to thaw. The ladies and gentlemen, especially the golden trash, were shocked.

"Until my withdrawal is accepted, I will keep to myself as promised. I won't receive visitors, so please grant me the punishment I've chosen, Your Highness."

"La-Lady..."

"I appreciate your permission, Your Highness."

Lady Silver Lily still leaned on my shoulder. In that posture, she bowed her head to the Crown Prince. It was more of a nod than a bow.

'I know Lady Silver Lily still has feelings for the Crown Prince because of the sword in the mirror...'

Is this really okay? I briefly wondered.

But then again, Lady Silver Lily had the Crown Prince's spies beheaded, right? It's fine. This is nothing compared to that. Most importantly, Raviel looks happy, so it doesn't matter.

Lady Silver Lily took my hand.

"Let's go."

"Ah. Yes."

So, amid the shock and horror of the ballroom, what did we do? We left.

Just left.

Why. What. Nobody could stop us.

They might be able to stop me. They could even try to hold back Lady Silver Lily. But 'us'? If we want to leave, we leave. Who would dare stop us? Forget it. How do you stop a pair of returnees?

"King of Death! King of Death!"

Only the Heretic Inquisitor tried to stop us. She hurriedly followed us as we left the ballroom.

"What about the stage strategy? And what did that peck mean? I don't understand at all!"

The Heretic Inquisitor referred to the kiss as a peck. Astonishing. I've heard there are such factions in the world, but who would have thought the Heretic Inquisitor belonged to one...

"Heretic Inquisitor."

"Yes, King of Death! Ah, by the way, ever since seeing the King of Death and that lady together, my heart keeps fluttering. Hmm, what could this be a sign of...?"

"It's angina. Be careful."

"Really. Is it angina?"

"Yes. And I'll handle the stage alone. Heretic Inquisitor, consider yourself on vacation. I'll call you if needed."

"Ah. I see."

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled brightly.

"Understood! I'll act freely and according to my judgment!"

His boundless cheerfulness was unsettling.

".....Heretic Inquisitor."

"Yes!"

"Don't kill people."

"Ah. Understood!"

"And no torture."

"Understood."

"Don't kidnap or imprison people while extracting information."

"King of Death."

The Heretic Inquisitor looked at me with difficulty.

"If I can't do that, then I have nothing left to do?"

"Just stay in your room and read fairy tales."

"Hmm. Yes. Understood..."

The Heretic Inquisitor looked dejected. Like a Welsh Corgi with drooping ears, I sighed and patted his shoulder.

"There will be work for you later. Just stay quiet until then."

The Heretic Inquisitor looked up at me earnestly. After tilting his head three times, he opened his mouth.

"King of Death. I hear my immersion rate is increasing, but what is that?"

"It's angina."

Just stay quiet, please.

"The empire will be buzzing starting tomorrow."

As we left the academy, Lady Silver Lily spoke calmly.

"Is that so?"

"I am a public figure, after all."

We were in a carriage. It belonged to Lady Silver Lily. "I want to get away from the academy for a change," she said, and of course, I had no reason to object.

"First, about 200 letters will pour in from the capital's social circles. Another 20 from my hometown's social circles, and out of those, 10 will be from my father. Finally, His Majesty the Emperor might even send a messenger. Gong-Ja, suggest a solution."

"Hmm..."

I started to speak but stopped. Wait. Didn't Lady just call me 'Gong-Ja' instead of 'Butler'? Being called by my name is a first for her.

"Why so?"

Lady Silver Lily's eyes were slightly upturned.

"Your face is red. Gong-Ja, do you have a cold?"

"....."

"Spring nights are chilly. Gong-Ja, even if your body temperature is high, be careful. That way, you can quickly answer my questions, Gong-Ja."

Uh.

I must retaliate a little.

"So, when did you write your withdrawal letter? Doing such things secretly while I'm away. Wow. Even if you planned to repeat this day, that's a bit cute."

"Cute, Gong-Ja. Do you think calling me cute will fluster me? Gong-Ja. Are you calling that a counterattack against me? That itself is cute. Do you wish to receive cuteness, Gong-Ja?"

"....."

"I'll consider that a surrender."

Today, Lady Silver Lily achieves a smooth victory again.

Even though I think this is signing up for a captured future, on the other hand, the thought arises, 'Isn't living a life captured by Lady a truly victorious life?' At this point, I'm already done for.

"It's so small."

Lady Silver Lily suddenly spoke. She was looking out the carriage window at the increasingly distant Sormewin Academy.

"Sormewin is an institution intentionally established to strengthen imperial authority. It forcibly admits the offspring of noble and influential families from across the empire. The same education, the same language, the same schedule is shared to instill the identity of 'One United Empire.'"

"That sounds complicated."

"I've been there too long."

Lady Silver Lily murmured.

"Beyond those small gates lie jealousy, vanity, pride, monopoly, desire, everything. They're merely covered by traditions and order. Ultimately, what we must rule over isn't there at the academy. It's outside. I wonder if the Crown Prince realizes this..."

"Raviel."

Lady Silver Lily paused.

"Worry about the empire later. You're overworking."

"....."

"Please, think only of me now. That alone is enough to overwhelm your mind."

The carriage jolted.

"Gong-Ja."

"Yes."

"If you scar my heart, I'll kill you."

A chill ran down my neck.

"Do you understand?"

"Yes, I understand."

"Tell me what you understand."

"Whatever happens, I will never harm your soul. If I unknowingly hurt you, I'll apologize."

"You need to understand a bit more."

Lady Silver Lily sat up and moved next to me.

Press.

She placed her palm on the back of my hand. My heart raced, but my nape still felt cold. The person I fell in love with had fire in her eyes and ice in her voice.

"If you ever betray me, Gong-Ja."

"Yes."

"Strangle me with your hands. Don't use aura or anything. Kill me until the fact that we met in this world is erased. Whether it takes hundreds or thousands of days, it doesn't matter. I'll condemn you to my death."

Lady Silver Lily lightly gripped her hand. She brought my hand to her neck. Pale skin. Cold temperature. Faintly, I could feel the ice lodged in her throat.

"And live forever, remembering that I'll never forgive you."

"You can live forever if you wish."

I swallowed.

"Yes."

"Know that if you betray me, you'll be banished to eternal hell."

Lady Silver Lily whispered.

"Do you understand?"

I opened my mouth.

"I understand, Raviel."

"If you have any secrets to confess, do it now."

"I have a skill called Ghoul Reincarnation."

Without hesitation, I confessed.

"Those who die by my hand can be summoned even after death. Although they can't inherit their abilities from their previous life, if I wish, they can inherit their appearance and memories."

"I see. I could also be summoned."

"Raviel, since you died with me 9 times, summoning 9 Raviels is also possible."

"I forbid it."

"Yes."

I never intended to summon Lady Silver Lily, no matter what. But once again, her voice and words blocked that possibility.

A relationship is a sacred promise and contract.

We are creating our own code of law.

"Add one more thing to do when you betray me. Destroy that skill."

"I will."

And, I chose my words carefully. She is the person I love. The person who will love me. I must cherish and be careful with her more than anyone else in the world.

"I'm sorry for not telling you sooner."

"Promise me one thing, and I'll forgive you."

"I'm listening."

"Do not choose to die without my permission."

"....."

"Even if it seems like an easy escape, don't die. You are my lover, not someone who can throw away their life carelessly. Even if it seems impossible to avoid death, struggle until the very end."

I remained silent.

Etching the promises we made into my heart.

"Yes."

"Tell me what you want from me."

"When I ask you to trust me, please trust me."

"I will always trust you."

The carriage jolted again. Using the small vibration as an excuse, Lady Silver Lily and I leaned on each other. Our lips overlapped.

From that day on.

We became each other's love.

Chapter 106: 1 DAYS (1)

"My Lady."

"What is it?"

"Let's just lose our minds and take a vacation for exactly ten days."

I suggested.

"Who else has lived as diligently as you, Lady? Both publicly and privately, you've done your best. So, for the next ten days, let's drop all seriousness and recklessly use our return skills..."

"Enjoy a pastime that ordinary people can't?"

"Precisely."

"Hmm."

Lady Silver Lily was calm.

"Even if we create a mess, no one will remember after we return to the day before, so it won't be a loss for us."

"Lady Silver Lily, you understand my words so well."

"Aren't we playing a bit irresponsibly?"

"Let's be irresponsible for once."

"Hmm. I seem to have taken a very bad man as my lover..."

"Ten days, deal?"

Lady Silver Lily pulled out her fan and flicked it open.

"Ten days seem too short, let's make it fifteen."

"Deal."

We indulged in life as if making up for our past.

Sormewin Academy is near the capital. Just a short carriage ride away, there are dazzling entertainments. And my love is the most prominent successor of the most prominent noble family in the empire.

"Where should I seat you?"

Simply put, power and wealth were overflowing.

She is the most prominent lady in the world.

To the polite theatre staff, Lady Silver Lily bluntly said,

"Rent us the entire theatre for the day."

"Excuse me?"

"I said I want to rent the theatre for the whole day. Did you not understand? Do I need to repeat myself three times? Is repeating the same line three times part of this theatre's acting practice?"

"No, no! My apologies! I'll immediately inquire with the theatre owner!"

Theatre and opera day rentals were standard.

"Gong-Ja, there's something I've always wanted to try."

"What is it?"

"Hiring six theatre companies at the same time."

Lady Silver Lily's tone was calm. But I knew she was having fun like a mischievous child.

"And have them perform simultaneously on a giant stage. Three plays will be tragedies, two comedies, and one opera."

"Uh, won't that just be chaos?"

"Exactly. I want to see chaos."

"Then let's watch."

We summoned the six most expensive theatre companies in the capital. No theatre owner could refuse the call of the heiress of the Ivansia Duke family.

What? Will this outrage lower the reputation and honor of the Ivansia family? It's okay. We are a couple of returnees. Play for a day and return, that's all. What can they do?

"Ah, what a tremendous chaos. I wanted to see this..."

My beloved fanned herself contentedly,

"Phwoohahahahak!!"

And I rolled around laughing.

Serious tragic lines became hilarious next to comedians performing comedies. With six plays performed simultaneously, even the most solemn lines seemed funny. The actors sweated throughout the runtime.

"Let's sweep the casinos in the capital!"

"Excellent idea. Accepted."

We, as a couple, headed to an exclusive noble casino. It was a place where people wore masks like a masquerade ball to hide their identities. But who is my beloved? No noble could fail to recognize her moonlight-flowing silver hair.

"Call."

"C-call."

When Lady Silver Lily said to call, the opponents would shrink back and call.

"Die."

"D-die."

When Lady Silver Lily said to die, the opponents would obediently lay down their cards.

"Raise the bet."

"R-raise..."

"Raise it higher."

"R-raise..."

The bet kept rising as she commanded.

"All in. Everyone."

"All... in..."

It was a miracle akin to the parting of the Red Sea in the luxurious casino. I decided to establish the [Lily Religion] for our beloved and write the casino scene as the first verse of its holy text.

Ah, how beautiful is the villainess lady, bringing ruin for her own pleasure.

"This is tyranny!"

After about sixteen nobles cried while offering their diamond rings and necklaces to us, the casino owner rushed over in a hurry. He was a man with a Kaiser mustache.

"Even if you're Lady, you can't do this in the store..."

"Oh? Do you know who I am? Curious. I heard this place strictly hides the identity of customers and even if they recognize someone, they keep silent as a virtue and rule. It seems I was misinformed."

"No, no! Of course, I don't know... but..."

"How dare you not know who I am? Do you wish for your head to fly off?"

"....."

The casino owner stammered. Although he was a noble, his lineage was different. He sank within a minute of rushing over.

"Ah, look at this man. You dare not answer Lady's question!"

I was closely sticking to my beloved, acting like a treacherous villain, shouting at him. It's quite warm beside our beloved.

"You dare to trifle with Lady's question with your tongue! Are you plotting to insult the Lady's family!"

"No, no! Of course not. I just... please show a little more consideration for my small business..."

"Ah, Lady, this won't do. His arrogance reaches the heavens. You should decapitate him for disrespect!"

"Eek?!"

Lady Silver Lily casually fanned herself.

"It's fine. Although Baron Rebe secretly built a drug lab in the basement and is distributing illegal drugs throughout the capital, should I just decapitate him for that?"

Twitch.

The Kaiser mustache man shuddered. He doubted if he heard correctly. Soon his face turned pale. He was genuinely shocked.

"What... what are you talking about..."

"Sit down."

"....."

"Sit there and play ten rounds with me, then I'll let you off for tonight."

Eventually, we wiped the casino owner's wallet clean. We scattered mountains of gold coins and jewels on the streets of the empire.

It was like a dream.

Days that were dreams yet so beautiful.

We did whatever we wanted, played as we wished. We rented the most luxurious accommodation in the capital and indulged in a lavish room. I grabbed Lady Silver Lily and jumped onto an enormous bed.

"Hmm."

The first day.

Lady Silver Lily's eyes lifted at the corners.

"Hmm,"

The second day.

Lady Silver Lily lifted her lips.

"...Aha."

By the third day, Lady Silver Lily smiled. Not a sneer, but a smile of pure joy. My lover's smile was as pure as a child learning to smile for the first time.

"Gong-Ja."

Lady Silver Lily buried her face in my chest.

"Are you happy?"

"You exist in this world. That's why I can live a little longer."

I became happy.

The minimum unit for a person to be happy was two.

“Starting today, I’ll write a diary.”

“For me to see?”

“There’s someone among my colleagues who’s good with instruments. I’ll learn music from them.”

“To play for me, I see.”

“I will survive no matter what.”

One day, I bribed the guards and yelled at them, clearing the busiest street in the capital for an hour. Just the two of us rented out the whole place.

One day, I showed up at the palace and said everything that should and shouldn’t be said in front of the Emperor. When Lady Silver Lily said, “Please take good care of your son, Your Majesty. There’s no bigger scoundrel than him,” the Emperor nearly slipped off his throne. “Your Majesty?!” The surrounding officials were in an uproar.

Day after day.

We treated time like a holiday destination and traveled.

‘It’s just like a honeymoon.’

I didn't say it out loud, as even thinking it made my face hot. But I believed Lady Silver Lily must have been thinking the same.

On the last day.

"....."

"....."

On the last day, we didn't go anywhere.

We just sat side by side at the fountain in the capital's square. From noon until evening.

Holding hands, we silently watched the shadows of countless people passing through the square. A newsboy hurried through the alley between the fruit store and the tavern.

“We did something really bad, didn’t we?”

After half a day, the Lady spoke.

“Yes. We’re such wicked bastards.”

I gripped her hand tightly.

A trip was not for those already in love, but to fall deeper in love. Now, after repeating a day for half a month, I found myself loving her more. And I wanted to love her even more.

“It’s only the two of us that matter.”

“We’re partners in crime.”

A soft laugh.

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 81%.]

That was my proof of happiness.

“Raviel. Do you remember what I told you in the carriage?”

“I remember every word you said to me.”

“When I ask you to trust me, please do.”

“Of course.”

“Please keep that promise.”

Lady Silver Lily looked at me.

“It seems you’re plotting something suspicious, Gong-Ja. It would be better for your heart to confess willingly.”

“From now on, I’ll raise my immersion rate to 99%.”

"....."

During our day of traveling, Lady Silver Lily and I shared many stories. So many stories. About the world I came from, what [Revelations] and [Immersion Rate] are. Lady Silver Lily learned all this from me.

"I need to become almost entirely the butler. I have to become someone born and raised in this world."

"Why is that?"

"I cannot tell you the reason."

Lady Silver Lily rested her chin on her hand.

".....If you can't even tell me, it means this strategy can only succeed if you alone know it in your heart."

"Indeed."

"The reason you're telling me this now is that you have a favor to ask of me, correct?”

“That’s right.”

Lady Silver Lily sighed deeply, as if she had been tricked.

“.....You’ve been planning for this moment from the start with your [trust me] promise. You’re more cunning than you look. I should have been more cautious and listened to you more carefully. What do you need me to do?”

It was time to execute the plan.

First, I went back to [the first day]. The starting point of this stage. The moment the ball began.

We hurriedly left the ballroom and went to Lady Silver Lily's residence.

“First, please tie my hands and feet tightly to the chair.”

Lady Silver Lily's expression became complicated.

“Gong-Ja, I think it's too early for us to move into that territory...”

“I don't know what the princess is thinking and I shouldn't know, but right now, I'm very satisfied with my life, so please don't worry.”

“I promised to trust you, so I have no choice but to believe...”

Lady Silver Lily firmly tied me to the chair.

I tried moving my limbs as a test, but they didn't budge.

This should be safe enough.

-Hey, Kim ■-bi. What are you doing? I'm slightly worried.

[Shiny is concerned about Gong-■'s actions.]

My immersion rate had already exceeded 80%.

I think, perhaps the original owner of this body, the ‘butler’, harbored feelings not just for Lady Goldencup but also for Lady Silver Lily. An unattainable love for either side. The butler must have silently closed off his heart.

The Crown Prince was two-timing Lady Silver Lily and Lady Goldencup. Lady Goldencup was two-timing the Crown Prince and the butler. The butler was two-timing Lady Silver Lily and Lady Goldencup. Now, Lady Silver Lily was two-timing the Crown Prince and me.

‘Such a dog-like romance.’

But.

‘Thank you.’

Right now, I was only grateful to the butler who also harbored feelings for Lady Silver Lily.

Thanks to him, I was able to devise this plan.

I steeled myself.

“Please bring a mirror in front of me.”

“Hmm.”

Lady Silver Lily had the servants move a large mirror in front of me. My image, tightly bound to the chair and unable to move, was reflected in the mirror.

“Character Window.”

The characters slid across the mirror surface.

+

Name: Kim Gong-Ja

Favorability: 90

Preferred Genres: [Martial Arts], [Romance], [Mystery], [Adventure]

Disliked Genres: None

Preferred Characters: [Master], [Lover], [Noble Hero], [Victim], [Hard Worker], [Child], [Sage], [One Who Doubts Themselves], [One Who Treats Others Well], [One Who Recognizes Me]

+

More characters continued below.

Almost everything about me.

While keeping the character window in front of me, I looked up at Lady Silver Lily.

"Raviel."

"I'm listening."

"From now on, please kiss me wildly. To make me like Raviel even more."

"Is being kissed while tied up your preference? If you had told me sooner, I might have considered it."

"At some point, I will no longer remain as [me]."

"....."

When the immersion rate exceeds 90% and approaches 100%.

Seeing the Heretic Inquisitor, who had completely immersed himself in Lady Goldencup, still retain his [hair] despite transforming into her. That's when I realized.

That's it.

That was the key to shattering this stage in the way I desired.

“When that time comes, kill me with your own hands,
Lady.”

Lady Silver Lily stopped.

Chapter 107: 1 DAYS (2)

Lady Silver Lily reacted after a moment of pause.

"What?"

"Lady, think about it. You will come to the exact same conclusion I did. Because you, too, are a Returner like me."

"....."

Lady Silver Lily furrowed her brows and rested her chin on her hand, deep in thought. Soon, her eyebrows raised as if she had realized something.

"Indeed."

As expected. I knew Lady Silver Lily would catch on.

“Yes.”

"But, Gong-ja, it's dangerous. This is nothing short of a gamble."

"At the point where it's almost a gamble, we have already won. Because this is a mistake made by the tower, a flaw. By just pointing out that flaw, we are at a significant advantage."

"There's another problem."

Lady Silver Lily glared at me.

"I will not remember you."

"It's okay. I will find a way, no matter what. But if I end up being unable to leave this world by myself, please help me say [Transfer]. That's all I ask. Raviel."

I opened my mouth.

"Please trust me."

Silence.

Lady Silver Lily remained silent for a while.

"Alright."

She approached me.

"Since I became your first bitch, you will become my last bitch. If something is taken, something else must be given in return."

Lady Silver Lily grasped my chin.

"Truly, I've ended up with a bad man as my lover."

And she kissed me.

"....."

I quietly accepted Lady Silver Lily's breath.

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 83%.]

In the last round.

The moment I saw the Heretic Inquisitor sinking into Lady Goldencup, I sensed something odd.

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 85%.]

Why is the 'Transformation' still active?

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 85%.]

Isn't that strange?

The Heretic Inquisitor could freely change his appearance using his Holy Technique, even grow his hair. But that was a skill owned by 'Heretic Inquisitor', not by 'Lady Goldencup'.

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 85%.]

Yet, traces of the transformation remained ambiguously.

There's only one conclusion.

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 87%.]

Our skills don't disappear even when we're immersed.

Lady Goldencup still has the skills of the Heretic Inquisitor.

She just forgets how to use them.

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 88%.]

And the same will be true for me.

".....!"

As the immersion rate neared 90%, my head spun dizzily.

A torrent of memories came.

Memories of the original owner of this body flooded in like a deluge. Until now, I had merely peeked into the owner's memories and shared his emotions. But now, it was different.

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 89%.]

My memories are fading.

The sound of the orphanage director reading Romance of the Three Kingdoms. The memory of not wanting to go to the bathroom because it was too cold in winter. The laughter of the older brother and sister who occasionally played with us.

-Hey! Kim ■-Ja! What the ■ are you doing?

[■■ is appealing to ■ to stop at once!]

Even the voices of Guardian Spirit and Holy Sword.

“Are you okay?”

Only Lady Silver Lily’s voice was clear.

“Yes..... Still, I’m okay..... more.”

“More kisses, is that it? My lover is such a spoiled child.”

I felt breathless.

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 90%.]

I felt dizzy.

Amidst the dizziness, I barely opened my eyes to sneak a peek at the mirror reflecting the two of us.

+

Name: Kim Gong-Ja

Favorability: 91

Preferred Genres: [Martial Arts], [Romance], [Mystery], [Adventure]

Disliked Genres: None

Preferred Characters: [Teacher], [Lover], [Noble ■■■], [Victim], [Hard ■■■], [Child], [Sage], [One Who ■■■ Self-Doubt], [One Who ■■■ Others Kindly], [One Who Recognizes ■]

+

I'm being...

My existence is being overlaid with something else.

“Are you still okay?”

“Raviel.”

I was scared.

"I love you. I love you, Raviel....."

"I know."

"Even if I'm reborn, I will love you. So, make sure I never forget you. Even if I die, make sure I never forget you....."

"I understand."

Our lips met.

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 91%.]

My memories are disappearing.

+

Na■e: Kim Gong-Ja

Favorability: 9■

Preferred [Martial Arts], [Romance], [Myst■■], [Adventure]

Disliked Genres: None

Preferred Characters: [Teacher], [Lover], [Noble ■■■], [Victim], [Hard ■■■], [Child], [Sage], [One Who ■■■ Self-Doubt], [One Who ■■■■ Others Kindly], [One Who ■■■■■■ Me]

+

My existence is thinning.

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 92%.]

A cheap dagger.

'No sheath, but it'll do.'

My beginning.

'This is the best you can afford.'

My limit.

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 93%.]

A small room.

Torn walls.

Newspapers and photos.

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 94%.]

A handsome man with a ponytail

Standing with a flaming spear,

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 95%.]

The internet.

Alleys.

‘But brother, my face,’

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 96%.]

I was burning.

Hellfire mansion.

‘Kind sir.’

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 97%.]

The day of heavy red rain.

In the acacia flower garden, ‘I!’

‘I didn’t know!’ cried someone tremblingly,

In the acacia flower garden.

+

Name: ■ Gong-Ja

Favorability: 9■

Preferred [Martial ■■ts], [Romance], [■■■■], [■■■■■]

Disliked Genres: None

Preferred Characters: [Teacher], [Lover], [Noble ■■■■], [Victim], [Hard ■■■■], [Child], [Sage], [One Who ■■■■■■■■■■], [One Who ■■■■■ Kindly], [One Who ■■■■■■■■■■ Me]

+

Snow.

A snowy field.

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 98%.]

A red peony.

A single petal.

+

Name: ■■

Favorability: ☐

Preferred [Ma■■■], [■■■■■■], [■■■■], [■■■■■■]

Dis■■■■■ Genres

Preferred Ch■■■■■: [Teacher], [Lover], [Noble ■■■■■], [Victim], [Hard ■■■■], [Child], [Sage], [One Who
■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■], [One Who ■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■],

[One Who ■■■■■■■■■■]

+

So.

‘I’ll teach him ways to be happy!’ someone once said to me,

So I am.

[Immersion into your character is intensifying.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 99%.]

I am.

Who am I?

+

Name: ■■■

Favorite: ■■

Preferred [■■], [■■■■], [■■], [■■]

Dis■■■■ed Genres: [■■■■]

Preferred Ch■■r■■■: [■■■■], [■■■■], [■■■■ ■■], [■■■■], [■■■■],
[■■■■■], [■■], [■■■■ ■■■■ ■■■ ■], [■■■■■ ■■■■ ■],

[■■ ■■■■■■]

+

"....."

Something,

- ■■■■ ■■■■! ■, ■, ■■■!

[■■■■ is calling out to ■■■■.]

It's noisy.

Like a hive of bees buzzing in my head.

My vision is blurry... a mirror? Why a mirror?

Where am I?

“Are you okay?”

"....."

I gaze blankly in the direction of the voice.

Even through the blurred vision, the figure in front of me has an overwhelming presence.

I know who this person is.

“Gong-ja.”

Raviel Ivansia.

The legitimate daughter of the Ivansia Duchy.

“I asked if you were okay.”

My master, Lady Goldencup's rival.

“What is this...”

I tried to move but then realized. I am bound. Not just my limbs, but my entire body is tightly tied with ropes. As soon as I became aware that I was tied up, my foggy mind cleared sharply.

“My goodness, Duchess, could it be that you've kidnapped me right now?”

“This is too much. Even for the power of the Ivansia Duchy that covers the sky, this is too much. Do you despise Lady Goldencup so much that you threaten her servant like this?”

The silver lady quietly looked down at me.

Seeing her face strangely made my heart ache.

“Is that so.”

A sad face.

“That's how it is.”

All the empire's poison passes through her fingertips, and all the empire's conspiracies come from her heart. Although somewhat malicious, these rumors contain truths.

And there she is, Lady Silver Lily, in front of me, undoubtedly, with a sad expression.

“I thought the heart capable of being hurt was already gone. But this is definitely painful. Did you say your martial arts prove life through pain? Then be happy. Your sword has undoubtedly cut through my heart.”

“What are you talking about...”

I couldn’t understand.

Neither Lady Silver Lily’s words nor my own feelings. Why does my heart feel heavy? Did they use drugs when they kidnapped me? But I, serving Lady Goldencup, am well-versed in various poisons.

This symptom... I’ve never heard of it.

“Gong-Ja.”

My heart pounded.

For some reason.

“...Who are you looking for?”

“My lover. And the man who gave his heart to me, and the man to whom I will give my heart.”

If she's referring to someone, it must be the Crown Prince.

But Lady Silver Lily's red eyes are focused only on me.

This further confuses me.

“So, Lady Duchess.”

This is strange.

Why do I sweat coldly just calling the Duchess a Duchess?

『Gong-Ja.』

Something. It feels like I've done something terribly wrong.
An overwhelming sense of guilt.

『I'll kill you if you scar my heart.』

I couldn't breathe.

Voices unknown tore through my mind. I felt like I was going mad. Hallucinations? Is it a hallucinogenic drug? Is that why sweat is running down my neck and my heart is pounding in my chest?

“Gong-Ja.”

I couldn't respond.

I saw Lady Silver Lily drawing her rapier clearly, and it was an ominously bad sign, I had to say something, to stop or persuade her.

“Go on your way.”

But I said nothing.

“I will be...”

[The silver-clad heart watches you.]

“waiting for you.”

My heart was torn apart.

"-----!!"

I screamed. Blood gushed out. My throat was blocked. My last breath almost slipped away. And just when I was about to cough up blood, Lady Silver Lily sealed my lips.

With her lips.

".....,"

My vision faded.

Killing me meant that Lady Duchess was finally starting her machinations against Lady Goldencup. As Lady Goldencup's shield, I must not die. Thus, this was an urgent and critical situation.

However, my last thought wasn't about Lady Goldencup or anything else.

It was just about the red eyes staring at me from close by.

[The silver-clad heart loves you.]

I wanted to wipe away the tears flowing from those eyes.

[You have died.]

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

[.....]

Faintly.

[An error has occurred.]

A voice flows.

[The owner and subject of the skill are different.]

[Evaluating whether to return '24 hours before from the owner's perspective' or '24 hours before from the subject's perspective'.]

[Unable to evaluate.]

Darkness encroaches.

[The tower confirms that the skill's activation conditions are not met.]

[The current situation is identified as intended by the owner of the skill.]

[This question surpasses the authority of the tower.]

Fading into oblivion.

[The tower acknowledges the authority of the King of Death.]

[Approved. The King of Death currently holds temporary Apostle status.]

[Temporary Apostle status granted by - Hamusutra.]

[The tower acknowledges the King of Death's question as an official subject for discussion.]

And then.

[The tower requests a vote from the Six Pillars of All Lives.]

A wave of white light engulfed me.

.

.

.

.

.

.

That place was unfamiliar to me.

It was pitch dark, and without limbs or body, I seemed to float in the void.

[Confirming participants.]

A voice whispered in the endless darkness.

[The 6th Pillar, 'Staff of Time Immemorial,' has joined.]

[The 5th Pillar, 'The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages,' has joined.]

[The 4th Pillar, 'The Moon Contemplating Blindness,' has joined.]

[The 3rd Pillar, 'Legislator of the Beginning,' has joined.]

[The 2nd Pillar, 'The God Who Dances in Emptiness,' has joined.]

[Confirmed the presence of the Six Pillars of All Lives.]

[The tower shares the query raised by the temporary apostle, the King of Death.]

[Sharing complete.]

-Tchuba-ta, Mura waloyo Bushi-to!

An extremely agitated voice was heard.

-Sato, mai-mau.

-Nail!

Voices came from all around. The tone was like countless snakes whispering. I felt like I was in hell, unconsciously hunching my shoulders.

[Your request is accepted.]

[Interpreting Zuraqua's language.]

The next moment.

"---That damn thing is playing with us!"

The voice exploded.

"Bring Hamusutra right now! That Holed-Up Head Librarian, what was he thinking making him an Apostle and sending him here!"

"I checked, and there was no problem procedurally. Besides, that kid won't understand a word we're saying. Immersion, was it? Reversing that might help in communicating."

"Miya! Reverse it!"

[Your request is accepted.]

[Resetting the King of Death's immersion rate.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 0%.]

"Haah!"

I barely let out a breath.

My dizzy head cleared up.

The words I uttered while immersed in the butler, Lady Silver Lily's gaze at me, all memories swiftly returned.

And I was certain.

“You. You deliberately synchronized with a character and then used the return skill, didn’t you?”

That I had succeeded.

“You wanted to go back 24 hours from the character’s perspective, not yours!”

I smiled inwardly.

“Yes. That's right.”

The day Lady Silver Lily broke the mirror with her sword.

One day before the eternal ten days were to repeat.

“Please send me back.”

I aimed to return to that day.

Chapter 108: 1 DAYS (3)

"That shameless thing...!"

From beyond the darkness.

Someone unknown gritted their teeth in anger.

Unlike before, everything they said was now [interpreted].

"Calm down, my child. Fragments of the Padak Era are showing."

However, their voices were still opaque. Like a song with noise interference, their voices would seem distant, then suddenly close to my ear.

"Anger and jealousy won't help our deliberation."

“I’ll kill him!”

“King of Death, was it? It’s been a long time since a meeting was convened twice because of one person. How long has it been since the Constellation Killer?”

“Moreover, the connection between those two is getting stronger. Is this also a coincidence?”

Then...

“---This is troublesome.”

The chattering voices suddenly stopped. The surroundings became silent. Among the idle and casual conversation, only a dispassionate voice sank.

“If the immersion rate was completely 100%, we could return a day from the butler's perspective. If it was below 90%, it would be enough to return a day from the King of Death's perspective. But, it had to be 99%.”

I recognized that voice.

“It's ambiguous. Whose side should we take?”

The Tower's Master.

I swallowed hard.

“I think... we should return a day from the butler's perspective.”

“Convince us.”

“Firstly, just looking at the numbers. An immersion rate of 99% means the butler is 99% and I am only 1%. The butler's proportion is overwhelming, so it's only fair to consider the butler as the standard.”

“Yes. But [Returner's Winding Clock] is a skill you acquired. King of Death. It's your skill. Only the person who possesses the skill can use it.”

An unseen gaze scanned my face from the darkness.

“Shouldn’t you be the one to return?”

"....."

“Don’t be nervous. I’m just curious.”

The voice spoke kindly, telling me not to be tense. But it was an impossible consideration. With every word and phrase, it felt like a long snake was climbing up my neck.

“...That’s an overly biased view.”

“Hmm?”

“Consider it from the butler’s perspective. The butler and I have been fighting over who would possess the body throughout the stage. I was devoured by the butler, but at the same time, the butler was devoured by me.”

In other words.

“The butler fought fairly and won over me, thereby taking my skill. [Returner's Winding Clock] is now also the butler's skill."

"Oho."

The serpent's voice quivered strangely.

I realized a bit late that it was laughing.

"That makes sense. Like how you, King of Death, copied the Flame Emperor's skill."

"....."

"A returner against a returner in battle. I wondered who would win. But to think, returning to a point before acquiring the skill. I must say, even my lowly self was impressed. No, all of us were surprised."

Lowly Self.

The absolute ruler of the Tower referred to themselves as lowly. They speak politely too.

As if being cordially humble to everyone.

That felt even more ominous to me.

“You were impressive. You could have chosen to simply flee from the Flame Emperor’s sight. But you didn’t. Why?”

As the Tower Master asked, the silent figures began to speak.

“It’s because of revenge. This guy never forgot what was done to him. So he went after the one who burnt him to ashes. Dying over 4050 times? That’s stubborn.”

[The Moon Contemplating Blindness curses you.]

“It’s because of a sense of justice. The Flame Emperor killed many and would have killed more. He must have thought it couldn’t be left unchecked. The thoughts and feelings of ‘this cannot be’ drove the King of Death. Yes. He is a righteous human.”

[The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages blesses you.]

The serpent's voice nodded.

“Yes. That must be it. Sometimes revenge drove him to pierce his own throat, other times a sense of justice led him to end his life. But revenge and justice are common. What amazed me was only one aspect.”

Someone else took over the Tower Master's words.

“It's the fact that the only way to 100% defeat the Flame Emperor was through that method.”

[The Legislator of the Beginning declares quietly.]

“Yes.”

The Tower Master laughed.

“King of Death. Your heart is raw and hot, but your mind is cunning. Always seeking a way to win 100%. So I'm looking forward to it. Have you prepared a logic that will persuade us 100%?"

This was the critical moment.

I couldn't back down here.

"Yes."

"Go ahead."

"I... we haven't done anything wrong."

The serpent's voice turned towards the murmuring direction, opening its mouth.

"This is entirely a mistake and error made by the Tower. The very fact that it's difficult to decide whether to return a day from [the butler's perspective] or [my perspective] is a problem. If the Tower were perfect, such an error would never have occurred."

“Yes. I’ll admit that. So?”

“Since we are victims of the error, please compensate us.”

"....."

I spoke as confidently as I could.

“And as the ones who discovered the error, reward us.”

Silence.

After a while.

“Impudent.”

[The God Who Dances in Emptiness glares at you.]

“Look at how that creature talks. Does it want to be crushed into nothingness?”

[The Moon Contemplating Blindness wants to kill you.]

Voices started to boil over.

“Stop.”

But when the serpent's voice spoke, everything fell silent again.

“Interesting.”

"....."

“What I find interesting is this. You believe without a doubt that I will [compensate] and [reward] you properly. Why? I could just wipe my mouth and turn away.”

“Because...”

I spoke firmly.

“Because you always wished us luck.”

The Tower.

Every time a stage was cleared, hunters heard a voice.

『The who chose to climb the Tower.』

『May fortune be with you.』

Just that.

But it was definitely ‘encouragement’.

“You, being absolute, do not mock us. You don’t despise us. You don’t push us in any particular direction. A hunter who wants to stay on the 1st floor can stay forever. For those climbing higher, you wish them luck and only ask for caution.”

A resting place for those who wish to rest.

Good fortune for those entering the fray.

“It's not just that.”

The children in the hellish mansion.

The Demon King shedding red raindrops.

The lonely peony in the eternal snowy field.

The heart repeating endless ten days.

“Every single person you allowed to enter the Tower, without exception, is lonely and sad. You gathered only those destined for tragedy and built the Tower.”

I believe.

“You are benevolent.”

The Tower Master in front of me is a benevolent absolute being.

“You never interfere in our fights and killings. You respect our freedom. But surely you will compensate for the damage caused by the Tower’s error.”

Because it’s the Tower’s responsibility, not ours.

“Thank you for building the Tower.”

“I’ve always wanted to say that. I didn’t have the chance before. I’ve always wanted to express my gratitude.... If it weren’t for the Tower, I would have been trash in the outside world. Ah. Well, I was trash even after entering the Tower...”

I lived wrongly.

I lived wrongly, but I got the chance to relive my life.

“If you weren’t there... I would never have gone back more than 4000 days by myself. Never. You said it was revenge and justice... but I only barely endured because someone was watching over me. That’s all.”

I bowed my head.

“Thank you.”

I bowed deeply.

“Sincerely, I am grateful.”

There was a long silence.

“Hmm.”

Someone murmured softly.

“I like it.”

[The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages expresses favor towards you.]

“Me too. It’s been so long since a human came here to express gratitude, I can't even remember. Wait, was there ever one? Maybe this is the first time."

[The Staff of Time Immemorial expresses favor towards you.]

"...These days, children somehow harbor hostility towards beings like us. The world is too harsh. They think they need someone to blame and resent."

[The God Who Dances in Emptiness expresses favor towards you.]

"Ha. They simply don't want to acknowledge a higher existence than themselves."

[The Moon Contemplating Blindness looks at you disapprovingly.]

And there was laughter.

"Indeed."

It was laughter spilled by the Tower Master.

“Certainly. You have a bit of a cute side.”

"....."

“I’m just a mirror, King of Death. If I seem good to you, it’s because you are good.”

The serpent's voice smiled.

“State your desired compensation.”

“I wish to return 24 hours from the butler's perspective.”

“And your desired reward?”

My heart raced with tension.

“I want you to let Lady Silver Lily...”

“My beloved...”

“Keep her memory.”

“Indeed.”

The serpent's voice chuckled lightly.

“You could ask for a tremendous skill as a reward, right? After all, you discovered the Tower's error. We should reward you generously. Shall I enhance [Returner's Winding Clock] for you?”

Temptation.

“You can turn back time as you wish, not just for a day. Or how about enhancing [Ghoul Reincarnation]? So it can inherit not just memories but also the abilities from a previous life.”

“I don't need it.”

I knelt down.

“Please.”

Respectfully, I lowered my forehead in the direction of the voice.

“I simply want to live with the one I love.”

"....."

And then.

A hand gently caressed my bowed head.

Very slowly.

"King of Death."

[Concluding the meeting.]

“May fortune be with you.”

[May fortune be with you.]

•

•

•

•

•

•

[Re-adjusting your immersion rate.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 99%.]

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

•

•

•

•

•

•

Blink.

"....."

When I opened my eyes, the first thing I felt was the scent of spring flowers blowing in from the window.

My head felt foggy.

Like I had been dreaming for a long time.

“Ah.”

A voice, both unfamiliar and familiar, came from nearby.

“You’re finally awake. Butler. You took a rather long nap.”

Lady Goldencup.

My master.

“...My lady?”

“Yes. Your one and only lady.”

Lady Goldencup chuckled. Was she amused by my reaction? She was looking at me with her eyes barely open.

She had adapted to the capital, and there was no trace of the girl who had been famous in her hometown for her wild ways. I regretted that fact a little. Of course, her outward appearance had become sophisticated, but her heart remained the same.

.....

What is it?

“After having dinner with His Highness, I came back only to find that the butler was dozing off in his chair. I was a bit upset that you fell asleep without me. But I let it slide because your sleeping face was cute.”

“My lady.....”

“Oh? You look like you’re about to cry. Did you have a nightmare?”

A nightmare? Was that it? Had I had a nightmare?

An inexplicable feeling of suffocation filled my chest. It felt like I had just forgotten something very important. The more I tried to remember, the more distant it became, an elusive sensation.

“Dinner with His Highness...”

To shake off that feeling, I deliberately changed the topic.

“Did you enjoy your dinner with His Highness?”

“Yes. Quite a bit. Listen, butler. Today His Highness gave me a ring made of blue coral!”

Lady Goldencup beamed. Blue coral is a gemstone name. Not particularly valuable, but in the southern regions of the empire, it's often used for proposing to a lover.

“And he did it in the student cafeteria, in front of other ladies and gentlemen! Really, the Crown Prince is a fool, but a fool who knows how to make people happy. I wonder what kind of face Duchess Ivansia will make when he hears this news!”

Suddenly, I felt breathless.

“Duchess Ivansia.....”

“Ah. Are you curious too?”

"....."

What is it?

Really, what is it?

My heart's unrest resonated in my throat.

“Raviel.....”

Lady Goldencup looked at me with a puzzled expression.

“Butler? Even so, it’s a bit rude to call the Duchess by name directly like that. Even if it’s just the two of us here, it’s too disrespectful. Mind your manners, manners. Sometimes you seem more ignorant of the capital’s etiquette than me.”

That moment.

-■■■, ■■ ■■■■. ■■ ■■■ ■ ■■ ■■■■!

My head buzzed.

[■■■■ is speaking to you.]

I clutched my forehead in pain.

“My lady... do you hear something?”

“Something?”

Lady Goldencup tilted her head.

“What kind of sound are you talking about?”

“It’s just, it seems like someone is shouting...”

“Uh-oh, butler. I thought you were joking at first, but now I’m starting to get worried too. Does your head hurt? Is it hot?”

Should we go to the infirmary?"

"...No. I'm sorry. I keep saying strange things."

I stood up from the chair.

"I feel a bit of a headache. It doesn't seem like a cold... I'll go outside for some fresh air. Is that alright, my lady?"

"Ah. Yes, do that."

Lady Gold

encup looked at me with concern.

"Shall I accompany you?"

"No, it's really fine..."

-■King■ ■ ■■■■!! ■■ ■■! ■ ■■ ■■!

“...I think a little walk will make it better.”

“Alright. Then go ahead. But don't be too late.”

“Yes. Thank you.”

I left the lady's room and the dormitory.

Magnolias bloomed white like the moon in the night.

But even after stepping out into the garden, the unease in my heart did not subside.

『It's still the time when I wasn't a returner yet.』

I walked.

『His Highness is bound to marry Lady Goldencup.』

I walked aimlessly.

Like a sleepwalker in a dream.

『In my anger and bitterness, I leaned on the family sword and made a wish.』

『May my love last forever.』

『Then, my life became eternal.』

At the end of the path I wandered aimlessly, unbelievably, was the grand residence of Duchess Ivansia. A place I had passed by before but never consciously walked to.

A place unrelated to me.

『My heart has been fixed since that day.』

Yet it shouldn't be.

"....."

Why am I here?

‘Let's go back.’

To where my master waits.

‘Go back.’

I thought so and moved to turn around.

‘I have to go back.’

But for some reason, my steps didn't turn back. Though I thought I should return, my steps moved forward. My hand pushed the iron bars of the gate.

Creak-

The door opened lightly.

There were no guards from the Ivansia family.

"....."

It's truly strange.

Maybe I'm still trapped in a dream.

Then everything makes sense.

Me crossing the gate and walking across the garden for no reason.

My heart aching for no reason at the sight of cherry and magnolia trees in bloom.

Naturally knowing the layout of the residence of Duchess Ivansia, whom I've never been invited by, and walking straight there.

"You've come."

And Duchess Ivansia standing at the end of the corridor.

『I will be waiting for you.』

Her smiling softly as she looks at me.

“I’ve been waiting.”

Everything.

Chapter 109: Her Way of Loving (1)

Duchess Raviel Ivansia stood in the corridor at midnight.

Behind her, a large mirror was placed.

A full-length mirror.

It was smooth and clean.

Only her straight back was reflected in the mirror, which the moonlight slid over, making the Duchess seem like an island standing alone in a dark sea.

"You're silent."

"....."

“Such a troubled expression. You wear your emotions clearly. Even in the night, it's easy to read your face. Just looking at you, I know this is the [first time].”

First time?

My heart had been restless since a while ago. Even now, it is. Why does Duchess Raviel use such a familiar tone with me?

The cold and rational sword. The moon of the Ivansia family.

There should be no reason for her to be kind to me, the butler of Lady Goldencup.

There shouldn't be.

“...I was silent because I didn't know what to say. If I have been rude, please forgive me. Duchess. Is this... a dream? Are you also appearing in my dream?”

To my question, Duchess Raviel showed a strange expression. Her smile seemed almost like a scar.

“An interesting question. Yes. Your dream has swallowed my life. I now understand that love is nothing but offering one's life to someone else's dream.”

What does that mean?

“I become your dream, and you become my life, and we call this exchange of dreams and life love.”

What does that signify?

I didn't know what that meant. There was much I didn't know.

Among those things, Duchess Raviel, with her scar-like smile, explained one.

“But such a romantic question was not what you meant. I'll answer seriously. If you're wondering why there are no servants around, don't worry. I sent them all away.”

“Why.....”

“And a warning. Never again call me [Duchess] with those lips.”

Duchess Raviel smiled.

“I will gouge out your heart and kill you.”

"....."

I couldn't understand.

Just now, Duchess Raviel harbored a killing intent towards me. Her words of killing me were not an empty threat. It wasn't a bluff. If I call her 'Duchess' once more, undoubtedly her rapier will pierce my heart.

Yet.

‘Why?’

Why is the killing intent Duchess Raviel directs at me not cold, but only comforting?

Can a declaration of killing someone be this tranquil?

“Come here.”

Her voice beckoned me like a gesture. I couldn't resist. As I approached Duchess Raviel, she pointed at the full-length mirror. “What do you see?”

“.....I see you and me standing side by side.”

“And?”

“The dark corridor... Only the moonlight barely illuminates. Apart from you and me, almost nothing is visible. Everything is buried in darkness.”

“And?”

The Duchess asked. It was peculiar. She seemed to be expecting a different answer. As if there was still something I had to see in the mirror. But what else could be reflected in it?

“What else do you see?”

"....."

“Don’t hide it, speak.”

I decided to look more closely into the mirror. I narrowed my eyes and frowned. But even so, what I saw remained largely the same.

‘Only darkness is visible. And unusually red eyes...’

At that moment. Zing! A headache struck me.

Unrecognizable characters flashed before my eyes.

+

■■■

■■■: ■■

■■ [■■], [■■■], [■■], [■■]

■■ ■■

■■ ■■■: [ster], [Lov■], [■■■ ■■], [■■■], [■■■], [■■■],
[■■], [■■■ ■■■ ■ ■■ ■], [■■■■ ■■■■ ■],

[■■ ■■■■■]

+

“Ugh, huh...?!”

Nausea overwhelmed me.

-Kim■-Ja ■ap out■ ■ ■■ ■t!

[■■■■ tells ■■■ ■■■■■ ■■■■ro!]

Instinctively, I grabbed my throat. It hurt the moment I did so, but I didn't understand why.

Since I had no choice but to leave what I didn't understand as unknown, I thought of something else.

'It's good that my stomach is empty.'

I hadn't vomited. Vomiting in front of the only daughter of the Ivansia family, the thought was horrifying. I desperately suppressed the urge to vomit.

Duchess Raviel was calm.

"What did you see?"

So heartless.

A bitter taste spread in my mouth.

"Strange letters... I see strange letters. And voices... strange voices... I don't understand."

“Voices.”

Duchess Raviel slightly smiled at that. Her smile now seemed more like a smile than before.

“You are loved.”

“What do you mean....”

“Tell me about the letters.”

Without explanation, she moved on to the next topic. I just stared blankly at her. She, having lost her smile, simply repeated calmly.

“You said you saw strange letters. Speak of them.”

“...They are not clear. Not complete letters... Only fragments...?”

“Utter even a fragment.”

“Ster... Lov... Beyond that, I can’t... Nothing.”

"Hm."

Duchess Raviel held her chin.

“Indeed. [Ster] is from [Master] and [Lov] is [Lover]. It’s typical of you to leave such things at the very end. But why is the master ahead of the lover? I understand, but I don't like it.”

“Your Grace, I don’t understand much of what's happening. You said this is not a dream, but then what do you want from me?”

“I want you.”

“I’m sorry, I still don’t understand.....”

“What dream did you have?”

Duchess Raviel cut off my words abruptly.

‘Even though she's the daughter of the Ivansia family-’

‘I am the only butler of Lady Goldencup-’

‘Considering His Highness favors Lady Goldencup, this treatment is-’

Numerous thoughts tangled in my head.

But none of them resonated in my heart. Like music that lost its rhythm, just wavering. Soon to collapse.

“I don’t remember well. But in the dream.....”

Eventually, the only thing that vibrated in my mouth was an obedient answer to her question.

“In the dream.”

“.....you looked at me and shed tears.”

Yes.

“I was tied to a chair... Perhaps. Tied with something like ropes. I didn't know why I was tied, but only you were there, looking down on me in a splendid room.”

Right before waking up.

I definitely saw such a scene.

“My heart hurt. My chest... pierced by your blade. But, that wasn't all. In the dream, I.....”

“You?”

“.....I felt very guilty towards you.”

“Is that so.”

Duchess Raviel smiled again.

“At least you know how to feel guilty. That is a relief.”

"....."

“Do you know why you had such a dream?”

“No. I don’t know. Not at all....”

“That’s because it is my [trauma].”

Trauma.

“I haven’t mentioned it yet. My mother committed suicide.”

What?

My mind went blank from the shock.

“She killed herself when I was too young to know why. The wife of the Ivansia family. The moon of Ivansia. A person with such power and wealth ending her life is inexplicable. I distinctly remember the words she whispered to me on her last night and how everyone hushed up her death and quietly cremated her.”

This...

This is something I should not know. Something I shouldn't hear. A dreadful secret hidden in the Ivansia family, too grave to be used even as a tool in political battles.

“However.”

Duchess Raviel looked at me.

“That memory is no longer my trauma.”

"....."

“His Highness gave Goldencup a ring of blue coral today.”

One step.

Duchess Raviel stepped towards me.

“In the past life, I despaired over it. Or I was angry. You can say I was jealous and envious. All those feelings filled my heart. I held a sword in a heart full of curses for the world and pressed it against my heart reflected in the mirror.”

There was no sound of footsteps.

Only then did I realize she was barefoot.

“But even that is no longer my trauma.”

Light pressure.

Her foot stepped on one of my shoes.

It was a light and insignificant weight, yet it captured my entire being. I could have stepped back or escaped at any moment, but I was completely caught by her half-hearted weight.

“Even the eternal ten days we repeated.”

Her hand came closer.

“The sight of my world drowned in blood and destroyed. The forms of demons mocking me with my tongue and lips. Everything that once scarred my heart, is no longer my trauma.”

Slender fingers.

“It ceased to be.”

My neck.

“From now on, only you have the exclusive right to hurt my heart.”

Her hands lightly gripped my neck.

“No matter how vicious the curses thrown at me for two days by the most wicked tongue, they are nothing compared to the sighs you carelessly throw at me.”

From pinky to index. From the thinnest to the thickest finger, every pressure she applied was felt.

"The most malicious person in the world could beat and whip me, but that's nothing compared to a single sneer from you. Though countless in this world could kill my body, only you can wound and kill my soul."

I felt suffocated.

“So my trauma is already determined.”

I felt my throat constrict.

“Your Grace.....”

“You fool. I warned you clearly.”

『If you scar my heart, I will kill you.』

“You. You've scarred my heart.”

Warm flesh.

Her red eyes smiled.

“I haven't broken a promise since I was four. Die.”

".....,"

“Die and love me again.”

I.

For some reason, couldn't resist.

[You have died.]

And then.

[Re-enacting the trauma of your killer.]

[The level of penalty is medium.]

[Hungry Ghost Realm.]

A dream within a dream unfolded.

•

•

•

I don't want to kill him.

Looking at the man before her, Raviel Ivansia thought. She didn't want to lose him. She, Raviel Ivansia, felt absurd realizing how possessive she was.

-Lady, think about it. You will come to the exact same conclusion I did. Because you, too, are a Returner like me.

A dangerous man.

Raviel quickly realized what he was planning. He willingly immersed himself in the role of 'Butler', intending to return to 'the butler's perspective' from a day ago.

A strategy that could turn the game board upside down.

'A brilliant idea.'

Truly, a plan striking the weakness of the tower.

'With such a gentle face, how does he come up with such schemes?'

Feeling pleased that the man she loved wasn't stupid. Yes, it was a very pleasant feeling. But still, Raviel Ivansia opposed it.

-But, Gong-ja, it's dangerous.

The reason was clear.

-I won't remember you.

She, Raviel Ivansia, won't remember Kim Gong-Ja.

Even if he returns to a day ago, stopping her from plunging the sword into the mirror, thus preventing the eternal ten days of tragedy, if she doesn't remember him, it's meaningless.

-I don't want to live.

-I want to live with you.

The days spent together.

The fortnight of vacation granted for the first time.

All those memories make who she is now. Without them, she can't be Raviel Ivansia.

Does he understand? That even if he escapes the ten-day maze that way, it wouldn't be a favor to her.

-It's okay.

Maybe he knew.

-I will find a solution.

The way he irritatingly spoke.

-Please trust me.

-.....

Raviel Ivansia fell silent.

Stunned by the severity of his words. Trust me. Trust someone without any reason. She regretted promising to trust him just a few days ago. But Raviel Ivansia was too desperate to linger in paralysis and regret.

‘I trust you.’

She trusts the man she loves. She trusts his competence. He is her chosen man. Her person. Surely, he will convince the tower to return a day earlier.

The real issue is what comes next.

‘How to reverse the immersion that’s risen beyond 90%?’

If he successfully returns a day earlier, he will surely not remember her at first. Even if he does, it would be a faint feeling. It’s impossible to vividly recall the days spent together.

‘.....’

No.

‘Wait.’

There is a way.

Upon realizing this method, Raviel groaned and then groaned again. The saying that all the poisons of the empire come from her heart passed through her mind. It wasn't long. She couldn't afford to linger.

Raviel Ivansia realized she would carry out that method.

‘I,’

Thus, Raviel Ivansia firmly etched into her heart the method she had thought of, the method she would execute.

‘I just have to kill this man.’

Trauma.

He had confessed nearly everything about himself to her. His ability came with a side effect of glimpsing the memories of those who killed him.

‘If I can make [this moment] my trauma.’

He will glimpse [now] at the moment he kills her.

Not his past, but this very moment she is thinking of.

-.....

Then. If only that's possible.

-I can tell him all the things I want to say, the memories I want to give back, everything, once again.

-He will recall it through me.

-Yes.

Raviel was certain of her success.

-Since I became your first bitch, you will become my last bitch..

Gong-Ja

-Really, I've ended up with a bad man as a lover.

Can you hear me?

I am happy because you are here. I don't want to lose you. I don't want to let go of the time we spent together just like this.

You said, "I will start writing a diary from today." You said that to show me every day of your life. Was that a lie?

You said, "I will learn music." You wanted me to listen to your music and enjoy peaceful evenings. Was that wish truly a lie?

I want to see your day. I want to spend the evenings with you. Your day will surely make me smile, and the evenings spent with you will be happy. I want my smile and your happiness to overlap.

I don't want to kill you.

I don't want to lose you.

-Are you okay?

-Yes..... Still, I'm okay..... more.

-More kisses, is that it? My lover is such a spoiled child.

Look at me.

Look at the you who was with me.

You are a foolish person. Naive even. With such naivety, I wonder how you will survive in the world, but then it gets resolved soon enough, considering you died thousands of times.

There are many reasons to discard naivety. Few reasons to keep it. Even with many reasons, you don't discard it, and even with few, you keep it. I call you pure.

I cherish your purity.

-Are you still okay?

-Raviel.

Are you afraid of losing yourself? Scared?

-I love you. I love you, Raviel

-I know.

It's okay.

"Even if I'm reborn, I will love you....."

I am here.

As I trust you, trust me too.

Rely on me.

"So, make sure I never forget you. Even if I die, make sure I never forget you....."

-I understand.

You alone can't protect yourself.

I alone can't protect the world.

But together, you and I, we can do anything.

I am also afraid. I'm scared of killing you.

Approaching you knowing it will hurt me, is terrifyingly scary.

But my fear will not hinder being with you.

Look.

-.....My goodness.

Eventually, you, completely submerged in the role of the butler, speak to me.

"Duchess."

Throbbing.

My chest aches. It's heartbreaking to have you, calling me not as [Lady] but [Duchess].

-Could it be that you've kidnapped me right now?

An incredulous face. Looking at me with doubt, it hurts. It's painful to have you react as if you're seeing me for the first time.

"This is too much. Even for the power of the Ivansia Duchy that covers the sky, this is too much. Do you despise Lady Goldencup so much that you threaten her servant like this?"

Listen.

This is the wound you've left me.

"Gong-Ja."

Don't forget.

".....Whom are you looking for?"

Never. Even in death, don't forget.

"My lover."

The man who gave his heart to me.

"The man to whom I will give my heart."

You are here.

In my heart.

"Go then."

"....."

"I will be waiting for you."

Can you hear me?

Can you hear it?

Gong-Ja.

I am in love with you.

Chapter 110: Her Way of Loving (2)

And Raviel clenched her hand tightly. To kill the man. To infect him with a wound that would last an eternity.

-Ugh, krk, ack...!

The man twisted his body. Raviel's sword pierced deeper, into his heart. The man screamed in agony, his cries ripping through the space that only the two of them occupied.

'I don't want to kill him.'

Raviel bit her lip.

'I don't want to lose him.'

But contrary to her wishes, Raviel plunged the sword in even deeper. She felt every sensation in her hand vividly. The sensations. His chest being torn open. His flesh being cut. His heart being pierced, continuously spewing blood.

All of this became Raviel's wound.

'More.'

Stronger. From this moment on, to etch it as her trauma. So that someday, no matter when, the man she loves would witness this scene.

So when the man was about to spit blood, Raviel stole his lips.

-.....!

A bitter and sticky breath flowed from his heart to her mouth. It was a bloody breath. This was the warmth of my man. This was the blood of my man. This was the heart of my man.

Raviel sealed his lips so not a single drop would escape.

-.....

The man was dying.

Raviel didn't blink. She didn't miss a single moment of her beloved man dying. His face paling, his tremors weakening, his breath fading - each moment was agony for her.

'I don't want to lose him.'

She wanted to scream her lungs out to the world.

'I don't want to lose this man.'

What if this moment doesn't become a trauma? What if all her plans fall through? Then she would forget him, and he would lose her. Nothing would remain.

Raviel was scared.

'More.'

Being afraid of something was a disgrace for someone like her. An insult. Yet Raviel kept repeating the frightening scene. The terrible imagination. She deliberately deepened the wound.

The scene of him failing to convince the tower.

The scene of her forgetting him, living as before.

The scene of them indifferently passing by each other in the corridor.

Layering wound upon wound.

-.....!

And Raviel saw it. His death.

-.....

Raviel understood. This was a residual moment. A brief respite before the man returned. Perhaps in just a few seconds, he would return. She too would be swept up in his time, returning just the same.

Just a few seconds. Merely a few seconds.

But those few seconds felt like an eternity to Raviel.

She slowly moved her lips.

-Gong-Ja?

No answer.

-Gong-Ja.

Ah.

At that very moment, Raviel knew. Yes. This final scene, the absence of an answer.

His lost gaze. His lips, as if they had forgotten how to speak, stopped. This moment, because of this, had become an indelible trauma for Raviel.

Everything became clear.

She had never left a scar worse than this.

-.....

Raviel embraced him. She held his body in her embrace. In these last few seconds, in the final moment, she spent it holding him.

I believe in you.

[Trauma re-enactment complete.]

Just as I believe in you, you will believe in me too, Gong-Ja.

[The target's ego has remained intact.]

So, we can wait for each other.

[Penalty Finalized.]

We will.

[Your immersion rate is currently 98%.]

•

•

•

Strangely, it was hard to open my eyes.

"Butler?"

The Lady Goldencup sitting opposite me was surprised. It was strange. Her face, which always seemed to shine brightly, appeared blurry today.

"What's the matter? Why are you acting like this all of a sudden?"

"Huh?"

"You're crying. Right now."

Only then did I realize that I was crying. I was shocked. Just moments ago, Lady Goldencup and I were chatting idly.

It was just a blink of an eye.

In that instant, tears had fallen.

"Ah...?"

Even more, the tears didn't stop easily.

"Bu-Butler? I'm a bit scared. I don't get scared often, but this is a bit scary. Why are you suddenly crying while talking with me? Did I do something strange again?"

"No... It's... I don't quite understand myself."

"You're crying without any reason? Have you lost your mind? Oh. You're really crying heavily.... What, what should we do? This is the first time our butler has cried like this since I hit him when I was 5...."

"That incident really seems to stick with you for a lifetime, My Lady. If possible, please try to forget it."

"But Butler, even if I forget about being hit when you were 5, you were also hit when you were 6, and when you were 7, and continuously until you were 14, and even now you occasionally get hit, if I forget all that, I might end up with amnesia? In fact, your life has been a series of being hit by me."

Amnesia.

"....."

"Yikes, your crying was just calming down, why are you crying again?! I'm sorry! I'm sorry for only hitting you! I won't hit you anymore. I'll hit you less insultingly from now on. Is that okay?!"

"I think I had a nightmare, Lady..."

"A nightmare? Was I captured by a monster and torn to death?"

"No. A woman was looking at me, crying endlessly... I wanted to wipe away her tears, but I couldn't, and it was very sad."

"I see."

Lady Goldencup looked like she deeply understood.

"That woman was me."

"It definitely wasn't you, Lady... You could never make such a melancholic and noble expression. You're inherently different in atmosphere...."

"Ah. Should I hit you, just like that?"

Lady Goldencup glared at me with narrowed eyes. Normally, I would have bowed my head and said 'I'm sorry,' and then she would reluctantly say 'I'll be generous and understand.'

But I stood up from my chair.

"Butler?"

"I need to go somewhere for a moment."

"Where are you going this late at night? I was about to tell you that I have arranged a dinner appointment with the Crown Prince tomorrow. I was so excited to brag about it. You have a duty to listen to my boasting."

I bowed.

"I'm sorry, Lady. But I must go somewhere."

"....."

Lady Goldencup squinted her eyes. She rested her hands on the back of the chair and stared intently at my face.

"Of course. You have a mind of your own, and with a mind comes thought. But don't come back empty-handed. Stop by the kitchen and steal a muffin or something."

"Tomorrow, the Crown Prince will present you with a ring of blue coral."

Lady Goldencup blinked her eyes.

"What?"

"I shall return shortly."

I walked away.

Behind me, Lady Goldencup shouted, "Butler! Was what you just said true?!" But I ignored her.

"Wait, even if you're going out, at least answer me! Butler, you scoundrel!"

Since coming to the Sormewin Academy, the Lady had become more demure, but her essence remained that of a street boss. She was the one who used to beat up the kids in her hometown.

'My master.'

I hastened my steps.

It was a path I had never tread before, yet my steps felt familiar.

'It's as if I had walked this same path in the past.'

The residence of the Duchess Silver Lily was open. There were no guards. It should have felt odd, but all I thought was 'it seemed likely.' My steps didn't hesitate as I crossed the garden.

The corridor.

"Have you arrived?"

A single point of moonlight.

".....Were you waiting for me?"

"Yes. Today is the [second] time."

Questions and answers without context. A conversation that couldn't be understood touched the night air. Standing behind a full-length mirror, the Duchess Silver Lily was smiling.

"Look into the mirror."

"....."

"What do you see?"

+

■■■

■■■: ■■

■■ [Mar■], Ro■nce], [■■], [■■]

■■ ■■

■■ ■■■: [Master], [Lover], [■■■ ■■], [■■■], [■■■], [■■ild],
[■■], [■■■■■■■■■■■■], [■■■■ ■■■■■], [■■ ■■■■■]

+

".....I see the words 'Mentor' and 'Lover.' Also the word 'ild.'
There seem to be fragments of smaller letters too, but their meaning is hard to discern."

"Call out to me."

"Du..."

I was about to call her 'Duchess,' but I stopped myself.

Even though it was the most respectful title for Raviel.

『Never again call me [Duchess] with those lips 』

『I will gouge out your heart and kill you. 』

A conversation we never had before flashed in my mind. It felt like glimpsing a dream from a past life.

I was confused. It seemed I should never call her 'Duchess,' no matter what.

".....Lady."

“Much better.”

The Duchess Silver Lily approached me. Her red eyes looked at me. Just looking, her lips firmly closed.

『What dream did you have?』

Yet I felt as if the Duchess Silver Lily was speaking to me. As if her sealed lips were moving. It was too vivid to be a hallucination, too clear to be a delusion.

“The Lady... was shedding tears.”

『And?』

“You kept calling out to someone. A man was bound in front of the Lady... I think you were calling him. But I can’t remember the man’s name.”

『And?』

“The Lady was stabbing the man with a knife, in agony.”

It was strange.

Why was I endlessly speaking to someone who was silent?
Why did the Duchess Silver Lily listen to me silently?

It was truly strange.

The strangest part was that my heart didn't find this situation awkward at all.

“You are commendable.”

The Duchess Silver Lily patted my head. 'Commendable.' That word resonated deep in my heart. 'Commendable.' It felt like a phrase I had heard long ago, before I was even born.

I thought I smelled a blue fragrance.

"Look here."

The Duchess Silver Lily took something out of her bosom.

It was a card.

".....What is this?"

"It's proof of your efforts for me. Be proud."

The golden card was densely inscribed with words.

+

[A Certain Returner's Love]

Rank: EX

Effect: For a returner, love is like poison. No matter how much they struggle, they can't share time with the one they love. Thus, a certain returner had a burning desire, 'Let my beloved keep her memories.' This desire reached the tower and was granted.

You share a timeline with your beloved. If your lover goes back a day, you go back a day. If you go back a day, so does your lover. This is the vow of a ring. This is a marriage of time.

May fortune be with both of you.

*However, it only activates when you and your lover mutually love each other.

+

"....."

I was inexplicably speechless.

"To think you would say 'Let my beloved keep her memories'."

The Duchess Silver Lily smiled faintly.

"Receiving a proposal in this manner would be troubling. I like your voice. Understand this. If it's not directly from you, I won't listen. So, come back soon."

A stirring in my heart.

"I will kill you. Again and again. As long as showing you my wounds can bring you back, I will show them to you forever."

“Lady.....”

“So, witness my agony. Look at the scars you left on me. Look again and again. Your traces are there.”

The Duchess Silver Lily stretched her hands and grabbed my neck.

"Know that the only person in this world who can kill you is me."

Gently.

"And the only person who can kill me is you."

And then I saw.

[You have died.]

[Re-enacting the trauma of your killer.]

I saw, and saw again.

[Your immersion rate is currently 97%.]

I saw the Duchess Silver Lily shedding tears.

I saw her killing a man, again and again.

Every time I returned a day, I lived in her dreams.

[You have died.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 96%.]

We loved each other in a past life.

[You have died.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 95%.]

And we will love each other in this life.

Perhaps even in the next.

[Your immersion rate is currently 94%.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 93%.]

[Your immersion rate is currently 92%.]

That I hurt you. That in places I didn't see, in times I couldn't be with you, you shed tears. You cried silently.

If I do not forget those.

If I remember and keep them in my heart.

[Your immersion rate is currently 91%.]

We can love each other forever.

[Your immersion rate is currently 90%.]

And.

And.

And.

I am returning to you.

Opening the door. Crossing the garden. Running down the corridor.

You were born as the rightful daughter of the Ivansia Ducal family. Born to a sad mother, you were destined for a sorrowful life. Before you were born, your betrothed was chosen, and since then, you devoted your life solely to him.

You were a white flower.

You were called the Moon of Ivansia, also known as the Duchess, and more briefly, as the Lady.

"Have you arrived?"

"....."

You stand in the corridor. In the dark night corridor, you were like an island alone in the middle of the ocean. The endless sea surrounded you. I listened to its waves.

Not as the Duchess of Ivansia, not as Lady Silver Lily.

"Raviel."

The white flower smiles.

"I was waiting for you, Gong-Ja."

I am...

In love with you.

Chapter 111: Her Way of Loving (3)

I rushed in and embraced her.

“Raviel.”

Numerous words swirled in my mouth.

I could have said [I'm sorry].

Sorry for leaving an indelible wound on you.

I am truly sorry.

Maybe I could have said [Thank you].

Thankful for believing in me, for waiting for me, and above all, for loving me.

For loving someone like me.

But the words I wanted to utter were neither an apology nor gratitude. It wasn't the first time I apologized to her, nor was it the first time I expressed gratitude.

At this moment.

On this night when we met again, I didn't want to offer apologies or thanks.

‘Words I’ve never said before.’

I wanted to tell her something that could only be given once. A language that I could only speak once in my life. My first. My last. I wanted to dedicate my time to Raviel Ivansia.

So. Therefore, for that reason.

I took Raviel's hand.

“Let's get married.”

A marriage proposal.

"....."

Raviel slowly nodded her head.

“I am known by many names. His Majesty the Emperor called me Silver Lily. In the empire, I dedicated myself as the Duchess Ivansia. However, my name, Raviel, will always remain vacant just to be called by you.”

We kissed.

Deeply.

The two of us woke up at dawn.

The window was pale blue color.

As I turned my head to the sound of breathing, Raviel was silently looking at me.

"....."

"....."

I, too, silently looked at Raviel and moved my hand to clasp hers. Cool fingers entwined with mine. Beautiful person. We shared breaths, intertwined our fingers, and pressed our foreheads together.

"Raviel is a genius."

It was dawn. At this hour of dawn, every encounter becomes a clandestine meeting, every whisper a secret word. Thus, those who spend the dawn together are lovers.

I whispered.

“You’re incredible. To use my trauma in reverse to transfer memories to me... Truly, you are amazing. I would never have thought of such a method.”

“You have a way of sanctifying others’ pain.”

Raviel’s touch grazed my earlobe.

“You are equally remarkable. How did you ever persuade the tower? To all the Constellations, the tower is like an untouchable administrator. I knew you had a sweet tongue, but to persuade the tower is something else.”

“Hmm. Actually, I don’t quite remember. It comes back to me vaguely like a dream. Perhaps after meeting the tower’s higher-ups, a veil falls over your memory.”

“That doesn’t change in the fact that you succeeded. My lover is quite capable.”

“And my lover is a genius.”

“An undeniable truth.”

We rubbed our foreheads together.

Astonishing each other.

No hint of vanity or pretense.

This fact made me endlessly happy.

“When shall we marry?”

“Are you in a hurry?”

“That tone sounds a bit unfair.”

Raviel chuckled softly. It was thrilling. Static electricity rose from my spine to my head. No music was as beautiful as the sound of Raviel's soft laugh.

“The first step is to break off the engagement with His Highness the Crown Prince.”

“Ah.”

Indeed.

Raviel nodded.

“His Highness and I are bound by an engagement. Marrying you under these circumstances would be legally troublesome.”

“Hmm, actually, I'm fine with a non-legal marriage. Just a small ceremony for the two of us would be enough.”

“No. It matters to me.”

Raviel stroked my cheek.

“This is the world I live in. The empire is the nation I serve and care for. If it's my world and my country, then they must recognize my marriage. Even if you are a commoner here, as my lover, all citizens of the empire should bless you.”

“Oh. But it might be difficult to expect such a reaction from people...”

“It’s alright, Gong-Ja.”

Raviel was calm.

“Any citizen who doesn’t bless us will die by my hand.”

What should I do? She’s too cool. I fell for her again. I want to keep falling.

“Alright. Let's have the wedding in Raviel's world. But I have a condition too.”

“Speak.”

“You must be the one to break off the engagement with the Crown Prince. If I hear anyone talk behind my back about you, I won’t be able to forgive them.”

If there’s someone pointing a finger at my lover, I’ll crush that finger. If someone badmouths her, I’ll cut off their tongue.

If someone slanders her, I'll kill them.

This is no joke.

I'll show them hell.

“It must be clear to everyone that the Crown Prince is at fault.”

“Oh? Are you asking me to insult the foundation of the empire? Me, the heir of the Ivansia ducal family, who works in the shadows for the nation?”

“Yes.”

“That's easy.”

The two of us shared a moment of kissing.

Life became a bit richer.

“Do you have a plan?”

“Of course. Who are you asking? Every time His Highness has a secret meeting with Goldencup, a document gets added to my library drawer. Hundreds of such documents have been collected. Alibis and witnesses are all prepared. It’s a guaranteed win in court.”

What should I do? She’s too cool. I fell for her again. I want to keep falling.

“Of course, there’s no need to really go to court. The royal family wouldn’t want such a matter discussed. I just need to bring the evidence and request an audience with His Majesty.”

“When do you plan to go to the palace?”

“As soon as possible.”

Raviel quietly brushed my bangs.

“Gong-Ja. Once we’re married, you’ll be the consort of the Ivansia ducal house. The royal family will bestow a title on you. And I will become your matriarch.”

My heart raced.

“In public, I will address you as my consort. You will call me your matriarch. Is that alright?”

“It's a hierarchical society. Raviel is the head of the Ivansia family. I'm just a foreigner. Don't worry. I will abide by the laws of the empire. I don't mind any of that.....”

“I'm glad to hear that. I thought you'd be fine with it. So, try calling me matriarch as a test.”

I hesitated.

“Why? Are you embarrassed?”

“.....”

“You're embarrassed. I knew it. Let me show you first.”

Raviel smiled with her eyes.

“Consort.”

My heart.

"....."

I swallowed. Saliva stuck thickly in my throat. As I slowly opened my mouth, it didn't work well. My upper lip slipped against my lower lip several times before I could barely make a sound.

“.....Ma... triarch.”

Raviel blinked.

Silence descended.

My lover's red eyes stared straight at me. How should I put it? It was like seeing the soles of a hedgehog's feet for the first time. In short, I couldn't figure out her expression.

“Gong-Ja.”

“Yes.”

“Say it once more.”

".....,Matriarch?"

“Once more.”

Uh.

“Matriarch.....?”

Raviel’s eyelashes trembled slightly. Her shoulders shrank a bit.

‘What kind of reaction is this?’

At first, I didn’t notice due to Raviel's impassive face, but then I realized. Could it be? Maybe? Possibly. I thought it impossible even if the world fell apart.

“Raviel. Are you embarrassed right now?”

“Hmm...”

Raviel let out a soft moan.

“You’re incredibly adorable. My man.....”

Embarrassment spread instantly. Insane.

My face flushed red, and my lips dried. But my mind was still spinning. Now would be the perfect time to retort with [But Raviel, you are the cutest in the world]. I could return the damage I’ve received from Raviel. But I couldn’t do it. I felt too embarrassed.

Instead, I decided to compromise.

“Matriarch.”

An exchange of affection rather than a unilateral attack. A draw with neither winner nor loser. Did Raviel catch on to my tactic? She also opened her lips.

“.....Consort.”

“Matriarch.”

“Consort.”

“Matriarch!”

“Consort.....”

“I love you.”

“I love you too.”

“My matriarch.....”

“My consort.”

That scene replayed endlessly.

When I came to my senses, dawn had turned to morning.

-Damn it. That damn bastard...

Guardian Spirit grumbled, turning his back to me. In his own way, he was respecting our privacy.

-Damn couple. Crazy lovebirds. Pair of lunatics. Shii-it, when you were immersed in being a butler and lost your senses, how desperately did I call out to you? Huh? Right after regaining consciousness, not a word of thanks to me, just thumping hearts with your lover? Huh? Do I look that easy? Really, should I just achieve Nirvana now? Huh?

[Shiny offers words of consolation to the Sword Emperor.]

-Ah, now you're all I have left, Shiny!

A ghost and a sword forged a mysterious friendship.

‘I’m sorry and thankful to you guys too.’

But for now, I just want to love my love a bit more.

In the midst of love, I revisited the objective of this stage.

[Prevent the destruction of this world.]

The primary cause of this world's destruction was my matriarch's artifact, the fragments of the holy sword and the runaway wishes.

‘In other words, if I retrieve the fragments of the holy sword, the risk of this world being destroyed by demons will disappear.’

But that wasn't the only reason leading to this world's destruction.

-Apostle of 'Ruin-Harvesting Cow'.

-Apostle of 'Warhorse of the Eternal Plains'.

-Apostle of 'The Immortal Missionary of Happiness'.

Beings from other realms descending through the torn sky on the last day.

I clearly remember the invasion of apostles sent by other Constellations.

'They will surely come.'

The fact that the stage clear message hasn't appeared yet was proof enough.

'My matriarch had awakened as a half-Constellation by embedding the fragment of the holy sword in her heart.'

In other words, a Constellation is a representative of a world, a barrier protecting it.

This meant that this world had about half a barrier.

But now, my matriarch hadn't embedded the holy sword in her heart, thus there was no awakening as a Constellation.

In the truest sense, there was no Constellation in this world right now.

“I’ll set the wedding date for a month from now.”

A month from now.

“That’s exactly ten days after the point I possessed this body.”

“That's right. I deliberately chose that date.”

My matriarch had intentionally set the day of the world's destruction as our wedding date. To negate the time of the world's end and make it our starting point.

How splendid.

“It's going to be quite a struggle. Everything needs to go smoothly for the wedding to happen a month from now.”

“What kind of things need to be resolved?”

“First is breaking off the engagement with the Crown Prince. Second is my succession of my father's title.”

Raviel spoke as if it were obvious.

“It's difficult to marry you as a lady. There would be legal complications, and the social circles would be abuzz if I brought in a commoner as my betrothed. Annoying. It's better for me to become a duke and receive you as my consort. As the head of the family, I can handle many things my way.”

“Uh...”

I was at a loss for words.

“Raviel. I still have some memories of being a butler. Isn't it quite difficult for an heir to ascend as the head of the family? Especially for Ivansia. The noble and great Ivansia family. Just because Raviel wishes it doesn't mean you can easily succeed the dukedom...”

“That's true. If I weren't Raviel Ivansia, it would have been difficult.”

Raviel spoke calmly.

“But I am Raviel Ivansia.”

What should I do? She's too cool. I fell for her again. I want to keep falling.

“My family's vassals have already sworn allegiance to me. I hold the military power. If my father still doesn't want to relinquish power, he has no choice but to plead with His Majesty.”

Thud.

Raviel placed a stack of documents on the table.

“I have more than enough evidence of His Highness's infidelity. His Majesty is as competent as his special forces. He will choose to protect the dignity of the royal family rather than keeping loyalty to my powerless father.”

“That sounds like a loyal statement, but Raviel. That’s basically blackmailing His Majesty with a weakness, isn’t it...?”

“Consort.”

Raviel looked at me seriously. The word consort made me flinch.

We both deliberately used the terms [consort] and [matriarch] when alone to get used to them.

“Yes, matriarch.”

“You have a job in the tower, not in this world. I will understand if you don’t return to our empire often, just as you understand why I can’t give up my nobility.”

It sounds like I’m a husband working abroad...

“But there are times when you must be with me. End-of-year events, New Year’s events, things like that. And events involving a duke’s couple are always political. You will become the moon of Ivansia and, except for the empress, the most revered consort in the empire. You should become somewhat versed in politics.”

Hmm. So.

“Loyalty to His Majesty and blackmailing the royal family can coexist. Becoming the head of the ducal family won’t be detrimental to the empire. Rather, it’s fortunate to welcome a noble as capable as you, matriarch.”

“My consort knows two things for every one thing taught. Capable, smart, and cool.”

“Of course. I am Raviel’s man.”

“I love you.”

“I love you too.”

The two of us shared a moment of kissing.

Life became a bit richer.

-Shiii-it...

For some reason, the ghost's face became increasingly gaunt.

-Who is it? Who taught this lunatic about love? Who labeled his craziness and afflictions as love?... Why does he love? If he had not loved, I could have still been happy...

[Shiny sadly points out the Sword Emperor.]

-I should have killed him. I should have...

And so, we became busy.

For the best happy ending--- no.

For the best wedding.

Chapter 112: Holy War (1)

Romance Fantasy Rule 999

『Love needs no norms.』

Sometimes in life, you unexpectedly receive a gift.

“Lady Goldencup. I have something urgent to tell you.”

“Heh, it’s been a while since you called me [Lady Goldencup] instead of [Lady]. Every time you do, something ominous happens. Let me guess what it is this time.”

Baroness Goldencup slowly lifted her teacup.

The epitome of elegance.

“Do I have a hidden half-sister?”

“No.”

“I see. So, my mother was actually an illegitimate child of the previous emperor, meaning I too have royal blood? And my love for His Highness the Crown Prince is forbidden?”

“No.”

“Or do I have a hidden half-sister and a hidden lineage, making me the perfect protagonist of an incredible story?”

“No.”

“Then what is it, you son of a bitch?”

“I’m getting married soon.”

“Oh. Marriage, huh. Marriage---.”

Pffft!

Baroness Goldencup spat out her tea. Mostly on my face.

Elegance was nowhere to be found.

“Marriage?!”

“Yes.”

“Marriiiiage?!”

“That’s correct.”

“If this is a joke, it’s a very low one, butler! Do you want to get hit after a long time?!”

“It’s not a joke.”

I wiped my face with a handkerchief.

“Why would I joke about such a thing with you, Lady? I’m really getting married. There’s no use trying to stop me. The wedding date is already set for a month from now.”

“Who, who’s the bride?”

“Lady Silver Lily.”

“Ah, see. It was a lie after all.”

Baroness Goldencup sighed in relief.

A face relieved as if, even if the world ended, there was no chance of Raviel and I getting married. Well, that’s a normal reaction, I guess.

“You think it’s a lie?”

“Yes. Not just a lie, a blatant lie. If you’re going to deceive me, at least come up with a more plausible lie. You fail in the creativity department.”

“What if it’s true? Would you give your blessing to my marriage?”

“Ahaha. Sure, sure. I’ll gladly give my blessing, Butler. If it’s true, that is. To think that my butler is betrothed to the most noble family in the empire, that’s a huge benefit for me personally, right? Our family’s status will leap six steps at once?”

“Please stamp here.”

"Huh?"

I presented a document I had prepared earlier.

“What is this, butler?”

“When I marry Lady Raviel Ivansia, as your butler, I will be released from serving under you. I will become the consort of the Ivansia family.”

"Pfft!"

Baroness Goldencup burst into laughter, clutching her belly.

“The consort of the Ivansia family... Hah! What’s that? A joke? Comedy? Our butler is going to be called [Lady of the Ivansia Duke]? Just imagining it is damn hilarious. It’s more plausible for me to become the empress of the empire.”

As she laughed, Baroness Goldencup showed a different kind of smile.

“Well, that’s how it will be this time.”

Hmm.

I recalled the summary I read before entering this apocalypse.

‘The second-cycle heroine.’

Reflecting on everything up to now – the identity of Goldencup, the Heretic Inquisitor yet to possess her, and more – I buried these thoughts for a moment.

“Will you stamp it, please?”

Baroness Goldencup laughed again.

“Oh, gladly. This will add to the butler's dark history. As a generous master, I can't ignore such hilarious content.”

“Thank you. Then I'll bring the future matriarch tomorrow.”

“Sure. Yeah. Lady of the Ivansia Duke. The second brightest moon of the empire. Do enjoy playing with your imaginary matriarch.”

The next day.

I stood before Baroness Goldencup with Raviel.

“I've brought her, Lady.”

"....."

Baroness Goldencup's mouth dropped open.

“I assume you know, but allow me to introduce myself once more.”

Raviel, flipping her fan, said,

“I am the legitimate daughter and heir of the Ivansia Ducal family, Raviel Ivansia. I have received the title of Silver Lily from His Majesty.”

“Uh? Ah. Yes, of course, I know. Lady...?”

“I am fortunate to be betrothed to your butler. The butler is bound to you. Without your permission, our marriage would be difficult, but you’ve graciously granted it. I’m grateful.”

“Yes.....?”

“This is the wedding invitation.”

Raviel tossed the letter. Its border was adorned with silver threads. In the center, a red wax seal stamped with the Ivansia family crest. Baroness Goldencup, stunned, received the letter.

“Be happy. You’re the first to receive this invitation. I hope you regard it as a great honor. Well, it’s a modest gift for taking care of the butler until now.”

“Bu-butler.....? This is a joke, right.....?”

“How rude. From today, this man is no longer your butler, but my fiancé. I trust you don’t think the Ivansia family’s status is lower than your baronial house. From now on, treat my fiancé with proper respect.”

“Du, du, duke’s... consort.....?”

Baroness Goldencup stared at me with a lost expression. Her eyes pleaded for me to deny the title she just uttered.

I bowed politely.

“It was an honor to serve you, Lady.”

"....."

"But from now on, please call me consort. Respectfully."

"....."

"Shall we go? Raviel."

"Heh. I told you to call me matriarch in front of others."

"Ah, my apologies, matriarch. I'm still not used to the title..."

"My consort is quite mischievous. I love that too about you."

"I love you."

We left side by side.

Shortly after, a distant scream echoed behind us.

“What is this noooooo-?!”

In the spring when magnolias wither.

The wedding was approaching.

My lover, Raviel Ivansia, is a woman of her word.

If Raviel says she will have a wedding in a month, there will indeed be a wedding in a month.

“I’ve placed my father under house arrest in the villa.”

Raviel casually mentioned it.

“There are still some who follow my father in the family, but they are a minority. Ignorable. I’ve negotiated with His Majesty and formally received recognition for my succession, so I am essentially the Ivansia Duke. No longer Lady Silver Lily, but Duke Silver Lily.”

“Uh...”

Suddenly, my father-in-law was under house arrest.

‘Is this really okay?’

Feeling an uncomfortable sense of impropriety towards my father-in-law whom I never met, Raviel looked at me.

“Now you are officially the fiancé of the Ivansia Duke. You’ve become the mistress of the second highest-ranking family after the royal family.”

"....."

“Except for His Majesty, the Empress, and the Crown Prince, there’s no one you need to bow to first. At least not in this empire. Regardless of their status, all citizens of the empire must bow to you. In places where the royal family is not present, you deserve the highest honor.”

Raviel was serious.

Only after hearing her words did I realize that [something very big] was happening.

Until now, I approached our wedding out of love for Raviel. That love was sweet. Romantic. But for Raviel, marriage was more than just romance.

Sensing the enormity of that something, I spoke.

“But I am merely a commoner...”

“Of course, the rabble of high society will whisper. Gong-Ja. Your origin is like the uncomfortable hem of a dress, following you wherever you go. But the maximum measures have been taken.”

Measures.

“What kind of measures?”

“You will first be registered as the adopted son of the royal chief butler.”

Raviel handed me a document.

“The current chief butler has long served the royal family. He’s been granted a noble title, his personal life is clean, and his honor is high. Most importantly, he has no children. You will become the adopted son of this old chief butler and elevate your status.”

My goodness.

Really, my goodness.

“Can... can we do that?”

“We can. If I wish it.”

Even now, Raviel was busy processing mountains of documents. Her quill moved ceaselessly. What these documents were and what political impact they would have, I couldn’t even guess.

“All cumbersome procedures have been bypassed. Just sign the document. Then you will be officially recognized as the adopted son of the royal chief butler.”

"....."

Indeed.

The marriage was reality.

My father-in-law, whom I had never met, was under house arrest. I also became the adopted son of someone I had never met. Something was happening beyond my knowledge.

As I signed the adoption papers, I belatedly realized.

[Being the husband of the Ivansia Duke] was an immensely significant matter.

This was vividly proven in a scene I encountered a few days later.

"I offer my greetings to the person who will become the empire's second brightest moon."

Just walking around the academy, young ladies and gentlemen who recognized me kneeled. Their respect was impeccable. The news had already spread throughout the academy.

“I offer my respects to the mistress of Ivansia.”

“Ah. Yes...”

“Congratulations on your betrothal. May everlasting glory be with Ivansia.”

“Th-thank you.”

Whenever I walked by, the young ladies and gentlemen stopped their chatter and what they were doing. They respectfully maintained silence until I passed. The academy's guards and knights saluted me respectfully.

There were no exceptions.

Even the academy's teachers naturally bowed.

"....."

When I ranked third in the tower, when I became a star surrounded by crowds... I had never felt like this.

‘This is, class.’

Not a star. Not a celebrity. They didn’t surround me or raise their smartphones to capture my face.

They just kneeled.

‘...Amazing.’

Perhaps people behaved like this only in my presence.

As soon as I disappeared, all sorts of nasty rumors and vile gossip about my humble origin, about the abrupt end to the Crown Prince and Raviel’s engagement, would circulate.

But no one dared to mutter in front of me.

“Eek!”

Crash!

One day, a servant in the academy accidentally broke a water bottle while I was passing by. Unthinkingly about to say [Are you okay?], I stopped as six servants simultaneously kneeled.

“We a-apologize!”

“We have committed a grave sin!”

“Please forgive us for our foolish mistake!”

I was speechless.

Not because I was overwhelmed for another reason.

The fact that they naturally sought my forgiveness. The fact that I had the right to [forgive them] paralyzed my thoughts.

In other words, it was also within my right to not forgive and punish them.

"....."

This was madness.

An insane situation.

-What's wrong? This is natural.

Guardian Spirit floated in the air, swimming leisurely.

-It's strange that your tower doesn't have nominal classes or ranks. Didn't you know? You'd realize if you went up to the 50th floor, most towers have class societies.

I remembered something about competing with other worlds' towers beyond the 50th floor.

Guardian Spirit flicked his ear and blew on his finger.

-Your matriarch's Ivansia family is one of the most powerful families here, second only to the royal family. So, you're practically the queen.

Queen.

-Congratulations on becoming Cinderella. You rascal.

The servants remained prostrated in the corridor, trembling.

Suddenly, Raviel's words came to mind.

『All citizens of the empire must bless you.』

『If it's my world and my country, they should rightfully recognize my marriage.』

That's exactly what it meant.

In just a few days, I had reached the top of the pyramid.

I had ascended to the pinnacle of power.

‘This is... Raviel’s world.’

Then.

‘How should I behave?’

Not just as [Kim Gong-Ja].

Not as the Hunter with the alias [King of Death].

But as the [spouse] of the most noble aristocrat in this country.

"....."

I bent down.

And picked up the fragments of the broken water bottle.

I placed them gently on the palm of the servant who made the mistake.

“Turn this fragment into a necklace and wear it.”

I spoke.

“The necklace is the ornament closest to the heart. Keep your mistake close to your heart, to reflect and repent on your own.”

"....."

“Don’t wait for my forgiveness. When you think you’ve sufficiently reflected, forgive yourself. Understand?”

“Yes, yes...!”

I turned and walked away.

That evening, Raviel said,

“You showed thoughtful handling today, consort.”

I was slicing meat with a knife and fork, learning table manners. To ensure I could watch and learn sufficiently, Raviel deliberately moved her hands slowly across from me.

“Yes. Uh. Did I do well?”

“Exceptionally well. Had you easily forgiven at that moment, they would have said, [He’s too lenient with inferiors due to his humble origins. How can he lead the duke’s family with such attitude?]. Had you been stern, they would’ve said, [He’s become arrogant overnight due to his sudden rise].”

Either way, it was a loss.

“To be criticized whether you forgive or scold. At such times, the essence of the incident is not important. The packaging is. You created a beautiful story and skillfully wrapped up the incident.”

Raviel smiled.

“Today’s event has already spread in the empire’s high society. Those purely curious will admire your heart, and the shrewd will acknowledge your wisdom. I thought you were a novice in politics, but what magic did my lover use?"

"...I just thought of Raviel."

My knife sliced through an egg yolk.

The color of a young chick crumbled.

"Somewhere I can't see, somewhere I don't know, I realized you're running around tremendously."

"Hmm."

"As you think of me so earnestly, naturally, I also started thinking of you."

I simply thought from Raviel's perspective.

『How should I behave to be the best for my wife?』

“Had I forgiven the servant, I would’ve been regarded as a generous duchess. Had I scolded, I would’ve been a strict duchess. But being perceived as [a wise consort] would be the most helpful for Raviel.”

“Why?”

“Me being generous doesn’t make Raviel generous. Me being strict doesn’t make Raviel strict.”

The candle on the table flickered.

“But if I’m wise, Raviel becomes wise too. Because choosing [a wise spouse] itself means Raviel is wise.”

"....."

Raviel wiped her lips with a white napkin.

“You thought of me.”

“Yes.”

“Gong-Ja. You have already helped me. Though others may not know, you have saved this world from destruction. And you will continue to do so. Can't you be a bit more whimsical?”

“No.”

I shook my head firmly.

“I’ll spend my lifetime with Raviel. A lifetime. I don’t want to fixate on [what I have done for Raviel]. I don’t even want to think about it. I want to give you more, something more precious than I have ever given before.”

"....."

“I hope that meeting me will be the greatest fortune in Raviel’s life. I hope being with me will be the greatest happiness. I want to be the most significant meaning only to you, Raviel.”

“It’s not just fortune or happiness.”

Raviel stood up from the table.

She slowly approached me and bent down.

“You are a miracle to me.”

Our lips met.

Of course, not everyone succumbed to the name of Ivansia.

“I! Oppose! This marriage!”

Baroness Goldencup came to me every day to complain. With the Crown Prince summoned by the emperor, she dared not confront Raviel directly and only protested to me.

“Didn’t you already stamp the document?”

“It’s invalid, invalid! I stamped it thinking it was a joke!”

“Regardless of your thoughts, the document is legally perfect.”

“Uh... Ugh!”

Baroness Goldencup bit her fingertips.

“This is strange. It wasn’t like this last time... Is it a butterfly effect caused by me? No, that doesn’t seem right... Ah, Ruin-Harvesting Cow, what is this...?”

Ruin-Harvesting Cow.

I tilted my head as if hearing the keyword for the first time.

“What do you mean?”

“...Nothing!”

Baroness Goldencup clenched her teeth.

"Fine. Anyway, this must be another scheme by Lady Silver Lily!"

“It’s Duke Silver Lily. Soon to be a duke. Please maintain respect.”

“Eek. Butler, I really hate you! I will never forgive you!”

Baroness Goldencup glared at me and left the room. The door slammed shut, rattling its hinges. It was an open declaration of not accepting this marriage. Probably, Baroness Goldencup would be the biggest obstacle to the wedding.

But I wasn’t worried at all.

Ten days before the wedding.

“Gong-Ja!”

Someone dressed like Baroness Goldencup burst in.

“It seems I have become the protagonist of this apocalypse!”

I smiled, still seated.

“Heretic Inquisitor.”

“Yes! Gong-Ja!”

“In ten days, the apostles of otherworldly constellations will invade.”

Speaking to my ally who turned from the greatest obstacle to the best supporter.

"Please prepare for the Holy War, SSS-Class Clergy."

Chapter 113: Holy War (2)

The Heretic Inquisitor.

A bearer of an alias. A so-called first-generation Hunter who has been active since the early days of the tower's establishment. A psychopathic blonde who decisively hunted down extremists in various countries, in regions without established nations, and in areas where nations had collapsed, stabilizing the tower amidst the influx of countless people.

“I interpret constellations as deities of other worlds!”

Now, recognized as a specialist in the Pantheon of Religions, managing all religions on Earth under the 'Temple of the Omnipotent God,' the Heretic Inquisitor smiled broadly.

“A deity, simply put, is a law! For instance, in our world, Earth, there's the law of physics! This law of physics is like a basic Windows operating system installed everywhere, so it's nothing special! That's why there's nothing particularly special about our world!”

Huh.

“But we have nuclear weapons and guns, right?”

“As I said, the law of physics is a basic foundation installed everywhere! Thus, those two could potentially emerge in any world if technology develops sufficiently!”

However, the Heretic Inquisitor noted, in worlds where magic and miracles are commonplace, purely physics-based technological development might be challenging. Nonetheless, it doesn't mean that nuclear weapons and guns couldn't be invented in other worlds.

‘Indeed, there were apocalypses that perished in nuclear wars. Our 23rd floor, the Chronicles of the Space Iron Knight, was also SF....’

So, is Earth among the weakest of worlds?

It made sense that magic and skills weren't commonplace before the tower emerged, but it still felt odd to hear that our home planet, Earth, was weak. Is this a sense of patriotism? Or should I call it love for one's star?

“But as you mentioned, guns and nuclear weapons are indeed powerful weapons! Unleashing them could defeat most of the apostles of constellations!”

“Indeed.”

Raviel tapped her lips with the tip of her fan.

“So, as physical laws are fundamentally the base, physical force is also fundamentally applicable.”

“A precise understanding! Physical entities that don’t exist or can’t exert physical force are naturally powerless. And if they possess a physical form, physical attacks are logically effective! The efficiency issue remains, whether they fully absorb the physical force or mitigate it!”

The floating Sword Emperor let out a small exclamation.

-Heh, that guy’s smart.

‘Does it sound right to you, Sword Emperor?’

-Yeah. That's why Constellation Killer shattered auras with a flash of light, and why I managed fine just practicing swordsmanship. And that girl controlling the Black Dragon Guild, she could obliterate Preta with a beam. Physical force is a powerful law.

[Shiny nods with a gloomy expression.]

-Depending on how much one adheres to or deviates from this law of physics, the rank of the respective constellation is determined.

That sounded intriguing, but the Heretic Inquisitor elaborated just in time.

“This ‘mitigating physical force’ part I just mentioned is surprisingly important! It means following physical laws, yet not being completely bound by them! And how that's possible is---”

“---the constellations each have their own laws, and their apostles oppose physical laws with these unique laws of their own.”

“Wow! As expected, the wisdom of the King of Death's spouse is immaculate!”

“Of course.”

My spouse charmingly uttered those loving words. Just that made me confident that Raviel was illuminating this little tactical meeting.

-Gong-Ja, focus? This is the moment that decides whether this world survives or not.

[Shiny leaps up and smacks the back of the warrior's neck.]

Whoa.

Such pitiful fellows who don't understand love.

-Ah, stop the nonsense, zombie.

[Shiny looks at the warrior with eyes like a rotten fish.]

‘But Shiny, you don't have eyes.’

[Shiny indicates the gemstone on its sheath.]

Following its cue, I looked at Shiny's sheath decoration, where the color of the gemstone had faintly changed.

Hmm.

‘Got it, I’ll be careful.’

-Focus.

‘Yes.’

1. Each constellation has its own laws.

2. Apostles also follow those laws.

“What kind of laws do they have?”

“Hmm! For example, there's a constellation called Baravit.”

The Heretic Inquisitor added, known as the ‘God of Love.’

“This constellation interprets [everything in the world as romance]. In a world governed by Baravit, power and wealth are meaningless! One’s strength is determined by how strong their romantic power is.”

“Romantic power? What is that?”

“Hmm! Seeing is believing.”

The Heretic Inquisitor formed hand seals.

“Holy Technique, God of Desire.”

Paat!

Light spread from the Heretic Inquisitor’s hands. Not just white light, but a slightly dense, pinkish... fragrance-like mist wafted around.

“Ah, now I’ve temporarily invoked the domain of Baravit here! Please, take any action, King of Death!”

"Um..."

I looked around awkwardly. It was late at night. The three of us – the Heretic Inquisitor, Raviel, and I – were in the duke's residence, planning a strategy for the upcoming invasion in ten days.

"...Except for the pink mist, nothing much seems different?"

“Excuse me for a moment!”

That's when the Heretic Inquisitor tripped me. As I stumbled, saying "Uh?" and started to fall, I accidentally grabbed Raviel's arm, saying "Uh."

“Uh-oh?” We both fell to the floor.

“Oho.”

Raviel looked down at me intently. I ended up on top of her.

It all happened in an instant.

“Gong-Ja. Such affectionate behavior in front of others is inappropriate.”

“Uh. Uh...”

I was flustered.

“No, no! Not that, Raviel! I was just about to fall...”

“Ahaha.”

The Heretic Inquisitor chuckled.

“A typical scene from a romance!”

“Heretic Inquisitor, this is...?”

“In God Baravit's domain, every action leads to romance!

Even falling isn't just falling, but pulling someone nearby. Um. For example, if the King of Death was wearing a shirt and drinking water, there's a 95% chance of spilling it and revealing his undershirt! The ensuing heart flutter of those around is inevitable!"

Good heavens. What is that? Cosmic horror?

"Domains reinterpret the world and brainwash people. The Great Library we were just in does the same! The Head Librarian interprets the world as a [collection of stories], and there, we are [characters in a story]."

Paat.

The Heretic Inquisitor formed seals again, and the pink mist blanketing the floor disappeared. I blushed and got off Raviel.

The Heretic Inquisitor beamed and said.

"Defeating those who possess their own laws with laws we can use. I define this as a Holy War and a Star War!"

A Holy War and a Star War.

“Then, how should we act in the Holy War happening in ten days?”

“That depends on which constellations we are facing! As you can infer from what I've said, the method of dealing varies based on the laws of the respective constellations!”

“Certainly. Knowing the enemy before the war is of utmost importance.”

Raviel, with her fan's tip on her lips, nodded in agreement.

“Yes! So, who exactly are the apostles of the constellations invading in ten days?”

Hmm.

“If I tell you their constellations, will you recognize them?”

“If you give their true names, I can! I can check with my skill, [Temple of the Omnipotent God]!”

Remembering this young man... or rather, currently possessing the body of Goldencup, this woman's... anyway, recalling information about this person, I thought:

‘It was around the time we were fighting Preta on the 13th floor.’

When I was busy throwing around prophecies as a prophet, the Heretic Inquisitor, though relying on skill, was well-versed in religions of other worlds, as mentioned by the Black Dragon Witch.

Alright.

“Can you infer their true names from their epithets?”

“If they are famous enough, yes!”

Then, it's clear.

“[Ruin-Harvesting Cow], [Warhorse of the Eternal Plains], [The Immortal Missionary of Happiness].”

"Hmm."

The Heretic Inquisitor pondered.

“[Ruin-Harvesting Cow] is Mutia. Mainly governing the areas of [Destruction] and [Recreation]. Simple but powerful.”

Destruction and recreation.

“How do they fight?”

“Let's see. They can exercise physical force very powerfully, at will! Either flattening a wide area or disassembling the physical structure of a specific entity, or, oh, creating golems through disassembly and reassembly. It's rare, but some exercise their power over time as well! Time itself is physical, after all!”

So, Goldencup's 'second-round protagonist' trait was due to Mutia's power.

An apostle of an outer constellation was already in this world.

‘Did the Holed-Up Head Librarian choose this world as an apocalypse because of that?’

In the style of the Holed-Up Head Librarian, did he ‘intervene’ because it wasn’t their story but one already tampered with by an outer constellation? Or was it simply Speaking in the style of the Holed-Up Head Librarian, was it because this wasn’t their story but one already tampered with by an outer constellation, allowing them to ‘intervene’? Or was it simply because, as Raviel said, there were no constellations in this world?

‘It seems more likely the former, considering the Head Librarian’s tendencies.’

While pondering this, the Heretic Inquisitor continued.

“[Warhorse of the Eternal Plains] is the epithet for Mahos. Mainly overseeing the realms of [Duel] and [War]. Although straightforward, these powers are formidable!”

Duel and war.

“So, it becomes impossible to refuse a duel challenge?”

“Yes! Or it could widely spread a battle frenzy that fears no death, or gain wisdom in tactics and strategy! Ah, inversely, ‘banning war itself’ to forcibly create a peace zone is also possible! This is quite rare, though!”

“A warlord overseeing peace... sounds a bit odd.”

Hearing my mutter, Raviel smiled slightly.

“What's so odd about it? Peace is merely a state where [war has ceased]. Therefore, those who can enforce war can naturally enforce peace as well.”

“Indeed, a precise understanding!”

The Heretic Inquisitor beamed brightly.

“[The Immortal Missionary of Happiness], I don't know their true name. Seems they are not famous enough yet!”

An unknown entity.

‘Not being famous could mean they are weaker, which might be an advantage for us?’

Lost in thought, Shiny trembled.

[Shiny requests to ask about 'Goddess of Protection' as well.]

‘Shiny... you should focus on the meeting...’

[Shiny insists it's a crucial matter!]

‘Why are you like this...’

[Shiny declares it's solely to verify the accuracy of the Heretic Inquisitor's knowledge of constellations, with no personal interest!]

Hmm.

“This might be a bit off-topic, but do you know anything about the [Goddess of Protection]?”

“Oh ho.”

The Heretic Inquisitor grinned.

“[Goddess of Protection] is the epithet for Hwiya! Mainly overseeing the realms of [Protection] and [Immortality]. Quite a powerful deity, but currently, according to my skill [Temple of the Omnipotent God], they have lost much of their power.”

[Shiny sparkles, indicating that the Heretic Inquisitor can be trusted!]

“Gong-Ja, why is your sword doing that? It's dazzling.”

“Just a moment, I'll soothe it...”

[Shiny cries out, asking to be left alone.]

Anyway, with the former constellation Shiny confirming (to me) the accuracy of the Heretic Inquisitor's information, Raviel tapped her chin with her fan.

“Troublesome... Different types of enemies, one of each kind. Three in total, huh.”

“Depending on which divine power of the deity the apostle can borrow, it becomes even more complex!”

“Yet, we can grasp the general tendencies. Thank you for sharing the information.”

“Ahaha, saving this world is also a benefit to our tower! Naturally, it's efficient to help!”

“Is that so.”

“Yes! And my other skill [Holy Technique] can almost borrow the power of a deity whose true name I know! Adding your strengths, a way will surely emerge!”

Our strengths.

Raviel and I looked at each other and simultaneously opened our lips.

“It’s love.”

“Love indeed.”

There might be many who are better at fighting or smarter than us, but there is one thing we are certain of – our depth of love is unmatched.

“.....Huh?”

The Heretic Inquisitor tilted his head.

“It’s strange. Seeing you two being sweet together makes my heart feel tender and tingly. It’s a sensation I’ve never felt before. What could it be?”

“Angina pectoris.”

“The immersion rate is increasing! How should I interpret

this?”

“No... First, be cautious about that immersion rate thing.”

It would be a catastrophe if Goldencup consumes the Heretic Inquisitor before the Holy War.

Knowing what I had already explained, Raviel also understood. She said,

“The ‘love’ we just mentioned has another meaning beyond the typical one.”

“What might that be?”

“Sorry, but we can't share that. It's sort of a secret weapon.”

“Hmm, it's difficult to incorporate it into the strategy...”

“No worries. Let's discuss basic tactics and strategy instead. As a ruler of this world, I can deploy substantial security forces to the wedding venue. For instance, I could borrow the Special Forces from His Majesty the Emperor...”

“Oh ho. How powerful are these Special Forces...”

Thus, Raviel and the Heretic Inquisitor continued their discussion.

‘It’s possible.’

Once rivals in love, now these two, though one of them has changed content, were harmoniously resolving to fight together. It brought an inexplicable sense of optimism to me.

‘This will definitely work!’

Just as I was affirming my conviction, the Guardian Spirit threw cold water on it.

-Gong-Ja, snap out of it. Three apostles invading isn’t a trivial matter.

‘How serious is it?’

-Think of it as about 1.5 Pretas from the 12th floor attacking.

What a bizarre unit of measurement.

‘Preta was a constellation, wasn’t it? The ones invading now are apostles. Wouldn’t apostles be weaker than constellations?’

-Lowest rank constellation. Maybe about a D-rank in your tower’s terms?

‘Preta from the 12th floor?’

-That’s right, Preta from the 12th floor.

As the Guardian Spirit idly picked at its ear, it said,

-Well, I’m not worried because it’s you. Or should I say, ‘you two’.

The Guardian Spirit glanced at Raviel, obviously guessing the ‘secret weapon’ Raviel mentioned.

I felt the same. Thus, I didn't think we couldn't overcome this invasion.

However.

-But you want to clear this with zero casualties, right?

‘Yes, that’s right.’

-Then you really need to think hard. Leave the tactical part to that smarty-pants and your spouse, and you focus on improving your personal combat skills.

Having said that, the Guardian Spirit crossed its arms, looking down at me.

-Hmm. Your rank was D, wasn't it? You don't plan to stay at that rank forever, do you?

Of course not.

And like a bolt, ten days flew by.

“The wedding day is finally here!”

In the empire, weddings are held in the evening.

Weddings symbolize the union of the sun and the moon. The evening sky, where the two celestial bodies blend, is considered perfect for weddings. The more vivid and red the sunset, the better the day for a wedding, and today was one of those days.

“You look so handsome today, the Duke’s Consort!”

I was surrounded by servants, experiencing an unusual feeling.

Five servants, like beetles sticking close, coordinated my outfit. They incessantly praised, “How can someone be so handsome!”

“The duke is so lucky!”

It almost muddled my mind.

“Thank you for all the help, but could you please tone down the fuss a bit...?”

“No, not at all!”

The servants resolutely responded.

“At least for today, you must be the most handsome groom in the country! Even if modesty and humility are virtues, you should not hold back today! Today is literally the day where beauty alone is the virtue!”

Ah, I’ve felt this before....

Just like when the Black Dragon Witch and the giant guild masters were fussing about taking my photo...

Of course, there were differences from that time.

“Congratulations on your wedding, Duke’s Consort.”

A distinguished gentleman with a well-groomed beard entered the dressing room and greeted me. I was puzzled, not recognizing who he was. Seeing my expression, the gentleman gave a bitter smile.

“I am your foster father. I hold a minor position in the royal court, managing the household. I’ve heard a lot about you from the new Duke of the Ivanisia family.”

“Ah...”

Good heavens. The man I wondered about turned out to be my foster father, whom I had never met before!

“I-I’m meeting you for the first time. Um, that is...”

“Please feel free to call me father. Don’t worry. I understand that you don’t regard me as a father in your heart. I assure you, I will never exploit your influence to disrupt the Duke’s house.”

The gentleman bowed very respectfully.

“After this wedding, I plan to retire. Your spouse has shown me great consideration. Haha. There's no need to worry about my retirement anymore."

"....."

A sigh escaped me. How much effort had Raviel put into this day?

For the first time in my life, I uttered this word.

".....Father."

"Yes, the moon of Ivanisia."

"I'm not well-versed in social circles or politics. I'm curious, what do the citizens of the empire say about this wedding?"

"In a word, it's a series of shocks."

The gentleman spoke gracefully.

“A wedding of the Ivanisia family is almost a national marriage. Preparing such an event in just a month's time is extraordinarily difficult. Let alone breaking off the engagement with the Crown Prince, inheriting the family title, either way...”

At that moment, the gentleman paused. The noise outside the dressing room had grown louder. The guests were buzzing.

“...if it wasn't for Duke Ivanisia persuading His Majesty the Emperor, it would have been impossible.”

The gentleman stroked his beard, smiling faintly.

"Duke's Consort. Your spouse is truly capable. The mere fact that she pledges loyalty to His Majesty is an unparalleled blessing for the empire. Although the bond of father and son formed today is just for a day... If I may say something.”

At that moment, the old gentleman narrowed his eyes.

Simultaneously, an intense aura, almost comparable to that of a Sword Saint, emanated from the old man's body.

"Considering that your spouse has also requested my 'other position' and the security arrangements at the wedding venue, it seems today's marriage won't go smoothly."

The Royal Head Butler.

The Head of the Royal Special Forces said this just as the commotion outside the dressing room turned into screams.

-Gong-Ja, get ready.

I looked out the window.

-They have arrived.

As the Guardian Spirit had said.

[The Apostle of 'Ruin-Harvesting Cow' manifests.]

[The Apostle of 'Warhorse of the Eternal Plains' manifests.]

[The Apostle of 'The Immortal Missionary of Happiness' manifests.]

The sky, where two celestial bodies mingled, turned red.

As the sunset crumbled away, the awaited enemies revealed themselves.

Chapter 114: Holy War (3)

The wedding venue had become a cauldron of chaos.

“Kyaaaaaak!”

“Oh God, what on earth is that...”

As the twilight sky faded, a rift opened.

The red sky cracked like a pane of glass, shattering with a sharp sound. Through the cracks, blood seemed to drip down. Enhancing my vision with Aura, I looked up at the sky.

[The Apostle of 'Ruin-Harvesting Cow' manifests.]

There was a girl wielding a giant hammer, and

[The Apostle of 'Warhorse of the Eternal Plains' manifests.]

a general riding a fluttering Pegasus, and children holding hands and dancing a strange dance.

[The Apostle of 'The Immortal Missionary of Happiness' manifests.]

“My goodness...”

The wedding guests, shocked and astonished, gazed at these beings. The mere fact that the red sky had cracked was unbelievable, let alone that mysterious beings had emerged from it.

Only three of us were ready to fight.

“They have appeared.”

Raviel, myself, and the Heretic Inquisitor were prepared to confront them. Among us, Raviel was the one in command.

“Special Forces, gather and protect the guests! Those belonging to the Dragon Squad, assemble at one place! My retainers, guide the guests to safety!”

My bride, Raviel Ivansia, a duchess of the empire, yelled to the disarrayed guests, particularly targeting the retainers of the Ducal House. People flinched.

A call by name.

The act of being named has a curious power to awaken one from confusion. When the person uttering this magic is the second-most noble in the empire, its effect is undeniable.

“The Blue Lion Knights, form up!”

“Duchess, what are those things...”

“Cast aside such questions. Focus and pay attention to the enemies’ movements. You are the leaders of the empire. If you plan to disgrace yourself in front of me, surrender your titles! Do you understand?”

“Yes, we do!”

Raviel swiftly organized the venue. Even the military and nobility, who normally wouldn't fall under her command, obeyed her orders.

Instinctively, they understood. Although they didn't know why the evening sky had shattered or why mysterious Apostles had appeared, they realized that following Raviel Ivansia's voice was the only way to navigate through this crisis.

“Can we figure out their abilities?”

After issuing a series of commands, Raviel spoke to the Heretic Inquisitor.

“Yes! Just give me a moment!”

The Heretic Inquisitor formed a hand seal, emitting a bright light. The light shot up into the sky, instantly scanning the otherworldly Apostles.

"Hmm. Analysis complete! First, the lady with the giant hammer is---."

However, the Heretic Inquisitor couldn't finish his sentence.

Perhaps provoked by the beam he had shot, the hammer-wielding Apostle leaped down from the sky.

The Apostle, with her blonde hair fluttering, swung down her massive hammer.

Kooooom!

The ground literally turned upside down. People screamed.

The wind pressure from the hammer swing alone created a whirlwind. Red and white flowers, brought from the southern empire for the wedding decoration, were thrown into disarray. Amidst the fluttering flowers, the Apostle's eyes blazed red.

-Raviel Ivansia!

Those eyes and voice were familiar.

-I will leave you nothing!

Surprisingly, the Apostle looked exactly like Baroness

Goldencup.

“That’s... Baroness Goldencup...?”

“What is that appearance?”

The guests voiced their confusion. Even if not as famous as my bride, Goldencup was well-known. Many recognized her face. Some gasped in shock, looking back and forth between the Apostle and the Heretic Inquisitor.

"Hm."

The Heretic Inquisitor muttered under his breath, “This isn’t good.”

“That’s probably the true body of Baroness Goldencup.”

“True body?”

“In simple terms, her soul has been pawned to a devil. She has given up her powers, appearance, memories, everything in exchange for borrowing the power of the Constellation! Ahaha. It seems that lady had a wish she was willing to sacrifice everything for. Quite interesting....”

The subject of the Heretic Inquisitor’s interest was wildly swinging her hammer.

Whooooosh!

The wind pressure from the hammer blows caused people to fly off. At least the warriors, gritting their teeth, managed to stand their ground. They were still in shock, but they realized one thing – the Goldencup look-alike was not on their side.

"Block her!"

"Protect the guests!"

"Respond as instructed!"

The clear emergence of an ‘enemy’ unified the ‘allies’. The empire’s finest warriors, invited as guests and hired for security by Raviel for this day, drew their swords and charged. Coordinated movements. A joint attack by the elite.

Goldencup scoffed.

-Yes. It's better than giving everything to Raviel Ivansia.

Dozens of warriors lunged at her simultaneously.

-I'll destroy everything.

Dozens of blades, infused with Aura, shot towards her simultaneously, only to be repelled with a clang! The blades were blocked by Goldencup's skin.

"What...?!"

Shocked groans were heard from all around. Goldencup remained unscathed. Even those who didn't hesitate to strike again were futile. All blades were stopped by her skin. At most, the Auras scorched her clothes.

-Ruin-Harvesting Cow, bless me!

Goldencup hammered down.

-Allow me your favor!

Crack! The hammer crushed a warrior like a watermelon. Blood splattered. Before the blood droplets could hit the ground, Goldencup swung her hammer again.

"Wait just a---"

Another warrior's head was smashed to pieces. Blood burst forth. The slaughter continued unabated. As their comrades died, the warriors desperately tried to find a chink in Goldencup's armor, but no blade left a mark on her.

"Everyone be careful!"

The Heretic Inquisitor shouted.

"She is enveloped in one of Mutia's blessings, [The Invulnerable Body]! As the name implies, she doesn't get injured. Ahaha. To be precise, [it reduces physical harm to her by 99.9%]!"

An invulnerable body.

"At least a blow capable of demolishing a peak is required to inflict any meaningful damage on her! Do your best!"

-Raviel Ivansiaaaa!

The warriors panicked. Among them was the old gentleman, who had become my foster father for the day, the Head Butler and Captain of the Royal Special Forces.

The old man, holding the position of the empire's strongest, said incredulously.

"Demolish a peak? Who could possibly do such an absurd thing?"

"That's true. It's a difficult task. But if you don't, you'll die!"

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled beautifully. If his smile could be captured and framed, it might make everyone forget that people were being crushed to death by a hammer right now. A crazy psychopath.

"This one alone is a monster."

Raviel sighed.

“And another one is coming.”

My bride was right. The Apostle, Goldencup's soul or true body, was just one of the enemies we had to face. And perhaps she was the easiest one.

-Pitiable beings.

The crimson twilight.

The general on the Pegasus descended slowly, back to the sky.

-Blame that pitiable girl. Blame the original soul that resides in her, blame that young man. Because of them, you are trampled under our hooves. You all should grieve.

The general looked at Goldencup, the Heretic Inquisitor, and finally at me. His expression was indiscernible under the thick helmet.

-Warriors following the warhorse.

The general raised the flag high. A point of the red twilight soaked into it.

-Awaken.

That was the moment. Ghostly figures began to appear around the general. Tens, hundreds, thousands, perhaps even tens of thousands of transparent ghosts.

-Grroooooar....

-Moan, groan....

Everyone was speechless.

Even when Goldencup swung her hammer, even when people were torn apart, the guests still kept their wits. They resisted. They fought back. But the army of tens of thousands that emerged from the blood-red sky.

Was on a different scale.

"Run..."

Someone whispered hoarsely.

"Run away!"

The same words were shouted by another.

-Charge.

The general cut off their murmurs and shouts with a single command.

-Roarrrrr!

-Screech, shriek!

Countless ghosts poured out. They wore ancient armor, like warriors from an old era. However, their spears were not outdated. Thud! A guest trying to escape was impaled in the back.

“Please, save us!”

“Kyaaak!”

A massacre.

Guests bled and fell. Their blood spilled, staining the white flowers red. What was supposed to be the most splendid wedding venue in the empire turned into the most brutal hell.

“...Heretic Inquisitor.”

I spoke, my voice chillingly cold.

“What are the Apostle's abilities?”

“I’ve just finished analyzing. Hm. One of Mahos's blessings, [Sanctuary of Battle], is activated.”

The Heretic Inquisitor spoke while forming hand seals. Like the character window visible only to me, he seemed to have texts visible only to him.

“[Sanctuary of Battle] is an area effect. It impacts the entire vicinity. The effect is remarkable: [It fixes the abilities of the summoned ones to their prime during their lifetime]. Each of those ghosts is an elite among elites, the souls of warriors who followed Mahos!”

“...It's not enough.”

Raviel put down her fan.

“There's too much difference in numbers. Mutia's Apostle has an ability that makes her unbeatable in one-on-one combat, while Mahos's Apostle is too advantageous in group combat. We're in a tight spot.”

-Lo.

And then.

-Lu, lo, la. La.

The last Apostle began to move.

-La

-Lulu, la. Lala. Lu.

-Lululu. Lala. La. La.

The child-shaped Apostles sang a song. Their voices, originating from the sky, resonated down to the earth. The children, dancing in a circle as if playing a game, intensified their song as the dance sped up.

-La.

-Lu, la. Lala.

Thud.

Guests fleeing from the ghosts suddenly collapsed. Not just one or two. Thud, thud. Like puppets with their strings cut, people lost consciousness and fell where they stood.

"Oh."

The Heretic Inquisitor quickly formed a hand seal. Light leaked from his hands, enveloping Raviel and me.

“Ahaha, this is really bad! Hm. It’s a kind of mental attack. Exposure to that song forces you into [your happiest memory]. Unless you have exceptionally strong mental fortitude, you can’t resist it!”

.....

An Apostle immune to physical attacks with a hammer.

An Apostle specialized in group combat on a warhorse.

An Apostle tormenting minds with happiness.

“...Seriously. They're formidable in their own ways.”

“Yes! If it were only an Apostle specialized in one-on-one combat, there might be a way to counter. Even if forced into group combat, there's a method to respond. If it's a mental attack, forming a small elite group with strong mental power would work. But facing three types of battles at once, ahaha. That's extremely difficult!"

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled broadly.

"Gong-Ja."

"Yes."

"Can I believe that you will win?"

The wedding venue was already fading into the twilight.

The sky echoed endlessly with song. On the ground, the dead slaughtered the living.

And then.

Crash!

The last resisting Captain of the Special Forces had his head crushed.

With the old man's head under her foot, the Apostle Goldencup fiercely glared at us.

-Raviel Ivansia!

.....

Raviel was dressed in a black gown. At a glance, it looked more like mourning attire than a wedding dress. But this was the empire's tradition.

The one to become the head of the family after marriage wears black. The one who does not wears white. Hence, Raviel wore a black dress, and I wore a white tuxedo.

“Gong-Ja.”

Raviel turned to me.

“I should have said this earlier.”

“Yes.”

“That tuxedo suits you very well.”

.....

I smiled. The Apostles of the Constellations had invaded. All the guests had been slaughtered. Yet at this moment, Raviel complimented my wedding attire. It meant she did not accept 'this ending' as 'the end.'

Yes.

We will never give up on our wedding.

“Raviel is the most beautiful in the universe too.”

I took my bride's hand. The soft touch of her lace glove was palpable.

Boom!

Heavy footsteps approached. Probably Goldencup running towards us. Soon, the giant hammer would crush us. Feeling the earth shake, I said,

“We made a promise to each other. Without Raviel's permission, I will never commit suicide. Even in a moment of death, I will accept it only after trying my best.”

“That's right.”

“Please permit me to die now.”

Raviel smiled.

“I permit you.”

A single word. That was all it took to make me invincible, a word from the one I love.

-Raviel Ivansiaaaa!

As Goldencup swung her hammer, I shielded Raviel.

To die even 0.1 seconds before her.

Raviel, realizing my intention, willingly allowed me to cover her. We interlocked our fingers. Soon, the giant hammer crashed down on me.

[You have died.]

The same death as always.

[Re-enacting the trauma of your killer.]

The same scene as always.

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

But.

This was not the usual return.

“Gong-Ja.”

When I opened my eyes, there was Raviel, holding my hand. We instantly understood upon seeing each other. There was no need to explain what we had experienced. We shared 'the same time.'

Just as we did before death, upon returning to life, we were still holding hands.

She and I were no longer lonely returnees.

“Let's establish a strategy.”

Together, we were invincible.

Chapter 115: The Black Wedding (1)

-O God.

-Help me.

A girl prayed, and it was granted.

Thus.

-O God.

-Help us.

A boy, as her butler and childhood friend, who had always stood by the girl, prayed, and it too was granted.

"We need to change the arrangement of the wedding venue."

Raviel whispered.

"Now that we know where the Apostles will appear, we can strategically place the Special Forces and warriors there."

Preparing for the wedding, I realized that enormous power is granted to the bride and groom. We can arrange the guests at the wedding venue as we wish.

If we wanted, we could even place feuding nobles at the same table. Sure, it would damage our reputation, but what does that matter? Defeating the Apostles of the other world is our priority.

'If only I could have taken their blessings as well...'

Regrettably, my skill, [I Want to Become Just Like You], couldn't copy Goldencup's blessings.

-Zombie, I told you. The Tower is brutally logical in strange ways.

Delighted that I couldn't cheat, the Sword Emperor was grinning.

-You're already receiving several [Blessings], right? Like when fighting with Preta, and even now, with the Blessing of the God of Beauty, and so on.

'Yes, yes. Those are treated separately from my own skills.'

-Exactly. They're technically 'buff effects given by the Constellation using their own skills.' Since that's how they work, what can you do? If you're upset, go invade the Constellation who put the buff on you and get killed by them.

'Got it, got it. Anyway.'

I grumbled. All these mechanisms sounded like a computer game, but what was before us was not a game, but reality.

The Heretic Inquisitor thrust that reality at us.

"If there's an Apostle skilled in mental attacks, we must drastically reduce the number of guests! Especially if the Apostle's blessing involves recreating [one's happiest memory]!”

Candles flickered, casting light on the Heretic Inquisitor's face.

At night.

The three of us gathered in the toilette room, brainstorming. The wedding venue layout and guest list were spread out on the table. Raviel's toilette room had transformed into our secret strategy room.

“The most deadly poison in the world never causes pain. It brings happiness! Not many can escape the poison of happiness spread by [The Immortal Missionary of Happiness]!”

“...The problem is this.”

Raviel lightly tapped the guest list with her slender finger.

“The smaller the number of guests, the harder it becomes to confront the Apostle of [Warhorse of the Eternal Plains]. This Apostle summons an army of nearly 10,000. If we increase the number, we fall to mental attacks; if we decrease, we get crushed by sheer numbers.”

“Hm. A valid point. It's indeed difficult...”

The two were lost in thought as the candle burnt down.

"Leave that to me.”

I spoke up.

Both turned to look at me.

“Do you have a good idea, Gong-Ja?”

“Yes.”

I nodded and explained my plan. As I spoke, Raviel's and the Heretic Inquisitor's expressions changed.

“...Indeed.”

Raviel was impressed.

“My consort truly has extensive connections. If we follow your plan, there will be no problem.”

Just as I respected her without pretense, Raviel praised me without hesitation. I felt a bit shy.

“However, there’s one condition.”

“What is it?”

“Allow me to wear black, Raviel.”

.....

Raviel pursed her lips.

In the empire, only the person who will become the head of the family can wear black on their wedding day. It's not a color meant for the Duke Consort. Yet, I had to wear black.

“Not because I suddenly want to play the role of the head of the family. It's just...”

“No need to explain. I've known since my previous life that you're not the kind of person who craves power.”

Raviel shook her head.

“It was just the empire's customs and traditions that concerned me. And I can't ignore my consort's wishes because of tradition. Hm. I'll prepare the clothes for you.”

“Thank you.”

Our three gazes met, and we nodded in unison. By coincidence, at the exact moment we nodded, the candle on the table flickered.

Everything was ready.

Evening approached.

Renowned nobles of the empire began arriving at the venue.

The wedding was announced and prepared in just over a month. Despite its hasty arrangement, no noble dared refuse an invitation to the Ivansia marriage. Regardless of their private criticisms, they had to smile outwardly.

Power was everything.

“...The arrangement of the venue is unusual.”

The nobles, upon entering the venue, tilted their heads in confusion. It was understandable to hold the ceremony outdoors, not in a temple. A marriage between nobility and commoners was unlikely to be blessed.

However.

“Why are the warriors gathered in one place?”

The butler, my foster father, asked in the groom's dressing room.

“Moreover, this arrangement seems to be as if we’re preparing for battle. Capable people are placed at the front, and ordinary nobles at the back.”

“I’m not sure what you mean.”

Surrounded by attendants, I casually replied. The old man chuckled.

“It looks like you’ve pushed the useless trash to the back and gathered only the useful ones at the front. I hope it's not rude to say that?”

“Whatever the Duke plans, I’m sure.”

“You, too, are wearing a sword on your waist.”

“Yes. I enjoy practicing martial arts and training. Wouldn’t it be shameful if the person to become the Moon of Ivansia appeared weak? Besides, some troublemakers might disrupt the wedding. We must be prepared for anything.”

“Indeed. Preparing for unforeseeable situations...”

The old man smirked.

“I understand. I’ll also tell my colleagues to be prepared for any [unforeseeable] situations. Oh, what a thing. To think that his Highness the Duke chose me to be your foster father for this reason...”

He greeted me and left the dressing room, probably to instruct his Special Forces to prepare for battle.

It was all a provoked reaction.

‘The more people who remain calm in unexpected situations, the better.’

Raviel had already been moving people behind the scenes.

[There are dissidents displeased with the marriage planning a terrorist attack.]

Such rumors were subtly spread. Not everyone believed them, but nobles are psychologically astute. Even planting a seed of caution would be effective.

“Aaaah!”

The effect came sooner than expected.

‘They’ve come.’

I shook off the attendants and rushed out of the dressing room.

At the same time, a voice, probably only audible to the Heretic Inquisitor and me, echoed.

[The Apostle of ‘Ruin-Harvesting Cow’ manifests.]

[The Apostle of ‘Warhorse of the Eternal Plains’ manifests.]

[The Apostle of ‘The Immortal Missionary of Happiness’ manifests.]

The same sunset unfolded. The sky cracked, and through the shattered pieces, the trio of Apostles appeared.

“My God, what on earth...”

The guests rose in astonishment. Their shock was the same, but their posture had changed. The warriors instinctively grouped together, gripping their swords, while the non-combatant nobles glanced around, ready to flee.

And.

“Heretic Inquisitor!”

Above all, my actions had changed.

“Yes, Gong-Ja!”

The Heretic Inquisitor, who had been waiting in front of the dressing room, responded.

“I will ride on Gong-Ja’s back now!”

“Okay!”

“Holy Technique, God of Teleportation!”

It was the first time I realized the Heretic Inquisitor was a psychopath. The moment when the Demon King of Autumn Rain and the Goddess of Protection put us to the test, causing our separation. It was the Holy Technique he used then.

The effect was instant teleportation.

-What?

The destination was the blood-red sky.

-What's this?!

Right behind Goldencup, the Apostle. I caught her off guard.

Goldencup turned around in confusion. Clash! My holy sword clashed with her hammer. The gravity of the high altitude pressed down on me. I felt my body fall vertically and shouted.

“One more time!”

“Ahaha! Yes! Holy Technique, God of Teleportation!”

The Heretic Inquisitor joyfully exclaimed. The next moment, we were again right behind Goldencup. I swung my sword powerfully at her now-exposed back.

-Ugh!

Goldencup barely managed to block my attack again. But the two unexpected ambushes had a fatal effect. Her posture was disrupted.

Whoosh!

Originally planning to be formidable in the air, she began to fall helplessly.

-Whatever tricks you’ve used, they’re useless!

Goldencup shouted, her golden hair in disarray from the fall.

-My body is invincible! Now nothing can wound me! I am unbeatable! The Ruin-Harvesting Cow has gifted me a body that cannot be hurt!

“Did you sell your soul to the Apostle because you didn’t want to get hurt!”

-What’s it to you!

Goldencup lashed out in rage.

-Everyone only sees Raviel Ivansia! That infuriating woman! She just got lucky with her lineage, yet she acts as if she understands all the world's sorrows! I’ll kill her! I’ll take away everything she has!

Raw and filthy desires.

But I, for one, did not scorn Goldencup. No matter how much one pretends or disguises, in the end, it’s the blatant desires that drive humans. I knew because I had been there.

However.

“You should have realized there are far worse people than you in the world! Baroness Goldencup!”

Thus, I could shout these words.

I gripped the hilt of my holy sword tighter.

“People know the pain they’ve endured! That’s why when they see others in agony and screaming, they can imagine how lonely that pain is and feel compassion! It’s not about your background! Everyone who screams in agony is my fellow being!”

-Ha, what nonsense! Who would live such a life!

Goldencup sneered. The wind pressure surged. She was falling through the air, looking up at me.

-You can’t hurt me anyway! I am indomitable, indestructible, and have an immortal body!

Yes.

If words could change people, they would have changed long ago. Words are powerless. To help those in agony, force is needed. That's precisely why the doctrine of shadows arms itself.

“Shiny!”

[Shiny responds to the call of the hero.]

“Transform the Sword of Idol into the Sword of Pity!”

It was the moment I commanded.

[Yes, hero.]

Black corruption flowed from the holy sword. Gurggle! The sacred blade was quickly tainted with murky black.

Her ability was simple yet powerful.

『She is enveloped in one of Mutia's blessings, [The Invulnerable Body].』

『As the name implies, she doesn't get injured.』

But I had a way to counter it.

『My ability is pain.』

The sword I acquired in my master's world.

『Those cut by it will feel pain.』

『But never bear a wound, nor will it lead to death.』

『Pain without injury is the essence of my power.』

The second ability possessed by the Goddess of Protection.

That was pity.

“Silvia Evanair!”

I called Goldencup by her real name and slashed down with my sword.

“I will kill you now!”

-Ha.

Goldencup scoffed. She seemed to have no intention of dodging my strike. Her expression dared me to try and stab her. Absolute confidence in the blessing she received supported her.

-Go ahead and try to kill me....

Goldencup couldn't finish her sentence.

Instead, a scream tore through.

-Aaaaahhh!!

My sword's tip pierced precisely her heart. No wound was created. The blade seemed to pass through her chest invisibly. No blood gushed.

-But... Ah...?

However, pain was present.

-Aaaahh! Aaaaahhh!!

Her scream ripped through the blood-red sky. Falling like a shooting star, Goldencup agonizingly wailed. Her voice spread through the wind and filled the evening sky.

“Heretic Inquisitor!”

We were plummeting to the ground. The ground rapidly approached. I stabbed Goldencup's heart again.

Just before we hit the ground.

“Now!”

“Holy Technique, God of Teleportation!”

The Heretic Inquisitor shouted eagerly. He repeated the Holy Technique several times. Flash! Pop! With each teleportation, our falling speed decreased. In the final moment, we landed gently on the ground. We had escaped the fall.

But Goldencup did not.

Boom!

It was as if a small meteor had hit the ground. The earth shook, and dust billowed. Unlike the previous round, Goldencup’s fall had turned into a crash. No one was hurt by the hammer swing.

-Heek, hick... Wh-what...?

Only an Apostle convulsing in pain from being stabbed in the heart remained.

I gripped my sword again.

“Does it hurt?”

I slowly walked towards Goldencup.

"It must hurt."

Hearing my footsteps, Goldencup flinched. Whimpering, she clumsily got up.

-Help, help me!

Goldencup didn't listen to me. She frantically called for help. Towards the evening sky. Towards another Constellation's servant.

-You have a contract! A deal! If you just stand by and watch me like this, even Mutia won't tolerate it! Your Constellation won't be pleased either!

-Hmm.

The general riding the Pegasus spoke.

-Strange. Not a Constellation, but a fragment of one. How on earth did you obtain such an artifact? It's utterly baffling.

The general slowly raised his flag.

-The necessity to subjugate a hindrance remains unchanged. Warriors following the Warhorse, awaken.

And then, the summoning unfolded.

-The onslaught begins!

Hundreds, thousands of ghosts appeared. Reflected in the red sunset, the ghosts looked like blood-soaked murderers. Cries of terror erupted throughout the wedding venue.

The opponent's power was absolute.

『[Sanctuary of Battle] is an area effect. It impacts the entire vicinity.』

『The effect is remarkable: [It fixes the abilities of the summoned ones to their prime during their lifetime]. Each of those ghosts is an elite among elites, the souls of warriors who followed Mahos!』

But I had a countermeasure.

"Gong-Ja."

Raviel, who had approached behind me, spoke. Turning around, I saw her holding something in both hands.

"Put this on."

It was a black cloak.

Raviel wrapped the cloak around me, covering my white tuxedo with black. The black fabric was embroidered with the Ivansia family crest in silver thread.

Even as the army of ghosts approached, Raviel confidently finished draping the cloak on me.

"Hmm."

She examined my attire and nodded in approval.

"The cloak suits you well."

"Thank you for fulfilling my request. But, I had to insist on this."

"I understand. End it as you wish."

"I will."

I smiled and turned around.

A vast number of ghosts were rushing towards us.

"[Sanctuary of Battle] is an area effect. It impacts the entire vicinity."

"It fixes the abilities of the summoned ones to their prime during their lifetime."

"It impacts the entire area."

I slowly raised the blackened sword.

Then I declared.

"Ghoul Reincarnation."

Shadows spread beneath my feet like dusk.

[Activating skill.]

It was evening.

The sky was dyed red with the sunset, and the horizon was shrouded in darkness.

-What...!

The general, leading the charge atop the Pegasus, hesitated. The following ghosts halted too. Their confident assault, thinking they could easily slaughter us, was blocked by the shadow engulfing the ground.

"My lord."

One of the shadows spoke.

"Have you summoned me?"

Preta kneeled on one knee.

Her appearance was different from usual. No longer in the slender form of Ester, she was covered in dark red mud, continuously flowing from her. She was the very image of the Autumn Rain Demon King I had faced before.

"It fixes the abilities of the summoned ones to their prime during their lifetime."

But Preta wasn't alone.

Behind her, martial artists clad in dark robes stood. They had different faces, origins, and lives, but they were united in black.

"We serve the Vice-lord of the Demonic Heaven!"

Those who became proof of my life.

I spoke, cloaked in black.

"Fight for me."

The followers of the shadow doctrine bowed in unison.

"We heed the Vice-lord's command!"

The moment to start the war had arrived.

Chapter 116: The Black Wedding (2)

Shadows covered the earth.

Each person, donning a black robe, faced the halted army of ghosts without a hint of surprise. They had lived and died in a world overrun by zombies.

For them, ghosts could not be a source of fear.

"Today, the Vice-lord looks exceptionally grand."

Hell Ghost Demon spoke leisurely. The top of the Four Demon Lords of the Demonic Cult, a follower who once faced the Head Monk of Shaolin in the final Great Orthodox-Demonic War.

"Even applying makeup, as if you're heading to your own wedding."

I nodded.

"It is indeed a wedding."

"...What?"

A thousand followers turned their heads in unison. These were martial artists in their prime, each enhanced with Ki to hear my words.

I announced to them.

"Today, I am getting married."

Silence fell.

The followers exchanged glances, then looked back at me, trying to discern if I was serious or joking. I simply nodded in response to their unspoken inquiries.

"Our Vice-lord,"

Hell Ghost Demon opened her mouth.

"Our Vice-lord is getting married!"

The followers erupted in excitement.

"Our Vice-lord is marrying!"

"The supreme authority of the Demonic Heaven is tying the knot!"

"Not an engagement, a real wedding!"

They forgot the ghostly army in front of them, causing an uproar. The news of my marriage seemed an urgent matter they must announce to the world.

"Who is the bride?"

"Over there."

I gestured gracefully with both hands.

"That lady over there with silver hair will be my wife."

Raviel was soothing the panicked citizens of the Empire at that moment.

Her cool and dignified profile as always.

Following my gesture, the followers' jaws dropped.

"She's beautiful..."

"Yes, quite pretty."

"Our Vice-lord has high standards."

"Vice-lord! How strong is the lady's Ki?"

Someone, true to a martial artist's nature, inquired about her combat strength.

"Um. My fiancée does not practice martial arts."

The followers' eyes widened. Soon, murmurs of discontent spread. Their eyes held a rebellious spirit, seemingly unable to accept this marriage.

"But, being the counterpart of the leader of the Demonic Heaven..."

"She doesn't know martial arts at all? That's a bit..."

"Well, authority comes from strength..."

"The Blood Ghost Troop cannot acknowledge this marriage!"

I added more.

"I forgot to mention. My spouse is second in power in this country, next to the Emperor."

The followers murmured amongst themselves.

"Then it's a different story..."

"People aren't obliged to learn martial arts from birth, right?"

"Right, authority stems from power..."

"Congratulations on your marriage, Vice-lord!"

Such simple-minded folks.

However, not everyone among them was a follower. Preta, once feared as the Demon King of Autumn Rain, had been gaping ever since hearing about my marriage.

"You're getting married, lord?"

"Yes. That's the plan."

"Impossible. Someone like you, a total... Ah, my apologies, lord. I mean, someone as unique as you found someone willing to marry you?"

Preta, you...

Externally obedient, but you thought of me as a lunatic inside....

Feeling slightly hurt, I sighed.

"Yes, it really happened. I'll share the details at the reception. But for now, let's focus on the battle."

"Ah, yes. Of course, lord. Who are our enemies?"

"Otherworldly apostles trying to conquer this world."

And then, I said.

"They're also trying to ruin my wedding."

At my words, the atmosphere among the followers shifted.

"Oh?"

Blood Demon, leader of the Blood Ghost Troop, grabbed his sword's hilt.

"Hmm..."

Hell Ghost Demon, leader of the Soul Repentance Troop, smirked.

"Interfering with the wedding of the Vice-lord of the Demonic Cult."

Moon Shadow Demon, leader of the Shadow Corpse Troop, flicked his hair.

"Idiots."

Sword Demon, leader of the Extermination Troop, stretched his neck in all directions.

"..."

Lastly, Preta unsheathed her sword without a word. The same sword that forced hundreds of deaths upon me. It was a magical sword emitting a dark red light.

"Indeed. I see. It was due to the blessings of a Constellation that I regained my power in my previous life... They must be servants of a Constellation."

"Correct."

"If I may ask, which Constellation's lackeys are they?"

"Mahos. Known as the Warhorse of the Eternal Plains."

Preta twisted her lips in scorn.

"Fools who know nothing but battle."

Her disdain held the arrogance she had before falling, due to my actions.

The enemy was 10,000 strong. We were only 1,000. However, the followers, chatting and gripping their swords, and Preta, slowly raising her blade, were confident. No one thought we were at a disadvantage.

"My lord, command me. What would you have me do?"

I ordered.

"Annihilate them."

Preta lifted her magical sword high.

"As you wish, lord."

A single slash.

A red beam split the bloody sunset.

-The onslaught begins!

It was a red beam, leaving no room for any other description. Its power and majesty laid within Preta's strike. Ghosts caught in the red beam screamed and vanished.

Even the general leading the ghost army barely escaped.

-What, this is... impossible! A Constellation...? But without being one, controlling a Constellation's underling...

As the general gaped at me in shock.

"Crush them!"

The followers roared.

"No need to recite doctrines for these small fries!"

"Who dares to interrupt the marriage of the Vice-lord of the Demonic Cult!"

"The heads we collect today are our wedding gifts to the Vice-lord! Understood! Anyone who brings less than five heads will die by my hand today!"

"Haha! Extermination Troop, aim for at least ten heads!"

"This is why the uneducated are..."

Some raged, some shouted, and others scoffed as they charged. The distance to the ghost army was irrelevant. A thousand shadows soared using stepping techniques.

-Uh?! Block them!

Startled, the general ordered a defense.

The ghost army was indeed elite. They raised their shields tightly, forming an impenetrable formation like a porcupine. Spears filled the gaps. But...

"So foolish."

Preta, the Autumn Rain Specter, sneered.

"They've conveniently become targets for us."

Another red beam tore through the sky. Kwaang! The tightly packed formation of the ghost army was easily swept away, leaving a gaping hole. The ghosts frantically tried to fill the gap.

"Haha!"

But the battle-hardened followers didn't miss this opportunity.

"Tear them apart!"

They charged like beasts. The shadows and the ghost army clashed. Chaak! Chaak! The followers spread their Ki, slaughtering the ghosts.

Unlike the Great Orthodox-Demonic War, they didn't bother chanting the mantra of Baraya. No one mentioned why, but I could guess. This wasn't a duel. It wasn't a war.

Merely a hunt.

The followers disdainfully butchered the ghost army, treating them like mere beasts.

-Kiiiiek!

The ghost army lacked the strength to overcome such arrogance. They crumbled under the followers' blades. Shields shattered, spears snapped. Followers thrust their swords through the gaps and reversed the broken spear shafts to strike down.

It was a massacre.

"Regroup by units!"

The general raised his flag and shouted urgently.

"Don't panic, warriors! No rush! Follow the lead of the captains..."

"Hey."

Thud.

Someone casually landed on top of the flag that the general was holding.

"Hello there."

It was the Sword Demon, the most talkative among the Four Demon Lords of the Demonic Cult and the first-ranked among them. The evening sunset cast his face in shadow.

"Are you trying to interfere with our Vice-lord's wedding?"

-You...

"Damn bastard. Just die."

A flash of swordplay. First, second, third strikes. Three sword trails intertwined like a spider web. The first strike severed the general's right arm, the second slashed his chest, and the third tore the flag.

-Cough, hah...

The Apostle of the War God spewed blood. That was brief. Sword Demon launched his final strike at the general's throat, cutting off his scream and sending his head soaring.

"Oh. Euh cha."

Sword Demon leaped from the flagpole, catching the general's head in mid-air.

"Ah, can't let this precious thing slip away. Haha. See that, you brats! I'm the Sword Demon, leader of the Extermination Troop! Our troop will be the first to offer a wedding gift to the Vice-lord!"

"Damn."

"Why did it have to be that blockhead..."

Soft curses flowed from various places. Even among the same Demon Lords, there seemed to be a peculiar competitive spirit. The followers frowned, having their moment stolen by Sword Demon.

[The Apostle of the 'Warhorse of the Eternal Plains' has been annihilated.]

Swoosh-.

The head of the general, caught by Sword Demon, vanished into light. Not just that, the body of the headless general and the ghosts following him crumbled into dust like instantaneously. The legion was extinguished.

"What? What?"

Sword Demon was baffled, looking at his now empty hand. After a moment, he dumbly turned to look at me.

"Uh... can you accept a gift from the heart, Vice-lord?"

I smiled faintly.

"It's okay. I'll give you a discount."

Then.

-Lu. La.

The Apostle of ['The Immortal Missionary of Happiness'] began to sing. Lu. La. Children holding hands, danced in circles in the air. With each step upon the sunset, more melody was added to the sky.

"Hmm."

"Uh."

The followers furrowed their brows. Some hurriedly raised their Ki to counter the song, but it was futile. The wide-area effect had ended with the death of the Apostle of the Warhorse of the Eternal Plains.

"Ah..."

Preta also let out a disappointed sigh. The black sludge covering her body rapidly flowed away. She clicked her tongue and glared at the Sword Demon.

"That idiot... Not even useful to his own side. I apologize, lord. If I'm not in my prime, I'm weak against such psychic attacks... fighting... is..."

Her voice slowed as she fell into sleep. Preta staggered.

Not only Preta. The followers who had been rampaging on the battlefield, as well as the guests following Raviel's command, were similarly affected. They helplessly succumbed to the lullaby sung by the Apostles of Dreams.

"Please wait, King of Death."

Heretic Inquisitor formed a hand seal.

"I'll create an immunity field now!"

"No."

I grabbed Heretic Inquisitor's hand, stopping him. He tilted his head in confusion.

"King of Death? If we leave it like this, we'll also fall victim to the Apostle's song."

"It's possible. But if I'm right, everyone else might not know, but Raviel, you, and I should be fine."

"Hmm."

Heretic Inquisitor smiled and released the hand seal.

"I understand. If the King of Death says so, there must be a reason."

The sunset was at its peak.

-Lu. La, La.

-La, Lulu. Lu.

The setting sun burnt red, illuminating the children. Their shadows stretched long across the horizon, growing and shrinking, coming closer and then moving away.

『It's a kind of mental attack.』

『Exposure to that song forces you into [your happiest memory].』

The wedding venue fell silent.

The followers sat on the ground, leaning on each other, dozing off. Some guests had completely fallen asleep. Were they all immersed in their own happiness?

"Oho."

However, three people still spoke.

"Really?"

Heretic Inquisitor looked intrigued, alternating glances between Raviel and me.

"The King of Death was right. The three of us are unaffected. I feel a bit sleepy, but my body maintains its normal condition. Ahaha. What magic did you use this time, King of Death?"

The Heretic Inquisitor, curious about the current situation, wasn't the only one. The Apostles of Dreams slowly stopped their dance. The children tilted their heads, looking down at me in puzzlement.

-Strange human.

-Doesn't sleep. Doesn't dream?

-No happy memories?

I shook my head.

"No."

I slowly surveyed the wedding venue.

"It's not that."

There was Preta, softly breathing in sleep. Followers leaning on each other, having dozed off. Lives that I had gathered and those that evidenced my teacher's existence.

There were many reasons for me to be unhappy.

Countless.

I had burned to death, committed suicide thousands of times, witnessed comrades killing each other under the influence of doubt, lost dozens of lives just to take a step forward, been bitten by already dead corpses, and had to part with someone who said I was beautiful.

No one might blame me if I called my life unhappy.

"But I am happiest now."

Because the person I love is here.

One reason for happiness was more precious to me than hundreds of reasons for unhappiness.

"I don't know if you know, but today is my wedding day. I might not know about other days, but today, it's hard to find someone happier than me. You've chosen the wrong day to invade this world."

I shrugged.

"As for the Heretic Inquisitor... maybe he's never happy, or maybe every day is happy for him."

"Ah! Indeed! That's right. I'm always happy! No one can match the King of Death's insight."

Heretic Inquisitor laughed and whispered.

"Holy Technique. God of Teleportation."

In the next moment, we were teleported behind the Apostle.

Unlike other Apostles, ['The Immortal Missionary of Happiness'] had no combat ability. The Apostle, in the form of a child, didn't resist even after seeing us, just gazing up at my face.

-Strange human.

I steeled myself and swung my sword.

[The Apostle of the 'The Immortal Missionary of Happiness' has been annihilated.]

We returned to the ground using Holy Technique.

All invaders from another world were vanquished.

"....."

No. Not all of them yet.

I gripped my holy sword and turned around. An Apostle with a giant hammer stood in the distance. As our eyes met, she shrank back in fear.

-Yikes, uh... ah...

I slowly opened my lips.

"This is your last chance to fight me. The last chance to oppose me, the last chance to resist me. I will kill you and gather you."

-Gather...?

"No need to understand now. You'll find out soon enough."

I pointed my sword at the Apostle.

Calling her by her real name.

"Come at me. Silvia Evanair."

Goldencup trembled in fear.

Chapter 117: The Black Wedding (3)

"O Ruin-Harvesting Cow..."

Goldencup desperately prayed.

"Please bestow upon me... a new... a new blessing!"

Humans shrink when cornered. Their mind, their scope of thought, rapidly narrows. That's why humans can flee or cling desperately to someone. Goldencup was no exception.

"As a price... Yes. I'll offer my existence as the price! No, whatever you desire, I'll wreak havoc in this world! Ruins! Destruction! Shattering! Isn't that what you, Mutia, cherish? I-I'm good at that! At destroying!"

Thud. I stepped forward.

-Hic.

Goldencup heard my footsteps and became even more desperate. She stumbled backwards, looking up at the crimson sunset as if salvation would descend any moment.

"I'm good at it, Mutia! I'm really good at destroying things...!"

But there was no response.

-This is,

Her prayer quickly turned into resentment.

-This is a breach of contract!!

I took another step closer.

-You promised me a new destiny, power to remake my fate! Then, why! Why is there a crazy woman inside me! Give it back! My body, return it!

"Ah. That's a wrong expression."

Heretic Inquisitor cheerfully corrected.

"If you're referring to me, I'm sorry, but my physical gender is male! So your words are incorrect! I'm not a [crazy woman] but a [crazy man]. Ah, for a healthier language, perhaps it's better to say [insane person]. A healthy mind resides in a healthy language, Miss Evanair!"

-Damn bastard!

Goldencup, no, Silvia Evanair, cursed.

-It's wrong! Yes, it's wrong! It's a breach of contract... I deserve to be the Empress. I was meant to rise to a greater position than Raviel Ivansia. It's my destiny! The destiny I created! So... so it's a breach of contract... I am,

Another step.

-Huh!

Only then did Silvia Evanair turn her eyes away from the sky. Now, unable to ignore me as I had drawn much closer.

-Monster!

Silvia Evanair swung her hammer. Clang! The iron hammer clashed with the holy sword. She swung the hammer erratically, and I easily parried her attacks while advancing. Her increasing desperation made it easier to break her down.

-Ah,

I seized the moment when Silvia Evanair swung the hammer widely. I sliced her wrist.

-Aaaaaah!!

Naturally, there was no wound. No bloodstain. No blood. Not a trace of red to prove her pain, yet Silvia Evanair screamed as if being torn apart.

She dropped the hammer. Thud! The iron hammer fell to the ground with a heavy sound.

-Ah, uh... uhh....

I locked eyes with Silvia Evanair. Dust raised by the fallen hammer settled on both our knees.

"Make a choice."

-Ch-choice...?

"You've already lost your place in this world. Even if you flee now, you're no longer 'Baroness Goldencup.' Just an Apostle of the Constellation."

-.....

"I'll give you a chance."

Silvia Evanair, clutching her wrist, glared at me.

"If you choose to remain a servant of the Constellation, do as you wish. Escape. I'll let you go. But if you still have attachments to this world, if you want to do more here, then give up the protection of the Constellation."

-Why would...

"And die by my sword."

I pointed the sword at her.

"You've seen the battle. I can summon those who died by my hand, retaining their memories from life. Silvia Evanair, If you surrender yourself, I'll summon you back to this world, once again as 'Baroness Goldencup.'"

-.....

"Of course, it won't be exactly the same life as before. Any hostile actions towards my lover, Raviel Ivansia, are strictly forbidden. But that's it. The rest is up to you. Marry the Crown Prince or live as you wish."

-Why...

"Because life should be something that can be re-lived."

The sunset now mixed red with purple hues. The wedding in the empire lasts from the time the sunset begins to fade. I estimated that less than 30 minutes remained.

-How can I... trust you? What if you turn me into a summon and exploit me like a slave? I wouldn't be able to resist or fight back.

"Think about it."

I looked at Silvia Evanair.

"Why, of all people, were 'you' and 'your butler' chosen as the hosts?"

-Huh?

"Everything you wished for, you offered to the Constellation. Your memories, your body, all of it. That's why your place in this world became a void."

A void that anyone could fill, anyone could replace.

The reason [Holed-Up Head Librarian] could have me and Heretic Inquisitor possess them.

"I can understand why your place became vacant."

But.

"Have you ever thought why your butler's place became vacant too?"

-.....

Silvia Evanair's eyes widened.

"I don't know the details. But I've been a butler once, fully immersed in the life of a butler. I realized then, this man was utterly devoted to you, Silvia Evanair."

I surmised from that point.

"I bet even if you had become the empress, you would never have been happy."

-What...?

"You said it yourself. You didn't want to become empress out of love for the Crown Prince, but to outdo Raviel. Even if you became the empress that way, would your life have gone well?"

I shook my head.

"You're quite capable. But not as much as Raviel. You don't have the power and dignity of Raviel's noble birth. You lack the ability to manipulate and dominate crowds like Raviel. Even as empress, people would constantly compare and belittle you."

-.....

"For life."

Suppose.

Suppose there was one butler.

That butler watched his mistress suffer all her life.

"The butler I know would give up everything to save you."

The butler might have thought.

[If only Miss Goldencup hadn't become the empress, she might have been happy.]

"That's what I think."

-Butler... My butler, did he regress?

"No."

The butler is not a Returner.

"You wished for yourself. But not the butler. He wished for you. Not to rewind his own life, but simply wishing for you to go back."

-What are you saying...?

"Do you remember your butler's name?"

-Ha?

Silvia Evanair furrowed her brows.

-Of course. My butler's name is.....

But.

-.....Huh?

She couldn't say the name. She furrowed her brows further. After a moment, her frown relaxed. She looked perplexed at the air.

-Wait, this can't be. Ah?Ah? Uh...?

I calmly observed Silvia Evanair.

Yes.

In this world, the butler was never called by name.

Silvia Evanair never called the butler by his name. The only servant and childhood friend, she only referred to him as 'butler.' Even when alone in the room, with no need for formality.

『Butler.』

Raviel Ivansia never called the butler by his name. Despite holding all the empire's information, she couldn't possibly be unaware of Goldencup, Baroness's close aide.

『Butler.』

The character I became possessed of.

The Baroness's servant was nameless in this world.

Because he had given everything to the Constellation.

I, too.

Even I, who had been completely immersed in the life of a butler, didn't know his name.

I couldn't remember or recall it.

-.....

Silvia Evanair's expression crumbled.

-Then, what does it mean...?

Like a tower meticulously built, collapsing from the top.

-The butler, he's gone for good?

"Yes."

Perhaps.

There were three regressions in this world.

First, Silvia Evanair wished for a regression from the Constellation.

The Constellation that granted the wish was [Ruin-Harvesting Cow], overseeing destruction and recreation. It granted Silvia Evanair another chance at life.

Silvia Evanair became the empress, surpassing Raviel.

Next, 'the butler' wished for a regression from another Constellation.

The granting Constellation is unknown.

The butler sacrificed everything for Goldencup, leading to a regression. Back to a past where Baroness Goldencup hadn't married the Crown Prince. A past where nothing was decided yet.

Lastly, Raviel caused a regression.

The granting Constellation was a fragment of [Goddess of Protection].

As a result of this regression, the world got trapped in an eternal loop of ten days.

And here we are.

"We can never know the butler's name. Forever."

-.....

"Whatever thoughts and sacrifices the butler made beside your life, we will never know. He's gone."

But.

"The butler must have wanted you to live a different life."

Thus.

"I want to honor the butler's wish."

-.....

"Silvia Evanair. Someone, whom you don't know and whose name you can't remember, sacrificed everything just for you. Someone who loved you more than anyone and wanted to be with you more than anyone, gave up everything."

That was how a nameless butler loved.

"Live again."

It's not too late.

"Live as he wished, once more."

Silvia Evanair said nothing.

She trembled. Her lips quivered. Her throat convulsed. A life was writhing there. A cursed life. Yet, the fact that someone wished for her life, existed for her, was unbearably harsh.

-.....

Slowly, Silvia Evanair bowed her head, no longer having the strength to face forward.

Gradually, light began to leak from her body.

That light was the Constellation's blessing, being released.

"Alright."

I raised my sword high.

I deactivated the Sword of Pity and called forth the Sword of the Idol again.

The sunset blazed red.

The shadow of my sword stretched long on the ground.

The shadow swung the sword.

[The Apostle of the 'Ruin-Harvesting Cow' has been annihilated.]

The sunset faded.

All the Apostles from another world had been subjugated.

The beings threatening this world were gone.

[Stage Clear.]

The voice announcing it echoed.

Probably only the Heretic Inquisitor and I could hear it.

[Today.]

[The 25th floor stage has been cleared.]

The voice of the Tower.

[Announcing to everyone once more.]

[Today, the 25th floor has been cleared.]

[Assessing raid participants.]

[Assessment complete.]

[Announcing the 3 raid participants.]

People began to awaken. Preta. The followers of the Demonic Cult. The guests. Those who had been caught in the Apostle's lullaby and dreamed were slowly rising.

"Uh..."

“What on earth happened...?”

Above these people, text appeared.

+

[Raid Contribution Ranking]

1st place. King of Death

2nd place. Heretic Inquisitor

3rd place. None

+

"....."

I silently looked at the text.

There were only two participants in this stage.

The only hunters sent by [Holed-Up Head Librarian] were the Heretic Inquisitor and me.

But the Tower listed three participants.

‘None.’

The third, nonexistent participant's name did not appear.

I looked into the void for a while.

"Hmm."

Raviel, my bride, came beside me and took my hand. We leaned on each other. Then Raviel slowly looked around at the guests.

"I am his wife and the Duchess of Ivansia."

The guests, just awakened from a dream, looked at us blankly.

"Does anyone object to this marriage?"

No one spoke.

There might have been those who were displeased. Those who wanted to object. But it all became a thing of the past.

The mere appearance of beings from another world was enough to shake heaven and earth. Moreover, the guests had witnessed me defeating the extraterrestrial beings.

The guests, by remaining silent, agreed to Raviel's words.

"Good."

The very person who chose today as the wedding day.

Raviel, my bride, nodded deeply.

"I declare that my marriage to this man has been successfully concluded."

Chapter 118: The Black Wedding (4)

Floor Clear.

This signifies that the world of [Tales of Sormewin Academy] has been officially integrated into our Tower.

Hunters can now travel to and from this world.

Of course, that doesn't mean they can enter freely. They must undergo the scrutiny of the major guilds. For example, a general hunter needs a permit to enter the Aegim Empire.

What this means is-

Flash!

Shortly after the stage clear was declared, a bright light flashed. Flash! Flicker! Lights burst here and there around the wedding venue. It was a scene familiar when hunters are teleported.

"King of Death! No, Kim Gong-Ja! You!"

As the light faded, familiar faces appeared.

"How could you marry without discussing it with us?!"

Those who could move freely between floors without a permit. Leaders of the major guilds. One of them, the 2nd ranked hunter, Black Dragon Witch, was red-faced with anger.

"I oppose this marriage!!"

"....."

"It's not just me!"

Voices were raised not only by the Black Dragon Witch.

"Ahem. King of Death."

The top-ranked hunter, Sword Saint, also spoke up.

"First, congratulations on clearing the stage. Truly... it was a swift romance. Not that it's my place to say here, but if I may, as an elder-"

"Don't."

"Um."

Sword Saint closed his mouth, fitting of someone who's been reforming his old-fashioned mindset.

"While you were conquering the Tower, there was a commotion. Everyone wondered why you two fell for each other. But I staunchly defended you. Love at first sight is only understood by those who have experienced it. Don't worry. I understand. I'll handle the Black Dragon Witch."

And for some reason, the Paladin looked sternly proud, her gaze seemingly saying, 'I understand your love.' I couldn't grasp the meaning.

I turned to Raviel.

"Hmm."

Raviel was expressionless, at least at first glance. But I loved her, so I could read her blank expression.

Raviel was... observing the Black Dragon Witch's group with great interest. Her red eyes were brimming with honey.

"My dear Gong-Ja. My love."

"Speak, my love."

"It seems there are many people you need to introduce me to."

"Yes..."

It's late, but.

The meet-the-family session begins now.

Naturally, I thought meeting the family happened before marriage. But cultural differences existed here. In the Empire, it was customary to have the meet-the-family session after the wedding.

"Isn't that obvious?"

Raviel tilted her head.

"Many in the family live far away in the provinces. The wedding is the occasion to gather and invite them. It's on the night of the wedding that the bride and groom, along with members of both families, meet."

"Ah... that makes sense."

I immediately understood.

Right. A marriage is also a union of families. For hunters like us, who fled from the outside world, there's no family to consider... but the Empire was different. They valued family much more than individuals.

Moreover, this marriage wasn't just a union of families.

It was a national marriage, no, a world marriage.

Raviel representing the Empire. Me representing the Tower.
The marriage of us two.

"Hehe..."

My foster father, the head of the servants, kept a bitter smile.

"I never imagined such an occasion... I don't even know how many messages I've sent to His Majesty the Emperor today. I'm at a loss for words."

"Yes. This was unintended for us as well."

Black Dragon Witch began to speak. She was remarkably calm, as if her earlier agitation towards me never happened.

The Empire's and the Tower's power players sat side by side at the table, wary of each other, yet equally perplexed.

"However, this unintended event is not misfortune, but fortune. Head Butler, we consider it fortunate that our first meeting with your country is on such an auspicious occasion as a wedding."

And they began to converse, overcoming their apprehension and wariness.

"Your Highnesses came from another world, didn't you? It's a miraculous event difficult to explain to His Majesty, not to mention it can't easily be declared to our citizens."

"Yes, you're absolutely right. We fully understand the situation of your country."

Black Dragon Witch nodded. She seemed adept at such diplomatic occasions, knowing how to navigate between grace and competence.

"However, you must have witnessed the invasion of beings from another world. Denying something that exists can lead, eventually, to existence denying us. I'm worried about such a future."

"Hm. That's a valid point."

"Thank you, Head Butler. What we must practice now is mutual understanding. 5 years, 10 years, 20 years, maybe even more..."

Both sides calmly exchanged words.

Raviel had a firm grasp on the Empire's representatives, and I was fully trusted by those from the Tower. Our marriage was a great fortune for both sides.

The fact that power players from both sides were gathered in one place was a difficult feat, but Raviel's and my wedding made it possible from the start. There couldn't have been a better beginning.

"....."

I sat at the head table with Raviel. I reached under the table to hold her hand. Squeeze. Raviel naturally intertwined her fingers with mine.

"....."

Just that gesture was reassuring. The night deepened. Stars shone brightly. Candles flickered on the table, and people exchanged words across the flickering lights.

Suddenly, everything seemed beautiful.

"Raviel."

"Speak."

A soft whisper.

"There are a few people I'd like to introduce you to."

"Apart from those here?"

"Yes."

"Then I must see them."

Raviel stood up from the head table.

Everyone from the Empire's side immediately fell silent.

"The night is long. Let's talk calmly. I will go meet my husband's people and return."

"....."

No one could stop Raviel's departure. Indeed, the Duchess of Ivansia. If the ability to leave when one wants is a sign of power, then my wife held absolute power here.

I took Raviel to where the disciples were gathered.

"Oh. Vice-Lord! Now the honeymoon begins!"

Sword Demon laughed heartily, holding up a glass. The disciples were all drunk on the wine provided at the wedding. They tried to stand and greet me, but I gestured for them to sit. So, they remained seated and saluted.

"Congratulations!"

"Congratulations, Vice-Lord!"

"The wine here tastes unique and is truly good!"

"Demonic Heavens forever!"

"Wow! You two really match well!"

The wedding hall instantly became noisy. After all, when nearly a thousand disciples cause a commotion, it's inevitable. I let out a wry smile.

"Sword Demon. Come here."

"Yes?"

Sword Demon blinked in surprise, not expecting to be called. His face went blank as if caught off guard, while his drunk companions giggled around him.

"Look at that! I knew he'd get scolded by the Vice-Lord someday!"

"He always forgets to add 'Lord' when he calls for the Vice-Lord. Such a blockhead."

"Give him a good smack on the butt, Vice-Lord!"

"Uh... uh..."

Sword Demon put down his glass and hesitantly approached. His brazen attitude when he beheaded the ghostly general had vanished. He seemed to shrink, like a child who had done something wrong.

"So-sorry, Vice-Lord. I'm not good with formal speech. But in my heart, I really admire our Vice-Lord..."

Rambling his excuse, Sword Demon.

I put my hand on his shoulder.

"Raviel."

And spoke to my bride.

"This is the Sword Demon."

"....."

"He was a subordinate of the Master I revered. My Master was the leader of a place called Demonic Cult. She selected four exceptional people from her disciples and called them the Four Demonic Lords. Sword Demon is one of them."

"Oho."

Raviel observed the Sword Demon carefully. The Sword Demon flinched.

"A simple man. Harsh in speech and barren in attitude. It proves that your Master didn't judge people by harsh words or barren attitudes. She found people in harsh and barren places, so she must have been a noble and exalted person."

"....."

"I am Raviel Ivansia, Duchess of the Empire, and the wife of the Vice-Lord you serve. I ask for your cooperation."

"Yes, yes. I humbly ask for your... favor."

I turned my head.

"Moon Shadow Demon."

"....."

"Come here."

One of the disciples stood up. He bowed respectfully.

"Yes, Vice-Lord."

An eerie silence descended under the night sky. The chatter and laughter of those drinking and chatting died down. I called each of the Four Demonic Lords, and with each call, they showed utmost courtesy.

Then I called the next person I had to introduce.

"Preta."

"...Yes, my Lord."

"Come here."

"Yes."

Preta, who had been mingling with the disciples, stood up. It seemed she had been waiting for my call, already having tidied up her appearance.

"This child's name is... Preta."

I said.

"Preta was originally a nameless monster, a doppelganger. Capable of imitating anything it devoured, it initially consumed small creatures like frogs and snakes, and then, by chance, ate a human. And then..."

Preta quietly bowed her head. Occasionally, her shoulders trembled slightly. An uncanny silence prevailed in the hall.

I introduced their lives, and by doing so, I introduced my own life.

One person spoke about their life to another, gently, under the night sky. It was sacred, just by being that.

"Also... Ah. Right."

I undid my holy sword from my waist.

"This is Shiny."

"Shiny?"

"Yes. It originally had a more dignified name. But it was sealed in the sword by a bad man. I didn't want to use its original name, 'Goddess of Protection,' so I just called it Shiny. It's very... shiny."

"Indeed."

Raviel let out a small laugh.

"Your naming is a bit harsh. Cold-hearted. If it were me, I would have at least named it 'Eleanor*.'"

*Eleanor means 'shining light' in greek.

[Shiny pledges loyalty to the spouse of the brave hero!]

Shiny quickly changed its allegiance.

"Um."

And then.

"There's one friend I can't show you here now..."

Guardian Spirit.

"He's probably someone Raviel will never see. You both can't meet... He's a bit special. He can't stand in front of others."

My partner.

"Though he speaks very crudely... um, about 30 times dirtier than Sword Demon. But he's incredibly strong. Amazingly so... I learned swordsmanship and Aura from him first."

"Oh, a person of great significance."

-.....

The Guardian Spirit remained silent.

In humble martial attire. Arms crossed.

Instead of her usual talkative manner, Guardian Spirit just silently observed Raviel and me.

"...Without him, I probably couldn't have endured my time alone."

"Is that so?"

"Yes."

"Then I must express my gratitude to him."

Raviel bowed her head.

Towards the empty air where nothing could be seen.

"I have become happy by meeting you. If your friend hadn't helped you, my happiness wouldn't have been possible. I express my gratitude to everything that allowed you to be here at this moment."

Guardian Spirit slowly opened his mouth.

-Kid, that nutcase, take good care of him.

I spoke on her behalf.

"If he heard Raviel's gratitude, he probably would have said,
'Take good care of that nutcase.'"

"A wonderful friend indeed."

I took a deep breath.

"Raviel."

This is.

"This is all of me."

Everything I cherish.

Everything that entered my heart and stayed.

My family.

"....."

Raviel gripped my hand tightly.

"My dear."

"Yes."

"Let's dance."

In Raviel's eyes was an intense desire. I hesitated. Whenever Raviel looked at me like this, when she strongly wished to do something with me, I couldn't refuse.

"I've never really danced properly."

"I still have some memories of being a butler. I'll use that as a reference."

‘What if I accidentally step on Raviel's foot? I'll kill myself.’

Instead of answering, Raviel showed me with her actions. She bent down and took off her black shoes. Soon, she stepped onto the grass and soil of the lawn with her bare feet.

White feet.

Just by taking off her shoes, she seemed as light as the wind.

"Come."

"....."

I hesitantly removed my white shoes and socks. Then, Raviel immediately took my hand and led me.

One step. Two steps.

Raviel stepped on petals fallen on the grass with her toes. Magnolias, cherry blossoms, white petals turned whiter as they were trampled.

"....."

No one spoke. There was no music. No grand chandeliers decorated the ballroom, only the moonlight softly settled on the garden.

Our own ball.

"...See."

I stepped through the dance, smiling.

"What a mess. I've already stepped on Raviel's feet three times. Dancing is definitely not my forte. Are you trying to embarrass me to death?"

"It's fine. I will just step on your feet as much."

With a firm step, Raviel immediately stepped on my foot, her weight fully transferred to me. She smiled playfully.

"See. Fair enough."

A smile that she showed only to me was there. My red jewel.
My heart. My music.

The moonlit chandelier cast our shadows.

Our dance wasn't about not stepping on each other's feet.
Even if we did step on each other's feet, it was about not letting go till the end. About facing each other and smiling, no matter the misfortune.

I belong only to Raviel.

And Raviel is mine alone.

Yes, we danced. Every place touched by the moonlight was our ballroom. With just the two of us, any world could be transformed into our stage.

On this day, we were married.

Our next story will start on a higher stage than ever before.

Chapter 119: Hero

(1)

Two weeks had passed since the formal introduction. Much had happened during this time. We had an audience with the Emperor of the Empire. Numerous secret agreements were made between the Empire and the Tower. But, leaving such historic upheavals behind, I attended to what I needed to do first.

There was still my own epilogue to complete.

"Shiny."

[Shiny responds, Yes Hero.]

In Raviel's and my bedroom.

On the huge bed lay a sword.

"Eat up."

The thing that once tore apart the heart of my lover.

The sword that trapped this world in an eternal cycle of ten days.

The Sword of Prayer.

Towards this cursed blade, my Holy Sword emitted a white light.

[The Goddess of Protection absorbs a fragment of herself.]

White light touched the Prayer Sword. Immediately, a red aura burst from the Prayer Sword, as if resisting the light that sought to engulf it, a deep crimson fog erupting from its blade.

[The Prayer is terrified.]

[The Idol persuades its sister.]

White light and red mist battled fiercely, but the mist seemed denser. Just as the red was about to overpower the white, another color flowed from my Holy Sword.

[The Pity also persuades its sister.]

Dark black sewage joined the fray, the fragment of the second Holy Sword I had collected.

The tide turned. The pure white light devoured the mist, and the black water consumed it. The red fog quickly dissipated.

[The Prayer Sword is astonished by the betrayal of its sisters.]

[It declares it cannot serve anyone but Leafanta Aegim.]

I spoke up.

"I have an idea why Leafanta Aegim killed the Constellations."

The red mist paused.

Even though it had no eyes, I felt as if it was staring at me. A calm tension settled between us.

"At first, I couldn't understand it at all. But after experiencing this world, I realized. Constellations invade and conquer other worlds on a whim, imposing their will regardless of the natives' opinions."

The Holed-Up Head Librarian was no different.

His interest wasn't in controlling worlds but in observing characters. Designating living humans as [characters] and voyeuristically enjoying their [stories]. In that sense, he was just like other Constellations.

In short,

"It's a nuisance."

It's violence.

"Leafanta Aegim was an Emperor. He must have thought deeply. 'Rather than using Constellations to seek power, it's better to kill them all.' That's probably what he planned. This world likely had Constellations too, but Leafanta Aegim must have killed them."

[.....]

"But your original master made a mistake."

I sheathed the sword.

"Where Constellations die, new ones are born. Look! In the continent where the 'Goddess of Protection' was sealed, the 'Demon King of Autumn Rain' emerged. In this world, the 'Silver-Clad Heart' appeared. Frankly, your master didn't solve the problem but created bigger ones!"

[Leafanta Aegim.....]

"Deny it if I'm wrong."

The sword wrapped in red mist, the crimson blade, remained silent.

"Maybe my experience in life is less than your master's. Yes, your master might have endured tremendous trials, known much more, and after deep contemplation, took on the role of the Constellation Killer. But there's something I can say for sure."

I spoke sincerely.

"If you've caused trouble, you must take responsibility to the end."

[.....]

"Because of your master's reckless killing of Constellations, an eternal winter has descended in some worlds. The martial artists living there became walking corpses, humiliated. Even if Leafanta Aegim had noble ideals, it's unforgivable. He must take responsibility."

Then,

The red mist gathered in one place, and soon took the shape of a child.

A child drenched in blood.

[My name is Prayer.]

The sword, now in the form of a red child, spoke.

[My role is to fulfill people's prayers.]

[Leafanta Aegim prayed, 'To kill all Constellations, so people will never be dominated by them again.' His prayer was noble. Heavy. Magnificent. So I entrusted my existence to Leafanta Aegim.]

[What is your prayer, human?]

I looked down at the child.

"To not run away from anything."

And said,

"I won't turn a blind eye to what's happening before me. No excuses. I'll take responsibility for my words and actions. I won't overlook wrongs by saying, 'That's just how the world is.' As long as my sword reaches and my life continues."

[Oh.....]

The red child looked up at the void.

[The road to hell is always paved with good intentions.]

[All I can do is bless your good intentions and simply join you on your journey to hell.]

It was a mournful lament.

[My power is a trial.]

[Those pierced by my heart, are tested if their prayer was truly sincere. Whether they wanted it so badly that they'd sacrifice everything.]

[My cursed power is to make them ultimately give up their prayer.]

The child dissolved into red mist.

[To our new master.]

[May you prosper long in hell.]

The mist was absorbed into my Holy Sword.

[The Goddess of Protection's existence becomes better defined.]

Finally, I could breathe a sigh of relief.

"Phew."

With this, I had wrapped up what I needed to do before moving to the next stage. There's still much for the Empire and the Tower to discuss... but that's a matter of politics. A field more suited for my wife than me.

"Is it over?"

Raviel, who had been waiting outside the bedroom, asked. A maid accompanied her.

"Yes. Raviel. It's all done. Now there are no Constellations or their fragments to disrupt this world. At least for a while."

"Even with three Apostles forming a coalition to attack, they were miserably defeated. Be at ease. After seeing your prowess, no fool would dare invade."

"....."

The maid standing beside Raviel wore an awkward expression. Understandably, since she was the mastermind behind the invasion of this world---Baroness Goldencup.

"...It sounds like you're talking to me. Duke, am I just imagining this?"

Baroness Goldencup muttered. Outwardly, she was portrayed as a [young lady who was possessed by a wicked demon and wielded a hammer]. She was made a victim, not a perpetrator.

But being possessed by a demon itself was a rumor that tarnished her honor, so she agreed to serve Raviel and wash away the disgrace. As someone who once aspired to marry the Crown Prince, it must be painful for her.

Well, it seems she's seriously reconsidering marriage now.

"Sharp ears. Yes, it was meant for you. Continuously repent for your foolishness, Lady. Once I think you've repented enough, I'll use my connections to the temple to restore your honor. Until then, shut up and work for us."

"Ugh...."

The Baroness in maid's clothing bit her lip. She can't defy us. Just by withdrawing [Ghoul Reincarnation], she'd crumble immediately.

"....."

This was the ending I had reached.

Looking at the scene, I slowly began to speak.

"I'm heading to the next stage now. Raviel."

"Hm. That's necessary."

Raviel met my gaze.

"I would like to accompany you to explore other worlds, but the Empire needs me. Just as I have my role, you have yours. Go wild and come back when you're tired and need comfort. I'll be here."

"Yes. But..."

I hesitated slightly.

"The 20th floor in the Tower belongs to me. I want to build a house there just for the two of us. If you're okay with it, Raviel."

"Oh? Indeed. From now on, that will be our main home.

There, I won't be the Duchess of Ivansia but only your partner."

Raviel smiled.

She had effortlessly read my mind.

"I'm looking forward to it."

Raviel took a handkerchief from her pocket. White with silver embroidery. She opened my hand and gently placed the handkerchief on it.

This was,

"This is my handkerchief that I always carry. I used magic to permanently infuse it with perfume."

"Perfume?"

"You."

Raviel tiptoed to whisper in my ear.

"The scent of white lilies you first smelled when you fell for me."

"....."

"When you're restless, you often fiddle with your dagger's handle. It's a bad habit. Get rid of it. Instead, when your heart flutters, smell the scent on my handkerchief."

Ah.

"Gong-Ja. You staying true to yourself is not your misfortune or your pain. I hope it isn't. The memories and love for me, happiness, I hope they keep you true to yourself. Will you accept my wish?"

"...Yes."

I swallowed the overwhelming emotions welling up in my heart.

"Yes. I will, Raviel."

"I love you."

"I love you too."

I overlapped my lips with Raviel's, wishing for this moment to last forever. Yet, our shadows soon parted, and I said,

"---Transfer."

Light enveloped my vision.

The next time I blinked, I was already in the Great Library.

The hunters who had been waiting for me there came into view.

"Welcome back, King of Death."

Black Dragon Witch, speaking on behalf of the others, broke the silence. Seeing her, I instantly realized she was not in the best of moods. Despite her words, her eyebrows were deeply furrowed.

"What's wrong?"

"I wish I could say nothing is wrong."

Black Dragon Witch sighed deeply.

"Uh, there's a problem. A pretty serious one."

Looking around, I noticed that only the top rankers like Black Dragon Witch were present. Normally, hunters like the Apothecary would be around too.

"Where did the other hunters go?"

"We asked them to leave. We have confidential matters to discuss. Well, our conversation is still being broadcasted throughout the Tower..."

Black Dragon Witch's voice trailed off ominously.

"What could be so serious?"

"Aha."

It was the Heretic Inquisitor who responded, not Black Dragon Witch. He was back in his usual priestly attire after shedding the dress from the last stage.

"To put it simply, King of Death! You've become too successful!"

"Me?"

"Think about it. In [The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon], you showed a profoundly loyal side to your master! Your reverence for martial arts and caring for your followers touched the hearts of countless hunters. After clearing [The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon], martial artists from the outside world entered the Tower by the thousands every day!"

The Paladin picked up from there.

"Someone is recording the broadcasts from the Tower and spreading them in the outside world. In fact, we've allowed this dissemination. King of Death, your success is a tremendous advertising effect in itself. There's no reason to refuse it."

"But, well."

The Countess waved her fan.

"It seems we underestimated something a bit. Right?"

"Underestimated what?"

"The impact you, as a person. No, as an [icon]."

What did they mean? I looked at them, unable to grasp their point. Everyone wore serious expressions. The Heretic Inquisitor, always smiling regardless, responded.

"113,654."

"Pardon?"

"That's the number of people who entered our Tower yesterday!"

"....."

I couldn't comprehend what the Heretic Inquisitor was saying.

After a moment, I realized he meant 'yesterday.'

"Yesterday, in one day?"

"Yes! Such an influx is normal when wars break out or nations fall. But recently, besides small conflicts, there have been no battles! Ahahaha. No nations have fallen either! It's a [peaceful] time, and yet we've had this many new arrivals!"

"Leaflets from the outside world."

The Countess handed me a leaflet.

It was like a presidential election poster with my face on it.

Below it, read this sentence:

+

Make the King of Death our King!

Journey to Utopia!

+

My mouth slowly opened.

"Don't tell me the King of Death refers to...?"

"Of course, it's your nickname, King of Death. It's referring to you. This kind of leaflet is being distributed in numerous places. To clarify, this isn't something we orchestrated. People from the outside world are doing it themselves."

"....."

I didn't know how to react.

"Regarding the leaflets, you might have guessed."

The Paladin grinned wryly.

"These days, leaflets aren't common promotional tools. Get it? King of Death. 'Leaflets are used when wanting to inform even those who don't use the internet.'"

"...What do you mean?"

"People from regions with poor internet access. The poor from impoverished countries. Conflict zones. Areas controlled by warlords. Countless poor and refugees are entering the Tower. They're abandoning their [nations] and [nationalities], leaving behind their [lives] in the outside world, and coming to the Tower of Babel."

Just like we did, the Paladin added.

"Hmm."

Viper crossed his arms.

"Those people. Upon entering the Tower, they wear black hats or black tops. They want to join the Demonic Cult... more bluntly, they're coming in because of you."

"It's not just the poor and refugees."

Black Dragon Witch spoke.

"Wealthy individuals are coming in large numbers too. Scientists, sociologists, professors along with their colleagues. They declare, 'We want to contribute to building a new society in the Tower.'"

"Kim Gong-Ja."

The great guild leaders looked at me.

"You didn't just conquer stages. In the outside world, no, everywhere, people crave heroes. The courage to face adversity. Respect for humanity. Dedication to love. There's nothing more thrilling than a hero who dedicates their life to a righteous cause."

Black Dragon Witch showed me her smartphone screen.

"You've become our flag."

The hologram that always floated in the center of Babylon Square was displayed on the screen.

+

1st. Sword Saint

2nd. King of Death

3rd. Black Dragon Witch

4th. Heretic Inquisitor

5th. Countess

6th. Viper

7th. Babel's Linguist

8th. Wide-Area Communicator

9th. Paladin

+

2nd in the Hunter Ranking.

That was the new position the Tower had granted me.

My heart pounded wildly.

"King of Death."

Black Dragon Witch put away her smartphone and looked me straight in the eyes. She was serious, more than I had ever seen before.

"Are you ready to be our king?"

Chapter 120: Hero (2)

King.

"Uh..."

I smiled instinctively, as people often do when faced with an unexpected situation.

Looking around, my gaze met with Black Dragon Witch, Heretic Inquisitor, Viper, Paladin, and Countess in turn.

"...You're joking, right?"

"Of course."

"Of course," said Black Dragon Witch. I hoped for a follow-up like 'Of course, it's a joke.' However, what she said next was entirely different from what I expected.

"Of course, we're not suddenly going to adopt a monarchy now. King of Death. You may not be aware, but the Tower's current system is the result of our blood, sweat, and tears... through endless failures and frustrations."

"We have been striving to realize an ideal of anarchism. Ahaha. The 'guilds' operating in the Tower are actually a type of association..."

"Enough. That kind of talk won't help the King of Death."

Paladin cut off the conversation.

"A king is merely a symbol. But symbols hold real power. Kim Gong-Ja, you already possess that power. By your name, by your character, over a hundred thousand people enter the Tower every day."

"....."

"This is unprecedented. Even Black Dragon Witch couldn't achieve this. You're the first Tower hunter to have this kind of power!"

Only then did I notice Paladin's excitement.

Paladin was always calm and collected. The last time she raised her voice was during the [12th Floor Incident], when everyone fell into suspicion and tried to eliminate each other.

Such an excited Paladin.

And not just her.

Excluding the Heretic Inquisitor, all the major guild leaders were engulfed in a peculiar fervor. They were struggling not to let their enthusiasm burst into fanaticism, but their eyes betrayed their excitement when they looked at me.

"Previously, we couldn't handle such an influx of population. We lacked food. But now, [we] have secured enough land and trade routes... it'll be tough, but we can feed them."

"Most importantly, we have [experience]."

The Countess spoke.

"It's no boast, but everyone here has experienced chaos. Paladin is a refugee from a fallen nation. Black Dragon Witch is an orphan from a country torn apart by civil war, and Heretic Inquisitor and Viper grew up under the thumb of the mafia and thugs. I was born in the poorest village in the world. Everyone here is an 'expert in troubled times.'"

"Right."

Black Dragon Witch affirmed.

"Only we can handle such a crisis in this world. No country, no state in the outside world can. But [we] can! We've overcome worse chaos than this!"

"....."

I swallowed, feeling the guild leaders' fervor directly.

Those who fled the old world for a new one and reached the pinnacle of the new world as guild leaders, they hadn't given up their desire to build a new world.

"King of Death, we can do this."

A dream.

"Let's do what no country in the outside world could. Let's make a better place. Let's create a world where those driven out and who fled here can breathe a little easier!"

An ideal.

"We know what societal collapse means. So, we can prevent it."

Paladin, who escaped from a South American country.

"We know what it means for people to be divided and go to war. So, we can avoid civil wars."

Black Dragon Witch, who survived the chaos of the Black Sea.

"We know what violence is. So, we can utilize it."

Heretic Inquisitor, raised in Eastern European mafia organizations.

Viper, who grew in the Triads of Central China.

"We know what poverty is, and so, we can conquer it."

Countess, born in a trashy village in India.

"Let's show them, King of Death."

Black Dragon Witch said.

"Let's show the people we can make a slightly better world!"

And then I realized.

The one who changed the guild leaders was none other than me.

In the previous world, this never happened. In a world dominated by Flame Emperor as the top ranker... the Tower was still just a Tower.

A refuge for those who lost hope.

A paradise for criminals and death row inmates.

I never saw Black Dragon Witch, who now spoke of a [new world] with sparkling eyes, in the previous world. Not in any magazine photo. Not in any interview video.

Black Dragon Witch was always a person with eyes frozen cold.

It was because of me that she changed.

"....."

My heart fluttered.

"What I should do,"

The world my master dreamed of.

"Tell me what I need to do."

I can change the world.

"...Right. Yeah. I thought you'd say that."

Black Dragon Witch smiled softly. Her eyes held trust in me.

"Just be yourself as you always are. That's the most important thing. We can slowly teach you the ropes of politics."

"Ahaha. If you look at it a bit cynically, we'll monopolize the real power, so King of Death, just keep playing the role of the figurehead!"

"...Well, I won't deny that. But if I could, I'd gladly hand over this position to someone else. Do you want to know how many violent crimes occur every day now?"

"Ah, religious crimes are also very frequent! In the last ten days, 21 cases of extremism and terrorism were preemptively discovered!"

"Let's not talk about this anymore. It just makes our situation seem more pitiful..."

Hmm.

Being myself is the most important thing.

'Then.'

I looked around.

"Librarian! Head Librarian! Where are you!"

My voice echoed through the massive library. Then, a small shadow peeked out from behind a giant bookshelf. The Head Librarian of [Holed-Up Head Librarian], whom I hadn't seen in a long time.

"Hey, what are you doing there? Come here."

"Oh, but... but sir..."

The Head Librarian's lips trembled.

"How can a mere wretch like me dare to face the King of Death? My presence will only dirty your eyes. Please treat me as non-existent, just a speck of dust in the library..."

"Ah, stop your nonsense and just come here."

"Uh. Ugh. Uh..."

The Head Librarian weakly floated towards me. His long sleeves fluttered like the ears of a deflated Maltese dog.

"Speak, sir..."

"Bring out the next stage's book."

"What kind of Apocalypse do you wish?"

"Fairy tale."

"....."

The Head Librarian's lips sealed shut. I continued without hesitation.

"There's only one fairy tale book among the Apocalypses given to us. Give me that one."

".....Hmm. Indeed. A peculiar fate."

The Head Librarian's expression changed. As if he had never trembled before me, his eyes half-closed in a smirk.

"Fine. The Apocalypse you speak of is this one."

One of the floating books among the Head Librarian's collection flew towards us. As the Head Librarian opened the cover, information about the Apocalypse appeared.

+

[Me and Our Scapegoat]

Genre: Fairy Tale

Difficulty: A

Required Participants: 2 or more

*The serialization has been discontinued.

Description: Humanity in this world succeeded in creating a utopia. However, to maintain it, a special power source was needed. The screams of innocent children who had committed no sin. Sadly, to ensure the perfect happiness of 17 million people, one innocent child must endure. Thanks to advanced torture techniques and life-sustaining treatments, about five years of screams can be extracted from one child. Efficient!

Reason for Discontinuation: 118,000 years after the creation of utopia, all innocent children were exhausted. The utopia, having lost its power, came to a halt.

+

'That's right.'

This is the Apocalypse.

From the first time I saw it, I've been keeping it in mind.

"Everyone. I want to select this Apocalypse for our next stage."

"Huh?"

The guild leaders turned to look at me.

Among them, Black Dragon Witch tilted her head.

"A fairy tale book? Sorry, King of Death, but that fairy tale world probably doesn't have any significant resources or territory. It's also rated [A-rank] in difficulty... Do we really need to conquer it?"

"Yes, we do."

I looked into Black Dragon Witch's eyes.

"Up to now, we have chosen Apocalypses based on how useful they would be to the Tower. The martial arts secrets stored in [The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon] will enhance the Tower's power. Interactions with the SF world will greatly advance our scientific capabilities."

The Apocalypses we've conquered so far are as follows:

+

21st Floor: Great Library of All Knowledge

22nd Floor: The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon
(Genre: Martial Arts, Fusion)

23rd Floor: Chronicles of the Space Iron Knight (Genre: SF)

24th Floor: Daybreak Mountain Hut Diary (Genre: Mystery, History)

25th Floor: Tales of Sormewin Academy (Genre: Romance)

26th Floor: Festival City Apocalypse (Genre: Sports)

27th Floor: Bakery Street Epic (Genre: Cooking, Management)

+

After completing the mission in [Tales of Sormewin Academy], I stayed there for two weeks. During that time, other hunters conquered the 26th and 27th Floors. All the hunters with aliases have been diligently focusing on the conquests.

Now, only the 28th, 29th, and 30th Floors remain.

'But.'

I have my own plan. If things go as I hope... this 28th Floor will effectively be the last Apocalypse.

With that plan in mind, I continued.

"It's not just resources or technology that are useful to us. Heretic Inquisitor. You said it, right? Nearly a hundred thousand people are increasing the Tower's population every day."

"Hm."

"What we need now is a focal point. Unity."

Heretic Inquisitor blinked.

"I agree, but that's why we're proposing to establish you as King. You are the focal point of the Tower. We will soon arrange an appropriate position for you! Something grand like [Guild Alliance Leader] or [Council Chairman]."

I shook my head.

Guild Alliance Leader.

Such a title might tempt some, seeming like the highest seat of power in the Tower.

"Such deception won't work."

"Deception, you say?"

"It's not just me. Everyone here needs to gain people's support. It's not just me who truly governs the Tower. It's all of you. You need to gain support too so that the Tower can truly unite."

"....."

Silence fell around us.

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled.

"You have a point. But do you realize? King of Death, we bear grave sins. We have committed, and are committing, tremendous acts under the guise of ending chaos in the Tower. Regrettably, we lack moral justification!"

"...Heretic Inquisitor is right."

Black Dragon Witch muttered.

"We've done too much to be symbols."

"From now on, just do well. Please, do well."

"....."

"We're a team. I can't resolve religious issues as fiercely as the Heretic Inquisitor. I can't deal with gangsters like Viper. Politics, economy, security, I can't do as well as you in all of it. It's not false modesty; it's the truth."

But.

"I will never betray you. You can trust me."

Uniting these talented individuals is something I'm confident in.

"If there's a problem among you, I'll mediate. If a discussion is needed, I'll create a place for it. Trust me. Let's become one team."

"....."

The guild leaders were silent.

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled.

"Logical. But, King of Death, are you aware we lack political trust? We lack moral authority!"

"Yes."

I looked at each guild leader.

"Heretic Inquisitor, Black Dragon Witch, Countess, Viper, Paladin..."

The most flamboyant all-star members of the Tower.

And my comrades.

"Fight with me in this Apocalypse."

In this Apocalypse, all of us will participate.

Chapter 121: Hero

(3)

After hearing my request, my comrades remained silent for a long time. Perhaps they were reflecting on the half-life they had lived. Days smeared with purges.

"Really, you're asking for a difficult path."

It was only after a while that the Black Dragon Witch slowly opened her lips.

Her voice was close to a lament.

"People can become competent through effort. With effort, one can also become moral. Even a person of power. But a competent, moral person of power? That's nearly impossible. Simply, it's too difficult. ...A difficult path indeed."

"Someone once told me that the road to hell is paved with good intentions."

I reached out my hand towards the guild leaders.

"Then the road to heaven must be covered with countless evils."

There will be many who envy us. Those who stir up trouble for fun. Those who incite fights among people for power, or even agitators among the residents.

Such people exist.

Plenty of them.

Evil is toxic because it is ordinary.

"But that doesn't mean we have to give up. Let's show a slightly better world to those who have given up on the outside world and fled here."

I extended my hand. Not a gesture to shake hands with someone but rather a pose to gather several hands at once.

Like team members of a sport shouting "fighting" before a game, I quietly reached out my right hand towards the guild leaders.

"....."

"Ahaha."

While the Black Dragon Witch hesitated, the Heretic Inquisitor was the first to lay a hand. Slightly, my hand and the Heretic Inquisitor's palm overlapped.

"I don't mind! The moral legitimacy of a regime has a powerful appeal. And the King of Death is the only person who can gild us with morality. It would be a pity to miss such an opportunity!"

"Cough."

Viper laid his hand.

"I guess I'm now the successor of the Orthodox Faction. The old man always nagged me about remembering the mindset of the orthodox path. Well, think of it as paying respects to my teacher in the back room."

"Umm."

The Paladin laid his hand.

"I have been activating my skill since before the conversation started."

Lie Detection.

"Among those gathered here, no one has spoken any falsehood. More than anything, Kim Gong-Ja. I know that in [The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon] and [Tales of the Sormewin Academy], you've always run with an upright heart."

"....."

"I believe in your genuine attitude, your true love, and above all, your character. All revolutions fail. Then at least, let our revolution be remembered as the most beautiful failure, as I dedicate my life and soul to it."

"Umm."

The Countess laid her hand.

"I can't follow the talk of romantics. Fine. I'm just following the trend. I only hope that the stocks I've invested heavily in don't crash. Do your best, gentlemen."

"....."

Finally.

The Black Dragon Witch hesitantly laid her hand.

".....I can't promise much. I can't guarantee your success. I won't be able to abandon the methods I've used so far. But, yes."

Her black eyes scanned us.

"If we fail. If a time comes when one of us must die... I will be the first to die. That's the only promise I can make."

“Then I too make a promise.”

I smiled.

“I won't let anyone here die. Anywhere. Anytime.”

“You're recklessly issuing checks you can't cash. You....”

The Black Dragon Witch smirked bitterly. But she didn't retract her hand.

All six of us.

Our hands came together.

“Hmm. Good!”

The Holed-Up Head Librarian floated in the air, laughing.

“King of Death. Black Dragon Witch. Heretic Inquisitor.

Countess. Viper. Paladin. I designate these 6 as characters in [Me and Our Scapegoat]! When you open your eyes, you will be in a world where the Apocalypse is experiencing a sensational serialization cancellation. Be careful. This Apocalypse is quite different from the ones you've faced so far!"

The Holed-Up Head Librarian opened a book. Whoosh! Light flowed from the pages of the Revelations, falling onto our clasped hands.

"The difficulty of this Apocalypse is A grade!"

The light enveloped us.

"Unlike last time, I can't bestow much blessing on you. In this Apocalypse, constellations are alive. Alive and reigning. You will invade this Apocalypse as a sort of invasion force. Naturally, the constellations will see you as enemies."

The Holed-Up Head Librarian smiled faintly.

"King of Death. The constellations will especially regard you as an enemy!"

‘Enemy!’

Before I could even understand what that meant, our vision was completely covered in light. In fact, there was no need to try hard to understand the Holed-Up Head Librarian's words.

The world turned white, and before we could fully open our eyes to greet the new world...

[The Immortal Missionary of Happiness detects the intrusion.]

A sharp voice brushed through our minds.

Like an urgent siren, the voice surged continuously.

[The Immortal Missionary of Happiness warns you.]

[The Immortal Missionary of Happiness seeks to annihilate the intruders.]

[The Immortal Missionary of Happiness declares war on

you!]

Me and Our Scapegoat.

[The Immortal Missionary of Happiness despises 'you'.]

This fairy tale was a world ruled by a constellation who invaded Raviel's world.

In the story of the hero and the Demon King, the Demon King always lets down his guard.

The Demon King never reveals his full strength from the beginning. He dispatches his weakest minions first to the hero. The hero, initially weak at the start of the story, grows stronger by defeating progressively more powerful enemies.

Until he's ready to face the Demon King.

-I've been waiting for you.

The constellation of this fairy tale was different.

-How dare you antagonize my master!

The constellation revealed its fangs to us right from the start.

The first to sense the crisis among us was none other than my holy sword.

[Shiny detects the presence of a sister sword!]

The hilt at my waist vibrated, as if alerting us to the crisis. Before our vision was fully cleared, Shiny urgently cried out.

[The nature of 'The Immortal Missionary of Happiness' and the 'Sacrifice Sword' match!]

[The Immortal Missionary of Happiness is the fourth sister sword left by Leafanta Aegim, 'Sacrifice'!]

As soon as Shiny's warning ended, our vision expanded.

Blue sky.

Our party was plummeting from the sky. Right after being summoned to this world, we were briefly floating, so I didn't realize it. But our bodies were swiftly pulled by gravity.

Whooooosh!

The wind brushing against my forehead. Blood caressing my hair. We were free-falling.

"Umm!"

That's when the Heretic Inquisitor grabbed my forearm. As we were being scattered by the wind, he managed to hold onto me first. Skilfully wrapping his legs around my waist, he then formed hand seals.

"King of Death, grab my right foot! Don't ever let go! Holy Technique. God of Teleportation!"

I clung to the Heretic Inquisitor's right foot as instructed. The next moment, the Heretic Inquisitor moved next to the Black Witch.

"Black Witch!"

"Right! Give me your leg!"

As if it were the most natural thing, the Black Witch grabbed the Heretic Inquisitor's left foot. "Ahaha," the Heretic Inquisitor's laughter mingled with the wind. Hearing his laughter, I felt the crushing gravity on all of us lighten momentarily.

"Holy Technique. God of Teleportation!"

The Heretic Inquisitor successively gathered the Countess, Paladin, and Viper. We hung onto the Heretic Inquisitor like piglets clinging to their mother. Viper, apparently quite embarrassed by the situation, let out a loud yelp.

"Hey! Why am I the last?!"

"Because you are the most useless among us! Head of Celestial Martial Guild! Losing you would not significantly affect our strength!"

"You damn religious zealot?"

As five of us clung together, even the Heretic Inquisitor could not form his hand seals. There was simply no room. Nor was there time. The ground was getting closer every second.

"Well done, little one!"

However, as if waiting for us all to gather, the Black Witch shouted loudly.

"Everyone, say you agree with my skill! Quick! Quick!"

"Yes!" "I agree!" "Alright then!" "I agree." "Damn it, I'm in!"

"Teleport!"

All six of us teleported at once. Instant teleportation. Unlike the Heretic Inquisitor, who needed to form hand seals, the Black Witch's skill activated just by physical contact.

The same technique we relied on when facing [Demon King of Autumn Rain].

Thus, we safely landed on the ground.

-You won't escape!

However, the ground itself was far from safe.

-Sing, my apostles!

Hundreds of thousands. Maybe even millions.

Across the horizon, creatures in the form of 'children' were standing. Each one of them identical to the apostles who had invaded Raviel's world. Hundreds of thousands, perhaps millions of children, were surrounding us layer by layer.

-La.

And they sang.

-La, la.

-Lu. Lala.

-La.

A million voices of acapella harmonized. A hundred thousand basses, a hundred thousand sopranos, a hundred thousand whistlings overlapped. The children, seemingly delighted, danced in circles. With each step they took, the ground vibrated lightly.

Boom. Boom. Boom.

-La.

This was the difficulty of an A grade Apocalypse.

A world that sees us as [enemies], doesn't let its guard down, and tries to annihilate us from the start.

"Ugh!"

The group hastily raised their auras. But it wasn't enough.

Within less than a minute of transitioning into the Apocalypse, we were under a total attack. An onslaught of happy dreams, too overwhelming for any individual aura to handle.

"Countess!"

The Heretic Inquisitor shouted.

"Lend me money!"

"Damn, feels like I'm gonna break the bank...!"

"Yes! Better than your head getting broken!"

"Interest 15%! Compounded!"

"If it's not for free, I'm not interested!"

"What, that's nonsense...."

"Nisha!"

The Paladin yelled. Initially, I didn't understand what 'Nisha' meant. But seeing the Paladin's gaze directed at the Countess, I realized. Nisha was the Countess's real name.

"Shut up and take out your wallet! I'll kill you!"

"Ugh. Damn it! Withdrawal, unlimited!"

The Countess pulled out a pouch from her attire. A pouch with a snail pattern. She untied the gold thread at its opening. Chrrrr! Countless gold coins poured onto the ground.

"User change! Heretic Inquisitor!"

"Ahaha, thank you!"

The Heretic Inquisitor quickly formed hand seals.

"Holy Technique, God of Donation!"

Light burst from within his hands. White light enveloped the pile of gold, turning the gold coins into dust. In exchange, the aura enveloping us was strengthened unbelievably.

"Holy Miracle, Aura Enhancement and Immunity to Mental Attacks! Enhancing targets, Countess, Heretic Inquisitor, King of Death, Black Witch, Paladin, Viper. Duration of enhancement, undetermined. The gold will captivate our hands. Technique complete!"

"Ah! My money!"

The Countess screamed. Gold coins kept pouring out of the pouch, immediately evaporating into light. Overwhelmed, cat ears sprung atop the Countess's head.

"My money! Nyah! My blood-like money! More precious than my blood!"

"Ahaha. Should I donate blood?"

"No need! If I go bankrupt, the tower goes bankrupt too! Get it! If you don't want to eat dog food tomorrow morning, better start the raid!"

From falling from the sky, to a million songs, we managed to escape the relentless crisis without a moment's rest.

Only then could we take a closer look at the main culprit who attacked our party.

-Tch. Are you capable enough to engulf The Idol, The Pity, and The Prayer? I stealthily hid my presence and ambushed you, but...!

The constellation floated in the air.

It was similar to the Prayer Sword, entirely red in color. However, slightly darker than the Prayer Sword. A child wrapped in dark red blood trembled in the air.

-But it's useless! Leader of the traitors! My loyalty to Leafanta Aegim will never falter. I will kill and eliminate you, ensuring no obstruction to the path my master walks.

Indeed.

I grasped the hilt and drew out the holy sword.

'Raviel became a constellation by stabbing her heart with a fragment of the [Goddess of Protection].'

Even just a fragment had the potential to become a constellation.

Then it's possible for a fragment itself to evolve into a [New Constellation].

The Sacrifice Sword had evolved from a fragment of the [Goddess of Protection] into [The Immortal Missionary of Happiness].

-Apostles! Eliminate them!

And the Sacrifice Sword still remained loyal to Leafanta Aegim.

Unlike the other sister swords that were helplessly absorbed by me, the Sacrifice Sword had gathered its strength. As if anticipating my arrival, it ambushed us. That was the whole story of the current situation.

"....."

I gripped the holy sword and stared ahead.

Literally hundreds of thousands of troops were rushing towards us from all sides.

The apostles sang instead of shouting, and danced instead of thrusting spears. But they were more threatening than any battle cry and more lethal than any spear or sword.

Our side, six grand people.

The enemy, innumerable.

"Countess."

"What is it!"

"You still have plenty in your wallet, right?"

It's the perfect moment for me to shine.

"What?"

"Let's go big for this stage."

At the moment the Countess blinked, I quietly recited.

"Ghoul Reincarnation."

Chapter 122: Utopia

(1)

A skill I frequently use. The exact ability of Ghoul Reincarnation is as follows:

+

[Ghoul Reincarnation]

Rank: SSS

Effect: You summon those you've personally killed. The deceased do not inherit their abilities from life. However, if you wish, they can inherit their memories and appearances from when they were alive. If you do not wish it, they will only be summoned as monsters.

*However, you can only summon once a week.

+

An important point here is the clause, "If I wish, the deceased can inherit their memories and appearances from when they were alive."

In other words, if I don't wish so, they are summoned as monsters without memories or appearances.

Just like now.

-Grooooooar!

My shadow spread out. From the shadow that lay like a carpet, white bones arose. Five thousand skeletons. Although it had been a while since I last saw them, I didn't feel any joy. They are, after all, evidence of my death.

'But now, I need these creatures.'

The apostles of [The Immortal Missionary of Happiness] were swarming in. Singing in chorus.

-La. Lura, Lu.

-La, la.

The melody they sang buried the listeners in forcefully happy memories. Even a martial artist with mental fortitude would find it hard to resist such an attack. Even the followers of the Demonic Cult collapsed at wedding halls.

But.

-Grooooooar!

The skeletons roared unaffectedly, unfazed.

The mere five thousand skeletons charged. They aggressively rushed towards the tens and hundreds of millions of troops. Not because the skeletons were exceptionally brave or resistant to mental attacks, but because...

-Ahah. Indeed.

The Guardian Spirit spoke beside me.

-They have no 'memories', so mental attacks don't work on them.

That was true.

The song of the apostles of [The Immortal Missionary of Happiness] was undoubtedly powerful. But this power only affected beings with memories. To the summoned creatures without any memories, it was no different than a normal song.

-La...

-Keeek! Kiik!

And a normal song has no offensive power.

The skeletons slaughtered the apostles. They stabbed with daggers, bit with teeth, and clawed with their bony hands. Each time, apostles were swept away. In terms of physical attacks, the apostles were utterly incompetent.

-Ugh.

The constellation watching the battle from the air bit its lip. Despite the overflowing melody from all around, every word uttered by the constellation pierced my ears. Probably direct telepathy.

-Pointlessly resisting...! It's merely a matter of overwhelming with numbers!

I had to agree.

"Yes. Certainly so."

No matter how lacking in physical attack power, a hundred thousand is a hundred thousand, and a million is a million. Numbers themselves exert formidable violence. That's why [The Immortal Missionary of Happiness] confidently launched a surprise attack.

"But you've already shown us how to defeat you."

-What?

Did the constellation read the movement of my lips? It reacted.

"The numbers are a secondary problem. Every army has its weakness. The moment it was revealed that you know no pain and only spread happiness, it became clear.

The skeletons were being overwhelmed by the numbers. However, they hadn't been subdued yet. They would hold out for at least a minute or two more. And that was all the time we needed.

"The method to counter you is as good as exposed."

I gripped the holy sword tightly.

"Black Dragon Witch."

"Speak up! I can't hear well because of the song!"

"Yes. Please float the mirrors."

I enhanced my voice with aura. The Black Dragon Witch quickly came to my side. Having heard my request, she had already spread six mirrors around us.

"Done. But what are you going to do with the mirrors?"

"Do you remember when we fought [Demon King of Autumn Rain]? When the Demon King shot beams, you used the mirrors to reflect and weaken them. Conversely, you amplified our attacks. We're going to launch the same kind of attack."

The Black Dragon Witch understood my intention.

"You want to shoot your aura like a beam? That's fine, but are you confident you can produce an output as massive as [Demon King of the Autumn Rain]? Unless it's powerful enough, even reflecting it with my mirrors won't be enough."

"Don't worry about the output. Just focus on spreading it 'widely'."

"I don't fully get your plan, but... Okay, go ahead."

The mirrors flew into the air. East, West, North, South.

When light hit one mirror, it was immediately reflected to the others, enough to envelop the vast field.

'This is enough.'

I nodded and let aura flow into the sword hilt. Woosh! Blood-like red aura ignited along the blade.

'Even though I can't push forward with brute force like Preta, or cut through the world with enlightenment like my master.'

If these apostles are the enemy.

If these comrades are my allies.

I can exert an invincible divine might.

『What happens if you can only wield a sword with hunger?』

Because the martial arts I inherited are of such nature.

『You can slice through anyone who has never experienced hunger in one strike.』

『Thus, half of the orthodox martial artists fall into a state of absolute inferiority.』

Apostles who know only 'happiness' can never be my adversaries.

I swung my sword towards the mirrors raised by the Black Dragon Witch.

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The First Form.

Sword of Starving Death.

The army was cleaved apart.

The red aura carried the ultimate technique of Demonic Heavenly God Art. The mirrors reflected the technique. Once, twice, three times, four times, five times, six times. With each reflection, the red aura split the wilderness in two.

Whoosh!

The strike was far weaker compared to the Demon King's blow. Incredibly trivial compared to my master's strike. But still, the apostles of happiness simply 'brushed against' the red aura and were annihilated.

—What...?!

Startled, the constellation gazed down at the plain.

No wonder it was flustered. My strike vaporized thousands, perhaps tens of thousands of apostles. The plain that was swarming with apostles was now empty, swept clean by the red aura.

"Black Dragon Witch! Keep going!"

Of course, I had no intention of being satisfied with just one attack.

"Please keep shifting the mirrors too!"

"Goodness... I see now. Your martial arts and those minions of the constellation are completely antagonistic to each other!"

The Black Dragon Witch, surprised, adeptly adjusted the mirrors' positions. Realizing that my attack merely needed to touch the enemies to annihilate them, regardless of the aura's output, was crucial.

Then, it was important to reflect the attack through as many different paths as possible.

"Don't worry about me, keep attacking! King of Death! I'll handle the mirrors!"

The mirrors noisily flew around in the air. The Black Dragon Witch, upon making a judgment, immediately acted on it.

Whoosh!

Trusting the Black Dragon Witch's words, I unleashed another strike. Just executing a familiar martial technique, yet tens of thousands of enemies were swept away. The combined attack of the second and third rankers, me and the Black Dragon Witch, unilaterally ravaged the constellation's troops.

"Ahaha! Amazing! What a splendid sight!"

The Heretic Inquisitor employed Holy Techniques to protect us from the enemies' mental attacks.

"Hurry, finish it quickly! I've already broken two of my emergency savings banks!"

The Countess poured astronomical funds to back up the Heretic Inquisitor.

"Viper! Enemies escaped that way! Take care of them!"

The Paladin commanded the battlefield, giving real-time instructions.

"Okay! Damn, all the cool scenes are being stolen by the Demonic Cult!"

The remnants of the enemy forces that the skeletons couldn't stop were dealt with by Viper.

'We can do this.'

Just six of us.

'United, we are invincible!'

Yet, us six managed to overwhelm an army comparable to a whole world.

'Look.'

The residents living in the tower must be gathered in the square right now, witnessing our prowess. They will broadcast or record this scene and spread it to the outside world.

The spectacle of just six people repelling a million apostles.

'Look!'

Be thrilled.

Witness the fact that nothing is impossible in this tower.

See clearly how we are not oppressed by the world, but how we engulf it.

And harbor hope.

-This...

The constellation contorted its face.

-How dare you, this group of heinous heretics, invade my utopia! There is no misery in this world! Not even memories of misery!

The constellation waved its hand. A hologram-like scene unfolded in the sky, showing the lives of the apostles in this world.

-La, la.

-Lu.

The apostles didn't live in houses. They had no need to form cities. There was no such thing as hunger for them. They didn't need to mine resources to sustain life. In the form of children, the apostles were always happily singing anywhere and everywhere.

-Kyaaaak!

However.

At the heart of this world, an innocent child was impaled on a sword.

-Aaack! Ugh, ack! Aaack!!

I couldn't understand how the innocent child's screams became the [power] of this world. Probably, the sword embedded in the child's chest was creating some kind of law.

-The world I've built is much more moderate than your worthless junkyard!

Ignoring the child's screams, the constellation shouted.

-Don't even think of being hypocritical in front of me, invaders! I have followed Leafanta Aegim and seen numerous worlds. In every world, screams never ceased. Hundreds of thousands! Millions! Tens of millions! Hundreds of millions!

The sword named 'Sacrifice' howled.

-On the other hand, my world sacrifices just one. Only one! By making a single sacrificial lamb, my apostles live without knowing pain. If I commit one evil, you are ignoring billions of others. How dare such scum belittle my world!

I understand.

Undoubtedly, the constellation must have pondered and struggled before inventing such a mechanism. And did so with good intentions.

If the road to hell is paved with good intentions, then this is the hell [The Immortal Missionary of Happiness] chose.

'This world is just an extreme example.'

The challenges we, as managers of the tower, will face are no different. When food is scarce. When resources are depleted. As those responsible for the tower, we will have to sacrifice someone.

-Ha!

Seeing my silence, the constellation scoffed.

-At least you have the conscience not to spout nonsense. If you cannot answer, then be gone! I will never recognize you as a new master!

"No. I have an answer."

I stepped forward.

-An answer? Ha. What answer could you possibly have?

It's easy to recite the right theory, "Sacrifice is still wrong."

But the right theory is not for uttering with the mouth. It's for living with the body. It's only valid when you can take responsibility for your own words. When you have the ability to realize them.

I haven't forgotten this.

"I will kill all of you."

-What?

"I will kill all of you and make you my Ghouls."

-.....

The constellation seemed not to understand my words.

-What are you talking about...

"Those killed by my sword are all collected as Ghouls. If I wish, they can be summoned with all their memories intact. I will kill all of you. Then summon you again to live in this world."

I raised the holy sword.

"You want to live happily forever, right? I'll let you. Live without suffering, without remembering, just singing as you do now. I'll make it happen."

-.....

"Ghouls don't need to eat anything to live. I'll give you the world you desire."

Simple.

Kill all the million apostles.

Then summon them back to this world.

Give them back the memories of their living selves.

Nothing changes.

"This isn't just for you."

To the residents watching us now.

To the countless humans who will watch, I declared.

"There are irredeemable villains. Unforgivable sinners. Spirits who want to live but cannot. From now on, I will execute them with my own hands."

-Execution...?

"Kill and revive them as my Ghouls. They will be exiled to my shadow, forever bearing their sins."

Thud.

The songs echoing to the horizon stopped.

The songs that filled the sky and earth thus brought silence to the world when they ceased.

The constellation looked at me incredulously.

-Lies... All villains and spirits. How can a mere mortal...

"The utopia you brag about creating here, I can create the same. And in my world, I don't even need the screams of an innocent child."

-.....

Before entering this Apocalypse, the Black Witch asked me.

If I was prepared to become a king.

"It's a simple story."

Yes.

If every world is hell, then I'll just become a bigger hell.

"My hell is more righteous than yours."

This is the path of kingship I've chosen.

Chapter 123: Utopia (2)

-.....

The Constellation fell silent. [The Immortal Missionary of Happiness], drenched in a blood-red armor, bit its lip quietly. Its eyes wavered. Not like ripples on the surface of water, but more like the deep currents of the ocean. The Constellation remained silent for a long time.

“.....King of Death.”

As the Constellation became silent, so did the army of apostles. A brief respite emerged on the battlefield that had been relentlessly raging from the beginning. Meanwhile, the Paladin approached me.

"Executing all villains and sinners, what do you mean by that?"

Behind the Paladin, the other companions also looked at me.

Puzzlement. Astonishment. Shock. Eyes, each holding different emotions, were directed at me.

"It's exactly as I said."

I met their gazes squarely.

"I know you've purged many people in managing the tower. It must still be happening covertly right now."

"....."

"I can't say that the way you've been doing things so far is wrong and needs to be corrected. I don't have the confidence or the ability to manage the tower better than you. But, if in the future you must eliminate someone, just bring them to me instead."

"Ahah?"

The Heretic Inquisitor tilted his head. He tilted it once to the left, then once to the right. After two nods, the Heretic Inquisitor smiled as if he understood what I meant.

"That's a great idea, King of Death! Why didn't I think of it until now? Truly a wonderful idea!"

The Black Dragon Witch frowned.

"What are you talking about?"

"Think about it. The King of Death's ability isn't just about summoning the target. It's about gifting them with their memories from their lifetime! Then, we can use the King of Death as a [moving prison]!"

Ahahat, laughter echoed across the silent plain.

"It requires no food! It doesn't consume resources! Imagine if the King of Death takes in a serial killer. Just by ordering, 'Never commit murder again,' the murderer will be eternally forbidden from committing crimes!"

"....."

The Black Dragon Witch's eyes gradually widened. The Countess and the Paladin did the same. They were confused, but they quickly calculated the advantages proposed by the

Heretic Inquisitor.

"Using the King of Death's skill as a prison...."

"Yes! Ahahat. The criminals would be quite terrified. And isn't it beautiful? The King of Death. A king who imprisons and manages those who deserve death, there couldn't be a more fitting alias!"

"As the leader of Sang-Ryun, I would like to offer my opinion."

The Countess took out her fan and tapped her lower lip with it.

"Not bad at all. You all must know, the tower has a significantly higher crime rate than the outside world. Prisons are chronically suffering from overcapacity, and maintaining those numerous prisons is no small expense."

"That's a sound argument. As the leader of the Temple of the Omnipotent God, I naturally agree!"

The Heretic Inquisitor grinned, effectively turning this into an impromptu meeting of the highest guild leaders.

"The purpose of a prison is [isolating criminals] and [preventing re-offenses]. But no matter how excellent the rehabilitation programs are, it's hard to achieve 100% [prevention of re-offenses]. The human heart is as difficult as it is beautiful. But the King of Death can completely prevent re-offenses!"

"....."

The Paladin hesitated.

"I... I'm not sure. I acknowledge it's efficient. But something feels wrong. Isn't it too much to load on one person, the King of Death?"

"The King of Death is already housing two thousand martial artists from the Demonic Cult and the Orthodox Faction! There must be more we don't know about! If he's already holding two thousand, any more numbers are meaningless."

".....I abstain."

Meanwhile, the Black Dragon Witch was intently looking at my face. Her black eyes were mixed with various emotions.

"Are you really okay with this?"

I felt her regret. The Black Dragon Witch was feeling responsible. Responsible for having dragged me into their world.

"It's okay."

I spoke sincerely. I was grateful. Even though it was a situation I had jumped into willingly, she felt responsible. The Black Dragon Witch is a kind and noble person. Perhaps one day I'll get to hear her real name.

I turned my head and looked up at the Constellation.

"What will you do?"

-.....

"If you want to keep fighting us, I won't stop you. But the outcome is already determined. The utopia you boast of, I will take it under my wing."

The Constellation broke its long silence.

-.....I am not just a fragment of the [Goddess of Protection], but also [The Immortal Missionary of Happiness], commanding a million apostles. If you take me in, all the apostles will also be subjected to you. Tell me, how can you guarantee that you won't use the apostles as private soldiers for evil deeds?

"I won't use them."

I asserted firmly.

"When you invaded Raviel's world, I only summoned the followers of the Demonic Cult. I could have summoned the martial artists of the Orthodox Faction since I had killed them too, but I didn't. It's against the principle. Those people shouldn't follow the orders of the Vice-Lord of the Demonic Cult."

-.....

"I will let the million or ten million of your apostles live happily in this world as they have done until now."

The Constellation slowly lowered its head.

When overwhelmed by force and subdued by logic, a person finally utters the last words hidden in their heart.

The Constellation, wearing the guise of a child, murmured softly.

-Ah, Leafanta Aegim...

The Constellation's body began to melt away.

-Once again, to meet you...

Blood rained from the sky. The blood hit the ground, congealed, and slowly solidified into the shape of a sword. The sword, lacking a mouth, couldn't fully express the Constellation's last words.

[The Sacrifice Sword speaks, waiting for your disposition.]

Only the sword expressed its intent, relayed by the tower.

[My name is Sacrifice.]

[I can transform someone's pain into the happiness of others.]

[The purer and nobler the suffering, the more happiness is amplified.]

I walked towards the sword stuck in the ground.

Raising my Holy Sword, I struck down the blood-stained sword.

[The Goddess of Protection absorbs a fragment of herself.]

The sword shattered.

[The Goddess of Protection's existence becomes better defined.]

Simultaneously, the apostles surrounding us also melted away. Hundreds of thousands, millions of children who had covered the horizon, crumbled. Even as they collapsed, the children were still smiling.

Ssshhhh-

As the apostles crumbled, releasing red liquid, the horizon quickly turned into a crimson horizon.

[Stage Clear.]

[Today, the 28th floor has been cleared.]

In the shallow sea of blood.

The Black Dragon Witch stared blankly at the blood rising to her calves.

".....Really, information is crucial in clearing a stage. As long as you know the weakness, you can easily conquer it. When we first dropped into the midst of the enemy, I was preparing to flee far away. But to think we'd clear it so quickly..."

"Eh? What? What's happening?"

The Viper, who was busy dealing with the apostles and skeletons, was utterly confused. He was the only one among us who hadn't been listening to what I was saying and was just doing his job.

"Why are these guys suddenly turning into red paint? What's going on?"

The Paladin sighed.

"It's good to see you haven't changed, Viper..."

"...What's that supposed to mean? Hey, are you into me or something?"

"Ahahat. That would be interesting, but probably not. The deputy leader of the Vigilante Corps has been seeing someone for a long time!"

The Viper's eyes widened in surprise.

"What? Really? Who is it?"

"I can't disclose that much. Find out for yourself!"

Nobody told Viper. It seemed like common knowledge to everyone else. I was also curious and considered opening the [Character Window] to read her psychological state, but decided against it as it would be too intrusive.

"Wow, that was a truly magnificent performance!"

The Countess approached and patted my back.

"I was prepared to empty the bottomless pot of money for at least a day! But as expected, King of Death. Who was the first person to take notice of you when you were a rookie?"

The Countess was happy we successfully navigated the surprise attack. I didn't want to dampen her spirits, but I wasn't planning on resting just yet. This stage was only a stepping stone from the start.

"Sorry, Countess. The conquest isn't over yet."

"Hm? What do you mean? Didn't the notification say that the 28th floor was cleared?"

"Yes. The 28th floor is done."

I nodded.

"But today, I plan to clear all the way up to the 30th floor."

At that remark, even the Black Dragon Witch, who was blankly staring at the sea of blood, Viper, who was pestering the Paladin about who she was dating, and the Heretic Inquisitor, who seemed to be pondering the next move, all turned to look at me simultaneously.

"Today? In one day?"

The Black Dragon Witch was surprised. It wasn't a tone of doubt about its feasibility. She no longer doubted my abilities. She was just concerned about my condition.

"King of Death, or rather, Kim Gong-Ja, you've been pushing yourself too hard. Ever since entering [Tales of Sormewin Academy], you haven't had a day's rest."

'Ah.'

She must be right from her perspective.

I had been causing all sorts of chaos, masquerading it as a honeymoon with Raviel. But to others, it must have seemed like I hadn't stopped for a moment.

"Just take some time to rest. Humans wear down under stress. If you don't balance work and rest wisely, you'll eventually collapse. Really. You might not realize it yet since you're young..."

I smiled.

She was genuinely concerned about others, and it was beautiful to see.

"You're right. I have been overdoing it."

"Right? So, take a break from conquests for a while..."

"That's why I'll finish it all today and then rest."

The Black Dragon Witch held her forehead in exasperation.

"You're not listening at all! Please, just rest!"

"Black Dragon Witch. The tower's population increases by tens of thousands daily. Even if 99 out of 100 newcomers are good, there will be 1 criminal. That means 1,000 criminals increase every day."

"....."

"With 10 criminals, it's organized crime. With 100, it's a mafia. With 1,000, it's a warlord. Right now, a new warlord is emerging every day. We can't just keep focusing on Apocalypses."

I spoke calmly.

"We need to finish as quickly as possible and return to managing the tower. It's for our sake, for the residents, and for the newcomers."

"Put that way..."

The Black Dragon Witch bit her lip.

"If you put it that way, what can I say..."

"Don't worry."

I grinned and extended a fist to the Black Dragon Witch.

"I'll make sure to rest properly when I do. I doubt anyone rests as well as I do. If you see how I rest with Raviel, you'll be surprised."

"I don't want to see lovey-dovey newlyweds..."

"If you're so concerned, help me prepare a ring later. I need to gift Raviel a ring, but I'm clueless about these things."

"Haah."

The Black Dragon Witch sighed deeply, covering her forehead.

"Right... the most beautiful ring for the most beautiful girl. How did I end up styling a kid from head to toe..."

"I'm always grateful."

"Enough. If we talk about gratitude... no, let's not. It's embarrassing in front of everyone. I realized it when I saw you at Sormewin, King of Death, you really have no shame, do you?"

Despite her grumbling, the Black Dragon Witch went along with my suggestion.

She, along with the other leaders of the tower, knew it was time to gradually return to management. They were not only hunters conquering the tower but also administrators managing it.

It was time to end our days in the library.

"Transfer."

Whooosh!

We returned to the library in phases.

Hunters were gathered in the library. They had seen live broadcasts of us six overpowering a million apostles. Perhaps because of that, they respectfully kept their distance.

A staggering gap.

The authority of the top rankers was firmly established by this display.

'Okay. Good.'

This was the atmosphere I wanted. Proving our rankings through sheer ability, and as a [united team]. For the time being, no one would dare cause discord.

“Hmm.”

There was one more observer of us.

The Head Librarian of the Great Library, with chin resting on hand, stared at us intently.

"Welcome back. Congratulations. I thought you'd struggle a bit more with the conquest, but the synergy you create together far exceeded my expectations. I never imagined the world under the Constellation's rule would be wrapped up so quickly."

Despite the congratulatory words, the Head Librarian's expression was flat.

'It can't be helped.'

[The Holed-Up Head Librarian] is a lover of stories.

He adores characters overcoming adversity, unexpected challenges, and unpredictable resolutions. Overwhelming victories or defeats don't suit his taste.

But I knew how to tempt the story aficionado.

‘Character Window.’

Text floated before my eyes.

+

Name: Holed-Up Head Librarian

Favorability: 95

Preferred Genres: [Fusion], [Romance], [Mystery], [Adventure], [Horror], [History], [War], [Sports], [SF], [Mythology], [Fairy Tale]...

Disliked Genres: None

Preferred Characters: [Fictional Characters], [Constellation Killer], [King of Death]

Disliked Characters: None

Preferred Plots: [Story]

Disliked Plots: [Serialization Cancellation]

Psychological State: 'Well, The Immortal Missionary of Happiness was simply too incompatible with the Demonic Heavenly God Art. Bad luck. Tsk, tsk. Foolish thing. Had it anticipated its disadvantage and sought reinforcements from other Constellations, there might have been a fight.'

+

I nodded.

‘Got it.’

My name was added to the Librarian's preferred characters.

[Constellation Killer] was his most cherished character, and now [King of Death] was listed alongside. This meant I had risen to a position comparable to [Constellation Killer].

"Head Librarian."

"Hm. What Apocalypse will you choose next?"

The Head Librarian smiled, his robe fluttering.

"If you wish, I can personally recommend one. Since the fairy tale ended too quickly, how about a myth next? It's grand and dangerous, but the rewards are unimaginable. Or..."

"The character you love the most is Leafanta Aegim, isn't it?"

I interrupted the Head Librarian.

"How do I compare to him?"

"Uhhh? Well, of course... It's hard to rank you two. You and the Constellation Killer have completely opposite natures!"

The Head Librarian stroked his chin.

"Let's see. If the Constellation Killer is a man burdened with all the misfortune and suffering of the world, then the King of Death... you're like a chocolate ice cream! You look black and bitter on the outside, but surprisingly sweet when tasted!"

Regardless of the appropriateness of the analogy.

"Our next Apocalypse is decided."

"What will it be?"

"The Leafanta Aegim Epic."

"....."

The Head Librarian hesitated.

"When we went to the snowy mountain after clearing [The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon], you showed it to me."

Then, in front of the giant dragon corpse, the Head Librarian had said that being killed by Leafanta Aegim was his dream. He showed us a precious, worn-out leather book, read countless times.

[Leafanta Aegim's Epic].

That book would still be hidden in the Head Librarian's possession.

"King of Death...?"

The Head Librarian's lips curved slightly.

"Yes."

"I know you consider the Constellation Killer as your rival, but [Leafanta Aegim's Epic] is not an Apocalypse...? I can only introduce you to Apocalypses, worlds that tragically faced serialization cancellation."

The Head Librarian's lips trembled slightly.

"[Leafanta Aegim's Epic] is still an ongoing story. I absolutely must not intervene. I cannot grant your request..."

"But."

I looked straight into the Head Librarian's eyes.

"You want to see it, don't you?"

"....."

"You said it yourself, the Constellation Killer is your favorite character. And I'm comparable to him."

The owner of the Great Library of All Knowledge.

The constellation who loved books more than anyone.

Therefore, I threw an 'irresistible temptation' at the story aficionado.

“A scene with your favorite characters together. Don't you want to see it?”

The genre of the next stage I chose.

It was a crossover.

Chapter 124:

Utopia (3)

Those captivated by stories face a cruel fate.

Not merely those who enjoy stories, but those obsessed, those gone mad, deeply engrossed to the point of dedicating half their lives to tales.

For them, reality is merely a world that cannot become a story. There are no dramatic twists, no shocking endings. People are just people, never transforming into characters.

Disappointment with reality.

Contempt for humanity.

And above all, worship of stories.

Disappointment, contempt, and worship define those captivated by stories. That's why they rave when a story unfolds in reality and cheer when people become characters.

They haven't lost the warmth in their hearts.

They simply wait for moments to rave and cheer.

"....."

The ultimate reader stands before me.

"Leafanta Aegim and... your crossover."

This person built a library out of love for stories.

"Certainly, it's an attractive proposition, but..."

The library he built is so vast and grand it covers a whole world, known as the Great Library of All Thoughts.

"However, I can only provide Apocalypses. That's the rule I've set. Every story has the right to conclude on its own, and I cannot rashly intervene..."

He's trembling now.

'He's wavering.'

I'm convinced. The Head Librarian will ultimately be persuaded. No real-world logic can convince him, but the phrase "Don't you want to see the story?"

That alone can lure him to hell.

"Ah. If you don't want to, just forget it."

It's an irresistible offer.

"I'm just giving you a generous proposal. To create a scene with your favorite characters together. If you don't like it, just say no."

"....."

"But you really want to see it, don't you?"

The Head Librarian's face betrays his emotions in real-time. Agony, dilemma, and desire for an impossible crossover, a sumptuous dessert.

"I am bound by a contract with the tower."

He speaks with a warm breath.

"Not all Constellations are bound by contracts with the tower. Only those who have made a pact can enter. I'm like a tenant, in exchange for renting a floor, I've taken on various 'constraints'."

"What kind of constraints?"

"Only to provide humans with 'Apocalypses'..."

The Head Librarian gestures.

With each motion, books swirling around him fall to the ground.

"And an Apocalypse, while having various meanings, does not include [Leafanta Aegim's Epic]."

These books were his bodyguards. When hunters attacked with intent, he overpowered them using the power of these books.

"A contract is a contract... I can't just violate it at will. The tower, the tower's master, would be very angry with me. I don't want to anger the landlord. Ah, as they say, a tenant is weak to their landlord..."

In other words.

The Head Librarian is disarming himself.

"Just for your reference..."

With tens of books fallen, the Head Librarian, devoid of his power, looks at me.

"I, in fact, am not mighty in terms of personal strength..."

"....."

"Like many Constellations, I have special powers, but I'm surprisingly clumsy in battle. Without my books, I'm just a weak reader. So... you understand, Gong-Ja...?"

Indeed. Understood.

"Yes. You shouldn't break the contract."

I stride towards the Head Librarian. As I get closer, he nervously interlocks his long, thick sleeves and looks up at me anxiously.

"Unless it's for an 'unavoidable reason'."

I grab and lift the Head Librarian by the collar.

He's surprisingly light. Despite the long, thick sleeves, there's no resistance when I lift him.

"Ugh...!"

The Head Librarian gasps.

"Hand over [Leafanta Aegim's Epic]."

"Ah..."

The tremble on his lips intensifies. Threat and coercion. Despite being a Constellation threatened by a mere hunter, the Head Librarian doesn't resist.

"It's outrageous... After all the kindness I've shown you, after I trusted you... To betray me like this! Ah, the injustice. This is why countless stories warn not to trust humans..."

Such poor acting skills.

I smirk and grip his collar tighter. The Head Librarian gasps, "Hik!"

"Hand it over."

"....."

"Or I'll kill you. You pervert."

The Head Librarian's face gradually clouds over. We're staging a drama, but he senses sincerity in my voice.

Of course.

A threat to deceive the tower must contain some truth.

"Pervert, you say. Gong-Ja, that's a bit harsh...?"

"Collecting people's hair and nails and dreaming of being killed by your favorite character, isn't that perverted? Wishing to die at the hands of the character you love most, is that normal?"

The Head Librarian shuts up.

"Ah, right. I'm one of your favorite characters too."

I grin.

"How about it? Want me to fulfill your wish right now?"

"Right now...?"

"Want to die by my hand, here?"

The Head Librarian flinches and shrinks. He trembles as if struck by lightning, desire and longing in his eyes. Slowly, with trembling hands, he pulls out something from his bosom.

[Leafanta Aegim's Epic].

A worn book, stained by repeated readings, the most cherished among countless volumes, always carried by the Head Librarian.

"I will give it to you..."

He offers me this precious item, more valuable than his life.

"Well done."

I don't release his collar, instead snatching [Leafanta Aegim's Epic] with one hand. "Ah," the Head Librarian opens his mouth. His face is a mess, a blend of ecstasy and self-loathing.

+

[Leafanta Aegim's Epic]

Genre: Unavailable for current grade.

Difficulty: Unavailable for current grade.

Participant Limit: Unavailable for current grade.

*The serialization is ongoing.

Description: Unavailable for current grade.

+

"Hmm."

So, books not permitted by the Head Librarian are unreadable. An intriguing discovery.

I look down at the Head Librarian, still holding him.

"It's not visible? I can't read it."

"Well, you can see the Apocalypses because I permitted it... All the books here are forbidden. They're not meant to be read recklessly by humans..."

"Then explain it yourself. Directly."

"....."

The Head Librarian couldn't refuse. He began to divulge the life story of Leafanta Aegim, his most beloved character.

"Leafanta Aegim... or the Emperor, is from the same hometown as you."

"What?"

"The same world, same region, even the same race. Not just hometown, but also same surname."

He continued with revelations I didn't expect. Speaking with eyes cast down, he murmured,

"The surname 'Aegim' was created by the Constellation Killer himself. A simple combination of words. He used English, not the language from your region."

England? English?

'Ae' and 'Gim'?

"...You mean 'I am Kim'?"

"Exactly."

Incredible.

"Didn't I tell you? Once is coincidence. Twice is connection. Three times, it's fate. You and the Constellation Killer have already crossed paths numerous times, inevitably intertwined."

Shocked by the Constellation Killer's true identity, I realized,

'From the same hometown?'

The only person from my hometown I knew well was a ruffian with a ponytail. And now, the Constellation Killer was also from my hometown.

'Am I the only sane one from my hometown?'

As I was pondering, the Head Librarian continued.

"The Constellation Killer was summoned to another world in his youth."

"He was just a high school student. Naturally, he was in utter chaos after being summoned. But with awakened powers, he managed to survive in that harsh world."

"Wait. Hold on."

I was struck by a strong sense of déjà vu. A plot I had heard often.

"Summoned to another world as a high school student. That's exactly..."

"Yes."

The Head Librarian nodded slightly.

"[Leafanta Aegim's Epic]'s genre is [A high school student summoned to another world wreaking havoc]. Abbreviated as [Isekai Havoc]. Though the Constellation Killer is no longer of high school age..."

My jaw dropped. Isekai Havoc.

'I thought that term went extinct with the dinosaurs.'

So, the Constellation Killer, Leafanta Aegim, was a being from an era long gone.

"Of course, it's unfair to call him just a havoc-wrecker. He endured countless trials and tribulations to become the first Emperor of the Aegim Empire..."

As the Head Librarian narrated the Constellation Killer's journey, his voice turned into light, merging into [Leafanta Aegim's Epic], forming readable text within the epic.

-A long time ago.

-Atop the corpse of the ancient Dragon Emperor, people lived.

"The Constellation Killer... He set foot on your 20th floor."

-They yearned for a hero.

-Because they had none among them.

"That's where his journey piercing through worlds began."

-They prayed to the gods.

-The gods answered their prayers.

"This was a journey to establish a kingdom..."

And so, the book, like other Apocalypses, began to emit a pure white light, which the Head Librarian watched as if he feared it.

"Now, the Constellation Killer resides on the 50th floor."

50th floor.

The same location mentioned by the Guardian Spirit.

"Here's the problem. You haven't conquered up to the 50th floor yet. You're still in the 'novice area.' And the 50th floor is a very special place... Strictly, strictly forbidden to transfer novices."

Even others, who had been listening in silence, were shocked.

"The novice area is below the 50th floor?"

"After all the hardship to get here..."

I wasn't surprised.

I knew the tutorial was considered up to the 10th floor. I had also heard from the Guardian Spirit about competing with hunters from other worlds starting from the 50th floor.

'In other words, until the 50th floor, we don't compete with hunters from other worlds, because it's a measure to protect novices.'

With that thought, I asked,

"So, being forbidden means you can't send anyone to the 50th floor under any circumstances?"

The Head Librarian's face crumbled again.

"That's... not the case. The transfer... the administrator can do it, but at a cost."

"Then it's fine. You don't have to pay the price, right?"

"Ah, at least... limit the number of people to just you, Kim Gong-Ja..."

".....Fine."

Even if the Head Librarian hadn't pleaded so desperately, I intended to face Leafanta Aegim alone.

"Send me to the 50th floor."

The Head Librarian closed his eyes tightly.

"...Don't regret it."

"I'm going to make sure I don't."

Hearing my firm response, he gave up. With trembling hands, he caressed the cover of [Leafanta Aegim's Epic] and whispered faintly.

"King of Death. I designate you as a character in [Leafanta Aegim's Epic]..."

That moment.

[Warning!]

[Abnormal access detected.]

[A penalty will be imposed on 'Holed-Up Head Librarian'.]

A fierce voice pounded in my head. The Head Librarian flinched, obviously hearing the voice too. But he continued, trembling but determined.

"I exert my authority."

[Warning again.]

[A penalty will be imposed on 'Holed-Up Head Librarian'.]

The Head Librarian breathed heavily.

"It doesn't matter. Go, King of Death... And show me your encounter with the Constellation Killer."

Bright light enveloped my vision.

[Abnormal access detected.]

Warnings kept ringing, even as my view whitened.

[Warning!]

[The blessing from the God of Beauty has been suspended.]

[You can no longer observe others' favorability towards you!]

[The blessing from the God of Snakes has been suspended.]

[You can no longer observe others' psychological states!]

The next moment.

[An unnamed resident of 'The Tower' enters the 50th floor.]

I stepped into a realm no one from our world had ever touched before.

The '50th floor' of the Tower.

Chapter 125:

Demonic Realm (1)

Kim ■ vividly remembers the day he first fell into another world.

-Congratulations.

-You have been chosen as the hero to save this world.

A stunningly beautiful woman smiled at him. Bewildered, Kim ■ saw an angel before him.

Having seen numerous celebrities through videos and news, he was just an [ordinary high school student]. It was his first time meeting a beauty whose mere smile seemed to brighten everything around her. He stuttered.

-Um... Excuse me? Angel? Where am I?

-Don't be in such a hurry, Hero. I am the [Goddess of Protection], the constellation that will guard and guide you from now on. You may not know much now, but you will learn a lot.

A goddess, not an angel.

Kim ■ felt his head go numb.

-I was just at the school rooftop...

-You were suffering from school violence.

The Goddess gently clasped her hands.

-Young humans can sometimes be like beasts. Acting out pure malice through sheer ignorance. Unfortunately, you were prey to those beasts, and in despair, you fell.

-Fell...

-Yes. If I were to add one word, it would be a fatal fall.

Kim ■ then recalled.

The school rooftop.

The iron door to the rooftop was securely locked, chained shut. Seeing the locked door sparked defiance in him. So, Kim ■ opened a 5th-floor classroom window and slipped out, climbing the pipe to the rooftop.

It was insane.

But, clinging to the pipe, inching upwards, Kim ■ felt alive for the first time.

‘Ridiculous.’

For the first time, he climbed out a window, ascended a pipe, and reached the rooftop. Never had he felt such vitality even when trying hard to live.

Choosing to abandon life made him feel more alive.

-.....

The sky he saw from the rooftop was red.

Kim ■ was grateful to the sky that turned red once a day.

For the first time - he felt thankful to the sky.

The red sky seemed kinder than the blue. He wanted to be consumed by its tender hue.

‘If I fall.’

Kim ■ looked down. The sports field, bathed in sunset, seemed vast like the Sahara.

‘They say you regret it right after you fall.’

Kim ■ neatly placed his indoor shoes on the ground. The soles, blackened with marker ink, weren’t his doing.

‘Will I regret it too?’

The sports field became noisy. Had someone noticed him? Students who were playing soccer before evening study crowded below, pointing up at the rooftop. Among them were familiar faces.

Kim ■ quietly moved his thumb. Click. He sent a prepared message to 37 students. They would all receive the same last words.

+

The one responsible for my death is you.

Don't forget.

You killed me.

+

Moments later, a notification for the sent message appeared.

Done.

It was liberating.

Kim ■ threw his phone. It plummeted and shattered on the sports field. The students below panicked at the sight of his broken phone. Some turned pale upon receiving their own epitaph.

‘May your lives be ruined forever.’

Kim ■ let himself fall into the red sandy field.

Falling, he thought of it as an unsuccessful flight.

-I am the Goddess of Protection.

And that's how he arrived here.

-I possess many powers. The Idol, The Pity, The Prayer, The Sacrifice, The Salvation.

Kim ■ remembered the day he first fell into another world.

-By borrowing my power, you can do anything, become anything, Hero.

The dazzlingly beautiful woman smiled at him.

-What do you wish to become, Hero?

[You have entered the 50th floor through an abnormal route.]

When I opened my eyes, a voice flowed into my head.

[The blessing from the 'Holed-Up Head Librarian' has been suspended.]

[Novice protection measures have been suspended.]

[Novice privileges are temporarily revoked.]

I smirked bitterly.

'Such a spine-chilling warning.'

I looked around.

First thing I noticed were the spires soaring into the sky.

Like the fingers of giants pointing upwards, five towers twisted and stood in the distance. It was a wonder they didn't collapse.

-Wow. Shit. It's been over a hundred fifty years since I've been here.

Fortunately, I had someone to guide me. The Sword Emperor. The former Guardian Spirit, who once climbed up to the 99th floor of the tower, had naturally set foot on the 50th floor too.

-But nothing's changed.

The Guardian Spirit looked around the 50th floor's landscape with a tired, almost exasperated gaze.

"What are those spires?"

-Magic Towers. They've been here for over a thousand years, hunkered down on the 50th floor. They chose to live here instead of climbing the tower...

A thousand years.

-Anyway, don't get too close to them now. Better not even look at them.

"Why's that?"

-If you stare for over 23 seconds, it automatically detects your gaze. In their world, the number 23 is like the number 18 in yours, implying 'What the fuck are you looking at?' It's a warning system reflecting their terrible personalities. See what I mean?

I quickly averted my gaze from the Magic Towers. A warning system activated by just looking!

-Oh, right. There used to be six towers, but I demolished one. They'd go insane if they knew I've returned as a ghost. They'd mobilize everything to chase you to hell, so hide well.

"...I see you're not a guide, but a troll. Damn. I should have known better."

That's when it happened.

[You are beginning to be eroded by the Void Poison.]

[Your current erosion level is Lv.1.]

I was shocked.

"What's this Void Poison? You're saying my body is being eroded?"

-Oh, right. Forgot about that. Yeah, it feels more like the tower now.

The Guardian Spirit shrugged nonchalantly.

-It's just a poison spread throughout the 50th floor. Who was it again? Anyway, the floor's manager had some issues with favoritism, being too friendly with certain hunters. Ended up dying in what they called the 'Midnight Liberation War' or something?

"And then?"

-He died without going peacefully, cursed the world, and that curse turned into this poison.

I blinked.

"Wait, that's like..."

-Yes, yes. Like that virus spread by a dying Constellation in the Martial Realm. Think of it as an enhanced version of that.

"No."

I incredulously asked.

"People live here with that kind of poison in the air? Since a thousand years ago? Are they crazy?"

-Well, yes, they're insane, but those who've climbed this high usually have some basic skills, whether it's aura, magic, skills, or even a Constellation's blessing. What are you doing, zombie? Use your aura to protect yourself.

As advised, I raised my aura. I enveloped myself in my red aura, especially fortifying my respiratory system. After catching my breath, I looked at the Guardian Spirit.

"What if I don't defend? What happens?"

-Well...

The Guardian Spirit hesitated, an unusual expression of struggling to find the right words.

-You end up with a very unique appearance and mental state...

"Kieeeeeek!"

-Oh, perfect timing. There's one over there.

I turned around.

There, a toad-like monster crouched.

"Kioeeeeek!"

The only problem with the toads I knew was that they didn't have roughly 36 legs or shark teeth in their mouths.

Another issue was that it seemed to weigh about 2 tons.

"What is that thing?!"

-Well, it was probably a human similar to you. Someone who ate, excreted, and occasionally spouted nonsense, like you. About 20 years ago.

While the Guardian Spirit casually murmured, the 2-ton monster toad leaped. It was clear that the toad was charging at me. I gasped in horror and focused aura on my feet to leap away.

Boom!

The ground shook. The explosion was too fresh to be just from the toad. It was as if a small meteor had hit the ground.

"Damn it."

I drew out my holy sword and used the Demonic Heavenly God Art. Swish! My strike, imbued with red aura, sliced the monster toad in half.

Did I kill it?

-Oh.

The Guardian Spirit spoke abruptly.

-Sorry, Kim Zombie. I forgot to warn you. From the 50th floor onwards, it's literally a demonic realm. Acting on common sense here often leads to trouble.

"What are you trying to say?"

Just then, something emerged from the split halves of the monster toad. It was like tentacles. In an instant, dozens of tentacles extended, and the toad stood back up on the ground.

"Kieeeeek!"

"Kyooook!"

Now there were two of them.

-Yeah, like that.

"What the hell?"

-If you're scared, keep staring at the Magic Towers. If you look for more than 23 seconds, they'll talk to you, asking, 'Why are you staring at me?' Then you can ask them for help, and witches riding brooms will come to rescue you. How about that? Nice, right?

It wasn't just my feeling; the Guardian Spirit had been smirking subtly. And if he's smirking, it highly likely means he's teasing me.

So.

"...What do they ask for in return for the rescue?"

-Wow, sharp eyes. How did you know? A contract that sucks out even your soul, mortgaged for 12 years. As an SSS-class skill holder, you'll get tremendous affection. I'm so jealous!

Damn it...

"Hey, y-you over there! Run away!"

A desperate voice came from behind.

"This way! Run this way! Hurry!"

Looking back, three old men in shabby cloaks were beckoning. Their cloaks were dirty like homeless people, but their eyes were mysterious. Their voices were earnest, making me almost head towards them.

-Huhuhu.

However, I couldn't proceed because of the Guardian Spirit's suspicious face. Reflexively, my feet stopped.

Instead of running to the old men, I scattered aura to attack them.

"Over here!"

"Run this way!"

"Hurry!"

As soon as my attack hit, something astonishing happened. Bam! Something rose from the ground where the old men stood.

It was like a hedgehog... 'something'.

"Hey, y-you over there!"

"Run away!"

"Over here!"

The hedgehog's back wasn't covered in spines but had three old men attached instead.

"Insane..."

In other words, those weren't living old men. They were just a disguise by the monster's shell to lure and prey on people who approached.

-Yeah, but still, Kim Zombie. You're naive but think things through. What kind of place do you think this is? Logically, why would old men help you for no reason? Right?

"Kieeeeek!"

"Run this way!"

"Kyooooook!"

"Hurry!"

Both monster toads and the monster hedgehog charged at me. The toad's skin wriggled with dozens of tentacles, and the hedgehog's back sang in chorus with the three old men.

Just watching was enough to corrupt one's mind.

"Is this place always like this?!"

-‘Exceptions’ exist, but generally, yes. Welcome to the demonic realm where cosmic horrors dance, fledgling. Now you realize how normal and sensible a hunter I am, right?

"This is not the time to say that...!"

Fortunately or unfortunately.

"---Bow your head, stranger."

The voice of the [exception] mentioned by the Guardian Spirit quickly manifested.

"I will cut it in half."

The voice, carried on aura, went straight into my head. It was telepathy. I quickly bowed my head as instructed. At that moment, the sound of the wind splitting and a chilling strike whizzed past my head.

Swish!

Both monster toads were cut in half at once.

Considering the regenerative scene of the monster toad earlier, I shouted in a chilling realization.

"No, if you cut them, they'll just split and regenerate...!"

I stopped mid-sentence. The monster toads didn't move after being split. In other words, they were dead.

‘What? They only split the first time and die normally afterward?’

-Nope~. They regenerate no matter how many times~.

‘Then why did they die now?’

-Because.

Before the Guardian Spirit could explain, another explained.

"To kill [those who split and die], one must..."

The telepathy user was speaking.

"precisely [split them in half]."

Dumbfounded, I looked again, and it was true.

The monster toads were split exactly in half down the middle. Somehow, this exact splitting resulted in their permanent death.

"Next."

The telepathy user immediately targeted the monster hedgehog.

He swung his sword.

Boom!

Each strike exploded with a loud bang.

Despite the horrifying aura infused in the strikes, the monster hedgehog nonchalantly withstood them.

‘It’s like Lady Goldencup when she was protected by a blessing...’

The monster hedgehog, unharmed and charging, was continuously struck by the telepathy user.

"Over here,"

Boom!

The left old man's call was buried in the explosion.

"Run away,"

Boom!

The right old man's call was buried in the explosion.

"Hurry,"

Boom!

The middle old man's call was buried in the explosion.

"The true body of the Screamer lies in its scream,"

As the old men's calls were drowned out by the strikes, the hedgehog crumbled down like sand.

"Kill it by burying it in sound."

Both types of monsters were swiftly dealt with.

Profound knowledge of the prey and the overwhelming martial prowess to realize that knowledge.

‘A hunter...’

I stared blankly at that hunter, the telepathy user.

The Guardian Spirit grumbled.

-See, that bastard hasn't aged a bit.

The silver-haired young man I saw in Shiny's trauma.

"Leafanta Aegim..."

The Constellation Killer.

Leafanta Aegim sheathed his sword and tilted his head.

"Do you know me?"

His eyes, blue like a newly born star, were fixed on me.

Volume 6 – Chapters 126-149

Chapter 126:

Demonic Realm (2)

Upon seeing the eyes of Leafanta Aegim, I was momentarily at a loss for words.

'Why does he have such eyes?'

I've met all sorts of people in my time. I've encountered someone who wielded a sword colder than a snowy plain. I've met someone with a heart cooler than a white lily. But the eyes of the man before me were something I had never seen.

A Blank white paper.

Eyes devoid not just of emotion but seemingly of any memory. Not even a fragment of feeling, let alone a trace.

"Uh..."

[Shiny is deeply moved by reuniting with an acquaintance after such a long time!]

Before I could figure out how to respond, the Holy Sword reacted first.

[However, Shiny is still not convinced why its former master betrayed it. Before feeling touched, it wonders if it should first be overwhelmed with anger!]

"...You have an unusual sword."

Leafanta Aegim glanced down at my waist. There, the Holy Sword vibrated violently, expressing its will. A hint of curiosity flickered in Leafanta Aegim's expressionless eyes.

"Is it a magical sword or an ego sword? ...It's best to keep special items like this hidden here, stranger. There are many hyenas on the 50th floor targeting the skills and equipment of beginners who've just entered."

'Huh?'

I was puzzled.

It was strange. Leafanta Aegim's tone seemed as if he was seeing [Goddess of Protection] for the first time. If this young man was indeed the true Constellation Killer, he wouldn't fail to recognize the identity of this Holy Sword.

"Excuse me. Don't you recognize this sword?"

I unfastened the Holy Sword from my waist and showed it to Leafanta Aegim. Slightly pulling out the sword handle, the blade shone with a brilliant light.

"Hmm."

However...

Facing the light of the Holy Sword, once his tool and mark of the constellation... Leafanta Aegim furrowed his brow as if he knew nothing about it.

"I don't know."

His face tilted like a statue.

"It seems to be an item connected to me, but I don't remember. No, it would be wiser not to expect any past connections from me."

"Excuse me?"

Then, Leafanta Aegim casually dropped a piece of unexpected information.

"I suffer from amnesia, stranger. I remember nothing from more than a week ago."

The man spoke with a calm expression.

"It's dangerous to keep talking in this wasteland. Follow me. I know a relatively safe tavern."

Leafanta Aegim said so and led the way. Being new to the 50th floor, I quietly followed his guidance.

"Hey..."

"Look over there. It's Constellation Killer."

On the way to the tavern, I encountered several hunters. Presumably, all of them wielded significant power in other worlds. Yet even they stepped back, shoulders trembling, at the sight of the Constellation Killer.

"That crazy guy's up to some nonsense again..."

"Are the spiders from the towers going to be quiet today?"

"Shh. Better not get involved with that one..."

Not only hunters murmured amongst themselves.

[‘The Lonely Seeker’ feels curious about the new arrival.]

[‘The Eyes Dwelling in the Labyrinth’ expresses caution towards the companion of Constellation Killer.]

[‘The Warhorse of the Eternal Plains’ recognizes you.]

[‘The Lotus Reflected on Water’ observes you.]

Numerous constellations.

The constellations I had encountered so far were limited. Unless they were rulers of each floor, no constellation sought contact with me. But was this also different from the 50th floor? Constellations I had never heard of revealed their presence.

"...Annoying."

Constellation Killer muttered coldly, perhaps sensing the messages from the constellations.

"Disappear. If any constellation remains to bother me, I'll start hunting down their apostles from today. If they want war, let them keep fussing. This is the last warning."

As the Constellation Killer muttered, the messages from the constellations abruptly ceased. The air surrounding us lightened.

"It's noisier than usual. Sigh..."

Constellation Killer sighed lightly and looked at me.

"It seems some are interested in you, stranger. Have you done something to attract the constellations?"

"Well, I have killed an apostle of [The Warhorse of the Eternal Plains]."

"...An apostle of Mahos?"

The Constellation Killer's tone changed. He took out a worn notebook, read something, then raised his eyebrows in surprise.

"Better than expected. Apostles of Mahos are exceptionally skilled and annoyingly protected by their blessings. They're not an easy foe... How did you kill him?"

"That's also related to what I want to discuss."

We entered a tavern.

The place described by Constellation Killer as 'relatively safe' was more like an open-air tavern. There were no walls, just tables and a bar set up outdoors. Despite the openness, there was a solitary door standing.

"...Is this a safe tavern?"

"The visibility isn't blocked by walls."

Constellation Killer blandly explained the advantage of the tavern.

"You can retreat anytime in case of a sudden attack. No risk of being trapped if the building is targeted. The downside is it's easier to become a sniper's target. Bartender, the usual for me."

"Hey. Do you know your actions caused this place to go open-air?"

The bald bartender grumbled. Constellation Killer calmly sat down at a table.

"Sorry. I don't remember."

"Hey, young man. Whatever your business, don't get involved with that madman. Over 600 hunters in this vicinity are out to kill him. If you're not seeking death, stay clear."

Constellation Killer took out his notebook again.

"Exactly 1,127. Only three hunters are a real threat. One of them has been missing for 154 years. Strictly speaking, it's safer for you to be with me than not."

"Crazy..."

The bald bartender looked exasperated.

It seemed Constellation Killer was notorious here as a lunatic.

"So, what do you want to tell me?"

"...I find it a bit challenging since you have amnesia."

I slowly recounted my experiences.

Your founded Aegim Empire was nearly destroyed. The reason was none other than your action of sealing [Goddess of Protection], allowing [Demon King of Autumn Rain] to grow.

Because of what you did, [The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon] was destroyed, and [Tales of Sormewin Academy] was endangered...

I told him everything.

"..."

Leafanta Aegim listened attentively to my voice, sipping an unknown red beverage. Throughout the conversation, his expression remained unchanged, occasionally checking his notebook.

"Indeed."

Leafanta Aegim nodded.

"I heard your story and verified it with my diary. I believe most of what you said is true."

"Diary?"

"A storage for my memories."

Leafanta Aegim showed me the notebook.

It was densely filled with text.

"It looks like an ordinary notebook, but it's actually a relic of [The Great Puppy], a constellation. It has infinite pages and convenient search functions. I write what I do every day here. Thanks to this, even with amnesia, I don't lose my life."

"..."

"As you said."

Leafanta Aegim spoke bluntly.

"In the past, I apparently founded the Aegim Empire."

As if talking about someone else.

"I sealed the constellation [Goddess of Protection] I spent my life with. The world you mentioned, [The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon], seems similar to the one recorded on page 236. The world of [Tales of Sormewin Academy] resembles the one on page 3215."

"..."

"The heirloom... the Sword of Sacrifice passed down because of the Goddess's fragment? Indeed. I once slept with a woman in that world. The woman you met, Raviel Ivansia, is likely a distant descendant of mine and that woman. The silver hair is a clear sign... It must be fate."

Something...

"You might have skills like [Uncovering Dark Past] or [Historian], reading my past."

Something's not right.

"But I have no past to read. It's impossible to steal and read this relic as well. Only I can decipher its code. Therefore, stranger. I acknowledge everything you testified as true."

I came to accuse this man.

Because of your petty beliefs, innocent people suffered. Countless people were sacrificed, I came to say proudly.

But what is this?

"So."

How can you accuse someone who doesn't even remember their sin?

"What compensation do you want?"

Anger began to rise in my heart.

"What compensation?"

"For pointing out my mistake."

"...Do you even know what mistake you made?"

"Of course."

Constellation Killer said.

"My mistake lies in two things. First, I didn't consider the possibility of new constellations being born in worlds where constellations disappeared. Second, I underestimated the fact that a dead constellation could curse the world."

I was...

"Is that all?"

"Considering constellations from other worlds could invade after a constellation's death was intentional. No matter how many worlds a constellation rules, killing it ends it all. So, it's not a problem in reducing the number of constellations. Therefore, my mistake is limited to the two things I mentioned."

After finishing, Constellation Killer scribbled something in his notebook.

"I've recorded it. The same error won't happen again. That's why I mentioned compensation for your advice."

Advice.

Gratitude.

"People in the martial realm turned into zombies and died."

Shudder.

The Holy Sword, strapped at my waist and silently listening to our conversation, shuddered once.

Rage from my heart tinged my voice.

"Among them was an old man who, even as he was dying, didn't want to trouble others and chose to drown himself by setting his boat adrift. There was a child from the Beggars'

Sect who, until his last breath, struggled to save others of his age."

"....."

"Each death was tragic. What do you think about that, Constellation Killer?"

"Nothing."

Leafanta Aegim replied.

"As I said, failing to account for the aftermath of a constellation's death was undoubtedly my error. But mistakes are bound to happen. As I said, compensating you for correcting that mistake is all I can do."

"Ha."

My body, enveloped in red aura, became slightly darker.

"Then, as a compensation, would you die for me if I asked?"

"That's a compensation I cannot give."

The silver-haired man shook his head.

"I have a duty to annihilate all constellations. Until that duty is fulfilled, I must continue to operate."

His words were more like those of a machine. Shiny shivered on my body.

I asked.

"That's quite a duty you've taken on. Why do you bear such a responsibility?"

"I cannot answer that."

"I saw that coming. Why? Because you think I wouldn't understand your noble duty?"

"I cannot answer that either."

"Ah, I see."

I glared coldly at Constellation Killer.

"Then at least answer this: Why are you using a relic of a constellation if you aim to annihilate them all? It seems contradictory."

"That's a question I can answer. I plan to destroy it after annihilating all constellations."

"You learned from the Demon King of Autumn Rain incident that even after killing a constellation, another can emerge. What will you do about that?"

"I have a plan for that."

"What is it?"

"I cannot say."

Constellation Killer glanced at his diary.

"This conversation is getting too lengthy. Let's get back to the main point."

"I thought this was the main point."

"Not for me. State your compensation."

Compensation.

"As I said earlier, I cannot die. As my duty is not yet complete, dying cannot be a form of compensation."

He seemed to be reading the first page of his diary, which he had written before losing all his memories.

"Then name another form of compensation. I'll listen."

"....."

Right.

Not many things in this world can be resolved through conversation.

I reached for the dagger, then paused midway. Instead, I took out a handkerchief carefully folded in my pocket. It was the one imbued with Raviel's blue scent. I briefly buried my nose in it.

Hmm.

"Fine."

My anger subsided.

I rapidly processed my thoughts. How would I 'hunt' this hunter before me – incomparably more powerful than me?

My mind soon found an answer.

"Then I ask just one favor of you."

It was a simple matter.

Hunting a stronger hunter wasn't new to me.

"What is it?"

"Protect me [for as long as I am on the 50th floor], no matter what happens."

I tucked away the handkerchief.

"Not just my life. Ensure my body and mind remain intact. Of course, forcefully ejecting me from the 50th floor is off-limits."

"...You're asking for personal protection?"

"Something like that."

Constellation Killer pondered.

He tapped the table with his pen, thud, thud.

"I don't understand your intentions. From your stories, you seem a highly righteous person. Not just righteous, but also equipped with strength and cunning. Your proposal doesn't align with your character."

"Ah, so you can't grant my request?"

I scoffed.

"You're unable to die, unable to abandon your duty, and now you can't even protect me on the 50th floor? Impressive. Then what can you possibly compensate?"

"...I'm just worried about any hidden traps in your proposal."

"Traps? With your apparent confidence in your abilities, just break through them."

"....."

Constellation Killer deeply scrutinized his diary.

"That is true."

He moved his pen. Swish, swish. His hand glided over the diary.

"I'll record your proposal on page one. Until my existence ends, your proposal will drive my logic and actions."

Okay.

He took the bait.

'Sword Emperor.'

I turned to the Guardian Spirit.

-Huh?

'You said you once demolished one of those Magic Towers, right?'

The backdrop that caught my eye as soon as I arrived here.

Pointing at the towering spires under the ashen sky, the Guardian Spirit had said,

『There used to be six towers,』

『but

I demolished one.』

『They'd go insane if they knew I've returned as a ghost.』

The Sword Emperor nodded.

-Right. It was one of the things I'm most proud of in my life, ranking among the top six achievements.

'Do you remember what you said when you demolished it?'

-Oh, of course! I remember every word.

The Guardian Spirit chuckled.

-Hey, you losers! Sometimes you need to get some air. Staying cooped up all day like you guys isn't good for you. Here, consider this a favor! I'll give you a free remodeling today! Haha.

Guardian Spirit, reminiscing about his past glory, suddenly tilted his head in confusion.

-But why? What are you planning?

I turned my gaze towards the spires.

Staring.

Intently.

-Hey? Zombie?

Guardian Spirit spoke beside me.

-Don't look there, didn't I tell you? If you stare for more than 23 seconds, you'll be detected. With your level and ability, you can't handle them. Or what? Are you gonna ask them to eliminate the Constellation Killer? Forget it. They won't attack someone as dangerous as him. It's a loss for both.

But I continued to gaze at the distant spires.

-Uh? Uh? Hey, Kim Zombie! Turn your gaze away now!

But it was already too late.

「 Ah, ah. Mic test. Mic test. Who's that staring over there? 」

A telepathic voice echoed in my head.

Guardian Spirit's warning came true – the tower had detected my presence.

「 Looks like a newbie still fresh out of the box. I'll let it slide this time. If you plan to stay in this neighborhood, don't stare at us. You'll get yourself killed.」

The voice was filled with boredom, like a public servant who didn't want to work.

「Oh, you're with that constellation-obsessed guy? Haha. Bad luck. Well, need any help? Right now, I can send an instant escape scroll with a 30-year binding contract.」

"Hey,"

I spoke up.

"You losers."

「Huh? This brat just now, did he really...」

"Sometimes you need to get some air. Staying cooped up all day like you guys isn't good for you."

「.....」

"Here, consider this a favor! I'll give you a free remodeling today! Haha."

Silence.

A complete stillness enveloped us.

-Oh, boy.

Guardian Spirit mumbled dumbfoundedly.

-Is this crazy guy for real?

Then it happened.

Screeeeeeeech!

From the five spires, a screeching noise burst forth all at once, as if five fingers were clawing the sky. Clang! The bald bartender, startled, dropped a glass. Hunters in the streets covered their ears.

"What, what's going on?!"

"What's happening right now..."

And then.

-Sword Emperorrrrrrrrrrrr!!

A gigantic voice thundered across the ashen sky.

-Sword Emperor, you've returned! I knew you would someday! Even when all the constellations announced your death, only we believed you, the bastard who wouldn't die even in death! Possession or reincarnation? Doesn't matter! Either way is fine!

All the hunters gawked up at the sky.

-Kill him! We will kill you, Sword Emperor! We'll tear your soul to shreds and scatter it across the world, then defecate over it! Kill him! Kill!! Kill him now! In the name of the tower's history, chase him down to hell!

From the spires, hundreds, thousands, millions of shadows surged forth.

They all mounted brooms and formed a formation in the sky.

"Alright."

I looked at Constellation Killer.

The silver-haired man gazed back at me, expressionless.

"You promised, didn't you?"

"....."

"Protect me."

A meteor shower rained down from the sky.

Chapter 127:

Demonic Realm (3)

“.....Indeed.”

Leafanta Aegim nodded.

“You have understood the logic behind my actions. You judged that it is impossible for you to defeat me by your strength alone and thus, have drawn in external forces. For a beginner who has just arrived on the 50th floor, such a feat seemed unlikely...”

As Leafanta Aegim spoke, countless meteor showers were cutting through the ashen sky. Ssshhh! Flames shot from a far distance. Thousands of attacks, comprised of immense magical power.

“It was my error.”

The meteor showers approached more rapidly. But Leafanta Aegim remained indifferent. With an impassive gaze, he began scribbling something in his diary with his fountain pen.

“Henceforth, I shall consider the intervention of powerful external forces even when dealing with beginners.”

“Crazy! Let’s get out of here!”

“Have the spiders from the Magic Tower gone mad?”

The hunters around Leafanta Aegim reacted more quickly than him. Pop! Pop! Scrolls of instant teleportation, seemingly essential items for hunters living on the 50th floor, were being torn everywhere. The bald bartender did the same, but not before shouting a warning to us.

“Hey! Leafanta Aegim! I’m going to bill you for the remodeling costs again, so don’t forget to write it down! You’re paying for the scroll cost too!”

“Understood.”

Thud.

“I’ve recorded it.”

Leafanta Aegim closed his diary.

“As per our agreement, I will now protect this foreigner with all my might.”

At that moment, the meteor shower was upon us. Kwang! Bang! The relentless bombardment pummeled the streets. Just as the storm of destruction was about to engulf the open-air bar, a hand firmly grasped my wrist.

“Maximize visual and auditory perception. In return, I forfeit my memories of [1 hour].”

Leafanta Aegim muttered.

And then, an astounding feat unfolded.

He avoided the barrage of meteor showers, which seemed to cover the sky, by merely taking a few steps. One step. Two steps. Every time he pulled me along, the meteor showers fell perilously close.

-Huh?

A furious voice echoed from above.

-Hey, you starry-eyed freak! Why are you interfering? Back off! The guy you're with now is our sworn enemy of the Magic Tower! Unless you want to go against the Great Staff, just disappear quietly!

“First, I request a resolution through dialogue.”

Leafanta Aegim waved his right hand, and the dust cloud created by the meteor shower was cleared instantly. Both he and I were completely unharmed.

-What kind of nonsensical dialogue are you talking about? Go away, you maniac!

“I am bound to protect this foreigner at all costs. Protection means ensuring the safety of not only his physical body but also his mind. There is no room for compromise here.”

Leafanta Aegim again opened his diary with his left hand.

“The Magic Tower is an exceedingly selfish group. Being selfish, they can negotiate based on their interests and losses. I am a being who can inflict severe losses on them. Negotiate.”

-That guy is our mortal enemy! Mortal, enemy, I tell you!

“Every problem can be resolved through rational dialogue.”

-Hey! Hey! Everyone! Report if anyone knows how much memory Leafanta Aegim has left!

Above, thousands of mages were mounted on broomsticks. One of them replied.

-Reporting from the Constant Surveillance Unit, I'm Hong Boseok! Leader! Leafanta Aegim currently has 7 days of memory remaining!

-Damn, why did it have to be a full week!?

The sound of grinding teeth filled the air.

-It doesn't matter! That starry-eyed freak and everyone with him, take them all down! From this moment, the Magic Tower is in full mobilization! Every member of the Tower, from the first to the fifth finger, hunt down Leafanta Aegim and the Sword Emperor! I repeat, this is a full mobilization order!

“...Negotiations have failed.”

Leafanta Aegim murmured.

His diary fluttered open.

“Search, Magic Tower. Additional search, combat. Detailed search, countermeasures.”

Leafanta Aegim glanced briefly at the diary and nodded. He took out a rubber band – a cheap item that can be bought in the outside world, a yellow rubber band – and tied his long silver hair.

"....."

I watched from close by as Leafanta Aegim tied his hair. It might have taken only 2 seconds, but I knew that gesture was one of the few rituals and ceremonies he had left.

“We are now entering combat.”

-Kill them!!

From above, tens of thousands of mages charged down.

-Ensigns, surround them!

Not all enemies charged at once.

-Singers, stay in the back and chorus!

-Yes!

In the ashen sky, the formation of mages was displayed. The formation resembled gigantic rings. Hundreds of mages formed five rings, beginning their chorus.

Six layers of melody resounded.

-Oh.

The Guardian Spirit remarked.

-It's been a while since I've seen that. It's the Pseudo-Star Singing.

‘Pseudo-Star Singing?’

-You see, there are five towers standing, right? Each tower has a sealed constellation in its basement. Well, it's technically more of a confinement than a seal. Anyway, they manifest the powers of the sealed constellations through songs and borrow them, and the effect is...

[Warning. You are targeted by an area-wide attack.]

[Warning. The power of the aura you emit is halved!]

[Warning. The power of the magic you emit is halved!]

[Warning. The power of your mental defense is halved!]

[Warning. All types of penalties you receive are doubled.]

The Guardian Spirit nodded.

-Hmm. The effects are quite troublesome.

‘Are you kidding?’

-They call it a spider web. That's why they're nicknamed spiders.

Truly fitting for a monstrous group that has reigned over the 50th floor for over a thousand years. Before the battle even started, our power had been drastically reduced. The Guardian Spirit, who had torn through such a web 150 years ago, must have been a monster beyond monsters.

“---Single strike. Enhanced.”

In front of that monster stood a man. In my sight.

“In exchange, I forfeit my memory of the beauty of sunsets.”

Suddenly, a sword appeared in Leafanta Aegim’s right hand.

One step.

With a dance-like grace, Leafanta Aegim swung his sword.

The air split apart.

It was more like a typhoon than a sword strike. A blue aura split the ashen sky in two. One of the six rings formed in the sky got caught in the typhoon.

-Re-regroup! Regroup!

-Retreat!

Hundreds of mages screamed as they fell, unable to control their broomsticks and crashing to the ground. The black hats dropped by the mages fluttered like black flower petals.

[The effect of the doubled penalties is restored.]

But Leafanta Aegim did not stop.

A blunt voice flowed from his lips.

“Single strike enhanced. In exchange, I forfeit the memory of the sound of rain falling from the sky.”

The sky was torn apart again.

[The power of the halved aura is restored!]

-That crazy man! The maniac! The starry-eyed freak!

-The thumb ring is destroyed! The index finger ring is destroyed! It's difficult to maintain the formation!

-Leader! It's reckless to fight Leafanta Aegim when he's fully charged for a week!

-That damned starry-eyed freak! Just shut up and charge!
Charge!

The mages shot fireballs. Ice blocks were vomited out. At ground level where Leafanta Aegim and I stood, roots and weeds grew instantly, trying to grab our ankles. The air churned. The jungle grew. Fog spread, obscuring the vision. Countless spells and miracles, innumerable to even mention, engulfed us both.

And then.

“Single strike enhanced.”

Leafanta Aegim merely held a diary in one hand and a sword in the other.

“In exchange, I forfeit the memory of children’s smiles.”

Every spell and miracle was torn apart.

[The power of the halved magic is restored!]

[The power of the halved mental defense is restored!]

[The designation as a target of an area-wide attack is lifted.]

The fireballs were destroyed. The ice blocks were split. The roots were cut, and the weeds decayed. A blue wind swirled through the air, and the jungle disappeared. After the fog lifted, the mages were left groaning.

-The middle finger ring was destroyed! The ring finger ring was destroyed! The little finger ring, destroyed!

-The Pseudo-Star Singing has been completely shattered, Leader!

-He's attacking precisely the weak points of the rings?!

-Damn...! Who leaked our secrets...!

I watched the great battle unfolding before my eyes in a daze.

The mages persistently attacked, but to no avail. Leafanta

Aegim fought by sacrificing trivial memories – the drink he just had, the streets he walked yesterday, and other minor recollections.

A single hunter was combating thousands of mages.

-How is it? It's a completely opposite fighting style to yours, isn't it?

The Guardian Spirit chuckled.

-What Leafanta Aegim uses is also a kind of Demonic Art. The Demonic Heavenly God Art you use is based on memories, like the memories of hunger, loneliness... Leafanta Aegim does the opposite. He [forsakes memories].

A Demonic Art opposite to mine.

-Watch closely. This is a level of combat you will eventually encounter.

Leafanta Aegim's method of fighting was calm yet tragic.

“I forsake the memory of walking under a gentle sky.”

He relinquished his memories one by one. Leafanta Aegim's tone was plain, and his swordplay was straightforward. In this sense, his fight was calm.

“I forsake the memory of the timbre of screams in human agony.”

But the memories Leafanta Aegim discarded were anything but trivial. As the fight dragged on, his memories opened up like boxes being unlocked in sequence. It was like Pandora's box – once opened, the contents evaporated.

-Leafanta Aegim lives with a week's worth of memory at most, or a day's worth at the least.

The Guardian Spirit spoke.

-He seldom retains memories longer than a week. Because every time he accumulates a week's worth, he goes hunting constellations. To hunt constellations, a week's memory is sufficient.

"....."

-You said he suffered from amnesia? Strictly speaking, that's incorrect. He sacrifices his memories to carry out his duties.

That was, more precisely, burning his own life.

[Shiny cannot bear to watch the previous owner's fight.]

My holy sword trembled.

[Shiny recalls that the previous owner never fought like this. Shiny does not know when or why he changed to this extent.]

The mage army of the Magic Tower was already exhausted.

The circular rings were long destroyed.

Initially, they had maintained a strict formation, attacking and retreating from Leafanta Aegim... but perhaps they had reached their limit. The formation crumbled. The mages only participated in sporadic attacks.

-Leader, look. Fighting Leafanta Aegim with a full week's memory... it's impossible....

-He's an overpowered character as we proclaimed....

-Pouring more magical power into this would only incur more losses!

-The surveillance team has been noisy since a while, Leader. The constellations are monitoring this place due to the anomaly. There's a high possibility they'll invade while we're weakened.

-Tsk!

The apparent leader of the mages, a woman, ground her teeth. She took off her conical hat and crumpled it in her left hand. Filled with immense rage, she glared at me.

-Sword Emperor... Sword Emperor, Sword Emperor, Sword Emperor!!

-Oh my. My popularity doesn't wane even in death.

The Guardian Spirit shrugged.

-See, Zombie? Being too exceptional also has its problems.

-I see you've allied with Leafanta Aegim! Just you wait! Our Magic Tower won't hold back in hunting you down! This might end simply as a power struggle, but next time, definitely!

The mages looked disgusted.

-Wow... Leader, that's a typical loser's excuse for running away....

-Quiet. Don't mess with the Leader now. You'll be turned into a frog and eaten.

-We'll definitely crush you!!

As the mages scattered and turned their brooms away, Leafanta Aegim spoke.

“Wait. Tower Master of the Magic Tower.”

-What!

“I still have 23 hours worth of memories. Using 22 hours of it to enhance a strike, I can destroy one of your towers.”

- ...Are you threatening us?

“Yes.”

Leafanta Aegim calmly affirmed.

“According to my records, Tower Master, you are extremely concerned about face. Failing to eliminate me even after declaring a full mobilization must be a considerable loss. But losing a tower would be an even greater blow. Consider my threat.”

-.....

The Tower Master’s face twisted like a goblin’s.

“For the next week, prohibit any attacks or schemes against me and this man. Attacks and schemes refer to all actions and accidents that harm us. Prohibit both indirect and direct methods, and if subjective judgment is needed, we will exercise that judgment. Your opinion is not permitted.”

-You goddamn swordsmen, both of you....

“Once again, I threaten. Accept a week-long truce.”

Leafanta Aegim gripped his sword.

"If you don't accept, I will destroy it."

A hush fell over the devastated wasteland.

-You... know this, you're now on the Magic Tower's hit list.

“Do you agree to the truce?”

As the Tower Master clicked his tongue, a piece of paper materialized in front of Leafanta Aegim. It was a golden, shimmering contract. Leafanta Aegim glanced at it indifferently, then signed it with his pen.

“A satisfactory negotiation. Now withdraw.”

-When we kill the Sword Emperor, we'll bury you with him.
Leafanta Aegim.

“I'll record your hostility clearly.”

-Ptui!

The mages turned their brooms. Like a swarm of autumn locusts, they slowly receded into the sky.

The surroundings quieted down.

Besides Leafanta Aegim and me, there was no one else around.

Leafanta Aegim turned to face me.

“I have fulfilled the promise to you, Stranger.”

"....."

“However, as I observed, I have fallen into a trap. I won the battle but at the cost of reducing a week’s worth of memories to just a day. My strength has been significantly weakened. Such a power reduction must have been your aim.”

Leafanta Aegim described his situation impassively.

As if talking about someone else’s story.

-Gong-Ja.

The Guardian Spirit's voice deepened.

-Don't let your guard down. Right now, he's deliberately engaging in conversation with you to buy time. Don't see him as human. He is a weapon, moving strictly according to the content he has input.

‘Yes.’

I gripped my holy sword.

‘I am aware.’

And glared at Leafanta Aegim.

“Yes, I will bring you down.”

“On the other hand, as per the promise, I cannot attack you. I can only avoid or defend against your attacks. ...It’s a dangerous situation. If what the Tower Master said is true, and you are the Sword Emperor himself or his successor, it would be particularly dangerous.”

“My name is King of Death. I am the Vice-lord of the Demonic Cult, and the consort of the Ivansia Ducal Family.”

Leafanta Aegim flipped open his diary and wrote down my name. He questioned me while moving his pen.

“What is the Demonic Cult?”

“The sword that responds to every scream.”

“What does being a Vice-lord entail?”

“The first sword to be swung.”

“What does King of Death mean?”

I raised my red aura.

“The name of the person who will take you down.”

Now it was my turn to ask.

“Leafanta Aegim. Do you possess the memory of hunger?”

“It's recorded in the diary. But if we talk about the memories I can consciously recall, then no. I do not have any memory of hunger."

I nodded.

"That will be your downfall."

And then, I charged.

Chapter 128:

Compatriots (1)

-Hero, have you regained consciousness?

Kim ■ blinked blankly.

A wasteland turned to ruins.

There, holding a sword, stood Kim ■, motionless.

-Where is this...?

-You were just engaged in a fierce battle.

A voice came from the sword. The voice of a goddess. The tone of the constellation that had summoned him. Kim ■ recognized the goddess but felt somewhat hazy in his head.

How did he end up here?

It was as if his memories were sung. Trying to recall, digging with his fingers, only brought up black dust from the burnt remains.

-Hero, you fell into the enemy's trap.

The goddess sounded choked up.

-Faced with an overwhelming surprise attack, battling further would have led to certain defeat... For the first time, you used the power of the Salvation Sword.

-Salvation...

-Yes. Sacrificing something, as much as you sacrifice, grants you the power to save. You discarded [a letter of your name].

Kim ■ finally realized what the soot in his memory signified.

-That's right. Yes, that's what happened.

He had forever discarded a letter from his name.

No matter what, Kim ■ could no longer recall his original name.

In return, he gained the landscape before him. His own strike had turned the surroundings into ruins.

The group that had cunningly attacked him with evil tactics and stratagems had vanished without a trace. Once again, the hero had survived an unsurvivable ordeal.

-...It's not so bad?

Kim ■ murmured.

-I never liked my name anyway. To think I gained such power by just losing a single letter.

Kim ■ was mildly surprised at the value his name held.

To him, his life before coming to this world had no value at all.

At least, that's how Kim ■ thought.

-Hwiya.

-Yes, Hero...

-I can save this world a bit faster now.

Discarding a worthless time to obtain a valuable landscape.

Kim ■ knew what he had to do.

-But first, let's create a new name.

Leafanta Aegim.

Leafanta, in ancient language, meant 'Human of the Wilderness.'

Kim ■ had never called himself Leafanta. But at some point, people began to revere him as Leafanta, calling him by that name.

Kim ■ became a man from the wilderness.

The land scoured by the mages was a wasteland.

I, like a gust of wind, swept across the ruins transformed into desolation.

The man with silver hair watched me calmly.

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The First Form.

Sword of Starving Death.

The gesture of a child who died of starvation is embodied in the sword. Claws that scratch the heavens. The most primal action and the most primal scream, I aimed to split Leafanta Aegim's head.

“...Enhanced senses. I sacrifice an hour.”

Leafanta Aegim gripped his sword. Clash! My blade collided with his sword. Leafanta Aegim blocked my attack and looked at me expressionlessly.

His blue eyes.

"An unusual sword technique."

In his other hand, he held a diary.

"Is this a martial art using aura as Ki? Traditional martial artists obsess over Ki techniques. You must have learned this sword technique from the unorthodox faction, not the orthodox, and that must be the Demonic Cult you mentioned..."

I swung my sword.

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The Second Form.

Sword of Parched Death.

A dry wind blew across the wasteland. The musty sand dust fluttered. Thirst. There were those who died of dehydration, surrounded by seawater yet unable to drink a drop. To them, the world was a desert. I summoned a desert and hurled it at Leafanta Aegim.

“Enhance defense. I forsake the taste of water.”

Facing the desert wind, Leafanta Aegim blinked. Clash! Again, my sword was halted by his swordplay.

"This way of fighting is not good. King of Death."

His voice resembled a desert.

"You are a righteous man. If your justice is built upon correct logic, then you..."

"Baraya."

I chanted the prayer.

"Baraya."

The only prayer I allowed myself.

The red aura roared. My blood boiled. My accumulated memories, the landscapes of death I had collected, the cause and effect I had walked through, answered the prayer.

"Agabaraya."

There were deaths from not drinking seawater amidst the ocean. Deaths from drowning in seawater. The ways people die are so diverse that every alley I once gazed upon, every ground I once tread, had been a record of someone's death.

Therefore, the essence of the world is demonic.

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The Third Form.

Sword of Submerged Death.

"....."

Leafanta Aegim swung his sword.

"Interception enhanced. I forsake the smell of the ocean."

"How far do you think you can go!"

"As long as my life continues."

I clenched my teeth.

'I understand now.'

While launching a relentless offensive and blocking each of Leafanta Aegim's moves, I realized something looking at the man with silver hair.

'This man represents one of the endings I could reach.'

A hero who had mastered demonic arts to their limit.

150 years ago, the Guardian Spirit confronted this hero.

Thus, when he fought my master -the Guardian Spirit had exclaimed.

『I'll teach this guy ways to be happy.』

What becomes of a person who only sacrifices himself.

The Guardian Spirit knew because he had seen it firsthand and fought my master knowing it.

If I didn't have the Guardian Spirit.

If I hadn't met Raviel.

If I thought [My memories are worth sacrificing].

Then eventually, I would have become like the man before me.

"Leafanta Aegim!"

I swung my sword.

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The Fourth Form.

Sword of Frostbitten Death.

Leafanta Aegim swung his sword.

"I forsake both the warm and cold winds."

Our swords crossed.

“Did you mention justice!”

“I did mention it.”

Our eyes met.

“If I am just,”

“Then you wouldn’t threaten my life,”

“You...”

“I...”

Our voices collided.

“Did you say so!”

“I did.”

Our clashing voices pushed against each other.

I cried out like an angry wave.

“Then what is your justice!”

Leafanta Aegim's voice spread like rain, covering my shout.

“My justice. It is the eradication of constellations,”

“Why!”

Leafanta Aegim said he couldn't answer.

But as the Guardian Spirit said, Leafanta Aegim was now bound to be talkative, trying to buy time he could sacrifice. He opened his mouth.

"-Constellations rob humans of their freedom of choice."

He spoke of justice.

"Goodness is based on human freedom. Therefore, constellations that infringe upon it are evil."

He spoke of good and evil.

"You mentioned defeating the [Immortal Missionary of Happiness] constellation. Then you know. Humans living there were infected by the constellation, forced into happiness without choice."

He spoke of rights.

"What about the [Warhorse of the Eternal Plains]? Under that constellation's hooves, the world becomes nothing but a battlefield, an arena. Even everyday conversations turn into sharp disputes. There's no room for human freedom there."

He spoke of freedom.

I swallowed his rain-like voice and shouted.

"Did you say humans must be free!"

"Yes."

"Then..."

I swung my sword.

"What are you!"

"I am..."

"Nothing but a machine that moves as written in the diary!
Where is the freedom in that!"

"A valid point."

Leafanta Aegim, while swinging his sword in his right hand, never let go of the diary in his left. His indifferent eyes scanned the diary.

"I will answer it this way. If sacrificing my own freedom can save the freedom of others, it is only right to do so. I decided that, and at the moment of decision, I was free to choose. Therefore..."

"Don't make me laugh!"

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The Fifth Form.

Sword of Noxious Death.

"By doing so, how are you any different from the constellations you just mentioned!"

"....."

Leafanta Aegim hesitated, but only for a moment. He quickly defended against my strike, gathering the world's toxins.

"I forsake the scent of all flowers."

"A week of smelling flowers, watching sunsets, drinking, eating, feeling the wind, and it's all useless! You just keep forsaking it!"

".....Constellations negatively influence the world. They infect humans with their psyche and events, unifying humanity into one. There is no room for choice, therefore,"

Leafanta Aegim recited from his diary.

"I, to give humans at least the freedom of choice, will eradicate constellations,"

"That..."

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The Sixth Form.

Sword of Plague Death.

"Is no different from what you do!"

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The Seventh Form.

Sword of Contusing Death.

"I'm asking how!"

".....I forsake all dreams I've had for a week, the pain when I was injured, the scenery of morning, day, evening, night..."

"Just moving as written in the diary! Constellations at least know what they are doing, but you just act as per the text!"

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The Eighth Form.

Sword of Scorching Death.

"Your name is not [Slayer of Heavenly Constellations]!"

Leafanta Aegim.

"You are [The Constellation that Kills the Heavens]!"

"If eradicating constellations is your only mission and duty - start by killing yourself! Constellation that Kills the Heavens"

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The Ninth Form.

Sword of Self Death.

My sword pierced Leafanta Aegim. But what was slashed was not his body, but the diary. The old notebook he couldn't take his eyes off.

It was split right in the middle.

"....."

Pages fluttered in the air.

His days and days scattered like petals.

".....I forsake, a second."

Leafanta Aegim muttered.

After the fierce battle with the mages of the Tower and the prolonged fight with me, all his memories of the week were exhausted. Finally, the bullet fell from Leafanta Aegim's hand.

"I forsake, a second."

Yet, even at this final moment, Leafanta Aegim did not cease to function. There was still something left to sacrifice. No, the sacrifices were unending.

"I forsake, a second."

Moment by moment.

He sacrificed the endless present, swinging his sword, summoning his aura, protecting himself.

"I forsake, a second."

Yes.

"I forsake, a second."

That is your scream.

"I forsake, a second."

Demonic Heavenly God Art is the sword that answers all screams.

"I forsake, a second."

I reached here, feeling the screams of the snowy field, the heart, the child, and naturally, your scream that created all those.

"I forsake, a second."

Leafanta Aegim muttered, swinging his sword. His voice lacked tone, so it was colorless. His eyes lacked soul, so it was heartless. The colorless and heartless man with disheveled silver hair continued to block my sword strikes.

"I forsake, a second...."

Then my sword sliced through his shoulder.

".....I forsake."

He did not stop.

"I forsake, a second."

We kept swinging our swords without stopping. Blood flowed from his shoulder, blood burst from his calf. Every time my sword connected, red splashed onto the ashen wasteland.

"I forsake...."

I plunged into Leafanta Aegim's embrace. He couldn't stop my charge. Thud! Pushed by me, Leafanta Aegim fell backward. I pinned him down, unable to move, and raised my sword high.

"Leafanta Aegim."

"A second...."

"I will reap your scream."

And then I pierced Leafanta Aegim's heart.

"-----."

Blood surged from Leafanta Aegim's lips. His esophagus was blocked. His mouth was sealed. Leafanta Aegim, with an expressionless face, looked up at me. Even as he did, his lips moved, but his voice was muffled by the blood.

".....to,"

But that's the nature of a scream.

"....."

Blood flowed from where Leafanta Aegim's heartbeat resided, from where his voice dwelled. The blood spread out in concentric circles. Leafanta Aegim's silver hair, tinged with a blend of white and gray, was soaked in the pool of blood.

"....."

Slowly.

He closed his eyes.

[Your existence becomes better defined.]

A soft voice echoed.

[Hunter Kim Gong-Ja is leveling up.]

[Your skill slots have expanded.]

[You are now a C-Rank hunter.]

[May fortune be with you.]

It didn't end there.

[Your existence becomes better defined.]

[Hunter Kim Gong-Ja is leveling up.]

The voice of the tower declared.

As if all the causes and effects I had walked through thus far exploded at once.

[Your skill slots have expanded.]

[You are now a B-Rank hunter.]

[May fortune be with you.]

The surroundings fell into silence.

I quietly withdrew my sword from his heart. Leafanta Aegim's body was tranquil. As if death had been preordained for him, he lay in his blood pool, expressionless.

At that moment.

['The Lonely Seeker' is shocked by Leafanta Aegim's death.]

[‘The Eyes Dwelling in the Labyrinth’ watch you warily, disbelieving the situation.]

[‘Warhorse of the Eternal Plains’ expresses astonishment at Leafanta Aegim's death.]

Worlds expressed their astonishment.

Chapter 129:

Compatriots (2)

"What?"

Of course, it wasn't just the Constellations who reacted to Leafanta Aegim's death.

"What? Wait, what... Leafanta Aegim is dead? Really?"

A dazed voice echoed under the ashen sky. The leader of the mages who had just been in a fierce battle with Leafanta Aegim. The so-called Magic Tower Master expressed her astonishment.

Her voice marked the beginning. Slowly, people began to gather in the wasteland. Hunters who had fled the clash between Leafanta Aegim and the Tower were now approaching one by one.

"It's impossible. Leafanta Aegim is dead?"

"Who is that guy?"

"Who's the Sword Emperor?"

"Damn. That crazy lunatic has reincarnated..."

People were astonished, yet they hesitated to approach rashly. Their eyes were filled with caution. Caution against the unknown hunter who suddenly appeared and hunted down Leafanta Aegim.

'It's dangerous. I need to disappear before attracting more attention.'

I steadied my breath, heated from the battle with Leafanta Aegim.

'If they discover my martial prowess is weaker than expected, I won't know when they might attack.'

I hunted Leafanta Aegim by setting a trap. If we had fought with full preparation, I would have been defeated a hundred times. Thankfully, the other hunters didn't know this... and it was a relief they didn't.

'I need to hurry.'

I lifted Leafanta Aegim's body onto my back and muttered.

"Transfer."

I envisioned the majestic lobby of the Great Library in my mind. Soon, I would be teleported there with Leafanta Aegim's body. I planned to persuade the 'Holed-Up Head Librarian' according to a certain plan.

".....?"

But nothing happened.

"Transfer."

I muttered again, but it was the same. The surroundings were still a desolate plain. The blood from Leafanta Aegim's body sticky on my back. Hundreds of hunters were looking at me, baffled.

"....."

Suddenly, a bad premonition engulfed me.

'The stage clear hasn't been declared yet!'

Leafanta Aegim was undoubtedly dead. Yet, I hadn't heard the voice declaring, '[Stage cleared.]'

'Why? What's missing?'

I desperately reviewed what could be lacking. Was killing Leafanta Aegim not enough? Since he wasn't the owner of the 50th floor, was it not recognized as clearing the floor?

"...Why is that guy just standing there?"

"Wait a minute. My observation skill is showing that his level is B-Rank?"

"B-Rank?"

As I was lost in thought, the hunters murmured among themselves. The atmosphere, previously frozen in shock, began to shift. Shock gradually turned into suspicion, and suspicion into speculation.

“Stop kidding around.”

“Maybe he has a skill to disguise himself. Leafanta Aegim was estimated to be at least S-Rank, no way he’d die to a B-Rank.”

“Hey! Someone talk to him!”

“Is there any hunter here who was active when the Sword Emperor was alive?”

Sweat dripped down my forehead.

‘This isn’t good.’

The flow of the air was uneasy. Not just because the hunters seemed to be approaching me. Not just because they were likely higher level than me and thus extremely dangerous.

A sense of missing something as a hunter.

"....."

Instinctively, I looked to my side.

"....."

Beside me, the Sword Emperor was grinning.

-What are you looking at?

‘Be honest. You know something, don’t you?’

-I have no idea what you’re talking about. I’ve already given you all the advice I can.

Even as he said this, the Sword Emperor continued to smirk, a hint of mischief at the corners of his mouth. Damn it. I grumbled curses in my mind while quickly recalling the Sword Emperor’s advice.

『 "Gong-Ja." 』

『 "Don't see him as human. He is a weapon, moving strictly according to the content he has input." 』

A weapon, not human. A battle machine.

'If I were Leafanta Aegim? A man obsessively calculating everything. Wouldn't he have considered, even the slightest chance of his own death?'

My thoughts accelerated.

'Leafanta Aegim has even met the Sword Emperor.

In the dream of trauma, I saw Leafanta Aegim's face for the first time. The Sword Emperor was with me then. He immediately recognized Leafanta Aegim.

『 "Where have I seen that guy before?" 』

『 That silver haired guy. He looks so familiar. He's definitely

the Constellation Killer.」

『"Yes. I wondered from which world such a madman could have emerged. So, he's from Aegim."』

I asked the Sword Emperor what his relationship with that man was. He shrugged and replied.

『"What relationship? We had a proper fight, that's all."』

『"He was strong, but not strong enough to be on par with me."』

So.

'The Sword Emperor had previously defeated Leafanta Aegim.'

Constellation Killer had a history of being defeated by the Sword Emperor.

Then, isn't it strange?

I felt the Constellation Killer's blood running down my spine and looked at the Sword Emperor.

'You...'

-Yes.

'You wouldn't have left Leafanta Aegim alive.'

The Sword Emperor.

A mad lunatic, but a man who held a noble attitude only towards the sword and martial arts.

The Sword Emperor killed my master. He righteously cut her down in a fair duel. My master was beautiful, as good as she was, but "that's a heretical doctrine of the Demon Cult," the Sword Emperor asserted, and cut him down.

-Hm.

Leafanta Aegim was far too sinister compared to my master.

-Smart kid.

Having subdued Leafanta Aegim... it's impossible the Sword Emperor didn't kill him.

-That's why I like you. To be a hunter, you need to be smart. A hunter's qualities are threefold: intelligence to think of ways to win, courage to execute those methods, and the ability to make them successful. Smart, bold, and capable.

There's only one conclusion.

The Sword Emperor had definitely killed Leafanta Aegim once before.

Simply, Leafanta Aegim didn't end with that.

-Leafanta Aegim is a hunter. Just like you, Kim Gong-Ja.

The sky split.

“Enhanced strike.”

It was thanks to my extreme vigilance that I could avoid that strike. I had enhanced my senses to the maximum with aura, keenly observing the flow of the air. I sensed the blade that tore through all flows.

I stamped the ground.

I abandoned Leafanta Aegim's body. I abandoned my stance, focusing solely on escaping that spot. Lazy Mule Roll, a technique that martial artists would ridicule or at least smirk at, I executed without a shred of shame.

That's why I survived.

Kwaang!

The wasteland shattered. The ground broke apart. The strike from nowhere swept through the crowd gathered to watch me. Unlike me, the hunters weren't guarding their surroundings. Due to a slight negligence, more than twenty hunters were slaughtered.

It all happened in an instant.

“On my way here, I looked down at a white flower.”

Someone stepped forward. Thud. In the wasteland now heavy with screams and groans, his footsteps echoed.

“That flowerpot was small. It was modest. The man’s life had aged and shrunk, now fitting entirely in one flowerpot. I briefly admired the flowerpot holding the old man’s life. I thought, no matter the size, life can be so beautiful if it can be contained somewhere.”

Silver hair.

“One strike. Enhance.”

A voice flowed from beneath the hood.

“I forsake the memory of the old man and his flowerpot.”

A whirlwind blew.

[‘The Lonely Seeker’ rejoices.]

[‘The Eyes Dwelling in the Labyrinth’ watches the new events.]

[‘Warhorse of the Eternal Plains’ abandons the plan to attack you.]

The number of deaths doubled in an instant. Except for the hunters who reacted swiftly, everyone was caught in the strike. A man who rashly charged at the hooded figure had his limbs severed, imprinting the difference between courage and recklessness on everyone.

“I heard the murmur of people in an alley.”

The wind lifted the man’s hood, revealing his face.

“It wasn’t clear enough to be called a voice. Too noisy to ignore. Something you can’t understand but want to. Perhaps that’s the sign of beauty. I thought the sounds of the alley were beautiful.”

His blue eyes.

“I deduce. Among them is the one who killed me. The most likely person is... the one who was carrying my body.”

An old notebook.

“My death is an event that happened after 153 years, 7 months, and 2 days. The hunter who killed me before, the Sword Emperor, was clearly more skilled than me. Therefore, I added a rule on page 2 that [If I am killed by a stronger opponent, I should flee]. This is a lesson learned after fighting the Sword Emperor three times and losing my life each time.”

The man with silver hair and blue eyes scanned through the old notebook.

“I have made a judgment.”

Then he looked at me.

“You have dodged my two strikes. However, if you were a martial artist of the Sword Emperor's caliber, you would have counterattacked immediately after evading. The Sword Emperor described the martial arts he practiced as 'Cosmic Sword.' You lack the skills befitting that level.”

My waist-sheathed holy sword trembled.

“Considering your level, the reason for my assassination by you seems hard to comprehend.”

The Constellation Killer.

“It means you are intelligent enough to devise a method that I find hard to predict. A hunter more intelligent than me is dangerous. If you acquire more formidable martial power, you might grow to be a hunter comparable to the Sword Emperor.”

A human weapon.

Someone who even anticipated his own death and thus had spare bodies prepared, whether it was through cloning, puppets, or some Constellation's power. Leafanta Aegim was standing there.

『"Do not see him as human."』

『"Leafanta Aegim is a hunter. Just like you, Kim Gong-Ja."』

Like me, who never truly dies no matter how many times I'm killed.

Leafanta Aegim was also a human who prepared for death.

“I judge it necessary to eliminate this dangerous individual immediately.”

The Constellation Killer pulled out a yellow rubber band. Slowly, he tied up his silver hair.

“The battle commences now.”

The world split apart.

-Come, Kim Gong-Ja.

The Sword Emperor laughed heartily.

His worn robe fluttered in the wind.

-This is the world beyond the 50th floor!

I raised my red aura to its limit.

"Damn it! A puppet! This makes him no different from an actual machine!"

"In the battle with the Sword Emperor, there were no witnesses, except for one Constellation."

The Constellation Killer alternated between looking at the notebook and me. Thankfully, he only looked. Meanwhile, relentless strikes came at me. I dodged them with all my might.

"The Sword Emperor regarded his duel as sacred. He called it a martial contest. But this time, there are far too many witnesses to my death. It's difficult to eliminate them all."

-That crazy lunatic....

A distant, dazed voice echoed from the sky. It was the Magic Tower Master's voice. Ignoring it, the Constellation Killer continuously calculated his 'action logic.'

“Therefore, I choose to threaten rather than eliminate. Hear this, see this. I announce to those who oppose me and will oppose me in the future: I have artificially acquired immortality. Even if you kill me, I will stand before you again.”

-.....

“And anyone who once kills me, I will definitely kill. If a group participates in my assassination, I will annihilate that entire group.”

Kooooom!

I barely dodged the Constellation Killer's strike. The strike I evaded ended up slicing through [Leafanta Aegim's corpse] instead. The corpse was severed at the waist in an instant. Crazy. The Constellation Killer had just cut a body identical to his own.

“I declare not just to threaten, but to prove it. I will kill you here.”

Yet his face remained expressionless.

As if his own body held no value to him.

“Enhance, one strike.”

The Constellation Killer rushed at me.

“I forsake all the beauty in the world.”

‘Ah.’

I was seized by the illusion that time had stopped.

A single strike tore through the air and the earth, rushing towards me. I looked into Leafanta Aegim's eyes. They were indifferent.

Pure madness.

Eyes that feared no sacrifice or consequence to execute their determined conviction. Yes, the Sword Emperor was right. This man, like me, was a human living as a hunter.

‘It’s me.’

I lamented.

‘Me, without meeting Raviel—’

Staring at the approaching death, I gave up on defense. Neglected it. But it wasn’t a reckless surrender of life.

『"Do not commit suicide without my permission."』

『"Do not die even in the face of seemingly inevitable death."』

『"Even if it seems you can't escape death, struggle till the very end."』

Instead of defending, I swung my sword. If I couldn't avoid the inevitable strike, I at least had to land one hit before dying.

That was my nature. It was a promise with Raviel.

Swoosh!

My sword intersected with Leafanta Aegim's strike.

My blade managed to tear through the notebook in Leafanta Aegim's left hand.

"....."

I saw Leafanta Aegim's silver eyebrows move slightly.

"-----."

And his strike pierced me.

‘I admit it.’

Cough, blood surged up my throat. My vision blurred white. Amidst the boiling sensations throughout my body, I glared at Leafanta Aegim to the very end.

‘You are a monster. Stronger than me. As cautious as me. But, the opportunity next time isn’t only yours, Leafanta Aegim.’

[The 'Holed-Up Head Librarian' sighs.]

‘Kill me. I’ll let you kill me now. Kill and keep killing. Let’s kill and be killed! Let’s contest your hell and my hell. The last one standing will be me. You are wrong!’

[The 'Holed-Up Head Librarian' rejoices and despairs.]

I will defeat you.

[You have died.]

Wait.

[Your current Hunter Rank is B.]

[Due to the enhanced penalty, the skill activation order changes.]

I will definitely, you—.

[Warning.]

[Re-enacting the trauma of your killer.]

[Extracting the necessary data from your memories.]

My whitened vision turned red.

[The level of penalty is High.]

[Animal Realm.]

My consciousness faded.

From a distant world, as if crossing over from beyond death,
a melody reached me.

Ding,

Dong,

Dang,

Dong.

.....

It was an oddly familiar sound.

A bell sound I seemed to have heard long ago somewhere.

'Where have I heard it... Ah, where... Where was it?'

I struggled to open my eyes. My eyelids felt as heavy as if laden with lead. My whole body felt numb, pinned down. Only a blurry, unrefined melody, a muffled bell sound, reached me.

Ding, Dong, Dang, Dong....

Then, at some point, another sound began to emerge.

-Attention to all students remaining in school, this announcement is from the Broadcasting Club.

In school?

-Except for those participating in the evening self-study, we ask other students to please go home now. Once again, this is an announcement from the Broadcasting Club.

Going home.

-Recently, there have been cases of students staying in school after the end of the school day. To all students remaining in school who have not signed up for evening self-study, please go home.

Ding, Dong, Dang, Dong.

The bell rang again, interrupting the voice.

"....."

What in the world was this all about?

I struggled to break free from the paralysis. Despite my struggles, it was futile, so I focused all my consciousness to one point. I felt my body twitch. As I tried to move my fingers, thud, something hit my head.

“Senior, wake up! It's time to go home!”

Only then did I move as if released from a binding spell. I gasped for air. Gradually, I felt the contours of my body. My senses returned. First hearing, then sight.

“Ahaha.”

Led by a familiar laugh, I lifted my head.

“Lying down on the desk is bad for your health! Bad for your back, and above all, it prevents you from getting proper sleep. I understand you are studying hard with midterms coming up, but you should go home and sleep!”

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled down at me.

But something was different.

“...Heretic Inquisitor?”

The Heretic Inquisitor was wearing a school uniform.

“Huh? Heretic Inquisitor?”

He tilted his head in confusion.

“Who is that?”

“...Could it be Goldencup? Have you possessed the Heretic Inquisitor again?”

“Possession? Oh. Did you have a dream? Ahaha. You read a lot of books, Senior. You must have had an interesting dream!”

"....."

I slowly looked around.

The place where the two of us were... was a library. A library that, compared to the Great Library of All Knowledge, was rather modest. If the Great Library was a grand mansion, this was more like a cramped doghouse.

Looking out the window, I saw a wide schoolyard.

"....."

Like an ordinary school.

‘Sword Emperor.’

I murmured inside, feeling dry-mouthed.

‘We’re in trouble, Sword Emperor. It seems with the increase in level, the penalty has become quite strange. Before, I used to experience trauma like a dream, but now it’s like... Sword Emperor?’

No response came.

I looked around again.

‘Hello?’

Silence.

‘Hey. Sword Emperor.’

Nothing.

"....."

And then I realized.

“Come on, Senior. You should go home now. The Student Council President is probably waiting for you at the school gate! Don’t make your girlfriend angry! I’ll finish tidying up the books, so you go ahead!”

I had entered a new phase.

And a trauma of a completely different dimension was unfolding.

Chapter 130:

Compatriots (3)

“Hurry up, hurry! Cherish your relationships! The main character of a historic romance at Shinseo High should not keep his lover waiting!”

I was practically chased out of the library by the Heretic Inquisitor. My mind was in a daze. I didn't know how to respond.

While I was hesitating, thud, the library door closed behind me.

“Uh...”

The school was quiet.

The gray granite floor of the corridor was slippery. It glistened red when the sunset hit it. There was no one around, just the sound of students kicking a soccer ball, echoing from the distant playground.

“What’s happening here...?”

I walked as if in a trance.

『The Student Council President is probably waiting for you at the school gate!』

『Don’t make your girlfriend angry!』

I had never attended high school, but I did go to middle school for about two years. The school environment was somewhat familiar to me.

‘Let’s head to the school gate.’

The pillars and walls of the corridor were white. Painted with light green paint. The light green wasn’t pretty; it was a color that seemed incomplete. Even that tacky, artificial color felt strangely familiar.

‘Stairs. There should be stairs nearby. Ah. Found them...?’

That's when I felt someone's presence as I reached the stairway. Following the sound, I looked up and saw,

The staircase leading to the rooftop.

A student was standing right in front of the metal door.

".....?"

It was a small-bodied kid. The student was staring blankly at the locked door. It seemed like he was looking at the chain and padlock on the doorknob. Realizing my presence, our eyes met.

A face I had never seen before.

"....."

The student nodded slightly and then silently walked past me down the stairs.

As he passed, I saw the collar of his school uniform shirt. Stains and old grime marked the white collar. From those stains, I could smell a familiar scent. The smell of poverty. Of course, it was just a fleeting glimpse.

The student disappeared down the corridor.

[Behave respectfully♪]

[Live joyfully♪]

[Feel happy♪]

After the student left, colorful slogans hung on the stairway railing filled the empty space. Meaningless words, even worse than saying nothing. It was a failure.

They looked hideous.

Desperately trying to hide its uselessness, the slogan's font was cute, and the colors were adorable. It took me a while to snap out of it.

“...Right. I should go too.”

I arrived at the school gate.

There was a black limousine parked outside.

"....."

Wait a minute.

Let me explain what I just saw. I normally walked down the stairs, passed by the ordinary sandy playground, and reached the gate, which should be ordinary.

But why? Why was there a black limousine, a luxurious one like from a movie, parked at the gate?

"Hmm. You're a bit late today."

And the person closest to my heart was standing next to the limousine.

"R-Raviel...?"

“It’s a lovely evening, Gong-Ja.”

My love spoke calmly.

“The sunset becomes even more beautiful upon seeing your face. The sunset seems to turn red just to hide your blushing cheeks.”

There were still students in the playground who hadn't gone home yet. Students playing in the basketball court, those taking a short walk before entering the evening self-study room, students kicking a football. All of them stopped what they were doing and looked our way.

“Look over there. That senior...”

“Oh, that’s the guy dating the chaebol girl...”

“So jealous...”

“At the festival, he confessed in front of everyone...”

Crazy.

“Why such a dazed look, Gong-Ja? While your clueless expression is part of your charm, it's a bit too much right now. Have you decided to explore new charms?”

“Raviel... were you a chaebol heiress?”

My head was spinning. What was this insane trauma trying to show me? Was it a gift of seeing Raviel in a school uniform? Should I take a picture? Preserve it forever? Has technology developed in this day and age to transfer recordings from trauma to reality?

“What strange talk... my boyfriend. I was born into a chaebol family and still live as a member of one.”

Crazy.

Raviel just called me her boyfriend.

Boyfriend!

What should I do? Record it? Tape it? Photograph it? Has technology developed to transmit recordings from a trauma to reality? What are scientists doing? Isn't this negligence and a strike?

“R-Raviel. Sorry, but how old are you now?”

“...I am a second-year student at Shinseo High.”

“And me?”

“Driver, book an appointment with a psychiatrist right away. My boyfriend seems to be suffering from mild amnesia. And to answer your question, of course, my boyfriend is also a second-year like me.”

“Ah, to have met Raviel since high school... To share school days with Raviel, what is this? Such a tremendous blessing...? I'm the happiest guy in the whole world...”

“Driver, cancel the appointment. He's just as usual.”

We had a brief moment of affection in front of the school gate. It was a happy time. Even though screams erupted from the playground, I didn't mind. According to the Heretic Inquisitor, we were the official couple of the school.

“In another life, even if we are reborn, I will love you, Raviel...”

“I love you from my past life to my next. The name of love will always be replaced by the three letters, Kim Gong-Ja. But for now, let's live in the present. Get in the car. I'll take you home.”

Home.

To me, home meant the orphanage. Could it be that she's taking me to the orphanage? No, but this [Trauma World] was clearly different from [The Outside World]. I had never attended high school, and I had never heard of Shinseo High.

What would my home be like here?

“Something big happened at my boyfriend's house yesterday.”

Raviel said as we got into the limousine. The inside of the limousine was spacious and comfortable. But we deliberately sat close to each other.

“A big incident?”

“Hoo. Is such an event not significant enough? Well, my boyfriend has always disliked talking about that person. I dislike it too... But family is family. I've handled it, so tell your mother and father not to worry. No. It's better if I tell them myself.”

"....."

I didn't understand what she was talking about. It seemed like an incident had occurred, and Raviel had taken care of it. But the words that shook me were [mother] and [father].

‘My parents.’

I had called the orphanage director father as a child. I had called a volunteering sister mother. But all were born out of a child's ignorance and play.

The parents Raviel spoke of... were not like that.

‘In this world, I have a home and parents.’

That felt strangely unfamiliar.

‘Raviel once arranged a one-day father for me at our wedding...’

I was happy then. But it was more like the joy of being given something fleeting by the person I loved.

But not just something that existed and will continue to exist like parents.

‘I can’t even imagine what that feels like...’

The limousine stopped. Looking out the window, I saw a small, shabby detached house in an old neighborhood.

“Oh.”

And in front of the house, a burly man was sweeping with a broom.

“Are you back?”

The long-haired man grinned broadly.

“Wow. Your girlfriend even drives you in a limousine. My son is lucky. It’s all thanks to me passing on my good looks. Always respect your father who made sure you were born handsome!”

It was the Sword Emperor.

"....."

My mind was reeling.

“Were you well? Father.”

“Oh, don’t bow your head, young lady. Someone as precious as you shouldn’t bow to a person like me. But, about our son, did he do anything rude? This guy is inherently good but has a bit of a crazy streak...”

“It’s alright. I cherish every aspect of Gong-Ja.”

“Heh. How can every word from the lady be so gracious? Hey! Hey! Kim Gong-Ja, you scoundrel! Bow down and pay your respects right now. If you dare mistreat the lady, I’ll cut off our relationship that day. Understand? Just like that. You’ll be erased from the family register!”

I was dizzy with the realization.

“Come on, let’s head home.”

We headed inside the shabby, old house.

The inside was small but filled with warmth. In the living room, a woman was cooking. She had a gentle smile and a kind face, much like how a mother would look in an old movie.

“Welcome back, Gong-Ja.”

“Mom...”

I called her mom without thinking.

This strange and unfamiliar feeling filled my heart. A feeling of having a family, a place to return to, parents waiting for me.

This trauma, this illusion, was giving me a taste of what I never had, a normal life. It was both beautiful and heartbreakingly painful.

Raviel and the Sword Emperor were chatting amiably.

The scene of their conversation was real.

I passed out right there.

"Um."

Raviel gently caught my falling body.

"Today, Gong-Ja is acting quite strange, Father. Earlier, he even asked me about my age."

“That boy has always been a bit strange. Let me tell you, when he was five, he.... Ah, would you like to stay for dinner? I prepared cockles, and they are really good.”

“Yes, I wouldn’t refuse.”

“You’re such a kind person! Gong-Ja, what are you doing? Haven’t you bowed yet? Shall I bend your knees for you?”

We entered the house.

“Welcome home, Gong-Ja.”

My master was sitting on the sofa, reading a newspaper.

“How was school today, my son?”

"....."

I fainted.

“My goodness? You even brought your lover home. Welcome, Miss Ban Siah.”

“Please call me Raviel, Mother. The foreign name is more comfortable.”

“Is that so? Hmm, alright. The customs of today’s kids are hard to understand.”

Mother.

MOTHER.

M.

O.

T.

H.

E.

R.

“Honey, you don’t know anything. Gong-Ja wouldn’t dare invite a lady home. I invited her. I tempted her with my cockle dish.”

“Ah, indeed, darling. Our son couldn’t possibly do such a thing. It’s about time for dinner anyway. Let’s eat together...”

Honey.

Darling.

HONEY.

DARLING.

Honeyyyy!?

Darlingggg!?

-Continuing with the news about the popular singer Yoo Soo-Ha.

The TV in the living room announced with the voice of an anchor.

-After shocking the public with an assault video where singer Yoo Soo-Ha was seen assaulting an individual, a twist has emerged. The video was revealed to be fabricated. Surprisingly, the whistle-blower who reported the violence admitted the manipulation.

I blankly watched the TV screen. On it was a long-haired, ponytailed handsome man.

-The whistle-blower said, 'I reported it as a joke. I didn't know it would blow up like this. I sincerely apologize to everyone affected by my actions'...

Photos of Preta and Goldencup appeared on the screen. So, images of Flame Emperor, Preta, and Goldencup were displayed in sequence.

-Meanwhile, group members Estel and Silvia have refrained from officially commenting.

Footage of the singers dancing appeared. Preta and Flame Emperor were dancing, and Goldencup was singing.

-However, the concert scheduled in 10 days has been abruptly canceled. It's expected that the group's activities will be disrupted for some time.

Crazy.

Isn't this insane?

Have we gone mad?

“Hmm.”

The Sword Emperor nodded slightly, putting down the newspaper. He looked seriously at Raviel.

“We have a lot to talk about at the dinner table. Gong-Ja, go call your brother. Let's have a family dinner together after a long time. Is that alright with you, Miss Raviel?"

"Certainly."

Brother? Not just Father and Mother, but I have a brother too?

"Where is my brother?"

"He's in your room."

The Sword Emperor gestured towards the bedroom with his eyes. I felt an inexplicable fear. If Father is the Sword Emperor and Mother is my teacher, then who could possibly appear as my brother?

Creak.

I cautiously, slowly opened the door.

"Huh?"

A man was lying on the bed, crunching potato chips. In one hand, he was reading a comic book from a rental store. Seeing my face, he lazily greeted me with his chip-covered hand.

“It’s been a while. Damn it, did you see the news? What happened to me yesterday, huh. Ah, I was so pissed off with the constant stalking, I hit the guy, and it was all recorded. I almost ended my career as a singer.”

It was the Flame Emperor.

"....."

I fainted.

“I got lucky this morning. That damn snitch ran off with his tail between his legs. Phew, I got a real earful from Mom... Huh? Hey? Are you okay? You look pale. Kim Gong-Ja? Hey, brother. Did you lose your mind? Why are you staggering around like that...?”

“Die!”

I lunged at the bed.

“Die! Just die, you maniac!”

“A-are you crazy? Hey, calm down!”

“How can I calm down when you just called my master 'Mom,' you bastard! Die! Apologize to my master with your death!”

“What the hell are you talking about... no, wait, huh? What the hell? Since when did you get so strong... ack, ugh, aargh!”

I was choking Yoo Soo-Ha. Seriously. If it's acceptable that the Sword Emperor is my father, let's just go with that. But this guy as my brother? This psychopath as my brother?

“Dieee!!”

“Mom! Help!”

Yoo Soo-Ha gasped for air and screamed.

“Gong-Ja is hitting me! Mom!”

This is insane.

Chapter 131: The Wasteland (1)

“I know it’s an intrusion, but I’ve handled the incident involving brother-in-law.”

After a bout of chaos, we gathered at the dining table. Yoo Soo-Ha had a black eye, and I had a lump on my head from being hit by my master..

“To handle such incidents, they should be suppressed early on or buried in time. The latter is usually preferred, but the timing was bad this time. The political sphere was quiet, and brother-in-law’s concert was scheduled in 10 days.”

Raviel skillfully picked out the seasoned cockles with her chopsticks. There she was, existing right there.

‘She’s beautiful.’

Ah, I was thankful for the invention of chopsticks. Chopsticks must feel honored to be used by Raviel. Despite the frustration and twist in my gut that a scumbag like Yoo Soo-Ha is referred to as "brother-in-law."

".....My boyfriend."

"Yes?"

"Don't stare so intensely."

Raviel spoke as if troubled.

"Look away. Or bow your head. I'm speaking to your parents right now. I don't want to show such impropriety in front of my boyfriend's parents."

"Yes...."

I obediently bowed my head and just ate my meal... What's with this cockle salad? It's damn delicious! Was it really prepared by the Guardian Spirit? Does he have a knack for cooking too? My world is shaking....

“Ah. But please stop calling him brother-in-law. That guy doesn’t deserve to be called that by Raviel. Just call him scumbag.”

“You, you brat. You’ve lost your manners since I last saw you, haven’t you?”

“Hmm.”

My master slowly sipped her drink.

“It’s somewhat surprising, Raviel. I understand you’re doing this for Gong-Ja, but as you know, Soo-Ha and Gong-Ja don’t get along well. Was it necessary to use your family’s power to help Soo-Ha?”

“There was no need.”

Raviel spoke calmly.

“I just wanted to show you something.”

“Show us? What do you mean?”

“You both may be underestimating our love. To you, it’s just a fling for a chaebol’s daughter. A pleasant memory of high school. An experience in life. Whether it’s in a good or bad sense, you must be thinking that way.”

Raviel’s voice flowed over the dining table.

“But I’m serious. I intend to welcome you as my new family with all seriousness. There’s opposition to our relationship in my family, but I’ll crush all those objections. Dealing with this incident was to show you my capability and determination.”

"....."

“Please grant us permission to marry. Mother. Father.”

My master chuckled wryly.

“.....What a wonderful girl has come to my son. It feels strange to see my son being loved. But it's good to know I didn't raise him in vain.”

Master.

“Wow, so now we’re becoming a chaebol's in-laws? Ha, my singing career is over. Over. Hey, sister-in-law! There are singers breaking into China these days. Could you maybe...”

“Soo-Ha, if you cause trouble again, I’ll kick you out of our house. Know this. No, that’s not enough. Go apologize to the person you assaulted. Kneel and seek forgiveness. Until then, I won’t recognize you as a part of this family.”

“Mom, what!?”

I quietly observed the scene at the table.

"....."

A home.

Parents.

Things I never had.

After officially receiving permission to marry, Raviel left. We even set a date for the meeting of families. The Guardian Spirit even exclaimed, "Haha! I should get a suit tailored for my son! This is happening faster than I thought!"

"....."

My master and the Guardian Spirit's professions were writers. After Raviel left, the house quieted down, and the sounds of their work gently filled the still living room.

My master wrote with a pencil. With a cup of coffee by her side, she occasionally scribbled a few words on the manuscript, deeply lost in thought. Her profile, immersed in thought, was serene.

Meanwhile, the Guardian Spirit typed on a typewriter. Tap, tap. The rhythm of the typewriter keys gently echoed. While writing, Yoo Soo-Ha frowned like an irritated otter and sometimes went to the kitchen to make his own cocktails.

"....."

A quiet world.

‘Why?’

Even as I went to school the next morning, I couldn’t understand.

‘Why is this the trauma of the Constellation Killer?’

On the way to school, students in uniforms passed by. They all looked familiar or somehow known.

“Good morning, senior!”

Among them were students who bowed respectfully upon seeing me. Loosely buttoned shirts. Tight trousers. Shortened skirts. Those who seemed rebellious bowed to me.

“Did you sleep well last night!”

“.....The Four Demon Lords?”

They were none other than the followers of the Demonic Cult.

A middle-school student, spitting image of Moon Shadow Demon, tilted his head.

“Four Demon Lords? We are the Four Kings of Shinseo High, senior.”

“Crazy.....”

In this world, are the Four Demon Lords just delinquents? Am I the leader of these delinquents? Then am I the school thug who dates the chaebol girl and student council president?

This is madness.

“You guys... Why do you act like thugs? Stop it. Study or something. Forget studying, just disband whatever delinquent group or whatever you have.”

“We’ve been behaving lately! Since you started dating the queen, you told us to keep it low! We’re keeping it low! We can’t even bully the bread shuttles anymore because of you, senior!”

“That’s not what I mean... Never mind. The Four Kings, you say? And you guys, do you really call Raviel the queen? This is crazy.”

“Don’t speak formally, senior! It’s scary!”

The craziness continued even after I entered the classroom.

“Attention. Wish the teacher!”

The Black Dragon Witch was our class president. Neatly dressed, her aura screamed model student.

“Okay. Class president, collect the phones.”

“Yes!”

“Anyone hiding them will face my wrath. Got it?”

And Viper was our homeroom teacher. With an indistinguishable appearance of a teacher or gangster, Viper swaggered on the podium, holding a cane.

‘I’m going nuts.’

The Black Dragon Witch walked around the classroom with a storage box. Students voluntarily or reluctantly handed over their phones. Not smartphones, but flip phones or slide phones.

"....."

And the Black Dragon Witch just passed by my seat without a word.

Silently.

‘Huh?’

Looking around, I was the only student the Black Dragon Witch skipped without a word. Countess (a classmate!) and Paladin (also a classmate!) obediently handed over their phones.

“Uh... class president?”

Using the unfamiliar title, I stood up and put my phone in the storage box.

“What is it?”

“You didn’t take my phone... Here.”

It felt awkward to speak informally to the Black Dragon Witch. It seemed not only me but also the Black Dragon Witch was surprised by my action.

“.....Right. The Princess is reforming the Foolish Ondal.*”

*References the folklore of Princess Pyonggang who was married off to an idiot.

“What?”

“Nothing, forget it.”

The Black Dragon Witch shook her head lightly and walked to the front row.

On the podium, Viper the teacher was smirking.

“Look at that. The great Gong-Ja hands over his phone. Kids, take note! You don’t need nagging or a cane to change a person. Just love. When you go to college, earnestly look for your significant other.”

Paladin raised her hand.

“Teacher, Gong-Ja said he’s going to Seoul National University. He told me seriously.”

“Strange, he told me he’s going to Oxford.”

The Countess chuckled.

“The student council president is going abroad for study. He said he’d follow her no matter what.”

“Hmm. So his safe choice is Seoul National University and his ambitious choice is Oxford. Truly Gong-Ja, a man with a different level of standards...”

The students giggled. It seemed the mood in the class was mainly driven by Paladin and Countess, with Countess chuckling.

“Class president, be careful. You might lose your top rank.”

“.....Unnecessary meddling.”

The Black Dragon Witch replied curtly.

Despite wearing a uniform, everyone had familiar faces, making me feel odd.

No.

Not everyone.

"....."

In the back row. A seat by the window.

There, the student I had encountered yesterday on the rooftop stairway was sitting. The student had a notebook open and was quietly writing something.

‘A classmate, huh.’

The wind blew through the window.

The curtain fluttered.

The child was small enough to be almost hidden by the curtain. Thus, the student appeared and disappeared between the curtains. The thin curtain, like a veil, seemed to distance the child a few steps from the classroom.

“Ah, hello. Everyone...?”

Someone entered the classroom at that moment.

“The first period is math... isn’t it?”

“Yes, teacher.”

“Th-then, let’s start the lesson....”

It was the Apothecary.

‘Nothing surprises me anymore.’

Right. After the Four Demon Lords were crowned and the Flame Emperor turned out to be my own brother, what more could surprise me?

Even Preta and Goldencup formed an idol group and sang with the Flame Emperor. The Apothecary being a math teacher is nothing. Yes, indeed....

The day passed by quickly.

“It’s big bro Gong-Ja!”

“Brother Gong-Ja! Let's play together!”

During lunchtime, as I stepped out of the cafeteria, middle school students swarmed around me. The 10th floor. The children from the [Hellfire Mansion].

"....."

"Lately you're only studying! Play with us too!"

"Let's play soccer, soccer!"

The children, who were tortured and died without any guilt, were now middle school students, laughing brightly.

I felt a bit suffocated.

".....Sure. Let's play together."

In the schoolyard where the high school and middle school stood side by side, I played with the kids.

An old security guard was standing at the school gate. It was NamGung Woon, the Head of the Martial Alliance.

In the afternoon, during the physical education class, I saw elementary school students leaving school beyond the gate. They were the apostles of [The Immortal Missionary of Happiness]. The elementary students paired up in twos and threes, some holding hands with their partners, passing by the ginkgo tree-lined road.

"....."

I don't know.

I really don't know.

Even though the last class ended, I didn't go home. I just sat blankly on a bench in the schoolyard, watching the students leave.

'Everyone is alive.'

In this world, the Guardian Spirit is not a ghost. He's Alive. I can't even imagine what kind of novel they would write... but they live as a writer.

My master, she is also alive.

The children from the mansion are alive.

Even the Flame Emperor, who hasn't changed his rotten nature, lives as a human, nagging at his parents and getting scolded. Preta too. Even Goldencup.

Among the students leaving school earlier, there were familiar faces. Hunters who were eaten by tentacle monsters as examples for challenging the Holed-Up Head Librarian. Even nameless hunters were alive, passing by on their way home.

'Is this Leafanta Aegim's trauma?'

A gentle everyday life, isn't it?

A happy hypothesis, isn't it?

Which part of this world resembles hell?

"You were here, boyfriend."

I turned my head.

Raviel approached behind me with a smile.

“Raviel....”

“Your face looks troubled. I was worried something happened because you didn’t answer your phone. It’s not good to unnecessarily worry your lover.”

“Ah.”

I hurriedly took out my phone and turned it on. I had forgotten to switch it on after getting it back after school.

“I’m sorry. I was just a little distracted....”

“What could have shaken my boyfriend’s heart? Ideally, apart from me, nothing in this world should cause even a ripple in your heart.”

I leaned my head back slightly. Raviel leaned forward.

Separated by the backrest of the bench, we shared a moment of breath.

“Raviel.”

“Hmm.”

“Do you know the names of my parents, by any chance?”

Raviel blinked.

“Of course.”

“Can you tell me now?”

“Mother’s surname is So with BaekHyang being her given name. She has the characters for “White” and “Fragrance” in her name*,”

*‘Baek’ means the color white and “Hyang” means fragrance in korean.

And then.

“Father’s surname is ■ with ■ and ■ in his name.”

"....."

Silence.

When Raviel mentioned Guardian Spirit’s name, noise like static covered the sound.

‘Ah.’

Of course.

I did not know Guardian Spirit’s real name.

If this were a dream... it wouldn’t specify facts I didn’t know.

‘As expected.’

Today. During the break.

I flipped through the attendance book placed on the classroom podium.

To see if names like Black Witch or Paladin were written.

But....

+

Roll No. 1. Kim Gong-Ja

Roll No. 2. ■■■

Roll No. 3. ■■

Roll No. 4. ■■■

Roll No. 5. ■■■

+

Most names were not written.

Even if I tried to find out, I couldn't recognize them.

As if someone blackened them out with scribbles.

“.....Raviel. It might sound strange, but I'm anxious. You're a young lady from a wealthy family. Logically, in a school like this, with someone like me, it's impossible for you to be spending your school days.”

“I find your words unsettling. What are you talking about?”

“Maybe. Just maybe, all of this.....”

Buzz buzz.

My phone vibrated.

+

1 unread message.

Sender: ■■

+

An ominous feeling overwhelmed me.

“Sorry, Raviel. Just a moment.”

I opened the phone.

A moment later, words appeared on the screen.

Compared to a smartphone, the screen was cramped.

+

The one responsible for my death is you.

Don't forget.

You killed me.

+

My body froze.

The air seemed to turn to ice.

The next moment.

“Kyaaaaaaak!”

A scream tore through the schoolyard.

Chapter 132: The Wasteland (2)

“Look over there! Over there...”

“Wh-what should we do? Should we call a teacher?”

Students gathered in the playground, pointing towards the rooftop.

“What’s he planning to do?”

“I don’t know. Looks like he’s going to jump...”

There was a student standing on the rooftop.

“What should we do?”

“Crazy! Someone call a teacher!”

“There! Over there!”

Students playing soccer, students taking a walk, even those leaving school a bit late. Students scattered around the schoolyard began to gather in groups. It was an instinctive response. They felt that something they couldn't handle alone was happening, was about to happen.

"This is bad.....!"

Instead of helplessly gathering, some chose to act quickly.

“This is not good. Gong-Ja! Call 119*. Tell them the name of the school and that a student is about to jump from the rooftop. Hurry! I'll go up to the rooftop and try to persuade the child!”

*119 is the emergency dial number in South Korea.

Raviel didn't send someone to call a teacher. Instead of looking for someone to take responsibility, she acted promptly to address the situation. Without waiting for my response,

Raviel quickly ran towards the main school building.

“Ah....”

Seeing Raviel's retreating figure, my frozen body thawed. Right. Whatever the situation, there's no time to hesitate. I quickly dialed on my phone. 1... 1...

Thud!

Something fell in the schoolyard just before I could press 9. At first, I thought a student had jumped. But the sound was too trivial for a human body falling. It was the sound of the student on the rooftop throwing down their phone.

"....."

I looked up at the rooftop, pressing 9.

Our eyes met.

It was the face I had seen in the classroom. The student sitting alone in the back row by the window, silently doing advance study. But it felt like only now did I really see the student's face clearly.

The student's pupils were black.

The student's cheeks were white.

"-----."

The student lifted the corners of his mouth in a sneer.

Slowly, the student's lips moved. Silence. The voice, obscured by the distance, was read by my eyes through the movement of their lips. It was a two-syllable last word I couldn't help but recognize, even if I tried not to.

[Die.]

And then.

Small claw-like fingers let go of the rooftop fence. Letting go.

The wind.

The person...

"■■■■■■■■!!"

Students screamed. The world was engulfed in noise. "Mi■!" Someone cried out in a fit. "■■Aaaaaa■■■ack!" Someone shook, tearing at someone else's sleeve.

"Teach■! Teach■r!" "Shi■," "■ck!"

In an instant.

The school was no longer a school. Everything shattered. The playground was a bleak desert. The main building was nothing but a grotesque prison.

The classroom was a slaughterhouse for butchering beasts or a breeding ground for raising them. The beasts were always starving for prey. In a world where people are slaughtered and bred, they were nothing but corpses to become.

Red.

A person had died.

"....."

I stared blankly at the schoolyard. The bricks held a hue of red. The redness spread further. Fearing that their toes might touch the red, students stepped back. A few took out their phones. Click! The artificial sound rang out.

"Ah."

That sound moved me.

"Don't take photos."

I approached the students.

"What are you doing right now? Don't take photos! Stop it!"

The students flinched. But more and more students were gathering. Leaving the soccer ball in the desert, abandoning flowers on the walking path, turning their backs on the way home, more people gathered.

“Don’t take photos!”

As I stopped one group, another took out their phones on the opposite side.

“Stop it, damn it! Stop!”

A nameless emotion surged up my esophagus. Tears seemed about to flow. It was anger. Contempt. Disgust. From the school main building, on the 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th, and 5th floors, students poked their heads out to look here. Countless faces. Countless eyes.

Watching a person.

“Stop, don’t!”

The sunset was red.

“Damn it,”

Why.

“Just stop it, will you!”

Hundreds of faces were expressionless. On the 1st floor, Black Witch looked this way. On the 3rd floor, Heretic Inquisitor peeked out. In the schoolyard, Paladin and Countess looked on. The children from the Hellfire Mansion surrounded me. The cultists stood in the playground. Click! Click.

They moved their fingers and took photos.

+

The one responsible for my death is you.

Don't forget.

You killed me.

+

I looked up at the rooftop.

"....."

Raviel was looking down at me.

"But, Gong-Ja."

Raviel's voice flowed against the reddened sky.

"Weren't you the one who killed him?"

The world crumbled.

The sky was stained red.

Red paint fell, drenching the ground.

People turned red, and my vision reddened.

“---As you know, there has been an unfortunate incident at our school.”

In the auditorium, the principal spoke. The principal had the face of the Sword Saint.

“But I believe in our Shinseo High students....”

Red.

“That guy, he sent such a crazy message. Isn’t he totally insane?”

Students murmured in the classroom. They had the faces of Countess and Paladin.

“That’s right. Looking back, he was always a bit weird.”

Red.

“Don’t bother about those making a fuss with it. Those who can’t even squeak in front of you are now making a big deal with just their fingers. Ugh. Those kinds of people should have their fingers cut off.”

At home, my father drank whiskey. He had the face and laughter of the Guardian Spirit.

“That’s right, kiddo. It happens in life, hitting and all. Just for that, he dies? Isn’t he just an attention-seeker? Hey! Call the Four Demon Lords! Let’s go play games together!”

My brother put his arm around my shoulder. The Flame Emperor spoke cheerfully.

Red.

“Yes, the teacher is very sad. Sad, but.”

On the podium, the homeroom teacher spoke. The teacher had the face of Viper.

“It’s a crucial time for you all. Time flies in the 3rd year. The real game changes in the 2nd year. Think about what’s important to you and get your mind in order.”

The students opened their mouths. All of them answered in unison.

“Yes, teacher.”

Only the class president bowed her head silently.

The class president had the face of Black Dragon Witch.

A white flower was placed on that child's desk. One day, two days, three days. Before a week passed, the desk disappeared somewhere. It was unclear who removed it.

No student asked who removed it.

A new desk did not enter the back row by the window.

"....."

The wind blew.

The curtain fluttered.

Where the wind blew, there was no one.

[Repeating the Trauma of your killer.]

And then.

[The level of penalty is High.]

[Animal Realm.]

Ding,

Dong,

Dang,

Dong.

An eerie melody rang out.

It was noise masquerading as sound. An electronic sound mimicking natural sounds. The melody became more lively and spirited, as if to hide the fact that it was just a poor imitation.

-Attention to all students remaining in school, this announcement is from the Broadcasting Club.

An imitation

-Except for those participating in the evening self-study, we ask other students to please go home now. Once again, this is an announcement from the Broadcasting Club.

Something which failed.

-Recently, there have been cases of students staying in school after the end of the school day. To all students remaining in school who have not signed up for evening self-study, please go home.

Feeling nauseous, I opened my eyes.

“Senior, wake up! It's time to go home!”

"....."

“Oh, you're already awake.”

The Heretic Inquisitor grinned.

“Lying down on the desk is bad for your health! Bad for your back, and above all, it prevents you from getting proper sleep. I understand you are studying hard with midterms coming up, but you should go home and sleep!”

I didn't wait for the Heretic Inquisitor to finish speaking. I stood up and ran out of the library. The Heretic Inquisitor's voice followed from behind.

“Oh, senior! You shouldn't run in the hallway!”

I bit my teeth as I ran through the hallway.

‘I understand now.’

The mystery was solved.

This was undoubtedly the trauma of the Constellation Killer, Leafanta Aegim.

My memories had been overlaid on Leafanta Aegim's nightmare like a [skin].

The same situation.

The same roles.

Only, the characters weren't those remembered by Leafanta Aegim, but those I had seen in my life. Therefore, Black Dragon Witch, Paladin, and Countess became students. My master and Guardian Spirit became my parents.

And I was.

‘I am the perpetrator.’

A bitter taste filled my mouth.

‘I am the main culprit assigned to this role.’

In all the traumas I had experienced before, I had always been an [observer]. There was always a sense of being a first-person observer. But as my rank increased, so did the penalty.

Here, I was a party involved.

Not just me, but everyone I remembered.

Except for one person.

‘Damn it!’

I reached the stairs.

[Behave respectfully♪]

[Live joyfully♪]

[Feel happy♪]

On the stairs hung a ridiculously inappropriate slogan. Stop joking. Really, stop it. I cursed inwardly as I looked up the stairs leading to the rooftop.

There stood the only person in this world [not in my memories].

‘Constellation Killer.’

A small-framed student. Holding the unopened iron door, the student was pulling it back and forth. Clank. Clank! The chain was too firm to easily break.

“Haah... the key...”

The student sighed and turned around. Our eyes met for a moment. The student paused briefly, but then politely bowed their head.

The student bowed to me.

‘Why didn’t I realize sooner?’

When I realized this student was my classmate, I should have noticed something strange. Isn’t it obvious?

What classmate bows their head in greeting to another classmate?

Something was wrong.

"....."

The student glanced at me and then quietly walked away. As they were about to pass me, I called out to them.

“Wait a moment.”

“Yes?”

The student naturally used formal language. They didn't look at me directly but cautiously looked up with a practiced angle.

My throat clenched.

"..... Can I see your phone for a moment?"

"....."

"Please."

The student obediently handed over the phone. There was a brief silence, not resistance to my request, but rather surprise at my use of formal language.

I unlocked the phone, which wasn't password protected.

+

47 Unread Messages.

+

I opened the messages one by one.

I saw them.

[I feel so sorry for our juniors TTTT ■■ They're supposed to call you senior, right? Have you thought about how they feel? Doesn't your conscience hurt?]

[Hey, you gonna answer?]

[I'm shocked! There's a student who doesn't wash their uniform!?!]

[■■... really disgusting. Even worse than the math teacher lololol]

[I greeted you in the hallway yesterday, and you seemed so happy hahaha Hey! I did it because I lost at rock-paper-scissors! Please don't get it wrong π π]

[■■ lives in a garbage dump. They reuse everything, shoes, uniform. The only thing that can't be recycled is ■■.]

[Your smell is really bad. Seriously, you stink.]

[Let's meet after class.]

Thud.

I closed the phone.

I couldn't read any more.

"....."

I closed my eyes and breathed. Breathing somehow calmed me down. In this trauma, I didn't have the dagger's hilt. Nor the handkerchief Raviel gave me. It took a lot of effort to calm my emotions.

"Why..."

I looked at the [Constellation Killer's past].

“Why do you bring your phone to school? Just don’t bring it.”

The student replied.

“...They said they’d kill me if I didn’t bring it.”

A cold chill ran down my throat.

My head spun.

“Then, just, throw it away. If you lose it, they can’t blame you.”

“This.”

The student,

The person who would later be known as Constellation Killer, softly opened their lips.

“This phone was given by you, sir. An old one you used...”

"....."

“In our house, we don't have money... and you're even paying for the bills. You said to come out immediately when you call. For that purpose. They said if I lose it, they'll kill me...”

The grotesque building.

Friendship imitating friendship, love imitating love, meaningless imitations of meaning, pretending specialness and staging extraordinariness – in this masquerade of a breeding ground, only malice.

“Is it really okay to throw it away?”

Only malice was not fake.

Chapter 133: ■■ (1)

The director of the orphanage where I grew up was indifferent, neither kind nor unkind.

The children at the orphanage grumbled about it.

-It's too sloppy. All our birthdays are on January 1st?

-Maybe she's too lazy to celebrate more often.

-And what's with my name? Kim Maeng-Ja*?

*Maeng-Ja is the Korean name of the Chinese Philosopher Mencius.

-Hey, at least your name starts with Kim, which sounds natural. I got Kim Han-Bi-Ja... Just call me HanBiJa.

*Han-Bi-Ja is the Korean name of Han Feizi.

I thought so too. Even after entering the Tower, I continued to think so.

But now, having met many people, the Sword Emperor, my master, Raviel, and many others, I think differently.

-Why does the director act like that?

It might sound strange, but the director always seemed wary and cautious of loving us too much.

-Doesn't the director love us?

I remembered a conversation I had with the director the day I received my middle school uniform.

Upon hearing my question, the director looked serious and said, "Wait just one day, please." Whenever faced with a serious question, the director always asked for a day's delay.

And then answered.

-You asked yesterday why I don't show more love to you kids.

-Yes...

I felt somewhat guilty for even asking that question over the day. But the director, seemingly uncaring about my guilty conscience, methodically explained what had been thought over that day.

-Gong-Ja, people tend to pretend. It's the easiest thing in the world. Pretending to be smart, strong, kind, as if they truly know something... You do that with your friends, right? And I do that too, giving you kids names of sages. Adults do it as well.

The director washed their hands.

-People all wear masks. There's no need to take off these masks. But if you get too used to it, at some point, you forget you're wearing a mask. You forget. That's what intoxication is.

The director looked at me carefully.

Checking if I was following the conversation.

-Imagine this. If I show my irritation in front of you kids, what would you think?

-Oh, the director must be stressed today...?

-Exactly.

The director smiled bitterly.

-Sorry. I do that sometimes.

It happened about once a month.

-Anyway, the important thing is, I'm someone who occasionally gets irritated, and you kids know that very well. Do you understand? I'm that kind of person. And you know me.

But, the director continued.

-What if I was always a loving person? Always saying [I love you], smiling [You kids are the joy of my life], hugging you saying [I cherish nothing more than you]. What if I, being that person, show irritation once a year?

The director shook their head.

-Then you'd think, [Why is the director angry at us?] You wouldn't understand. Because you would think I'm the person who loves you the most.

[The director loves us the most, so why did she get angry?]

-.....

-You're still young. So you can only think of the easiest answer. [Ah, I must have done something wrong.]

The director shivered slightly.

-Even if I get irritated only once a year, Gong-Ja. If that adds up over 10 years, that's 10 times. Even if you remember only half of that, it's 5 times. And those 5 memories are more than enough to shape one's personality.

The director then fell silent for a while.

-Don't do that.

The director murmured.

-Remember me as someone who easily gets stressed and irritated. Someone too lazy to even host birthday parties. That's the truth. Don't blame yourselves. You did nothing wrong. Don't let someone like me twist you.

-.....

-You can become strong. As strong as possible.

In the principal's office, a printed A4 paper was tacked on the wall. Directly opposite the director's desk, it was usually seen as part of the background, like wallpaper or floor covering.

But that day, I particularly glanced at the A4 paper.

+

I solemnly swear, based on my free will and honor, to:

Ensure that all people enjoy a dignified life,

Grounded in the beliefs of human dignity and social justice,

Working alongside individuals, families, groups, organizations, communities, and society as a whole.

Always stand with those marginalized and suffering,

Defending their rights and interests,

Rejecting social injustice and corruption,

Prioritizing public interest over personal gain,

Upholding the ethical code of social workers,

I solemnly pledge as a moral and responsible social worker.

+

I looked at the director.

-.....

The director seemed lost in thought, staring blankly into space.

Black eyes.

Those pupils remained in my memory.

“Sorry, Raviel. I can’t walk home with you today.”

I said as I walked out of the school gate.

"Mm."

Raviel looked at me. Her gaze slowly moved downward.

There, my hand was held. Not just my hand, but someone else's as well.

"....."

It was the Constellation Killer's hand.

Constellation Killer, with his hand held by me, had been dragged here. He didn't ask why their hand was held or where they were being taken.

He simply bowed his head quietly.

".....My boyfriend sometimes shows extraordinary action. Almost a mystery in itself. I think that side of him is impressive."

Raviel murmured.

“Do as you wish. Follow your heart. Is there anything I can help with?”

“Not yet. But I’ll tell you right away if something comes up.”

“I’ll be trusting you. Always.”

Raviel kissed my forehead and then got into the limousine without hesitation. The limousine, driven by a butler resembling the Empire's Head Butler, disappeared into the distance.

“Well then.”

I turned to Constellation Killer.

“Let’s go.”

“...Where to?”

“To your home.”

"....."

Constellation Killer hesitated for the first time. They seemed almost repulsed. But my mind was made up. I intended to first meet Constellation Killer's parents and apologize.

'I don't know where to start unraveling this.'

Of course, apologizing wouldn't end this [trauma]. It wouldn't be resolved. As the difficulty increased, the trauma itself seemed to have turned into a stage that needed to be resolved.

'Let's start with what I can do.'

As always.

However, my attempt to resolve the trauma was frustrating from the start.

"...This is it."

Seeing the [home] that Constellation Killer led me to, I was at a loss for words.

It was a garbage dump.

Below a hillside, in a place sparsely covered with pine trees, there was an empty lot. This lot was the small garbage bin of the city. Discarded PET bottles, dirty styrofoam, bundles of paper messily piled up.

Right in the middle, there was a shack made of boards.

[■■ lives in a garbage dump. They even reuse shoes and uniforms. The only thing that can't be recycled is ■■.]

My head throbbed.

I had thought it was just a message smothered in malice.

Those bastards.

“Are your parents working? What do they do?”

That shack was not a haven but a hideout. The walls did not reach the roof, leaving gaps everywhere. Grey plastic covered the roof.

“My father collects scrap and sells it.”

Plastic trash surrounded the shack like a moat. Unlike other garbage around, the plastic encircling the shack had its labels torn off.

It was clean.

That made the shack appear to be floating on a white plastic sandbank.

“And your mother?”

“I don’t have a mother.”

"....."

Of course.

"Is this a friend ■■?"

After waiting for two hours, Constellation Killer's father came home. He was a man marked by poverty. But more than his poverty, he was someone crushed by life. I realized that the moment I saw him.

A small room.

Sometimes when I looked in the mirror, I saw myself in that way.

"No, he's not a friend."

"Hmm...?"

The elderly man furrowed his brow. He looked too old for someone with a high school child.

He resembled the ferryman I saw in the trauma from [The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon.]

“I am someone who has beaten and bullied this child.”

“Uhhh...?”

The old man blinked blankly.

"....."

I realized within a minute of starting the conversation with him.

‘It's too late.’

It was already too late.

The old man in front of me had already worn out his wick to burn. He was different from me in my days of living in a small room. That was the difference between that past me and this man.

Where that difference stemmed from, I couldn't tell.

“Here's the evidence. If you look at this phone, you'll see the messages. If you see this...”

One thing was certain.

This man had no strength to take responsibility for the Constellation Killer.

"Uhhh."

I showed him everything I could right away. The old man closed his eyes to the hellish scenes his child was enduring, blinking slowly.

“So that's how it is...”

The old man just stared blankly at me.

When I finished speaking, his responses stopped. It felt as if the conversation had completely ended. The old man simply waited to see if I had more to say, and if not, he just waited.

He seemed to have nothing to say to me.

'Hmm.'

I checked the Constellation Killer's expression. He wasn't looking at his father. His face didn't show any shock or insult from the conversation that just took place. Expressionless. Constellation Killer was just sitting quietly on the floor.

As if what was normal just flowed naturally.

'Yes.'

That's how it was.

"I've been quite rude."

I stood up and bowed to the old man.

"If it's okay with you, I'd like to stay with your child for a while. I want to invite him to my house. Would that be alright?"

“Go ahead...”

The old man clearly didn't understand what I was saying. He was listless. But I explained several times, not for the old man but for the Constellation Killer.

“It might be a long stay at our house. A week, a month, maybe even longer. I'll come every Saturday evening to tell you how your child is doing. Is that alright with you?”

“Yeah, do that.”

Good.

I turned to the Constellation Killer.

“Let's go.”

"....."

“Pack what you need. As I told your father, you might stay at our house for a while.”

Constellation Killer looked up at me solemnly.

“What are you trying to do now?”

For the first time, Constellation Killer's words weren't polite.

“Trying to whitewash your past because you're marrying a rich girl? Afraid it might cause trouble later? Smart move.”

My heart ached.

“Or is this another game? If you want to play, just say so. Tell me what game it is. Don't bother with this. I'll play along again. Should we go to the school playground at night?”

The Constellation Killer's voice was blunt. No inflection. That was the voice of a person who had chosen to fall just the day before.

“I'm sorry.”

“You're insane? Kim Gong-Ja, you've lost it.”

“Please, just give me one more day. I’ll do whatever it takes. Please endure just one more day.”

"....."

For me, it was one of many days to come, but for the person in front of me, it was their last day.

I had no choice but to earnestly hope, to plead. There was nothing else I could do but wish and pray.

“Do whatever you want...”

Constellation Killer muttered wearily.

I grabbed Constellation Killer’s wrist and headed towards [home]. To find the unknown path, we had to pass through the school. It was only when the sunset had completely faded and the sky darkened that we arrived in a residential area.

“Wait here for a moment.”

“I’ll be back soon. Within 20 minutes. Could you wait for me?”

“Do whatever you want...”

I left the Constellation Killer by the roadside and went home first.

“Oh.”

The Guardian Spirit was in the yard. He seemed to be enjoying the night sky alone, holding a glass of whiskey.

“Back, son? You're a bit late today. Heh. Don’t tell me you're late because of your girlfriend. Let me tell you, don’t get serious until after high school graduation. Rushing in relationships never ends well.”

Sword Emperor. My partner.

The person who taught me how to look ahead.

In this world, my,

“Father.”

“...Huh?”

The Guardian Spirit blinked.

“That’s odd? What’s this?

It’s strange being called father by you. Not just strange, it's incredibly awkward... As if I’m getting goosebumps. Is it because I’m tipsy?”

“Father.”

I called him again.

“You wouldn’t have raised me this way.”

“What?”

“You're an amazing person. Terrifying. You might seem like a self-centered psychopath, though you do have that side, but at least you decisively end things where you think [this is not right].”

Guardian Spirit frowned.

“What are you talking about, son?”

“If you were my father, I wouldn't have grown up as a delinquent. I might stray, but before completely going astray, you would beat me up, even half-kill me to bring me back.”

That's who you are.

“Let alone bullying a weak child to the point of suicide. You...”

『Don't bother about those making a fuss with it.』

『Those who can't even squeak in front of you are now making a big deal with just their fingers.』

『Ugh. Those kinds of people should have their fingers cut off.』

“You wouldn't say that. You're not someone who could. You're someone who would promise to teach happiness in suffering.”

"....."

“I'm the kind of person you despise the most. Such a person wouldn't be affectionately called [son] by you. It's impossible. This is an impossible world.”

Silence settled under the night sky.

In a yard where not even an insect's sound could be heard, I looked straight at the Guardian Spirit.

And said,

“You are not the Sword Emperor.”

"....."

“Get lost. Out of my sight, right now.”

At that moment.

-■■■■■.

The Guardian Spirit disintegrated.

His skin flowed, bones melted, and everything forming him evaporated. I blinked, and there was only an indistinct, oozing shadow, like a ghost.

-■■■■■, ■■....

I couldn't understand what it was saying. I couldn't recognize its face. I just knew it was the bare face of [my father] in this world.

The bare face of this world.

"....."

I walked past the Guardian Spirit into the house.

"Welcome back, Gong-Ja."

In the living room, my master sat on the sofa.

With a face and form I thought I'd never see again.

"How was school today, my son?"

Master smiled gently.

Chapter 134: ■■ (2)

"Ma....."

I couldn't finish the three syllables of 'Master.'

My heart pounded violently.

In an instant, numerous emotions intertwined. It felt as if my heart had become a rag, wrung tightly, ready to spill dark emotions.

Master. My extraordinary fate. The sole peony who became my master.

"Mother."

"....."

Master looked at me. Her always composed eyes wavered for the first time. I had called Master 'mother' for the first time, and she was addressed as such for the first time by me.

".....How strange."

Master put down her blunt pencil. Perhaps she was writing a manuscript. The living room table was scattered with her handwritten manuscript.

"I can't remember the last time I was called mother. No, even saying it's been a long time feels wrong... It's like..."

"I love you, Mother."

Master's fingers stopped.

"I wanted to see you again. Did you know? I've found someone to love for a lifetime. That it's possible to love someone sincerely and be loved completely. I wanted to introduce you first to Raviel, the one I'm holding hands with."

"....."

“Mother, you would have been good friends with Raviel. I... I am alive. I'm living well. Trying my best to live well. I often think of the words you told me.”

Master.

“I wanted to see you once more.”

Master slowly stood up and approached me. Her long, slender fingers wiped my eyes.

“Are you having a nightmare?”

“I am in a nightmare.”

“Life is no different from a dream. But that doesn't change anything. Does evil become good if we call it rationality? Does a mistake become ignorance and heal everyone's wounds? My son, don't be fooled by words. Always watch your heart. Don't entrust your heart to hollow words and fragile sentences.”

Master hugged my shoulders.

“Whether you call me mother or not, I remain in your heart as me. Likewise, you do too. Being human is not about memorizing a few words or spouting a few lines. Humanity is about how much weight of others one can carry in their heart.”

I fit snugly into Master’s embrace.

My mouth opened and closed several times.

“Mother wouldn’t have raised a child... Yoo Soo-Ha like that.”

“Yes.”

“Mother wouldn’t just lash out in anger, she isn’t that kind of person... She wouldn’t invite such a person to dinner. You would have driven them out of the house. Before that, you would have corrected them. And before that, you would have raised them as a good child.”

“That’s right.”

“So.”

I opened my mouth.

“Mother, you’re not So BaekHyang.”

Master smiled.

“Survive. Gong-Ja. You must live strong.”

As she smiled, she disintegrated.

"....."

Master’s face melted away.

Her smile dissolved.

The hands that hugged me vanished.

All that remained was a shadow.

-■, ■■■ ■■■.

The shadow had no face, no clear outline. Slithering like a giant worm, the shadow left the living room.

Another layer of the world was peeled away.

That was [my mother's] true face in this world.

"---Ugh."

I rushed to the bathroom. Leaning over the toilet, I bowed my head. A sense of loss, guilt... dark emotions surged back up.

My heart vomited.

“Huh?”

Behind me.

A voice came from near the bathroom door.

“What, did you eat something bad? Why are you throwing up as soon as you get home? Kid. You must have picked up some crap outside again. Didn’t I tell you to take care of your food properly?”

It was Yoo Soo-Ha.

“Should your brother give you a back rub?”

“...Yoo Soo-Ha.”

“Whoa. Did you throw up your brain along with your stomach? Short on words, little brother. What’s up?”

I sat on the bathroom tiles and looked up at Yoo Soo-Ha. He was munching on squid legs, standing there.

“You damn idiot...”

“Ah, you really did throw up your brain. Hey, it's normal for people to get into fights sometimes! I was scared after the news broke yesterday. Got a real earful from mom and dad too. But family should support each other, right? Eh?”

“That crazy bastard...”

I muttered, holding onto the toilet bowl.

“You’re, fuck, such a bitch.”

“Huh?”

“If beating up a stalker was all you did it’d make you an angel. The kind of guy who, after beating a stalker to pulp, would bury them in the mountains and then start a forest fire.”

“Wha... That's psychotic. You saw your big brother like that?”

“You are that psychopath! You damn dog!”

My head spun.

“Idol? Singer? You think you could do those jobs? With no idea about fan service, swearing in every interview, and even asking about parents as a dessert, what kind of idol or singer are you? Stop joking.”

“Uh...”

“And get scolded by parents? Seriously, would they even scold someone like you? It's a miracle if they don't slap you across the face. Damn it! Yoo Soo-Ha, you're not the type to pat your brother's back when he's vomiting. If only you were that kind of person. If only.”

I glared at Yoo Soo-Ha's face.

“I wouldn't kill you, if you were..”

"....."

“I wouldn't, you damn dog. I wouldn't. If only you were that kind of person... I wouldn't have to...”

Sometimes, I dream.

“What kind of, really, what kind of vile acts you committed, really, you are.”

If I did not have to kill you.

『Hey, Hunter! Please save me!』

I scream.

『Huh?』

Yoo Soo-Ha turns around.

『I was attacked by wolves.』

『Geez, really. Did you mess with these monsters? Damn it, my hunt is spoiled for today.』

Yoo Soo-Ha clicks his tongue.

『Please, give me a potion...』

I plead, and

『Alright, but be careful next time. Damn. Hardly made my day's quota.』

Yoo Soo-Ha gives me a potion.

Sometimes, I dream.

『I'll give you the potion, but you gotta pay the life fee.』

Yoo Soo-Ha says that, and

『For... forty gold,』

I say.

『Fine, just give me everything you have.』

Yoo Soo-Ha says, so I give everything, and then

『Alright. Be more careful next time dude.』

Yoo Soo-Ha gives me a potion.

11 years ago, Yoo Soo-Ha was still such a person, a greedy bastard but still someone who wouldn't kill a wounded weakling, so that I didn't have to kill my once hero by my own hands, sometimes, but still I dream,

I dream....

“You damn dog...”

Yoo Soo-Ha's black hair fluttered.

“Get lost. Your place is in my shadow. If you're thinking of setting up a new address in this hell and washing away your sins, forget it.”

And the black hair collapsed.

-■■, ■■ ■■■■.

[My older brother] became a spirit, uttering dismal sounds.

Right. A spirit.

Not even a ghost, a spirit that lost its existence in this traumatic world. These entities, stripped of the appearances extracted from my memory, were now mere shadows.

"....."

I washed my face at the sink.

Water dripped from my eyebrows.

“Okay.”

My mutterings quietly settled in the house of spirits.

“It’s okay. I can do this. Kim Gong-Ja, you can do it.”

This is not my home. This is not my world.

It’s just that the life I wanted to save is trapped in this hell.

I left the house and returned with the Constellation Killer.

"Ah....."

Constellation Killer couldn’t recognize the spirits as spirits. In his eyes, the spirits appeared as my father, mother, and older brother.

Or maybe the opposite.

-■■■?

-■■ ■■■.

To Constellation Killer, the humans in this world might have always looked like spirits. To him, the sounds of these people were mere noise.

“Hello...”

“Don’t greet them.”

I cut off sharply.

“There’s no need to be polite.”

I grabbed Constellation Killer’s wrist and entered the room. Constellation Killer couldn’t finish his greeting and was led by me.

-■, ■■■ ■■■.

The older brother, who had just been wearing Yoo Soo-Ha's face, followed us. He tried to enter the room with us, but I pushed him out, making sure he couldn't come in.

“Don't come in. I'm warning you.”

-■■■?

“For a while, I'll be taking care of this kid. I'll handle everything, so no one else needs to interfere. Don't come in or talk to him unless he allows it. I've made myself clear.”

I locked the door.

-■■. ■■■?

The spirits outside the room murmured. Ignoring them, I prepared a bed for Constellation Killer. He stared blankly at me, still carrying his backpack from school.

“Is it okay to talk to your family like that?”

“Every family is different. To you, they're the family of your bully.”

“.....Don't speak formally. It's weird. It feels bad. Really, I don't know what big scheme you're planning, laying groundwork like this.”

“Think what you want. Just get some sleep for now.”

“Where will you sleep?”

“Anywhere. Rest. You'll feel a bit better after some rest.”

“.....”

From that day on.

I began to erase the existence of each person in this world, one by one.

-Who are you? Eh? Soo-Ha's younger brother? Why would his younger brother call me...?

I stealthily used my older brother's phone to call Preta.

-Eh? Oh, I've heard from Soo-Ha. Didn't we meet once before? But what's the matter? Surely, Soo-Ha isn't sending his younger brother to apologize on his behalf?

I used the same method to call Goldencup.

With just one call, I disintegrated Preta and Goldencup.

Occasionally, the idol group they belonged to appeared on TV, but their faces weren't shown. Like smeared with black graffiti, only shadows flickered.

[The implementation of the trauma is deteriorating.]

Finally, there was a response.

[Trauma material has been corrupted.]

[Extracting data from your memory to restore... Failed.]

[Data restoration failed.]

The gap I created began to puncture holes in the world.

[Extracting data from the owner's memory... Failed.]

[Data restoration failed.]

I accelerated my actions.

The Four Demon Lords disintegrated. The children frolicking in the Hellfire Mansion disintegrated. I turned every character from the trauma I encountered into spirits.

With each one, the world of trauma crumbled a bit more.

“Hm? It's rare for you to come to the faculty room, Gong-Ja.”

Even Viper, the homeroom teacher.

“Student G-Gong-Ja? Why did you call me alone to an empty classroom? Eek. A relationship between a teacher and student is fundamentally forbidden, it's against the rules...!”

Even the math teacher, Apothecary.

“I heard you requested a meeting. You’re quite a unique student, so I arranged this at the request of the student council president. What do you want to talk about?”

Even the principal, the Sword Saint.

One by one.

[The implementation of the trauma is deteriorating.]

[Data restoration failed.]

About two weeks later.

Most of the students and teachers in the school had turned into spirits.

But it wasn’t just the school that was affected.

-■■ ■■■■■■.

No matter which channel I turned on the TV, there were spirits in the announcer's seats. The guests on the shows just murmured shadows of silent faces, incomprehensible.

I even tried taking the subway to go outside the city once.

After a while, the cityscape continued, but then darkness enveloped everything outside the window. When we reached the dark area, the subway disappeared.

[The implementation of the trauma is deteriorating.]

[Requesting data from Zuraqua... Failed. Request denied.]

[Data restoration failed.]

A broken world.

A failed monstrosity.

“.....Gong-Ja. I need to talk.”

One day, after class, Paladin approached me.

She seemed unusually tense.

“What’s the matter?”

“I can’t talk about it in the classroom. No, more like I don’t want to.”

Paladin glanced behind her.

-■■■■! ■■ ■■■■.

There, already turned into a spirit, someone sat at a desk. It was the Countess. She had a conversation with me two days ago and then disintegrated. After glancing at her friend’s condition, Paladin lowered her voice.

“Let's go to the hallway.”

We stepped out into the hallway.

“So, what’s it?”

“...It might sound strange. No, it is strange. But somehow, I feel I need to consult you about this.”

In the middle of the hallway, surrounded by spirits, Paladin looked around nervously.

“Something is wrong.”

"....."

“If you ask what, I can’t exactly answer. But it's clear. This isn’t normal. Last weekend, I planned an outing with my family. We were supposed to go. I prepared lunch from morning. But then I blinked, and it was evening.”

Paladin shivered slightly.

“At first, I suspected memory loss. But then, at the dinner table, my family talked about how great the outing was today. I have no memory of it, no recollection of what we did...”

Paladin looked around again. Really, apart from a handful of students, there were only black, oozing spirits in the classrooms, hallways, and playground.

“...Something is wrong. Something’s gone wrong. Maybe I’m the one who’s become strange. Sorry, Gong-Ja. I’ll book an appointment with a psychiatrist. Maybe it’ll get better after the consultation.”

“The back of the classroom.”

I spoke up.

“The student sitting by the window. Do you remember?”

“Um...?”

Paladin furrowed her brows.

“Of course. Isn’t he a classmate? His name was ■■, I believe.”

“Do you know he received these messages?”

I pulled out the Constellation Killer’s phone and showed her.

"....."

“I should mention this is not manipulated.”

As she read the messages, Paladin’s face turned pale. She was shocked. But the shock was short-lived, and soon she burst out in anger.

“What. This kind of behavior... No, there’s no way that kid would send such messages. It’s unthinkable! This is not something to be taken lightly!”

“Are you angry?”

“Of course! There are things we can overlook because we are kids and things we can't. A wound, whether on an adult or a child, is the same. In fact, wounds on children are even more vicious!"

"What are you going to do now?"

"We have evidence. We must report to the police! I know how it works. If we complain to the school, they'll just take the evidence and tell us to resolve it among friends. Just the two of us going to the police won't be enough, so we need to gather as many people as possible and go as a group...!"

"That's right."

Paladin.

"That's the kind of person you are."

Someone who tries to minimize victims.

"If there had been even one person like you in that wide classroom, it wouldn't have happened."

“...What?”

“You wouldn’t overlook such deeds. You wouldn’t just let it go, and you couldn’t have missed it. Since there wasn’t a single person like you in that classroom.”

I closed the phone.

“That’s why this happened.”

"....."

“It’s okay. Please disappear. I’ll take care of the rest.

I blinked.

-■■, ■■■■■■■■.

A faceless spirit fluttered.

"....."

Slowly.

I stood in the hallway, surveying the surroundings.

-■■ ■■■?

-■■ ■. ■■ ■■■.

The students passed by, conversing. They chatted. Laughed as if it were fun, and even when it wasn't. They shared a season of youth with each other. When a teacher passed, they bowed in greeting.

That was...

-■ ■■■■ ■■■■ ■■ ■■■ ■■ ■■ ■ ■■■■ ■■■■■■ ■■ ■■
■■■■■? ■■ ■■■?

-■, ■■?

-■■■! ■■■■ ■ ■■■ ■■■■ ■■!?

-■■■... ■■ ■■■■. ■■■■■■ ■ ■■■■ ■■■■ ■■■■

-■■■ ■■■■ ■ ■ ■■■■■■ ■■ ■■■■ ■■■■■■ ■! ■■ ■■■■■■
■■■ ■ ■■! ■■ ■■■■■■ ■■

-■■■ ■■■■■■ ■■. ■■■■ ■■■■ ■■ ■■■■■■ ■■. ■■■■ ■■■■
■ ■■ ■■■■.

-■ ■■ ■■ ■■. ■■ ■■.

-■■■ ■■■■ ■■.

Just noise from people.

Words didn't form sentences, and sentences failed to become writing.

On the stairs, a cheerful slogan was posted.

[■■■■ ■■■■♪]

[■■■■ ■■■■♪]

[■■■■ ■■■■♪]

That was...

The Constellation Killer's world.

Chapter 135: ■■ (3)

The world gradually narrows.

First the outskirts of the city, then the downtown area.

[The implementation of the trauma is deteriorating.]

[Data restoration failed.]

From the fringes of the city, the consuming darkness slowly crept into the streets. Wriggling and crawling, the darkness resembled living tentacles. I decided to call this ominous, dark fog "Emptiness."

"...I'll go to school a bit early today."

Many things became invisible. People's faces. The church spires. The signs plastered onto the shops like tree bark.

The world was stained with Emptiness.

“I need to go to the animal pens to feed the rabbits.”

But there were things that became visible for the first time.

“Animal pens?”

“Yeah, behind the school... oh well.”

Constellation Killer sighed.

“Like you’d know. Anyway, there’s a place where we keep rabbits and chickens. I have to feed them.”

‘Is there such a place?’

I recalled, at the orphanage, there was also a place for raising animals, though it vanished quickly. Perhaps middle and high schools also had animal pens in the past.

“Why are you the one feeding them? Shouldn’t there be a designated person for that?”

“...There used to be an animal care club. Remember last year, a foreign woman broke into the school at night and jumped with her newborn? The baby, unfortunately, fell into the animal pen. After that incident, no one wanted to join the club anymore.”

This was news to me. But Constellation Killer spoke as if it was a well-known incident. It seems various events have occurred at this school.

“A foreign woman and her child at another country’s school...”

“She was a child conceived during a teacher’s overseas trip.”

"....."

“A middle school incident, not high school,” muttered Constellation Killer.

“Anyway, the club no longer exists. The middle school class presidents take turns managing the pens... but you know how middle schoolers are. They're not diligent about this kind of stuff. It's mostly the security guard, me, and some kid from the middle school who end up feeding them."

That was...

A corner of the world I never knew existed.

The animal pens.

There, rabbits and chickens were confined in cramped cages, their limited space becoming their entire world.

Were they not being properly cared for? The stench of chicken manure and rabbit urine was strong. The carelessly dumped, bulk feed, soaked and dried repeatedly, also emitted a foul smell.

"Ah, seriously. Someone pretended to do it and left again."

The Constellation Killer frowned.

“If they’re going to be like this, they might as well not be assigned. Doing nothing is better than this.”

“Need help?”

“No, it’s fine. I have to finish it all anyway.”

Constellation Killer rolled up his sleeves.

“Just stand there. Or go back to the classroom if you want.”

He removed the rotting fluffy piles and dumped them into a large sack. He fetched a broom and rake from the storeroom and cleaned up.

The task seemed very familiar to him.

He then picked up a rubber hose and sprayed water around the animal pen.

Shhhhh-

In a world where much became invisible, rusted by Emptiness, a high school student at Shinseo High was scattering water around 6:40 AM. It was quiet. The water mirrored the color of dawn.

"....."

I glimpsed a scene spread in the void of the world.

[You stink.]

[Even worse than the math teacher.]

[You really stink.]

The world.

Gradually narrows.

[The implementation of the trauma is deteriorating.]

Meaningless things to the Constellation Killer, or ■■, began to disappear, one by one.

[Data restoration failed.]

Mountains surrounding the city were engulfed in dark fog. This world was under siege. Day by day, Emptiness tightened its grasp.

Streets and paths were severed.

-■■, ■■ ■!

-■■■.

Spirits kept appearing and disappearing on the broken paths. Flickering. Where people came from, where they went – none of it mattered in the [Constellation Killer's World].

Humans were not characters in this world.

Weeds sprouted in the gaps of the sidewalk blocks.

[The implementation of the trauma is deteriorating.]

In a corner of a garbage dump, an unpruned ginkgo tree bent its back.

[The implementation of the trauma is deteriorating.]

As evening fell, the red sunset faded.

[The implementation of the trauma is deteriorating.]

Finally, Emptiness completely enveloped the school.

"....."

Raviel was standing at the school gate.

Beyond the gate was pitch-black darkness.

“Raviel.”

It was dismissal time.

Amidst spirits walking towards the absorbing Emptiness, Raviel stood quietly. Even as I called out, she didn't turn her head.

"Yes. I did feel something was wrong."

She whispered softly.

"Thinking back, it was strange to be called by a foreign name. Ban Siah. That was the name given to me. Yet, for some reason, I felt compelled to be called [Raviel], as if under an obsession."

"....."

"Most of all, I can't recall how I met you. No, that expression might be misleading. I remember receiving a confession from you at last year's school festival. I had harbored affection and fondness for you even before then. We easily became a couple."

Raviel turned to face me.

“But now, I question the truth of it. Gong-Ja. Our love was not like that. We would never fall in love so easily.”

"....."

“Kiss me. Now.”

Carefully, I placed my hand on Raviel’s shoulder. With my left hand, I gently tilted her head and pressed my lips to hers.

“Hmm. As expected.”

Raviel smiled.

“My heart flutters.”

She caressed my earlobe.

“There is no falsehood in my love. It’s impossible for me to love you so deeply just because you’re good-looking and articulate. But to reduce us to just a couple in Shinseo High’s history... Tell them to stop. You and I are the strongest in the universe.”

“Yes.”

“If my love is true, then surely my memory has been distorted. This must be a hallucination or a dream. Gong-Ja. Am I dreaming of you? Or are you dreaming of me?”

“I am dreaming of you, Raviel.”

“Interesting. Truly fascinating.”

Raviel bent her finger and stroked her chin.

Her chin, not mine.

“I am your one and only beloved.”

“Yes.”

“Even if it’s a dream, even in a fleeting moment of dreamland, I should always be the one you long for. Only I am worthy of that place.”

“That’s true.”

“Praise be. My lover. You love me well.”

Raviel let out a laugh.

“Now close your eyes.”

"....."

“Don’t open them. Call my name with your lips. Understand? Never open your eyes. If you do, I’ll scold you.”

I closed my eyes.

"Raviel."

"Yes."

"Raviel... Ivansia. That's the name of the person I love."

And then.

The hand that was stroking my chin disappeared.

"....."

I opened my eyes.

Raviel was gone.

"....."

She did not show me her crumbling into a shadow.

Until the last moment.

That was Ivansia's way.

[The implementation of the trauma is deteriorating.]

[Data restoration failed.]

Now there is no breath of Raviel here.

The world has narrowed that much more.

-Ding, Dong, Dang, Dong.

The speaker installed in the schoolyard rang.

A nameless, formless broadcaster spoke.

-■■■■ ■■ ■■ ■■■■■■ ■■■■■■ ■■■■■■.

Attention to all students remaining in school, this announcement is from the Broadcasting Club.

The world of trauma was beginning to crumble.

“---What are you doing there?”

Someone spoke from behind me. It was the Constellation Killer. Carrying a worn-out bag, he stood still, looking at me strangely.

“Not going home? Well, if not, it's fine. I was getting uncomfortable mooching off your parents anyway. I get you want to sincerely apologize to me, so let's just stop this. It's awkward for both of us.”

Constellation Killer walked towards where the school gate had been. Just as he was about to pass me by, I grabbed his wrist and yanked him back.

“Hey, what? What's going on!”

The Constellation Killer nearly stepped into the Emptiness. Even now, black fog continued to flow from the gate and over the wall, pouring into the playground. If swallowed by [that], everything would end.

“Come with me for a bit.”

“Again? Where are you taking me this time?”

“Somewhere you can still live, even for a moment. Somewhere you can breathe.”

“...What?”

“This place is already dangerous. Let's move.”

I pulled Constellation Killer across the schoolyard.

Emptiness relentlessly devoured the school in pursuit of us.

“...I don't understand what you're saying, Gong-Ja. You've been acting too strange since last month. Why are you so scared? What are you trying so hard to do? You were never like this.”

“I promised to fight desperately no matter what. My master swung her sword even as the world ended. My lover defended her country even as the world repeated. There are such people in the world. I strive to be with people like them.”

“I really, truly, don't understand any of this.”

“Even those who endlessly abandoned themselves for what they believed was right.”

We entered the school building.

Still, Emptiness did not stop its relentless advance.

"....."

In the hallway, lost souls wandered aimlessly. However, one among them, with the face of Black Dragon Witch, [Class President], just stood blankly in front of the girls' bathroom. She was the only person I hadn't dismantled yet.

Because.

In the last trauma, when Constellation Killer jumped, she was the only student who lowered her head in grief.

“...Strange. Why do I feel guilty about entering the girls’ bathroom?”

Black Dragon Witch seemed lost in thought about her sexual identity, a common confusion during that turbulent period. I approached her, still holding Constellation Killer’s wrist, and grabbed Black Dragon Witch's wrist with my other hand.

"Huh?"

“Come with me. You can't stay here.”

“Huh? Oh, wait. What? Gong-Ja? Hey, what are you doing...?!”

Black Dragon Witch panicked, but then suddenly noticed Constellation Killer. Her surprised expression quickly turned stern. She frowned, hung her head low, and let me pull her along.

[Warning!]

[The implementation of the trauma is deteriorating.]

[Data restoration failed.]

[Unable to maintain the trauma.]

Emptiness swallowed the first floor of the school.

I rushed up the stairs with the two of them. Quickly. We passed the first floor, sprinted up the second, skipped the third, crossed the fourth, and ran up to the fifth. Behind me, Constellation Killer and Black Dragon Witch panted heavily, but it couldn't be helped.

Emptiness was rising with terrifying force.

[■■■■ ■■■■♪]

[■■■■ ■■■■♪]

[■■■■ ■■■■♪]

The mottoes on the stairs were submerged. The black mist turned into a dark, murky water surface, engulfing the first, second, third, fourth, and fifth floors.

Only one place remained in this world.

“Huff, huff... Huff...”

“Ugh. I feel nauseous...”

I stood in front of the rooftop's iron door. Four locks were coiled around the door handle, accessible only to teachers. But I released Aura from my fingertips and easily cut through the chains.

“Let's go out.”

“Huh...?”

Constellation Killer, still panting, stared blankly at the door.

“It's open...?”

“Wait a minute. We can’t go to the rooftop! It’s against school rules!”

Black Dragon Witch panicked and shouted. If not for Emptiness threatening to engulf us, I might have respected the school rules more. I pushed Constellation Killer and Black Dragon Witch onto the rooftop, half-forcing them, then---

Thump.

I closed the door.

"....."

I stared quietly at the door. It was silent. Fortunately, Emptiness had not invaded the rooftop. It was probably just a brief respite, but for now, we were safe from the flood of Emptiness.

“Good. We should be safe for a while.”

“What’s safe about this?!”

Black Dragon Witch exploded in a frenzy.

“You have no idea how sensitive our school is about rooftop access! After all that happened in the middle school last year! My god!”

“It’s okay.”

“Do you know what will happen if the teachers find out I was here?! My school record... That jerk! You’re responsible for my college admissions!”

The world was completely engulfed by Emptiness.

Beyond the fence on the rooftop, all that could be seen below was pitch-black darkness. The playground, the schoolyard, the main building of the middle school opposite.

In this trauma, only three remained.

“Class President.”

“What!”

“You knew what was happening in our class.”

"....."

Three survivors.

The perpetrator.

The victim.

“...So?”

And finally, the bystander.

Black Dragon Witch, with the face of the Class President, glared at me.

“Do you have something to say to me?”

Chapter 136:

Surviving (1)

The Black Dragon Witch glared at me.

"You called it 'the second worst bullying case at Shinseo High.' You were laughing and came up with that name, Gong-Ja. Thanks to you, what happened in our class was...."

In Black Dragon Witch's eyes was long-standing contempt.

But the contempt didn't last long. Black Dragon Witch frowned, then returned to an expressionless face. A look of weariness from her own emotions. It seemed a sigh had been carved into an expressionless face.

".....Forget it. I don't even want to talk about this with you. Talking will only make me feel worse. Damn it! If I knew I'd still see bullying in high school, I should've gone to a different school."

"You are the class president. You have responsibility for what happens in the class."

"So what? Are you saying it's my responsibility?"

Black Dragon Witch sneered.

"Amazing. So it's true. You've been going around with ■■, meeting every student one by one. [Gong-Ja has repented. Gong-Ja has changed his heart.] Even the teachers were praising you in the staff room. Good for you."

A cold sneer appeared at the corner of Black Dragon Witch's mouth.

"People like you have it easy. Apologize after hurting someone else and that's it. Plead for forgiveness with such earnest apologies. All mistakes were just that, mistakes. All the hurt caused was just a joke."

"....."

"How can life be all mistakes and jokes? Do you die if you don't make mistakes or jokes for even a moment? Do you see the world as a trash can for your mistakes and people as trash bins for your jokes? You're like contagious disease carriers. Worthless...."

Snap. Black Dragon Witch closed her mouth.

Again, she stopped just before her emotions got more intense. Black Dragon Witch looked down at her indoor shoes, appearing anxious. Since coming to the rooftop, she hadn't looked at Constellation Killer even once.

"Class President."

".....Don't do this to me."

Black Dragon Witch muttered.

"Don't bring ■■ here with me. You're just going to tell me to apologize or admit I was wrong, aren't you? I did nothing wrong. The wrongdoing was yours...."

"But you don't think so."

"....."

When Constellation Killer attempted suicide in the last trauma, the school desperately turned a blind eye. The classroom tried to forget and cover up the [incident] with various tactics.

『He sent such a text. Isn't he crazy?』

『Yeah. Looking back, he was always a bit strange.』

Constellation Killer was the crazy one. The weird person.

On the other hand, we are 'normal.'

Maybe we sent a bullying text as a joke. But it was just a joke. A momentary deviation. Since everyone jokes and deviates, we are still normal.

Maybe we laughed at the Constellation Killer. But that was a mistake. Not our true intention. Not a serious action, we just got carried away by the atmosphere. We did nothing wrong.

『Think carefully about what's important to you and get your act together.』

『Yes, teacher.』

That's how the classroom pushed away one of its students.

Even suicide, even death, could not awaken their guilt.

+

The one responsible for my death is you.

Don't forget.

You killed me.

+

Except for one person.

The Black Dragon Witch didn't say 'Yes, teacher.' She didn't speak.

She just silently lowered her head.

"Don't do this to me, really...."

When countless perpetrators were brazenly mad, only one bystander remained silent.

"I did my best. In the first year, I tried to stop it. Damn it."

And there were hundreds of reasons why a person falls silent.

"You know what? I researched all this stuff because of you guys. Do you know? This school is part of the Serun Education Foundation. There are ten board members. Among them are Gong-Ja, your girlfriend's parents. Didn't know that, did you? You just took ■■ for granted without knowing such things? The board also includes the chairman of the Serun Church of the Samwon Church Association. That's the church my family goes to! Every weekend!"

Black Dragon Witch covered her forehead.

“Why do I have to know all this because of the crap you guys stirred up! Just, please, enough. I’m in my second year now... Studying four, five hours on little sleep. I’m busy. I entered as a scholarship student just like ■■... You might just laugh and enjoy school life!”

Ill will is easy.

“I don’t know if you bully others without thinking!”

But good will is always impossible.

"I’m desperate here! This school has that damned Scholarship Selection Committee, and our great homeroom teacher is the second-year head there! You don’t know, do you? It doesn’t matter if you don’t. Damn, I even brought up ■■ to the homeroom teacher... Please, just stop it. I didn’t want to know all this! It’s all disgusting. You guys, the homeroom teacher, the school, just everything... I’m busy trying to survive, so just, deal with it amongst yourselves!”

“I’m sorry.”

Committing evil only needs one reason.

But to act with goodness, one must carry hundreds of reasons.

“Sorry? Ha, how sorry are you? No. Fuck it. Don’t apologize to me. Don’t apologize, Kim Gong-Ja. I don’t need an apology, nor do I have the right to receive one. And you don’t need to apologize or have the right to. Because you’re trash. Just die as trash. Live until you die as trash. I beg you, after we graduate from this school, let’s never see each other again.”

“I’m sorry.”

“Don’t apologize! You trash!”

Black Dragon Witch kicked my shin. A tingling sensation. My bone resonated. Black Dragon Witch spat angrily and slapped my cheek.

The violence, like a curse, continued.

I gave myself up to Black Dragon Witch and said.

“This kid, he was going to commit suicide.”

Black Dragon Witch’s hand stopped.

“He would have fallen a month ago. From here.”

Silence settled on the rooftop.

"....."

Black Dragon Witch turned her head.

For the first time, she saw the Constellation Killer.

Black Dragon Witch moved her lips several times.

“Really...?”

Awkwardly.

As if she found it difficult just to talk to the person in front of her.

“Were you going to die...?”

She asked cautiously.

Constellation Killer faced Black Dragon Witch expressionlessly.

“Yeah.”

“.....”

“I don’t know how Kim Gong-Ja found out. But yeah. I was going to die.”

“.....”

“The Class President had such thoughts. I never knew.”

The rooftop became quiet.

Gradually.

Black Dragon Witch covered her face with both hands.

“I’m not sorry...”

Whimpers seeped through her young fingers.

“I’m not sorry for you, just... In the first year, I tried to collect data on school violence and accidentally found out about this school’s board of directors. I gave up thinking nothing would change even if I blew it up. In the second year, I tried talking to the homeroom teacher and then gave up. I’m just that kind of person. Remember me as that kind of person.”

"....."

“But don’t die. Don’t die... Why would you die? You shouldn’t die because of those trash. It shouldn’t be like that. ■■. You should live. Right? If you live, get into a good university, somehow earn money, then leave this damned city...”

“I’ve thought about it too.”

Constellation Killer muttered.

“That would make those bastards forget.”

"....."

“They’d live as if nothing happened. No, they probably won’t even remember. I hate that the most. I wanted to fuck them up. They’ll forget anyway...”

Constellation Killer looked down at Black Dragon Witch.

“I’m sorry. Class President.”

"....."

“I didn’t mean to hurt someone like you.”

Black Dragon Witch knelt on the ground, covering her face with her hands, suppressing her cries. She gritted her teeth, holding back the sounds. The contained cries electrified her body, making her shoulders tremble.

The Constellation Killer spoke softly.

"There was someone after all."

He knelt down.

"I thought there was no one."

Lowering himself.

"To the same height as Black Dragon Witch."

"I'm glad I didn't die back then, a month ago."

The Constellation Killer slowly wrapped his arms around the Black Dragon Witch. She flinched. He leaned his head closer to her.

"I'm glad there's at least one person I can forgive."

"....."

The Black Dragon Witch's breath broke. Tears flowed. She couldn't hug Constellation Killer back. She just bent her body, enduring the heart-wrenching sobs. Constellation Killer embraced her for a while.

"I'm sorry....."

Black Dragon Witch's body crumbled.

"I'm sorry, ■■. So sorry. I'm sorry."

But it melted away.

Into a shadow. Not falling as a ghost.

The faceless person, someone I knew, wailed.

"Don't die. Please. I beg you.... You have to live."

That was a face I recognized.

A voice I had heard somewhere.

"We can live. We have to live. We can live better. You have to live, ■■. Just try a little more, I'll try a bit more. Together...."

[The implementation of the trauma is deteriorating.]

The iron door to the rooftop was consumed by the void.

The black tentacles like mist crept through the gaps of the door. Silently. The black tentacles wrapped around the door.

Engulfing it.

The void that had submerged up to the 5th floor climbed the school walls and flowed onto the rooftop fence.

"No one cares about you. No one, not anyone. Nobody.... You shouldn't die because of those beasts. You have to live. Live stubbornly, study, yes. Go to a good college... leave this damned city."

I saw the person behind Black Dragon Witch's facade.

"For the unhappy children, let's live...."

That moment.

"Let's give our time to those more unfortunate than us. We can do it. We can really do it. I'll help you.... I've researched a lot. Studied. It's not a foolish delusion. We can really do it if we try---."

A chill ran down my spine.

"---Let's start by getting into a social work department. We need certifications."

My head shook because of the shock.

"To survive here, to survive in the world, we need to become stronger. ■■. We have to make others unable to look down on us, unable to interfere, we need armor. Let's study. I can help you.... I can help."

Ah.

"Let's help the children together. I can't do it alone... It might be too hard alone. Yes. I might not endure it. I might hurt the children. But if we're two, three, four. With just four people, we can do anything. We can do anything."

Director.

"Try hard..."

My orphanage's director.

"This world isn't everything. It can't be. ■■. We can create our world. Start small... with just two people, we can create a world. Don't die.... let's live together in a different world, just the two of us..."

The face of the young director.

『Don't do this, dear.』

『You did nothing wrong.』

Her tired voice overlapped with the past.

Looking back now.

It seemed like the director was worried and cautious about loving us too much.

『Don't get twisted because of someone like me.』

She always seemed afraid.

"....."

The Constellation Killer gently stroked the young director's hair.

“It seems hard to make money.”

“We can't earn much...”

“It seems tough.”

“It's going to be really tough...”

“But it seems better than now.”

The Constellation Killer smiled.

“I gave up on studying since the second semester of the first year. It will be a bit hard.”

“It's okay. It's not too late. Nothing is too late yet.”

“Yes. Black Dragon Witch. In this world...”

[The implementation of the trauma is deteriorating.]

“Let's survive together.”

[Data restoration failed.]

The rooftop crumbles.

The school melts away.

The bell signaling the end of school rings.

[Trauma re-enactment complete.]

The possibility, the hypothesis, the faint hope, are all buried in the black void. Constellation Killer's smile. The youth of the director I never knew. Two classmates, one smiling, the other crying.

The past.

The failed time of the past. Regrets. Remorse.

[The target's ego has remained intact.]

Everything disappears.

[Penalty finalized.]

The world is drowned in noise.

■.

■,

■,

■.

I opened my eyes.

Chapter 137: Surviving (2)

I woke up in a dark abyss.

Surrounded by pitch blackness.

It was the Netherworld I returned to every time I died.

[The condition for your skill has been fulfilled by your death.]

[Randomly copying Constellation Killer's skills.]

I was stunned.

I knew Constellation Killer's story took place in the past. But never did I imagine that past also contained the director's childhood... It never crossed my mind.

‘The Constellation Killer and the director were classmates.’

They attended the same school. Were in the same classroom. Shared the same moments. One of them had time eternally halted. The other, the hands of their clock perpetually frozen.

One’s clock shattered.

The other’s clock broke.

‘Why...’

Anger pressed down on my heart.

‘Why is it always the righteous ones who get shattered and broken? Why are those who inflict pain unscathed, while those who are hurt have to die? Why does the world become hell only for those who feel guilt?’

My anger settled at the bottom, endless. My emotions subsided. But sunken emotions don't disappear. They just accumulate from the bottom.

The water level of my heart rose a bit more.

Eventually, it will overflow into raging torrents.

-Cough.

A voice flowed into my heated head.

It was the Guardian Spirit.

-As expected, it's most delightful to see the zombie bastard get killed due to his carelessness. I've seen it all as a ghost, the disgraceful and the not-so, but if there's a silver lining, it's watching Kim Zombie's defeat. Kukkukuk!

"....."

-How about it? Floor 50 is not easy, right? Constellation Killer isn't an easy prey, is he? Why did you use tricks to get to the 50th floor? It's all your own doing, your karma, damn it!

Guardian Spirit chuckled.

As if [I had just fought Constellation Killer until a moment ago].

Hearing Guardian Spirit's tone, I guessed.

‘...The Guardian Spirit didn't join this trauma.’

Until now, we had been together on the journey of trauma. Starting from [Hellfire Mansion] with Preta, my master, Raviel, and Guardian Spirit. Sometimes he complained while watching trauma, sometimes he was silent. But he was always with me.

This time was different.

I was alone, peering into a month-long trauma.

“I had a nightmare.”

-Eh?

The Guardian Spirit blinked.

-A nightmare? What kind of nightmare?

“A trauma. This trauma was a bit strange. Sword Emperor, you weren’t with me, and Constellation Killer’s psyche wasn’t fully reproduced. It was like an error had occurred...”

I talked about the trauma. I skimmed it. Of course, I didn’t mention that the Sword Emperor appeared as my father. If I did, I’d be nagged about it until my hair turned white.

-Hmm.

After listening to my story, Guardian Spirit sank into deep thought.

-That’s weird. Why? Because it doesn’t make sense that I wasn’t with you. Technically, I’m being called a ghost or a spirit for convenience, but to be precise, I’m a [Skill].

Guardian Spirit was right.

[Sword Constellation]

Rank: A+

Effect: From another world, he cleared his world's tower up to floor 99 but failed on the 100th. Unsatisfied, he was unable to give up on his earthly desires, and has become a spirit.

He cannot physically affect anything in this world, but is able to communicate with the holder of this skill.

Be awestruck by his skill and experience, and ask him for guidance!

*Only the holder of this skill is able to feel his presence.

*Skill copied from Marcus Calenbury.

+

The Guardian Spirit's identity was essentially a skill.

Though he retained the memories of his life, he was ultimately stored within a skill card.

-So, basically, I'm like a person living off you. A mental tenant, perhaps? Unless you forcibly tear up the card, there's no reason why I couldn't follow you into trauma.

But Guardian Spirit didn't participate in this trauma.

".....That's strange. Something's off."

-Hmm.

In the darkness, we both pondered side by side. Time passed without finding an answer. Eventually, Guardian Spirit, tired of thinking, got annoyed.

-Ah, forget it! Thinking is tiresome! Just remember the weird stuff, and the answers will come someday. Quickly, draw Constellation Killer's skill already! It's been so long since we got anything after that Demonic Cult Art! Goldencup or whatever, she only had the blessings of the constellation, but no skills, right?

As if responding to Guardian Spirit's words, cards began to float up in the darkness.

[Creating skill cards.]

[Please select a skill card.]

A total of 10 cards were formed. Arrays of silver and gold cards. They flitted through the air as if they had wings.

-Come on. Let's check out Constellation Killer's inventory! Look at this guy. Hiding all the cool skills to himself. This is why hunters who focus on skills are so unlucky. Oh? Look at this?

Guardian Spirit excitedly read the backs of the cards.

Among them, two skills caught my attention.

+

[Puppeteer's Parade]

Rank: S

Effect: There once lived an old puppeteer in a world. The puppeteer feared being loved by someone. But he was not strong enough to endure eternal solitude.

"Let's create another me." The puppeteer thought. "Let the other me be loved. Let it live. With people, among people. And if it gets hurt--- let's throw it away." The puppeteer whispered. "Erase it forever."

Countless puppets lived.

Countless puppets were discarded.

This skill is a sorcery for the weak. The right to choose memories to keep and discard. You can create 13 puppets with the same appearance and abilities as you. When a puppet dies, another wakes up. Broken puppets can be repaired.

Granting you a replicated immortality. An assembled eternity.

*However, memories are not shared between puppets.

+

Constellation Killer's secret was there.

‘So, there are 13 puppets in total.’

What happened to the Constellation Killer's original body? Is the original body also included in the puppets, or is it separate, asleep somewhere in this vast world?

I then eavesdropped on the next secret.

+

[The Torn Goddess's Salvation]

Rank: A+

Effect: There was a goddess who dedicated herself to a hero. Although torn apart by the hero, the goddess still wanted to stand by his side. She descended from heaven and sealed herself into a skill card.

The goddess converts memories into power. By offering memories to the goddess, you can enhance your abilities and strength. The more important the memory you offer, the more amplified the enhancement effect.

*However, the enhancement effect does not last long.

+

The goddess must be referring to the [Goddess of Protection].

The hero would be Constellation Killer.

Undoubtedly.

The [Goddess of Protection] was split into five parts: Idol, Pity, Prayer, Sacrifice, and Salvation. I've gathered four of these goddesses. The last remaining Salvation took the form of a skill in Constellation Killer's possession.

-Hmm.

Guardian Spirit snorted.

-Look at Constellation Killer, as expected. Every single one of his skills has a creepy vibe. All ominous. The abilities are fine, but there's nothing pleasant about them. No wonder the constellations obsessed with gloomy people love it...

I nodded.

"I've decided. Which one to choose."

-Hmm. Isn't the downside too great compared to the advantage?

Guardian Spirit argued.

-Just pass them up. Neither [Puppeteer's Parade] nor [The Torn Goddess's Salvation] is necessary for you right now. I hate to admit it, but your current skill lineup is pretty complete. Except for that damn Goblin High Society...

"Goblin High Society will soar to great heights one day."

-The only thing soaring will be your head. Oh wait, it already did spectacularly. Anyway, adding a half-baked skill now would only mess up your synergy, right?

"Yes. I think the same. But there's a use for it."

I need to defeat the Constellation Killer.

But my victory does not mean erasing Constellation Killer.

'I must do much better.'

I have to make Constellation Killer acknowledge that his way is wrong.

Not just my power overwhelming his, but [my way] defeating [his way].

That's true victory.

'Constellation Killer.'

I reached for a card.

'Leafanta Aegim.'

Thinking of the hunter with several names.

Thinking of the first name I still don't know.

[Selection complete.]

[Copying skill.]

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

■ ■ .

Let's end our long nightmare.

When I returned to a day ago, I had yet to clear the [Fairy Tale] world.

Although I spent a month in Constellation Killer's trauma.

In the tower, not even a day had passed.

So, I had to clear the [Fairy Tale] world again. Knowing in advance that [The Immortal Missionary of Happiness] was planning an ambush made it easier than before. But it still drained my mental and physical energy.

‘Next time, I should rest at least a day while climbing the tower...’

I realized anew the importance of save points.

"Countess."

"Hmm?"

Right after clearing the fairy tale world and returning to the Great Library, I approached the Countess.

"I have a favor to ask."

"What is it, what is it? You are the treasure of our tower, the gem of the Sang-Ryun. Anything you say, I'll listen!"

The Countess greeted me more radiantly than usual. Her lips formed a 'w' shape. Maybe she was happy because clearing the stage cost less than she expected.

For a moment, I recalled the Countess's image from the trauma.

『That guy sent such messages.』

『Isn't he really crazy?』

I hesitated.

"Why so?"

The owner of Sang-Ryun tilted her head in front of me.

"Your complexion suddenly turned pale."

"...No. It's nothing. Just spaced out for a moment."

I shook my head quickly to rid myself of those thoughts.

The classmates in the trauma were just imitating the Countess's appearance. They were fakes. To even slightly equate such a fake with the person in front of me is a huge disrespect to the Countess.

"Perhaps you've exhausted yourself too much in the Revelations? Be careful. Taking care in youth ensures you won't run out of steam when you get older. Anyway, what's your request?"

"I want to send a letter to the outside world."

I said.

"It doesn't have to be a letter per se, but I need to contact someone in the outside world as soon as possible. You have the ability to communicate with the outside world, Countess. I would like to ask you to send a letter."

"Oh? Of course, that's an easy task."

The Countess waved her fan.

"If it doesn't have to be a letter, then a more convenient method should be used. To which country shall the letter be sent? It's a bit difficult to send letters to countries where the government has collapsed."

"That's alright. I'll send it to the country I was born in."

"The country of the King of Death... Ah, that should be fine. It's a nation with an ambassador, so it can be contacted immediately. Let's see. Where did she go?"

The Countess looked around. Not only us, but all hunters with aliases were gathered in the Great Library. The Countess found one and pointed her fan at them.

"Communicator! Madam Communicator! Come here, please."

"...Again? What is it?"

A middle-aged hunter approached.

Ranked 7th, the Wide-Area Communicator.

The Wide-Area Communicator was wearing a traditional Indian sari over her shoulder. She frowned all the way here. Did she have a bad relationship with the Countess?

"Let me introduce you. This madam right here is the Wide-Area Communicator. We come from the same place. Ahaha, though our origins are as different as heaven and earth!"

"If you called me just to spout nonsense, I'll leave."

"Whoa, whoa. Calm down. Brahmin, ma'am. I will designate a sacred area right now for communication with the outside world. Just help us connect for a moment. It's a country with an ambassador, so it shouldn't be too troublesome."

"Why should I....."

"It's not for me, but a request from the King of Death here."

The Wide-Area Communicator turned to me.

I respectfully bowed with my hands together.

"Please."

"....."

The Wide-Area Communicator also bowed. The middle-aged hunter glanced back and forth between me and the Countess, then sighed as if giving up.

".....If it were just the lowly Countess's request, I would have refused without a second thought. But King of Death, I have seen your dedication to the tower from afar. Reciprocity follows dedication. I will help."

"Yaaaay. It's always easy to talk to noble people. Excellent, excellent!"

"Another word, and I'm leaving."

"Alright, alright. Got it. Just hurry up!"

The Countess laughed as she pulled out a small pouch. She took a handful of purple glittering powder from the pouch and scattered it on the library floor.

"Great Mother, I beseech thee. Grant us your blessing, so this wish may not tear into screams. Allow me to stand by your side. Here, I, Countess, request a small sacred area."

Whoosh!

Purple light emanated from the powder. An area the size of a phone booth was colored in purple.

The Wide-Area Communicator then addressed me.

"Give me your smartphone."

"Ah. Yes."

I handed over my phone. The Wide-Area Communicator flexed her fingers and tapped three times. It seemed like she drew a triangle.

"Let it connect. Let it bond. When noise turns into sound when reaching someone, where there are people here and there, the forest sings, and all things join in chorus."

The smartphone was enveloped in blue light.

The Wide-Area Communicator nodded lightly.

"Take it."

I took it back.

The Countess smiled broadly.

"Enter the sacred area, King of Death."

The Wide-Area Communicator frowned.

"Make the call, it will be received. Send an email, you'll get a reply."

"Telephone charges will be calculated separately, but that's something you can afford!"

"However, according to the agreement with the outside world, all communications must be within the bounds of international law. It's unlikely to happen, but do not include any talk of criminal activities in your communication."

"Well, if you ever need to communicate something truly confidential, just tell me. There's always a way."

The two spoke casually. But it was the cooperation of the 5th and 7th ranked hunters. Only a handful of people could enjoy such privileges.

"Yes. Thank you."

I entered the sacred area with my smartphone.

"....."

And I dialed [the first phone number I remembered since birth]. It had been years since I dialed that number. Human memory is strange, remembering the first number no matter how much time has passed.

Ring... ring...

The ringing continued for a while.

If the other party had changed the number, it would all be meaningless. But she had said she would never change her number, so I could call anytime.

That wasn't a lie.

-Hello?

I was at a loss for words.

-Hello? Who is this?

"....."

The voice was slightly older, a bit more weary than the one screaming on the rooftop in my trauma. But the essence was unchanged, and I regretted not contacting her sooner.

I should have reached out much earlier.

Even if I abandoned the outside world to enter the tower, there was no need to abandon people.

"...Director. It's me, Gong-Ja. Kim Gong-Ja."

Silence followed on the other end of the line.

-Yes. It's been a long time.

The director.

The oldest voice in my memory reached me.

Chapter 138:

Surviving (3)

-I thought you might contact me someday. You seem to be doing well.

"I'm sorry for contacting you only now. I should have done it sooner..."

-It's a busy age, everyone's immersed in their own lives at your age.

A cough came through the phone. Cough. The director cleared her throat.

-Sometimes, strangers come asking if you're from our orphanage. At first, I thought you had committed some serious crime. But after one of your peers showed me a video, I understood it was a misunderstanding. By the way, they call you the 'King of Death,' right? What a naming sense.

"It's not an alias I chose myself. In the tower..."

-Right. Hearing your voice after such a long time is somewhat reassuring.

"....."

-Gong-Ja?

-Is something the matter?

I tightly grasped the phone.

Suppressing the emotions rising in my chest.

"I have something to ask you, director."

-Tell me. No, wait a moment. How serious is this matter? Tell me that first.

"It's very serious. Probably the most serious thing I've ever discussed with you..."

-Then give me 2, no, 3 minutes. I'm currently lying on the sofa. I need to get up, grab some coffee, and listen to you properly. Don't hang up; just wait 3 minutes.

"Okay."

When I think about it.

How harrowing must her life have been.

I imagined the evils one must face to become a righteous person in this world. If we gathered all the righteous people living in this world, we could probably exhibit all the evils.

"How is the orphanage doing these days? Are you well?"

-Trying to change the subject? Must be a serious matter indeed. I'm fine. We have more teachers now than when you were here. I'm technically the director, but I don't do much. Donations have increased... Oh, and the food has gotten a bit tastier.

"That's good to hear."

-Yeah. I'm now sitting in my office. Go ahead and start.

I took a deep breath.

"Director. Did you graduate from Shinseo High School during your school days?"

-.....

Silence fell.

Tension hovered in the air. I heard the sound of water rippling. The director took a sip of her coffee. She was swallowing black liquid.

-Yes. I graduated from Shinseo High. It's still quite a prestigious school even now.

"Perhaps."

I hoped it wasn't true.

"When you were in the second year of high school, were you the class president?"

I wished the trauma had fabricated a phantom. That the past scenes I thought I had witnessed were all false, and the director was just a purely kind person who had an untroubled school life.

I hoped.

Silence lingered for a while.

-Yes.

The director's voice flowed.

-I was the class president. It's been over several decades.

"....."

-.....

Both the director and I remained silent. My heart throbbed with what I was about to say. A sinister air. The director also seemed to sense the ominous atmosphere and thus kept her lips sealed.

"Director."

-Yes, Gong-Ja.

"When you were the second-year class president. Was there someone... On the school rooftop?"

-.....

"Did such a person exist?"

Breathing stopped.

-Yes.

The director spoke.

-There was.

The nightmare was confirmed as reality.

-Although I never really talked to them. Yes. There was.

The corridors I walked in school, the rooftop iron door chains ■■ looked down upon, the desolate playground, the plastic junkyard floating like a white island on a raft, all of it, without a single lie, was true.

Only.

『Please don't die. I beg you. Let's live in a different world together.』

『Yes, class president. In this world, let's survive together.』

The parts that should have been the most false were true.

What should have been the most true was just a dream.

That was the story of ■■ and the director.

"Director..."

I barely spoke.

"Do you remember that person's name?"

No one in this world knew his name. He was a wanderer from the wilderness. The people of the empire reverently bestowed upon him the name Leafanta. He was the one who killed constellations. The people of the tower called him the Constellation Killer.

He was a person abandoned by the outside world. No one tried to remember him. Thus, now, only one person testified his name.

-Kim Yul.

A person was called by one.

-That child's name was Kim Yul, Gong-Ja.

"....."

I closed my eyes.

I recalled the conversation I had with the Paladin in the school corridor.

『The student sitting in the back row, near the window, remember?』

『Of course, a classmate. I think the name was,』

The noise clears.

『Kim Yul.』

There was a person with such a name.

『I'm not sorry, Kim Yul.』

A child who was hidden by the white curtains when the wind blew in through the classroom window.

A child who quietly pulled out an old notebook and looked into it before class started.

A child who pulled at the iron chains of a door that would never open.

『I'm sorry, Kim Yul. I'm sorry.』

Decades ago.

Before I was even born.

『I'm sorry.』

Such a child existed in this world.

-Gong-Ja?

And there was a person who lived for decades.

-Are you crying now? No. No. Um. Anyway, how did you hear about Kim Yul? There shouldn't be anyone who knows him.

She was smart enough to receive a scholarship to attend school. She held the top rank in his class at a prestigious school. She studied four, five hours a day, barely sleeping, paving the way for the future she dreamed of.

What dreams did she have when she entered high school?

What future was she dreaming of?

-I don't know how you came to know that child. Really.

But she witnessed it.

She saw humans.

She saw beasts.

She saw death.

『No one cares about you. No one, no one, no one...』

At that moment, one person's time stopped.

The freedom of choice that everyone deserves vanished.

The rest of the director's life became merely about proving something.

[That there was a child named Kim Yul at that place and time.]

"Director, he's here."

-What do you mean?

"Kim Yul. Your classmate. That child."

-I don't understand what you're saying...

"He lived in the junkyard at the foot of the mountain, Kim Yul."

-.....

"In the last row of the classroom, by the window. That's where he sat."

-.....

I spoke.

"Your school uniform's white shirt collar was stained. Remember, the student council president at that time dated a guy who was terrible. His older brother was a singer. They falsely accused Kim Yul of owning a phone he didn't have, and everyone in the class texted him with harassment."

-.....

"Did you know about the animal pets behind the school? Raising rabbits and chickens. Originally, the animal club was responsible, but after a foreign woman with a baby attempted suicide, no one took care of it anymore. So, Kim Yul ended up taking care of it."

-How...

The director's voice trembled.

-Gong-Ja, how did you...

"You tried to stop it, director. Since the first year, you tried. But upon investigation, you found that the perpetrators' girlfriend's parents were on the school's board of directors, so you had to give up, right? The chairman of the church you attended was also involved, the Serun Church. You spoke to the homeroom teacher, but couldn't push it due to the scholarship issue."

-How...

"He is here, director."

I bowed my head, still holding the phone.

"He is here."

-.....

A long silence ensued.

-Give me four days.

The director spoke.

-No, a week. Please wait a week.

The student whose time had stopped decades ago, now with a voice slightly older and more tired, said.

-I will come there.

A week passed in the blink of an eye.

During that week, the director sorted out her estate. Anyone can enter the tower, but you can't bring anything from the outside world. The director let go of everything she had built and preserved over decades.

"I was planning to retire anyway."

When I met the director again, she looked even older than before.

"I had already arranged a successor. There were a few tasks I was handling in the region, but... Once you enter the tower, even government officials can't do much. They'll have to manage without me now."

"Welcome, director."

"I'm no longer a director, but call me whatever you like."

The director gave a bitter smile.

Without an alias, the director couldn't yet access the Great Library. However, I had a talk with the [Holed-Up Head Librarian], who allowed me to bring the director in.

"Seeing it in person, I can tell how successful you've become. Everywhere I went, it was all about Gong-Ja. When I entered the tower, dozens of people rushed to guide me..."

"Um, I have made quite a name for myself in the tower. I'm the 2nd ranked hunter, director."

"I never understood why people struggled with math until I started raising you kids. Gong-Ja, it's a good thing that tower rankings aren't based on test scores."

The Sword Emperor chuckled from behind.

-Today's going to be full of Gong-Ja's embarrassing stories. Good, good! Keep talking!

The director and I engaged in pleasant conversation.

I had spoken to the Librarian earlier to prevent our conversation from being broadcasted outside. The Librarian agreed to my request. Not only that, the Bookmark Maids served us tea and snacks.

"This world is really strange..."

The director eyed a Bookmark Maid suspiciously.

"So."

Her gaze swept across the vast library and finally settled on my face.

"Where is that child?"

I told the director everything. About my abilities, the trauma, the person known as [Leafanta Aegim], and [Constellation Killer].

"....."

The director listened to my story expressionlessly. However, expressionless doesn't mean emotionless. For over an hour, the director sat without taking a sip of her tea, quietly listening.

"It's hard to believe any of it."

"Yes."

"But the fact that you know Kim Yul... that's impossible."

The director's expression was hard to read, as always.

But now, after experiencing the trauma, I could understand.

The director was afraid.

"Kim Yul didn't appear in the graduation album. There was no trace of him... Think about it, Gong-Ja. Couldn't we have at least left an empty space for him?"

"....."

"Why did the album photos look so bright? Those people... that person... how could they smile? I couldn't understand it for a long time. They're probably still living well now."

The director gazed thoughtlessly at her tea.

She quietly drank the long-cold tea and looked at me directly.

"It's alright."

"....."

"Let's call forth that child's trace."

I nodded.

"Ghoul Reincarnation."

Shadows spread.

The shade writhed, coming alive. Black, puddle-like water rippled and then formed the shape of a person. The ripples turned into silvery hair, and the puddle dressed itself in neat attire.

".....Hmm."

Leafanta Aegim.

Constellation Killer looked around.

"An unexpected situation."

The silver-haired man muttered gruffly.

"Kidnapped? I have been forced to awaken as a puppet. I cannot use force... Either the puppet's system has been modified, or a very powerful psychic magic has been applied."

This man lost his black hair. Lost his name. Lost his memories. [Kim Yul] was merely the starting point of his existence, so the man in front of me was completely different from [Kim Yul]. He was Leafanta Aegim. The Constellation Killer.

Therefore, no one had the right to call him [Kim Yul].

".....Kim Yul."

Except for the one witness to his starting point.

Constellation Killer looked at the director.

The director slowly knelt on the library floor.

"I am one of the people who killed Kim Yul."

"....."

"I have wanted to say this for a long time. I am truly..."

The director bowed her head.

"Sorry."

The Constellation Killer's face hardened.

Chapter 139:

Latecomer (1)

The protagonists living in stories shone like constellations in the sky.

I had no interest in the constellations twinkling in the night sky. To me, stars were the protagonists. Their unfolding stories were my dazzling constellations. Ah, the universe was filled with countless stars, and the myriad of things held infinite stories.

-I wish to see more of the story.

I unintentionally touched the starlight.

-Just a little more.

That was all.

Silence descended in the library.

The Great Library of All Knowledge. Each book encapsulating a world. Numerous worlds inhabited by countless characters, each harboring their own story. Among them, two characters from the world of [Leafanta Aegim] were here.

"....."

Constellation Killer quietly looked down at the director.

"You claimed to be one of those who killed me?"

"Yes, Kim Yul."

"What a strange statement."

Constellation Killer's voice was bleak.

"My death is recorded as having occurred 153 years, 7 months, and 9 days ago. The one who killed me at that time was named the Sword Emperor.”

Constellation Killer pulled out an old notebook from his bosom. That diary was [Kim Yul]'s final destination, a declaration of not remembering the past he had traversed.

“The description of the Sword Emperor in the diary doesn’t match yours.”

Just like my skeletons clutching their daggers even when devoured by Reincarnation of a Hundred Ghosts.

Constellation Killer, too, had only one old notebook.

“Are you a successor to the Sword Emperor?”

“.....”

“Based on my understanding, the Sword Emperor was not one to apologize or seek apologies from others.”

The director must have realized.

“I conclude that you are not a successor to the Sword Emperor, nor are you one of those who killed me. There is no reason for you to apologize to me.”

That she was already too late.

“Therefore, I will not accept your apology.”

"....."

“Moreover, my name is Leafanta Aegim. My alias is Constellation Killer. You called me Kim Yul. However, there is no record in the diary of me being called Kim Yul. Perhaps you’ve mistaken me for someone else?”

“Kim Yul.”

The director's voice trembled.

“Kim Yul was the name you had before being called Leafanta Aegim. Before you obtained that diary, long before that, in your past. The world you originally lived in..."

"It's futile."

Someone approached and murmured beside me. It was the Head Librarian. He whispered to me in a voice too soft for Constellation Killer and the director to hear.

"What a touching scene. Even I, a Constellation, acknowledge that. One is a victim whose time was sealed. The other, a bystander with time preserved like a specimen. Ah, beautiful like a painting..."

I looked at the Head Librarian.

[The Holed-Up Head Librarian is delighted and in despair.]

The Head Librarian wore a strange expression. It seemed sorrowful, yet also joyful. His eyes were melancholic, but his breath was flush with excitement.

"However, King of Death. It's too late for everything. The [Constellation Killer] is beyond redemption."

"....."

“Even if he receives an apology now, it means nothing. He remembers nothing. His appearance and mindset have completely changed from when he was Kim Yul. How can one apologize for what is not remembered? How can one forgive what is not remembered?”

“You.”

I spoke softly.

“You know about my regression, don’t you?”

The Head Librarian smiled.

“Of course.”

“How? Do you experience the same time when I regress?”

“Heh. Things don’t work that way. Especially your [Returner’s Winding Clock] is quite special. Even Constellations can't easily approach its majesty. Like other Constellations, I simply possess a cute authority.”

The Head Librarian snapped his fingers. Click! A book flew towards us.

+

[Story of the City of Ascension]

+

It was the book that the Constellation showed me when I first set foot in the Great Library.

“Remember? The book containing your world. It's not an Apocalypse since it hasn't perished yet.”

The corners of the Head Librarian's eyes lifted.

“Now guess. Whom do you think I designated as the protagonist of [Story of the City of Ascension]?”

"....."

Indeed.

"It's me."

"Correct! That's it!"

"Is everything I experienced, every skill I have, when and how I regressed, all recorded in that book? Is that why you know everything?"

"Ahh."

The Head Librarian chuckled, flipping through the pages of [Story of the City of Ascension].

"The time and love you shared with Raviel Ivansia... That sweet companionship and romance! The way you solved challenges in unexpected ways. It became one of my favorite scenes."

"....."

"Of course, the 'Trauma' you experienced this time is also written here. That's why, specially, I allowed that human to enter, despite not having an alias."

The human the Head Librarian referred to was the director. Even now, the director was desperately explaining to the Constellation Killer. Who he was, what he had experienced. But Constellation Killer's expressionless face remained unchanged.

"You've done well, King of Death."

The Head Librarian spoke.

"You tried hard. You did your best. But it's too late for Constellation Killer. No matter how hard the characters try, reaching the best ending is difficult. This is the normal ending allowed for the Constellation Killer."

The Head Librarian was sad, yet a little more delighted.

"Excluding the bad ending, it's the best he can achieve."

Regrettably, he himself won't know. Your efforts, the director's regret, all are powerless. Ah, Constellation Killer will remain a killing machine for slaying Constellations. Forever..."

"No matter what I do?"

"That's right. Whatever you do."

The Head Librarian was about to put [Story of the City of Ascension] back in his pocket when I reached out and grabbed his wrist. He flinched.

"If you're so sure."

I looked straight at the Head Librarian.

"Let's make a bet."

"A bet?"

"I will connect Kim Yul's time with Constellation Killer's. Just like Kim Yul became Constellation Killer, I'll make Constellation Killer become Kim Yul. Then maybe the director's apology can be accepted."

"Ho-ho, bold words. Didn't I tell you? It's simply impossible..."

"That's why."

I gripped the Head Librarian's wrist tighter.

"Let's make a bet."

"....."

"If I succeed in getting one of your favorite characters, Constellation Killer, to recover his memories, you'll help me. You don't have to try too hard. Just help me as much as you did when you sent me to [Leafanta Aegim's Epic]."

"Hmm."

The Constellation's eyes narrowed.

"And if I help and you still fail? What do I get?"

"You can do whatever you want with me for ten years."

The Head Librarian paused.

"You mentioned wanting to keep my eyebrows, right? Do it. Wanted to clip my nails? Go ahead. Whatever you want, I'll oblige, and for ten years, you can play with me as you please."

The Head Librarian's pupils shook.

"Anything?"

"Yes."

"A scary proposition, King of Death. Even I have been quite polite in front of you all. If I were to truly do as I please, it would be quite extraordinary. Just look at the Bookmark Maids..."

"Are you going to take the bet, or not?"

The Head Librarian licked his lips. For a moment, his eyes gleamed with greed. Like Constellation Killer, I too was one of his beloved characters. The Head Librarian looked at me like a snake eyeing its prey.

“I adhere to a principle of non-interference.”

The Head Librarian swallowed.

“But if a character themselves makes a request, it's a different story. Fulfilling the wish of the butler from [Tales of Sormewin Academy] was for the same reason.”

"....."

“Very well. King of Death, I will assist you. However, if you fail to link Constellation Killer to Kim Yul... I will savor your next 10 years.”

Okay.

I walked towards Constellation Killer and the director, still gripping the Head Librarian's wrist. My footsteps echoed in the library's isolated section.

-Hey. Hey! Zombie, are you insane? Why make such a bet?!

Guardian Spirit was in an uproar.

-Do you have 100% confidence in winning? Huh? Just because that silver-haired guy flatters you as his favorite character, you've lost your mind, but remember, he's a Constellation. A high-ranking star! If you entrust your soul to such a creature, you don't know what might happen!

'It's okay. I'm betting because I'm 100% confident.'

I had thought long about why the 'Tower' existed.

There might be no reason for something to exist. But at least to me, the Tower seemed to have a clear reason. Thanks to the Tower, lives that had turned their back on the outside world got a chance to start life anew.

To live life once more.

Some might call it reincarnation, others transmigration.

“Constellation Killer.”

For some, it would mean reunion.

“Director.”

Thus, halted times would regenerate.

“Let's make a youth drama together.”

Constellation Killer and the director looked at me.

First to speak was the Constellation Killer.

“What do you mean?”

“Constellation Killer, you can't accept the director's apology because your memories are gone. You probably think there's no need. But if you could, you'd want to accept it.”

"Hmm."

Constellation Killer nodded while flipping through his diary.

"That's true. Though we've only briefly spoken, the person who knelt before me is very kind-hearted. Upright. She doesn't have qualities because they're innate, but they've been acquired through enduring life. If possible, I'd like to accept the apology."

"Director."

I turned to the director, who was still kneeling on the library floor.

"If you could apologize to Kim Yul..."

"Even my life."

The director answered immediately, not waiting for me to finish.

“I'd willingly offer my soul.”

“.....Thank you.”

I took the director's hand and helped her up. Hands aged with time. Only then did I recall holding her hand a long time ago. I remembered building sandcastles with her at the playground.

‘Thanks to you, this story is possible.’

Because you didn't forget, I was raised in the orphanage.

‘If even you had forgotten Kim Yul, this moment wouldn't be possible.’

Kim Yul's life intersected with the director's. The director's life shaped mine.

Now, my life is gathering the Constellation Killer's, barely bringing the three of us together here.

We three are connected by fate.

‘I will not let it become meaningless.’

It's a bit late.

But the time to repay the kindness of the person who raised me has come.

“Head Librarian.”

Holding the director's hand firmly, I turned to the Constellation. The Head Librarian was grinning, confident of winning the bet.

“Speak, King of Death! The hunter whom I dearly love.”

“Constellation Killer, the director, and I will tackle the next stage together.”

“Oh!”

The Head Librarian's eyes sparkled with intrigue.

“That’s commendable. Although late, you plan to rebuild the bond between the three of you? Ah, what a story! Your tale begins now...”

“No.”

I extended my other hand and snatched a book.

“It's not like that.”

[Story of City of Ascension].

The book where I was the protagonist.

“I choose this book for the next stage.”

“Hmm...?”

The Head Librarian looked puzzled.

“Sorry, I don’t understand. [Story of City of Ascension] is already happening in real-time here? What’s the point of making it a stage?”

“You said it yourself. I was chosen as the protagonist in this book. Everything I experienced is recorded here.”

“That’s true, but...?”

“Send us three to one of the events I’ve experienced.”

“Which event are you referring to?”

“The Trauma.”

Silence.

Thud.

The smile vanished from the Head Librarian's face.

I calmly faced the Constellation.

“You said it just now.”

『Of course, the ‘Trauma’ you experienced this time is also written in this book.』

“That Trauma ended in tragedy. The world was destroyed. Even if it was just an illusion, it swallowed everything into the void, ending all the characters’ stories. Head Librarian. According to your classification, that Trauma is an impeccable [Apocalypse].”

“Ah...”

The Head Librarian opened his mouth.

His eyes, filled with shock, looked up at me.

“King of Death, you...”

“Take us to the Apocalypse of Shinseo High School. Naturally, Constellation Killer as Kim Yul, the director as the class president. Me as the perpetrator.”

If he can't accept or offer forgiveness because he's lost his memory.

“Also, grant us [Immersion].”

Then give him back his memory.

Like Heretic Inquisitor was immersed in Goldencup, becoming the same person.

Like I was immersed in Butler, gradually submerged in his memories.

If Constellation Killer immerses in Kim Yul---

Kim Yul's memories will be transplanted into Constellation Killer.

Constellation Killer will be able to recall Kim Yul's time.

“Head Librarian. Or rather, Holed-Up Head Librarian.”

Yes, we were a little late.

But nothing has ended yet.

“Open the book.”

The Head Librarian held his breath.

Chapter 140:

Latecomer (2)

Silence reigned.

"What in the world....."

There was no one around us. We were near the area of the Forbidden Books as mentioned by the Head Librarian. Only the three of us were present, with no prying eyes upon us. Thus, the Head Librarian's groan resonated more profoundly.

"What a cruel act."

The Head Librarian covered his mouth with his sleeve.

"King of Death. Do you understand what you are saying? Constellation Killer faced death at that school, right? No, that's an understatement. That world abandoned the Constellation Killer to death. It discarded him! To drop him back into that world to regain Kim Yul's memories, how, how much..."

The Head Librarian couldn't finish his sentence, not because his voice drowned in a groan, but because I let go of the director's hand and grabbed the Head Librarian's wrist instead. His sleeve slid down, revealing his face.

"How could this be....."

The Head Librarian grinned.

"Cruel, you say...?"

"Yes. It's cruel."

I looked sternly at the Head Librarian. His cheeks were already flushed, seemingly engrossed in imagining the stage I proposed.

"But that's your bias. Do you know what's truly cruel? The common people living in the world of [The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon]. Humans who became corpses without understanding anything, killed by the Constellation Killer. That's what's truly cruel."

"Hmm, well, you have a point there....."

The Head Librarian's eyes narrowed.

“So, you're determined to restore all of Constellation Killer's memories?”

“If it's within my power to do so. Certainly.”

“To make Constellation Killer apologize to the countless victims of [The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon]? Do you know how many Constellations he has slaughtered? To those who lived in that world, to those who died, to make him apologize to all of them?”

“Yes. At least to those in the world I have come to shoulder.”

“King of Death...”

The Head Librarian's breath quickened.

“What a beautifully phrased descent into hell...”

The Constellation seemed like he was following the etiquette of a demon heralding doom.

“Bias is natural. Ah, I know of a human who chose a similar path. It's endlessly tragic. That person... No. Revealing this would violate our agreement.”

“I'm sorry to interrupt your storytelling, but.”

I let go of his wrist and spoke softly.

“Just open the book.”

The Head Librarian chuckled.

“Gladly.”

He opened [Story of the City of Ascension].

“The trauma you dreamed of is merely an illusionary world, artificially created and temporarily maintained. Even if you change its ending, it can't become part of the official history. It's more like a side story. Frankly, I've never had the pleasure of seeing how a stage like this is handled.”

Black smoke began to rise from the book.

Yes, it was black smoke.

Until now, when opening an Apocalypse, white light seeped out. This time it was different. The smoke, black and ominous, writhing like the tentacles of the void that had swallowed the nightmare, rose up.

“Eh? What?”

The Head Librarian seemed surprised. He seemed to have realized something.

“This is the shadow of a lesser god from Zuraqua... Ah, indeed. Indeed! Even with a golden contract, creating a world through trauma seemed like an overuse of power, but indeed! The esteemed one himself intervened. To favor the King of Death to such an extent. Many will be ensnared by jealousy...”

Someone favored me?

Who?

[The 'Holed-Up Head Librarian' attempts negotiation.]

While I pondered, the Head Librarian muttered as if talking to someone.

“Hmm. Then your involvement in this raid will be... difficult. This world has already become the domain of its master. Hm, well. At least leave a record in the Apocalypse after the raid is over.”

Black smoke writhed.

“Good! You understand well. Our lovely jester...”

The Head Librarian grinned.

Like petting a beloved animal, he stroked the black smoke.

“King of Death. Constellation Killer. King of Death's nurturer. I hereby appoint these three as new characters in [Story of the City of Ascension Story-Side Story]. When you open your eyes, you'll be in the world of the [Side Story] before its tragic serialization interruption. However, be careful. Especially you, King of Death.”

The Head Librarian twined his long fingers around the black mist.

“You've caught the attention of someone high above.”

“What do you mean?”

“The Tower remembers everything. I just read the book to peek into your past, but the Tower truly remembers you. Naturally, it remembers you bypassed the 50th floor using a loophole.”

“You violated the Tower's strict rules, so you must receive some penalty. The Tower is asking you. Do you really, truly trust your nurturer and Constellation Killer?”

The mist was writhing around the Head Librarian's fingers.

“Do you believe your nurturer won't crumble under the weight of guilt? Constellation Killer might be consumed by vengeance, unable to forgive even your nurturer. Nobody might be forgiven or able to forgive. Do you really think those two,”

The Head Librarian glanced at Constellation Killer and the director.

“Can reach a different ending than the original history?”

A daunting question.

But the answer was already set.

『I'm sorry. Class president.』

I remember Kim Yul and the class president.

『I didn't mean to hurt someone like you.』

The Kim Yul I saw was a remarkably strong person.

Even in the Hell of Animal Realm, he cared for the children in the barn.

『There was someone. I thought there was no one. Luckily, there was at least one person I could forgive.』

Stronger than the Constellation Killer, who had slain numerous Constellations.

『I'm glad there's at least one person I can forgive.』

Kim Yul, who met the class president, was stronger as a human.

So was the director. She survived in a world without Kim Yul.

“Yes.”

Both just despaired because they met too late.

I believe in the breaths and voices they shared on the rooftop

that day.

It was the truth.

Not all illusions are mere fantasies.

“I trust those two.”

The Head Librarian smiled.

“Poor creatures.”

The mist around his fingers dissolved. Swirling! The mist spread rapidly, engulfing Constellation Killer, the director, and me.

“Then prove it.”

The Head Librarian's smiling face was the last thing I saw before the world darkened.

“But the one who proves it won't be you.”

The world was engulfed in darkness.

[You have been subjected to a high-level penalty.]

[You are placed in the world a year earlier than other participants.]

[From the starting point, you are strongly immersed in the character.]

A voice echoed.

[Your immersion rate is currently 95%.]

The nightmare began.

'Penalty.'

The moment I opened my eyes.

'A whopping 95% immersion rate.'

I sprang into action.

'There's no time to hesitate. None. The immersion rate will hit 100% soon. I must complete all preparations before that.'

It's easy to resent the cruel penalty, to be angry about being dropped a year early.

But what does that change?

I can't waste precious time on resentment or anger.

'The Constellation Killer is being forced to confront the past he discarded. So I must also prepare to receive unwanted memories.'

Even if those memories belong to a nauseating perpetrator.

‘Simply returning Kim Yul's past to Constellation Killer isn't enough. Kim Yul must want to 'live again'. The director will try her best, but---"

I made a cold judgement.

‘The director alone isn't enough. Right. At this time, she's just an ordinary high school student. What a high school student can do is so limited.’

Before I'm completely devoured by the perpetrator's ego.

‘Revenge.’

Do what can be done.

‘Let the director and Kim Yul get revenge on those despicable creatures.’

I took action.

[Your immersion rate is currently 95%.]

When I witnessed the end of the previous trauma.

I regretted being too late.

Lamented.

I could have done better, but didn't.

Perhaps I panicked too much. Even though I was possessed by the perpetrator, I missed what could be done as a perpetrator, what could only be done because I was the perpetrator.

‘Create evidence of violence.’

That's what [only I can do].

I created evidence.

"Everyone, attention."

In the classroom.

“Bow to the teacher.”

It seemed the director was the class president even in her first year. Is the role of the president usually held by the same student? Instead of the Black Dragon Witch's face, the young face of the director was there.

‘Only a year left.’

Unlike me, the director had not yet been possessed.

‘Kim Yul too.’

Kim Yul had been in the same class since the first year. Like before, Kim Yul was exiled to the back row near the window. What should have been the best seat became a kind of forbidden zone, chosen for its convenience to secretly bully.

Thump.

Thump.

When the teacher turned his back to the blackboard, students tightly rolled eraser dust into balls. Into these balls, they inserted finely chopped pencil leads, resembling a curled-up hedgehog. The students stealthily threw these sharp pencil lead balls at Kim Yul.

“Pfft.”

“Kek...”

Each time Kim Yul was hit, he flinched slightly. He tried to ignore it, but his nape reddened from the pencil lead stings. The young brutes had various ways of enjoying their malice.

‘One year.’

I endured.

‘This is decades ago.’

Society was even more challenging than when I was young. Much more.

‘To prove violence, evidence is needed. If it's a one-time act, the punishment is light. It needs to be proven as a long-term, hidden, intentional, and utterly malicious act.’

The only way to beat the brutes is to become just as beastly.

“Hey, you guys. Look here.”

"Huh?"

Click!

I took photos of the scenes of violence. It was a time when the quality of phone photos was terribly poor. I bought a digital camera to take photos and a camcorder to record videos.

“Uh, senior.”

One of my junior high school juniors looked worried.

In the previous trauma, he was one of the Four Demon Lords, the Moon Shadow Demon.

“Is it okay to film this?”

“Don't worry. I'll just show it to a few people and delete it. Hey, let's do some introductions for fun.”

“Me? Oh, my name is.....”

I recorded every single day.

My surroundings and the misdeeds I, and others around me committed. Smoking was considered a harmless prank. I not only bothered Kim Yul but also frequently harassed other students and even enjoyed bullying a junior high student.

‘Madmen.’

Is this normal?

Does this happen in other schools?

If so, in every elementary, junior high, and high school in this land, why does no one intervene? Why does everyone stay silent?

How can they stay silent?

"....."

Kim Yul lay on the ground, looking at me. Behind the school. After attacking Kim Yul, who was caring for rabbits and chickens in the barn, my gang and I ridiculed him by calling him a bumpkin.

"It stinks where you are. Smells like dung."

"Why are you raising chickens? For eggs? Should I buy you some?"

"....."

Kim Yul didn't reply.

He just stared at me, recording with the camcorder.

Kim Yul's dark eyes reflected in the small camcorder screen.

[Your immersion rate is currently 95%.]

One day.

[Your immersion rate is currently 96%.]

Another day.

[Your immersion rate is currently 97%.]

Hellish records accumulated.

'It's dangerous now.'

I felt the limit after 11 months.

‘Any time now, the immersion rate could reach 99%.’

My mind was already a mess.

At some point, I stopped feeling anger or guilt when filming Kim Yul being beaten. Only a sly smirk and spontaneous pleasure remained.

‘My role ends here.’

I lifted a cardboard box.

103 audio recordings.

311 videos.

30,790 photos.

Text messages on mine and Kim Yul's phones. Two phones.

All recordings, videos, and photos were accurately dated and located. No one could deny the timeline. No space for lies like [I feel sorry for my actions] or [I didn't mean it]. Not even a needle's room.

‘Director.’

I placed the box in front of the director's family home. In her childhood, the director lived in a villa. I rang the bell and hid.

The director came out.

".....Huh?"

The young director, not yet possessed, looked around, puzzled.

“Who's there? Who...”

She hesitated upon seeing the box.

On top of the box, I had attached a printed A4 paper.

+

Sending you all the evidence.

It's up to you how to use it.

If you decide to act, please start after 30 days.

+

"....."

The director, always cautious since childhood, didn't immediately bring in the box. Instead, she took a cutter to open the seal and slowly checked the contents.

"....."

Her face hardened.

She looked around again.

And cautiously, quietly, took the box inside.

Thud.

The door closed.

‘Ah.’

I finally relaxed.

‘I endured.’

The first time I could breathe easy since falling into this world.

‘It's done. I made it. I survived. I did it.’

On my way home.

I looked up at the dark night sky.

‘I've done everything I could. Could there have been a better way? Will the days ahead truly be worth more than the violence I prevented over the past 11 months?’

[Your immersion rate is currently 98%.]

‘I don't know.’

I lay in bed.

‘But I didn't give up just because I didn't know. Right. This must be right. If anyone can change the ending of this world, if anyone should, it's Kim Yul. It's the director. I'll leave everything to them. It's not my role...’

I...

[Your immersion rate is currently 99%.]

Clasped my hands.

‘The wicked just disappear.’

As if praying.

‘In this world, my role is merely to wait.’

I closed my eyes.

‘I’ll wait. Kim Yul. Director. Please.’

•

•

•

•

-

-

[Your immersion rate is currently 100%.]

Chapter 141: Latecomer (3)

★.

Therefore,

Let's talk about my defeat.

The role of the protagonist.

For the first time, I, who only played the role of a hero, became a villain who deserves to be overthrown.

Defeat was never an option for me.

Because each defeat was fatal.

If I had been defeated, all of this would have been engulfed in flames and completely burned down. My defeat meant the fall of the Empire. My defeat was the end of the martial world. And my defeat, my defeat.....

For the first time,

My defeat doesn't signify doom.

This is the story where I finally face defeat.

A tale where the human 'I' must sink for the ending to arrive.

[Your immersion rate is currently 100%.]

Ego.

However, 'I' am strong.

'I' am thoroughly cunning.

I don't know how you remember your school days. Were they happy? Joyful? Was the classroom small enough to be embellished with the ignorance and excuses of youth, painted in a pretty sepia panorama?

Not for 'I'.

'I' am more sly than you. More cunning. Perhaps there was no one like me in your school. Or maybe, you just don't remember. But 'I' am definitely here.

The one who framed a classmate.

The one who plotted and fabricated evidence to slander someone.

The one who threatened classmates into silence.

Such memories belong to a person like 'you'. 'You' are my comrade. At least 'you' can guess my existence, and if lucky, understand it.

Right. When other students were naively patching up their youth with so-called [school days], 'you' and I, 'we', easily hunted those foolish minnows.

Our hunting is secret.

So, people don't remember it.

Our [skillful] hidden hunts are often misunderstood by most people as the opposite. They believe that students are [too immature] to engage in sophisticated hunting.

Too immature? Us? 'We'? What a ludicrous misconception.

They are the ones who can't even remember what happened right before their eyes.

First, I'll confess the secrets of hunting to such people.

This is a story that happened before 'I' was possessed by someone else.

"At school, the student hierarchy is divided into two. First, there are students who study well. But studying well requires effort. Above all, students hate to make an effort.”

On the other hand,

“It’s easy to look down on and ridicule others.”

It doesn’t require effort.

“Since mockery doesn’t take effort, all students can participate. This is the decisive difference between [studying] and [mockery]. What’s the difference? It’s how easily many students can participate.”

To raise a test score by 1 point, you have to study for at least 10 minutes.

In contrast, it takes less than 10 seconds to mock and ridicule someone.

“[Who studies better] is far less interesting than [who mocks others better]. It’s much easier. Therefore, it’s much more powerful. Unlike studying, anyone can easily join this game. That’s why [mockery] is a standard in every school.”

This is where the dynamics of bullying are created.

“First, the scapegoat must stand out.”

Is someone visibly richer or poorer than others? Does their face look odd to everyone? Do they smell strange when you get close? Is their speech severely impaired? Are they excessively earnest? Any of these will do. It doesn't matter what it is.

Mockery is powerful because it's easy.

The victim of mockery must always be easy to ridicule.

“Kim Yul.”

There's a reason why Kim Yul was chosen as prey.

“He's poor.”

Noticeably.

“He’s distinctly poor. When you get close, there’s a bad smell.”

Poverty can’t be hidden by monochrome school uniforms. It’s outwardly visible, and that’s the terrible thing about poverty. Everyone could see that Kim Yul was poor. Anyone who approached him could smell the bad odor.

Everyone could easily mock him.

“Hey.”

That’s why it’s easy to start.

“It might be a bit harsh to say this, but when you get near that guy...”

“Ah, right. It does smell a bit. Poor thing...”

Level 1.

It starts lightly.

As ‘you’ know,

you mustn’t reveal your true intentions from the start.
That’s foolish.

“He received a scholarship, didn’t he?”

“I’ve known Kim Yul since middle school, and even then...”

Gossip.

It’s appropriate to start with simple gossip.

“Should I tell you a secret? Actually...”

Gradually increase the number of students participating in the gossip.

“He lives there? Wow. That place is like a garbage dump.”

“His dad collects trash.”

“Oh, is the guy who collects our trash the same person?”

“Eh, I doubt it...”

That’s how you slowly raise attention.

At this point, the instigator must be careful not to reveal any malice. Not yet! ‘You’ know it’s not time yet.

Look.

“Don’t you find Kim Yul a bit annoying?”

Rather than saying this,

“Hey. Wow, really. The guy who collects our trash is Kim Yul’s dad!”

This is much wiser.

“What, really?”

Of course, it's a lie.

“How did you know?”

“I wasn't sure at first either. But on Sunday, I saw the guy collecting waste and asked, [Are you Kim Yul's father? I'm Kim Yul's school friend]. He seemed a bit flustered and just asked me to take care of Kim Yul.”

“Wow...”

“Really?”

Lying is a basic skill for 'us'.

Classmates look at me with half-belief but sparkle in their eyes. That attention, that interest is the proof of success. You've successfully drawn people into the story about [Kim Yul].

“Kim Yul! Is your father’s job really----.”

“Hey, hey. Why say that? Don’t say it.”

“Ah, why? Is it really a lie?”

“It’s not that. Anyway. Sorry, Kim Yul. It’s nothing.”

"....."

Level 2.

Observation phase.

From here, malice naturally takes its course.

“Pfft.”

No one is free from making mistakes, especially students. Now, classmates will pay attention to every move of Kim Yul, scrutinizing his mistakes as if under a magnifying glass.

“Pfft...”

And they laugh.

Dropping a volleyball during gym class and having to run far to fetch it.

Dozing off during the fourth period and still being asleep during lunchtime.

Stuttering a bit when answering a teacher’s question.

“Pfft...”

Even very minor mistakes don’t matter.

It should be easy. It should be noticeable.

Always remember the dynamics of [mockery].

“Hey, Kim Yul always goes behind the school every lunchtime. Is that...”

“Feeding the chickens? Really?”

“Look out the window. I’m telling you it’s true.”

It should be easily observable by everyone.

It should be easily joinable by everyone.

“Kim Yul- Look here-!”

“Ah, he’s really looking.”

“Maybe he’s raising chickens to get eggs for free?”

“Ew.”

Ultimately, create a [game everyone can participate in].

As ‘you’ know.

Most bullying stops at this level.

It can occur naturally up to this point. There’s no need for a distinct perpetrator or accomplice. Just having sympathizers is enough for level 2 bullying to occur.

Level 2 bullying includes the following: light violence once every two weeks, group assaults once every three months, public beatings once every six months, one small, permanent scar that doesn’t fade, lasting from one semester to three years. Occasionally, a student temporarily and momentarily leads the violence, but there’s no long-term instigator...

And as ‘you’ know.

“Hey.”

‘We’ don’t stop there.

“Let’s try something.”

We go a step further.

“What?”

“Watch this. These are my new shoes. Brand new.”

If you’ve successfully led up to this point, you’re surely adept at lying. Now, you have to perform a little magic for your classmates.

“Look, I drew a star under the shoe with a marker. See? You all saw it, right?”

“Yeah. So?”

“I’m going to leave it in front of my house with the trash.”

“...What are you talking about?”

“Stupid. Kim Yul’s dad collects our trash, right?”

It’s a lie. The waste collector passing your house isn’t actually Kim Yul’s father. But it doesn’t matter. You know one route where Kim Yul’s father collects waste.

“If there’s a pair of brand-new shoes with the trash, will his dad give them to Kim Yul as a gift? Yes or no? Watch. If Kim Yul’s dad is really the waste collector, he’ll wear these shoes tomorrow.”

“Uh...”

“Really?”

“I bet Kim Yul will wear these shoes tomorrow.”

There.

You’ve secretly prepared two identical pairs of shoes.

“One pair, I left here. You saw it, right? I won’t touch it.”

One pair was left in front of your house where your friends could see.

"Hmm."

And the other pair was already placed on Kim Yul's father's route a day earlier.

Of course, both pairs have ★ drawn on the soles.

You just wanted to show off some plausible magic to your friends, pretending to draw ★ in real-time. If you're more careful, you'll spend the whole day playing with friends, creating a perfect alibi.

"Hey, hey. Check it out!"

Next day at lunchtime, in the classroom.

"What if you get caught looking at this?"

"Just look at it quickly!"

“Just a quick look...”

While Kim Yul is away at the cafeteria, we all huddle around his desk. On the hook hangs his indoor shoe bag.

The students' eyes sparkle. They lift Kim Yul's indoor shoe bag, pretending it's just a joke. They take out his somewhat cleaner shoes.

"Wow."

Of course.

“It's true?”

Underneath the shoes Kim Yul wore, there is a ★ drawn.

"Wow, so you're saying Kim Yul..."

“You did this with Kim Yul, right?”

“No, he's been with us all yesterday and today.”

“So it really is...”

The students look at you. They have seen a fascinating magic trick. Now, you have many lines to choose from, depending on your personality and taste. You could boast, 'See, I was right,' or slowly reveal your malice, 'It feels a bit bad.'

"Wow."

But I recommend this line.

"Really..."

Just blend in with the crowd.

“What if that man lied about being Kim Yul's dad?”

Pretend you didn't know either.

“So I wasn’t 100% sure it was true either.”

Laugh as if it’s ridiculous. Check the shoes again, act as if you’ve witnessed something unbelievable, and refine your tone as if you just realized the truth.

“But wow, it was really true...”

And then step back.

“Hey, hey. I don’t want to know. Let’s not bet. Just pretend you don’t know. It’s just between us. No, forget it. Anyway, I don’t know.”

Inexperienced instigators always try to create the drama alone. As you know, this is foolish impatience. They become anxious because they feel their fabricated evidence is sloppy, and the magic is unimpressive.

So you must perform perfect magic from the start.

“What’s going on?”

Just in time for lunchtime.

Classmates return to the classroom in pairs and groups.

“Hey, about Kim Yul, actually...”

“Huh? What about him?”

Of course, you deliberately chose lunchtime for your magic show. You can't waste such a trick on mere break time.

During lunchtime, classmates return in pairs and groups. There's plenty of time. It's perfect for whispering and spreading the 'incident' that just happened.

"Wow."

Classmates check Kim Yul's shoes.

“Crazy. It was true?”

‘It was indeed.’

You sit in the back, pretending to sleep with your eyes closed.

You’ve become cautious.

You never spread the story yourself. You don’t overstep. You know the virtue of a lion that shares its prey with the pack.

“What are you all whispering about?”

“Come here quickly.”

“What about Kim Yul's shoes?”

You leave the joy of spreading rumors to others. Let them believe they've discovered the 'truth' themselves. Let them chew and enjoy the blood-dripping meat.

“Ugh. Does he really pick up other stuff too?”

“Recycling, huh? Recycling.”

“Pfft.”

★.

“Poor, but dirty. Really.”

“Ugh, it smells like spoiled milk... hide it under his desk.”

“Quickly! The class is starting!”

I’m not like that.

“...Where’s that weird smell coming from?”

“You too?”

“Yeah. It was hard to bear during math class.”

“Wait. I'll check. Sniff, sniff.”

“It seems to be coming from the back row.”

I'm more sly than you.

“Yul, why are you washing the rag? It's still a rag even if you wash it.”

“Poor thing. He must feel sorry for the rag...”

Perhaps there was no one like me in your school.

Or maybe, you just don't remember.

[Your immersion rate is currently 100%.]

But I am definitely here.

"....."

In this city.

In this school.

Sitting in this classroom, holding a pencil.

“Class president, what are you looking at?”

The class president looks at me strangely.

“...Eun-Seo.”

"Huh?"

"....."

The class president trembles slightly. It's a small vibration. It seems like she's disgusted about something, or maybe lamenting. But her strange behavior ends quickly. She clears her throat and speaks.

“No. It’s nothing. I just suddenly couldn’t remember your name. What was it again?”

“What? Are you already getting senile, class president? It’s Hwang Eun-Seo, Hwang Eun-Seo.”

“Ah, right.”

She murmurs, recalling the name.

She doesn’t usually interact much with our group.

“Your girlfriend is running for the student council election, right?”

“Yeah. Why?”

“I think I’ll run too. Please tell her I said good luck.”

“You’re running for student council president? You only study, class president.”

“To get into Seoul National University, I need a recommendation. It's easier if you're the student council president.”

Is that so? It makes sense.

It's a bit funny to openly aim for Seoul National University by becoming the student council president. Well, it's like her. She's an honest kid. I decided to take it lightly.

“That's cool. Good luck, class president. I'll vote for my girlfriend, but still, do your best.”

The class president nods expressionlessly.

“Yeah. Thanks.”

I am strong.

I am thoroughly cunning.

Therefore,

“---I need to try my best too.”

Let's talk about my defeat.

Chapter 142: The Rooftop (1)

One day.

“Recently, there haven't been many videos.”

My girlfriend mentioned.

"Huh?"

“Kim Yul videos. You usually release one every week at the latest. Are you taking longer because you're being selective about your [artwork]? Quite a few in our group are eagerly waiting for the next episode. The last video, the one where you cut nails, that got a good response.”

My girlfriend's expression was neutral. I frowned slightly upon hearing her words.

‘Videos. Right. I recorded all of Kim Yul’s bullying with the camcorder.’

But why did I do that?

『I will wait. Kim Yul. Director.』

Why did I...

[Your immersion rate is currently 100%.]

.....

Ah. That's right. I remember now.

That was it.

‘I recorded it to give the kids something to watch.’

Shinseo High School is filled with children from the local elite. It's a prestigious school. As such, children from noble families are forced to maintain proper behavior, causing them immense stress.

Some lead bullying to relieve this stress, but it's risky. Most don't want to take such risks. I provide them with the [Kim Yul videos] for this purpose.

Quite professionally.

[Producer sir, I want a concept of cutting nails with scissors!]
-J

[Dress him in yellow rubber bands and let his hair grow out.]
-7

[The kids in the last video only hit too much. It lacks flavor...] -11

The school has something called the Student Council Suggestion Box. It's used for notes or letters to the council, but I use it differently with the help of my girlfriend.

It's the [Kim Yul Request Box].

Teachers don't touch this box, and no one finds it strange. Even if someone is caught putting a note in the box, it's not a problem. My girlfriend has been active in the student council since her freshman year, so she can periodically manage the [Request Box].

A simple idea, but...

'I must say, I am quite clever.'

It was a hit.

Children of the elite were hooked on the charm of participating in bullying without any risk. The Request Box guarantees anonymity. They use Trump card initials like A, K, Q, J for their submissions.

[Please make a concept of slapping cheeks for 20 minutes.] -Q

Q is my girlfriend's initial.

[I like shabby clothes, but sometimes I want to see different outfits!] -7

7 is the head of the broadcasting club.

[Producer, I enjoyed the last video. Making Kim Yul use honorifics was an ingenious idea. I believe Kim Yul is popular because of his strong pride. Thus, unlike some sponsors who enjoy physical humiliation, I am confident that a mental approach is more appropriate. Producer, the body should only be a symbol or metaphor for a mental approach...] -2

This lunatic, who always writes long critiques and puts them in the suggestion box, is a kid in a middle school band. Crazy. He uses 2 because of his second-year syndrome.

Of course, even if he's a lunatic with second-year syndrome, it's a different story if he's the son of a prominent company in the region. He's a valuable customer.

The so-called [Trump Card Meeting] only has such clients.

Satisfaction of secret sadism. Vicarious pleasure.

By providing entertainment to these clients, I maintain my current status. Since I started filming these works, many 'friends' have started to look after me unknowingly. Yes, that's how I met my girlfriend too.

Without such a thing, how could I date a rich girl?

I don't have a history of winning awards in essay contests since middle school like my parents. I don't have a half-and-half face like my brother to be a singer.

To climb up the pyramid, I need tribute for those above.

“Sorry.”

I apologized for the delay in the tribute. I, too, was puzzled why I hadn't filmed any Kim Yul videos recently. There was no reason to stop. But soon, a plausible excuse came to mind. I'm really good at coming up with reasons.

“You're a candidate for student council president. I thought I'd take it easy during the election.”

“Really? You considered me?”

“We need to be careful. You never know if someone will submit something weird....”

"Our producer is actually quite cute."

My girlfriend raised her eyes and stroked my head.

"I like a quick-witted puppy."

Although she blatantly treated me like a dog, I didn't mind. Instead, I played along.

"Woof, woof! Wooooof!"

"Pfft."

Finally, my girlfriend laughed. I am the only one in this school who can make her laugh. I bent my legs like a dog and jumped around playfully.

"Do you know this? Hwang Eun-Seo, you're really funny."

A funny guy. That was a statement affirming my value.

Someone fun to be around. Always flipping the atmosphere with laughter. An insider among insiders.

Indeed, there are limits to dating just based on looks, like my brother. True dating depends on how well you can entertain....

『I have been waiting, Gong-ja.』

.....

I furrowed my brows.

What's this?

[Your immersion rate is currently 100%.]

For a moment, my mind went blank again.

Is it just my imagination? Lately, I seem to be losing focus more often.

“Anyway,”

I swallowed.

“For a while, I'll take a break from filming. It won't do to stir up trouble. If any friends are discontent, tell them I'm adjusting the pace because if Kim Yul is bullied more, he might not even come to school...”

That's when it happened.

-The is an announcement from the Broadcasting Club.

A voice flowed from the school speaker. A familiar voice. Member number 7 of the Trump Card Meeting, the head of the broadcasting club. But somehow, it lacked energy? The tone seemed uneasy.

-Hwang Eun-Seo, student of class 2-5. Hwang Eun-Seo, student of class 2-5, please come to the broadcasting club room immediately. Once again, Hwang Eun-Seo, student of class 2-5, please come to the broadcasting club room right now... That is all.

And the speaker went silent.

My girlfriend looked at me.

“What's going on?”

I shrugged, not knowing the reason myself.

“There's no reason for me to be called to the broadcasting room... maybe the staff room.”

“The broadcasting head might have called you for personal reasons. Maybe asking why there's no new work lately.”

He's a bit crazy, she muttered.

“Go check it out. I'll head somewhere else.”

“Got it. Thanks.”

I hesitated slightly before kissing her on the cheek.

I did pretty well today. Even the lie about considering my girlfriend seemed to work. She might allow a kiss on the cheek. Above all, I have a duty to provide her and those around her with the illusion of [the school couple].

Realizing my calculations, my girlfriend snorted.

“Cute.”

Celebrate. The princess has smiled again.

“I’m off. I’ll text you later about what it is.”

So, I am much smarter than other students.

Walking through the corridors, I rated my day. Did I make any mistakes in human relations? Did I say anything strange? Did I make the kids laugh enough, and did I laugh enough myself?

The score for the day.

‘Another perfect day.’

Full marks.

‘As expected of me.’

I have talent. Not just in ostracizing someone, but in turning that ostracism into a game. Those who have tasted this fun, even after entering university, might seek me out. They might invite me to their exclusive league.

‘Even if I'm not invited, it's fine.’

They will remember having played some naughty tricks with me during our school days. My girlfriend might break up with me when she goes to college, but she will still remember me as an old lover who once made her happy. Hwang Eun-Seo remains as a memory of youth, forever to be recalled with a smile. This alone is a great gain.

Unlike the vague students, I have a roadmap for life.

‘First, I will become a film director.’

I don't need to be hugely successful. Just shoot a few indie films, build a moderate career and network. Then, that becomes my calling card. No one dislikes a young director in agony.

‘And then?’

I'll introduce new actors to the upper class. Become a sort of party designer, satisfying young lords and ladies with ingenious methods like now. My brother works in the entertainment industry, so I can extend my reach there too.

‘Good.’

A golden life.

Far different from those who vaguely study and worry about their career path only after entering university.

A different dimension.

“I’m coming.”

Squeak.

I opened the door to the broadcasting room.

As soon as I stepped in, I paused.

“S-stop.”

"....."

There was only one person in the broadcasting room, the head of the club. That wasn’t strange. The room had soundproof walls and thick curtains. That wasn’t strange either.

“H-Hwang Eun-Seo.”

But if the broadcasting head was holding a camcorder, filming me, then something was definitely off.

“Close the door.”

"....."

“Hurry up. Close the door. If you don’t, you’ll be in b-big trouble.”

The broadcasting head was shivering like a cornered mouse. I didn't understand why he was like this, but provoking someone in such a state would do no good. I quietly closed the door.

“Draw the curtains.”

I drew the curtains.

“T-turn around and look at me.”

I turned.

“Hwang Eun-Seo, class 2-5, you, you blackmailed me... to forcibly join in ostracizing Kim Yul. Right? Say it’s t-true.”

“Is this some kind of hidden camera?”

“Shut up and say it’s true!”

The broadcasting head was genuinely trembling. A foreboding feeling crept over me. Usually, I would have joked about how to shut up and talk, but I was too bewildered.

“I can’t understand the situation. You need to explain.”

“Y-you approached me first. I didn’t want to, but... you enticed me, saying there was something fun to see. Right? You did. So it’s all your fault!”

This isn’t normal.

“What are you talking about? You came to me after hearing rumors about the videos in the group. You asked me to get you in, saying you’d even connect me with middle schoolers... why are you changing your story now?”

“No! It’s not true!”

The broadcasting head's face turned pale.

“It's your fault, Hwang Eun-Seo. You said no one would find out. You promised anonymity. You said you'd take responsibility. Bu, but why is there a video of me out there!”

“No. So, what are you talking about since earlier?”

“I only appeared once!”

Appeared.

Some clients occasionally want to participate directly in the events. They prefer to enjoy it live on the spot rather than just watching videos. If I remember correctly, the broadcasting head indeed appeared once.

“Wait. Are you acting like this because you think the video might have leaked? Don't worry. I destroyed all the videos after viewing them...”

“Don't lie!!”

The broadcasting head's expression turned fierce.

“You bastard, crazy thug. You, you tricked me into joining. Say it! Or I'll tell everyone what you guys did!”

"....."

“I'm telling you! I have to record and send it!”

He's gone mad.

I realized I shouldn't stay here any longer.

“Sorry. But I can't admit to something I didn't do. That would be against my conscience. I definitely showed you because you asked, and though I don't have the videos anymore, I have all the notes you put in the suggestion box. I don't know why you're doing this, but let's talk when you've calmed down.”

I turned my back.

“Oh,” the broadcasting head moaned.

“S-stop! Don’t go. Don’t go, Hwang Eun-Seo! If you leave, it’s over for you! Really over! I’ll tell the other kids and ruin your life! Don’t you understand?! Hey, Hwang Eun-Seo! You bastard! Your life is over! Just wait, I’ll tell your parents and ruin your life...!!”

Squeak.

The door closed, cutting off the broadcasting head’s voice. Absorbed by the soundproof walls and hidden by the curtains, his screaming became nothing more than a muted vibration. There was no one in the second-floor hallway.

“Damn. What’s this?”

I cursed.

“There must be a reason for this freak out.”

Maybe the videos really leaked. There’s no guarantee that a client didn’t make a copy for themselves. They could be using it to blackmail the broadcasting head.

“Damn.”

It's harder to manage customers than to make them. That saying was right. I pulled out my phone and started calling the ‘clients’ one by one.

Beeeeep—

The call rang long. After a while, it ended.

“What?”

Frustrated, I called the next client. I planned to ask if they knew anything about the broadcasting head's commotion.

Beeeeep—

The next client also didn't answer. It was time to go home from school, so they might not be able to answer. Trying to control my temper, I called the next client.

Beeeeep—...

But.

The next client also didn't answer.

"....."

Neither did the next.

"....."

Excluding my girlfriend, all 12 members.

None of the Trump Card Meeting clients answered my calls.

‘What?’

I felt a chill.

It was like an unseen hand was gripping my neck.

‘What’s happening?’

Without any thought, I called a classmate, not a client. He was my secretary. He handled the delivery and retrieval of the videos to and from the clients on my behalf.

Beeeeep—...

He didn’t answer my call either.

"....."

That’s when I realized.

Someone is hunting me.

Chapter 143: The Rooftop (2)

‘Who is it?’

I couldn’t comprehend.

‘Who’s clinging onto the Kim Yul problem!’

Kim Yul has no relatives, or might as well not have any. The ostracism of Kim Yul happened before he could even make friends, leaving him with no one to turn to. Why else would I have chosen him as the scapegoat!

‘Anyway, I have to confront Kim Yul. He must know something. Anything.’

I hurriedly ran to the back of the school. At this time, Kim Yul would be tending to the animals in the barn. I knew Kim Yul's schedule by the hour. And sure enough, there he was, distributing feed to the chickens in the barn.

‘Right. You should be there.’

Feeding weaker creatures to barely maintain his dignity. That’s how I understood Kim Yul’s attachment to the barn. Ultimately, humans are animals, and the weaker ones can only serve the stronger.

[Your immersion rate is currently 100%.]

The school is just like that barn. A slightly larger animal pen. And here, I am a stronger beast than Kim Yul.

“Hey! Kim Yul!”

I growled.

“What the hell have you done!”

Kim Yul did not turn around, nor did he react. It was as if he couldn’t hear my voice, continuing to distribute the feed.

‘Ha. Are you ignoring me now?’

I was infuriated. I walked over and grabbed Kim Yul's shoulder roughly.

“Hey, you bastard. When someone calls you...”

The moment Kim Yul turned around, something fell. It was an earphone. I belatedly realized Kim Yul had been wearing earphones. From the dangling earphones, classical music loudly played.

"....."

Our eyes met.

I flinched.

Tears were welling up in Kim Yul's dark eyes.

“What.....”

For a moment, I was at a loss for words.

I couldn't quite understand why I was speechless. Was it because it was the first time I saw tears in Kim Yul's eyes? Maybe. No matter how relentlessly he was tormented, Kim Yul never shed tears. That very fact must have further provoked the 'clients'.

But it wasn't just for that reason.

'Who are you?'

He seemed unfamiliar.

'Who are you? This guy?'

Kim Yul's eyes felt strangely alien. His gaze was distant. As if he was looking past me, at something beyond. Kim Yul, with his shoulder in my grasp, silently cried. Those tears seemed as if they would fall not here but somewhere else entirely.

"You....."

"Beautiful."

Kim Yul spoke.

“What?”

“The song. The music I’m listening to. It’s composed by a deaf person.”

Dadadum, Bam-

Music flowed from the earphones. A rhythm I had heard somewhere. But I was only suspicious of how this beggar managed to get an MP3.

“I think about the humiliation and curses this deaf person must have endured in his life. Someone must have cursed him as a deaf idiot. Laughed at him, saying look at that deaf idiot.”

“What the hell are you babbling about, you...?”

“It’s sad. The wound is eternal, going back hundreds of years when someone else must have endured a life of humiliation. A thousand years ago, and a thousand years in the future.”

This kid, has he lost his mind?

“There is nothing beautiful in this world by itself. Only those who are wounded can see beauty. Only those whose lives have been ruined can look at an unruined life and feel relief. To those who endure even when broken, tears are shed.”

Kim Yul's gaze was still hanging in the air.

“If someone finds the whole world beautiful, they must be someone who has been broken by everything in it. Only those living in hell praise the world. I think of the dishonored life of the deaf composer from his music.”

“Where did you pick up such nonsense... Hey, you. What have you done?”

I grabbed Kim Yul's collar. Grab! Kim Yul's body shook, and he dropped the feed bag. The yellowish grains spilled out from the bag that fell to the ground.

“What have you done to my clients, you recycling bastard!”

"....."

Kim Yul finally looked at me.

“I haven’t done anything, King of Death.”

“Death..., what?”

“I’m just observing what I have discarded.”

Kim Yul arrogantly grabbed my wrist. I was dumbfounded and tried to shake off his grip.

It didn’t budge.

‘What?’

And Kim Yul easily let go of my collar.

It happened in an instant.

Startled, I reached out again, but Snap! Kim Yul struck my wrist. The path was diverted. My hand embarrassingly flailed in the air. In the blink of an eye, my hand missed its mark.

“...What?”

I stared at Kim Yul in a daze.

“How regrettable.”

Kim Yul calmly picked up the feed bag.

“[Kim Yul] is furious. What he wants is not physical violence. More precisely, he desires revenge far deeper than physical violence. And [I]... think that I want to fulfill Kim Yul's heart.”

Kim Yul.

No,

“I, too, agree with that sentiment.”

Someone unknown to me watched me intently.

“Wait, Kim Yul's killer. The day is ending, and the journey is long. So long. Let's meet again after that.”

Kim Yul walked away leisurely with the feed bag.

“Hey! Hey! You stop right there! Stop.....!”

At that moment, my phone vibrated in my pocket. A text message had arrived, probably from a client who saw the missed call and responded. I glanced in the direction Kim Yul was walking and quickly checked my phone.

+

Never contact me again.

If you do, I'll kill you.

+

I was dumbfounded. In confusion, I called the client who sent the message. But they didn't answer, no matter how many times I tried.

My body shivered uncontrollably.

‘What’s going on...’

The situation didn’t change the next day.

‘What’s happening?’

It got worse.

“Uh, Eun-Seo.”

As soon as I entered the classroom, a friend hesitantly approached me. He had appeared in the [Kim Yul Game] dozens of times. He was popular among the clients for his knack for hitting people. He seemed to enjoy it, basking in his popularity.

“What?”

“I-I have a message for you. To pass on.”

He was visibly terrified.

“What’s with you?”

“This... I’m sorry.”

He put the note on my desk and scurried away. I furrowed my brows and unfolded the note.

There, the note was scribbled in a messy handwriting.

[Hwang Eun-Seo lives in a garbage dump. His indoor shoes, even his uniform, all recycled. The only thing that can't be recycled is Hwang Eun-Seo himself.]

"....."

My delay in reacting was simply because it was too absurd.

“Ha.”

I let out a hollow laugh, looking at the friend.

“What’s this.... Are you kidding me right now?”

The friend flinched and retreated behind other students, cowering.

Already stressed from the clients treating me like crap all night, and now this bastard of a friend is doing this, my rage boiled over.

“Did that trash tell you to do this? Hey. Hey. Look at me. Look. Even if we are friends, there are things we should and shouldn't do. Huh? Did Kim Yul tell you to send this note?”

The friend couldn't say a word. He just looked terrified. I was about to confront him when another classmate approached my desk.

“Hwang Eun-Seo.....”

“What?”

“Sorry. This.”

The classmate almost threw another note on my desk. Reflexively, I snatched it and read.

[I feel so sorry for our juniors. They have to call you a senior, Hwang Eun-Seo. Ever thought about how they feel? Doesn't your conscience bother you?]

I felt dazed.

Taking advantage of the moment, three more classmates dropped notes and left. Just like the first two, these guys had also actively participated in the ‘Kim Yul Game’.

[Hwang Eun-Seo, you're really disgusting. Even more disgusting than our math teacher.]

What is this?

[I'm shocked! There's a student who doesn't wash his uniform!]

I couldn't understand why they were doing this to me.

[You really stink. Seriously disgusting.]

Something happened yesterday.

It happened, and I'm the only one who doesn't know.

Something made all the clients turn their backs on me. Not only that, but they also coerced my friends into staging this farce.

‘Stay calm.’

My heart was pounding furiously.

‘Calm down. Think calmly. Did Kim Yul do this? No, he couldn't have. He was a bit weird yesterday, but no. Who did this then?’

That's when it happened.

“Hwang Eun-Seo!”

The homeroom teacher poked his head in through the classroom door. The students all looked at him at once. The teacher scanned the classroom atmosphere, spotted me, and gestured.

“Come with me for a sec.”

“Me...?”

“Gosh, isn't there only one Hwang Eun-Seo in our class, not two? It's nothing serious, so come on. Oh! Class president! Bring the collected phones here.”

I hesitantly followed the teacher out of the classroom. As I left, the surroundings were eerily quiet.

It felt ominous.

It seemed like the classmates knew why I was being called out. They showed no wonder at the fact that the teacher had called me. Only the studious nerds, busy with their morning prep, glanced at their notes.

“Hwang Eun-Seo.”

In the staff room.

“Yes...”

“Have you been up to any bad stuff lately? Anything come to mind?”

The teacher asked casually as if it was nothing serious. In the staff room, students in uniforms were moving around, collecting scrap paper from the printers. Teachers were organizing printouts for the first period.

“Huh?”

My heart raced.

“Nothing?”

"Hmm."

The teacher scratched his head.

"Hey. Hwang Eun-Seo. Don't go around talking about what I just asked you. Got it?"

“Yes...”

“Listen to this.”

The teacher handed me earphones. I took them. They were connected to the teacher's computer. Click, the teacher pressed the mouse, and recorded voices started playing through the earphones.

-Hey, hey. Don't hit yet! Just make him kneel!

-Eh. We received many submissions this time. Among the five requests we received, we will draw lots to decide today's concept.

My nape felt cold.

-Ah, today's chosen one is Queen. Congratulations, Queen. What are you doing? Clap, everyone, clap.

-Wooooo!

My voice.

And the voices of the friends who just threw notes at me.

-Queen's request is, let me see. Ah, you even gave a budget, 100,000 won. Saying, don't go hungry, here's money for food. And for our star, mix Jajangmyeon and Jjamppong....

Click.

The teacher stopped the recording.

“Did you hear? The voices just now, you heard them, right?”

“Yes.”

“Yesterday, this recording file came to my email. The sound quality isn't that great, but it sounded like your voice and others'. Just checking in case you guys are pulling some prank. Hwang Eun-Seo. Is this you?”

“No, it's not.”

I pretended to be confused.

“What's this ‘Queen’? Is it a play or something?”

“Not sure. I listened to the whole thing and it's odd. Anyway, it's bothering me. The email said [To be played for 2nd year, Class 5, Hwang Eun-Seo], so I thought maybe it's some prank you guys played....”

Crazy. This is it. They're blackmailing kids with this method.

Fortunately, this teacher was a fool. Even after hearing the recording, he suspected it was just a kids' prank. Well, he is such a fool that he didn't even realize what was happening in his own class. For me, it was a stroke of luck.

‘This recording can’t do anything. It’s just a scare tactic.’

Probably some kid, or one of the clients, copied the recording file. They’re playing around with it. If they had more incriminating evidence than the recording, there’s no reason they wouldn’t have sent that to the teacher instead....

‘Problem is, the kids are scared of the scare tactic. Damn it.’

The teacher looked up at me.

“This isn’t really your prank, right?”

“No, it’s not. Uh, but am I not supposed to tell the others about this?”

“No, don’t talk about it. Anyway, it’s not you, so it’s fine. Go back to class.”

“Okay.”

I quietly left the teacher's place.

‘Damn. Damn, damn!’

Click.

The moment I opened the staff room door, I bumped into someone standing opposite.

"....."

It was the class president. He was holding a blue plastic collection bin, having collected the phones from the classroom.

“Oh. Sorry.”

The class president, with her usual expression, a typical nerd's face, said and then slightly stepped aside to give way. Normally, I would have thanked her, but now I didn't have the luxury. I just briefly made eye contact and stepped into the hallway.

‘Which bastard swiped it, I don’t know, but I’ll make sure to get back at them today! Damn dog. Taking people for fools. This has gone beyond a prank. How could they do this to a classmate!’

Click.

The door closed softly behind me.

Chapter 144: The Rooftop (3)

‘First, I need to take care of my friends.’

Someone unknown is trying to dismantle our group.

‘As if I’d let that happen!’

I have to skillfully manage these cowards who are terrified by the blackmail email. It’s okay. I can do this.

As soon as I returned to the classroom, I spoke to the group.

“Hey. I know why you guys are acting like this, but stop it. Why are we making each other feel bad like this? Huh? If you have something to say, say it. If you need to listen, then listen. Isn’t that what friends do? Right?”

But their response was odd. They just kept glancing at my desk without saying anything.

I went to check.

In the desk drawer, dozens of notes were crumpled up and thrown in.

"....."

Each note was filled with insults demeaning me. 'You were so happy when greeted in the hallway yesterday.' Obviously, lies. 'I only lost a rock-paper-scissors bet. Don't get the wrong idea lol.' Texts full of malice and ridicule were scattered about.

While I was at the staff room.

In just that short time, the notes had piled up like a mountain.

"These... these bastards....."

“Kek.”

I heard someone stifling a laugh. Swish. I immediately looked in the direction of the laughter. But I couldn't tell who it was. There were too many students in the classroom.

“Who is it! Who did this to my desk, huh?!”

“We... we didn't do it.”

One of my friends spoke cautiously.

“Just a while ago, a kid from another class came and stuffed all the notes at once....”

“Another class?”

“Yes. They said to tell you not to contact them again.”

"....."

It's a client. One of the clients must have dumped the notes and left. I felt like going crazy. An unknown [culprit] was playing with not only my classmates but also my clients.

“Eun-Seo, and....”

“And? What?”

“Your back....”

My back?

“What about it?”

“That, well...”

I turned around, trying to see my back, but couldn't quite manage it. Laughter rippled across the classroom.

“Pfft...!”

"Snickер."

I reached behind my back and felt something. Crinkle. It was paper. Someone had used tape to stick a note on my back.

I hurriedly peeled off the paper, eager to see what was written.

+

Shinseo High's Official Trash!!

+

Written in a round, cute font.

"....."

When? Who did it? Was it already there when I was called by the teacher? Or did someone sneak it on just after I entered the classroom?

But there was no time to figure that out.

“S-start the class...”

The first period started. The school's most lenient math teacher. Unlike usual, the students, as if deciding to behave, all promptly took their seats. Every single student.

‘Damn it.’

I gritted my teeth inwardly.

‘Making a scene now will only make me look more ridiculous. Should I just leave the classroom? No, that’s not it. I can imagine what these kids would say behind my back. Damn, damn...!’

I had no choice but to sit down quietly.

Looking around, there were students silently snickering, ‘hehe’. Kim Yul, staring expressionlessly at his notebook. The class president, who came into the classroom late, apologized to the math teacher and returned to her seat. Everyone was going about their normal day as if nothing was unusual.

‘Damn.’

I was seething inside.

Anger towards the culprit was natural. Of course, I was furious. But, besides the culprit, my friends. My classmates in this class – my anger towards them suddenly surged.

‘You guys did it too, didn’t you?’

I felt wronged.

‘Are you trying to back out now? You also teased and hit Kim Yul. Did I command you to bully Kim Yul? You did it on your own, didn’t you?’

I felt wronged.

‘Who among these seated bastards has never laughed at Kim Yul? Many of you begged to see the videos. Why are you pretending not to know now?’

I was too aggrieved.

‘No, they’re not pretending. They genuinely don’t know.’

They're just dumb. Stupid. They don't even remember what they say or do. If it's not an intelligence issue, then what is it? They're just mindless followers. And yet they act as if they're human, as if they've done nothing wrong...

‘I feel wronged.’

I feel wronged.

‘Why do I have to suffer because of these inferior bastards? Why only me?’

I feel wronged!

If there was a hero in some story, truly righteous, who had lived uprightly from birth until now, and he was the one to point at me, I might understand.

But that's not the case.

'No one has apologized to Kim Yul for feeling sorry, right?'

No.

There won't be any.

That's why I feel wronged. These people are just being manipulated by the [culprit], seduced without much thought, and stabbing me without any deep intentions.

I don't want to be killed by [that kind of knife]! By these inferior bastards!

I am greater than that!

Buzzzzzzz...

A vibration in my pocket. It was my phone.

The text was from my girlfriend.

+

Hwang Eun-Seo, what did you do?

Don't come near me anymore.

It's over.

+

"....."

Time passed mercilessly.

There was no opportunity to react. No solutions came to mind. The [culprit] relentlessly pressured me without giving me any respite. I contacted my girlfriend, but she didn't respond. Even when I approached her during breaks, she just glared coldly.

The same girl who laughed happily with me just yesterday.

‘Why are you doing this... I was just a funny guy...’

After that, I couldn’t even properly go to the bathroom during breaks. I was afraid. What if someone came and put notes in my desk drawer while I was away!

‘Damn it.’

Even during lunchtime, I just lay on my desk pretending to sleep. I’m not a fool. In this atmosphere, there’s no way my classmates would have lunch with me.

Rather than going to the cafeteria alone, it was better to pretend to be asleep.

‘But someone should ask me to eat together, right?’

I thought, lying on the desk.

‘Then I’ll immediately say I don’t feel well today. That way, everyone will know. That Hwang Eun-Seo is fine. Completely fine. In fact, maybe even sulking a bit. That they should comfort me.'

That's what will happen.

'After all, I've taken care of you guys. I paid for meals, let you appear in videos, helped you reconcile after fights... and... and...'

No one invited me to lunch.

"....."

The classroom was silent during the empty lunch hour. An eerie quietness at 12:45 PM. No one was wandering in the corridors. The wind blew through the window, making the white curtains flutter.

"Damn them..."

I muttered as I stood up.

“I could at least get a word. Right? Just a word...”

Suddenly, I felt an unfathomable sense of shame. Walking around without knowing a note was stuck on my back. Being mocked by these leech-like kids. Being dumped via text. Everything was humiliating.

“Wretched beings. Not even human...”

I rummaged through my classmates' desk drawers one by one.

Scouring.

There might be evidence about the culprit. Maybe specific instructions, like when to send me a note or what the content should be.

‘Please let there be something. Please!’

That’s when it happened.

“.....Hwang Eun-Seo, what are you doing?”

Startled, I turned around. I was caught searching through the drawers, my posture awkward. Behind me, four classmates stood at the classroom's back door.

“Uh,”

I stammered.

“Just a moment.”

“A moment? What for?”

“Just checking something...”

“Why are you rummaging through others' desks? Are you crazy?”

No.

“Hey, Hwang Eun-Seo rummaged through our desks!”

“What?”

It's not like that.

“Why are you searching through others' desks...?”

“Didn't you do this before?”

Listen to me.

“Wow. That's disgusting...”

It's not like that.

Please listen to me.

You are being manipulated right now. Don't you see? You're being used without knowing it. You need to realize that. You, too, are guilty of what I did. I'm on your side!

We're on the same team!

One team!

One team!

Attacking me will be your downfall. Seriously. Who else will stand up for you if not me? I made the [Kim Yul Game] for you guys. I entertained you. I provided amusement. Who did? I did!

Defend me, idiots!

Don't be mindlessly manipulated. Understand who's on your side! This is a conspiracy. A slander. I am wronged. You trash! Even if you're dumb, can't you discern who's a friend and who's a foe?

Don't you have any loyalty!

We've had fun together until now. You also enjoyed bullying Kim Yul. Mocking him living in a garbage dump, collecting trash with his homeless father! You trash! Why are you attacking your 'leader' now!

'I feel wronged...'

Word spread quickly among the students that I had rummaged through the drawers during lunch. Sure, I searched them. So what? But my classmates seemed to think that [Hwang Eun-Seo rummaging through the classroom desks] was a far more serious offense than [they had also bullied Kim Yul].

'I am wronged...'

The ones who always smiled and called me [Director, Director]. Betraying me just because the culprit slightly threatened them. How much I've served for the joy of the classroom.

'I feel like I'm going to die of injustice...'

Nothing changed even after school.

In the morning, at least my friends pretended to feel sorry. They pretended. But after what happened at lunchtime, their eyes changed. They looked at me coldly as if I was some murderer.

‘Crazy bastards.’

What crime have I committed?

I feel wronged.

So wronged.

.....

“Hwang Eun-Seo.”

In the empty classroom, after all the students had left.

“Sorry, but can I talk to you for a moment?”

The class president spoke.

Today, the president was the only one who maintained a stoic expression throughout.

“What is it...?”

“I would have preferred not to get involved, but the homeroom teacher and other students have been talking to me about it. As the class president, I feel like I should at least pretend to care.”

“Ha.....”

I couldn't even sarcastically retort, as the president was the first classmate to speak to me after lunch. The president was, if spoken kindly, a model student, and if not, a voluntary loner. Maybe that's why he could perceive the atmosphere around.

“Is something wrong?”

“.....”

Suddenly, I saw an escape from this hellish situation.

‘Right. The class president.’

The president has good grades. He’s somewhat favored by the teachers. The students don’t bother him much either. He naturally exudes an air of aloofness, making it hard to approach him.

Let’s start by persuading the president and gradually turn the situation around.

“Well. Actually.....”

And then I shared how wronged I felt.

Maybe I slightly ignored Kim Yul all this time. But someone jealous of me dating a rich girl spread absurd rumors. I feel so wronged. But the classmates won’t even listen to me.

Please help.

"....."

For about 30 minutes, the president listened to my complaints with an indifferent attitude. She didn't interrupt or argue. Just listened with the same attitude as always, which I appreciated.

"That's tough. I understand why you feel wronged. Really wronged. It's true that kids can be cold about things that don't concern them."

"Exactly."

"But I'm not sure how I can help. What to do..."

The president pondered. The contemplation lasted a long time. Even someone like me, not close to her, could tell she was deeply thinking. We both stayed silent. After a while, the president raised her head.

"Ah."

The president tapped the desk.

“Eun-Seo, how about this? From what I see, the only way to solve this problem is for you to get forgiveness from Kim Yul.”

“From Kim Yul...?”

“Yes. Frankly, all other kids are irrelevant. If Kim Yul, the victim, forgives you, the others can't say anything.”

"....."

I hadn't thought of this solution. But it made sense. No matter what the other kids say, if Kim Yul just says one thing, [I now forgive Hwang Eun-Seo], the classmates will have nothing to say.

“But...”

There's a problem.

“Will Kim Yul accept my apology? I don't think he will...”

“Don't worry. I'll talk to him.”

The president smiled gently.

“I’ll help you out, Hwang Eun-Seo.”

It was a very kind smile.

Chapter 145: Friend (1)

“Are you saying you’ll help?”

“Yes. Well, I shouldn’t sound too generous, but...”

The class president chuckled wryly.

‘Was she always this expressive?’

It felt slightly unfamiliar. Even though we had been in the same class since the first year, I hardly ever talked to her.

“I’m running for student council president, you know. I’m aiming for a university recommendation... Anyway, as a president-to-be, I should try to solve problems in our class. I’m not sure how yet, but I’ll ask Kim Yul. Do you know his phone number?”

“Uh... just a moment.”

While searching for the number, I realized something. The class president didn't know Kim Yul's number. All my classmates who shared videos with me knew it. This meant:

‘The class president isn't the culprit.’

It could all be an act, but.

‘That's unlikely. She's just a regular student. She wouldn't have access to the recording.’

The class president was a safe bet. Definitely.

As I nodded in agreement, the president suddenly said, “Ah.”

“No, wait. This kind of thing shouldn't be discussed over the phone. I'll just ask Kim Yul in person tomorrow after school. That okay?”

“Yeah, yeah. Calling might not be a good idea. Thanks for offering to help.”

“If you’re grateful, vote for me instead of your girlfriend.”

“.....Sure.”

It was over with my girlfriend anyway. The president seemed unaware of my breakup, which also cleared her from suspicion.

‘Right.’

I felt hopeful.

‘It’s not over yet. Nothing is over! If there's one person who supports me, I can use them to devise a plan. This mood will lighten with time... My friends will return to normal soon.’

From that day on, the class president really began to act. I couldn’t tell exactly what she was doing, but she seemed to be actively using her [model student] image.

“Good. I talked to Kim Yul.”

The next day at lunch, the president spoke. I hadn't gone down to the cafeteria again. The students continued to subtly ostracize me, and I didn't want to get involved in that. In the empty classroom, just the two of us, we held a secret meeting.

“Really? What did he say?”

“Kim Yul says you need to apologize formally in front of everyone. He absolutely refuses a one-on-one apology. He says if you sincerely apologize, showing what you did wrong and how much you regret it, in front of everyone, then he will forgive you.”

This crazy guy.

‘What kind of apology and forgiveness is that?’

It's just about humiliating me. Not just the classmates, but Kim Yul too. He's just trying to taste a bit of power, creating this drama.

“If your apology lacks ‘sincerity’, he won't forgive you, he said that three times. Hmm. He seemed really angry, even though his face was expressionless.”

‘I’m going crazy.’

Can't I just give him 1 million won and end this?

He's a pauper, he'll take it.

“What’s ‘sincerity’? How do you show that?”

“I don’t know. But it seems important to apologize in front of others. Why don’t you write a draft of your apology?”

The president suggested with a slightly bothered tone. Maybe she was realizing the situation was more complicated than she thought.

Damn it. My entire school life and even my future are at stake. My life is on the line. If you’ve decided to act kindly, then take responsibility till the end!

“Right. I should write an apology. Sigh...”

I made the most pitiable face I could.

Hwang Eun-Seo. Time for a god-like performance.

“Really, why did I stupidly bully Kim Yul? Just because others did it, I mindlessly joined in. Damn. I shouldn’t have.”

There. Now, sympathize with me. Pity me. I’m a humane person. I can regret and repent. But I haven’t committed a mortal sin! Hurry up and feel sorry for me!

“Kim Yul has every right to be angry at me. I could have stopped the others anytime, but I didn’t... Now I feel sorry. If I could, I’d apologize in front of the whole school. Seriously.”

"....."

The president stared at me intently. Deep, well-like eyes. A face difficult to read. But it was clear she was listening to my words.

“I got an idea.”

The president suddenly stood up.

“What?”

“I’ve thought of a way for you to get Kim Yul’s forgiveness. Just wait a moment. I’ll be back from the staff room.”

She dashed out of the classroom. I was dumbfounded. What is she doing? I mindlessly nibbled on a half-eaten piece of bread, lost in thought. The president returned when I was halfway through the bread.

“Great! I got confirmation from the teacher.”

“About what?”

“About the student council president speech. I asked if a non-candidate can speak at the podium. There’s no rule against it, they said.”

The president smiled confidently.

“You said you’d apologize in front of the whole school if you could. I was wondering how to structure my speech to beat your girlfriend, and this works out.”

“Uh...”

“Listen.”

The president sat down and pulled out his notebook. Scribble, scribble! Her old-fashioned handwriting danced across the page.

“Hwang Eun-Seo, you apologize to Kim Yul, stressing how sorry you are. Then I’ll take the mic and say, [The school I want to create as the student council president is one where we acknowledge our mistakes and forgive each other]. Get it?”

I didn’t quite follow.

“It’s about creating a story, not just listing promises!”

"....."

“Not sure about your girlfriend’s speech, but she’s rich, right? Obviously. She’ll probably use her own money to install perfume dispensers in school bathrooms or promise to never run out of toilet paper. If it’s about campaign promises, I have zero chance... So, let’s fight with a story.”

The president scribbled on her notebook.

+

A student council that solves problems!

A student council that connects!

We will be your emergency communication channel, students!

+

“Uhuhuh...”

The president's eyes sparkled.

"How about that!"

It felt incredibly cheesy.

"The era now is all about storytelling! I'm tired of hearing about toilet perfumes and paper. These have been promises since elementary school. This will work. Let's go with a story!"

"Hmm."

Well, student council elections are always filled with cheesy speeches. Any plausible-sounding rhetoric is attached. The idea presented by the class president didn't seem bad.

'But this guy...'

I looked at the president with newfound interest.

'He's completely disinterested in anything other than his election.'

Despite being the class president, why was she so keen on helping me? Selfish girl. From start to finish, her focus was only on using me for the election.

The president was indifferent to the ongoing class issues. She didn't care what happened to Kim Yul or why I was being ostracized. She only got involved thinking it could benefit her election. Even his motive for running was solely to get into a good university!

‘That’s right.’

But looking at the president, I completely cleared my doubts.

‘This kind of girl is easier to deal with.’

The president was like me. She was looking towards the future. Concerned about what lies ahead. How many would earnestly aim for the student council presidency for a university recommendation?

‘We’re similar.’

I felt more trust and even a sense of camaraderie. This thought made me feel closer to her.

“But the election is just a few days away, right? Is it really okay to change your speech because of me?”

“It's fine. Winning is what matters.”

The president smiled.

“I've already invested about 20 hours in the election. I gave up that time of studying. I can't afford to lose.”

‘This girl. She really thinks like me, doesn't she?’

My trust in her grew even stronger.

“We're of the same kind.”

The idea that she was my kind made me feel even more comfortable.

“Okay, president. I’ll help you as much as I can. In return, you need to help me too, alright? Tell the others I want to reconcile. I regret what happened and I want to get along again if possible.”

“Yeah. Let’s both win-win.”

We shook hands.

“Thanks in advance.”

“Likewise!”

I helped the president with her election. Although I couldn’t openly support her in front, I revised her speech and worked on campaign slogans.

Despite the ongoing ostracism from classmates.

Somehow, just knowing that [I had something to do at school] provided a lot of psychological stability.

“Wow, you write well?”

The president was pleased with my apology and her speech. After school, in the sunset-soaked classroom of 2nd year, class 5, it was just the two of us.

“If you act well, we will definitely win.”

“Act?”

I was puzzled.

“What acting?”

“Huh? Hwang Eun-Seo, you aren’t really sorry towards Kim Yul.”

“Oh, it’s okay. I don’t care about the blame. I believe the attitude in apologizing matters more than the feeling of apology. To begin with, what even is a feeling of apology?”

The president flipped through my apology.

“Being embarrassed but still apologizing in front of the whole school counts as sincere, right? No matter how much you say sorry, what's the use if you don't act on it? In that sense, you, Hwang Eun-Seo, are a hundred times better than the others.”

Hmm.

Hmm...

“I asked Kim Yul yesterday. Has anyone ever apologized properly? He said not a single one. Even those who asked how they could be forgiven, you were the only one. Man, our classmates really lack shame.”

“President... you...”

She really understood.

I was slightly moved.

“Oh, of course, I'm happy about it. If you had gone around saying [Vote for my girlfriend! Only my girlfriend!], I'd have lost dozens of votes. I feel sorry for you being ostracized, but honestly, I'm happy.”

“Wow, such a garbage girl...”

“Yes. Thanks. Aren't all people garbage anyway?”

I ended up laughing. It's true. After being dumped by my girlfriend, this was the first time I laughed in a while.

‘She really knows a thing or two.’

Humans are garbage. Beasts. If they seem tame, it's only because they've been domesticated from beasts to livestock. Those who realize this early are the ones who survive.

[Your immersion rate is currently 100%.]

Then, instead of being a goat, you could become a hyena. With luck, even a lion.

I can succeed.

People who complain about difficult human relationships are just trying to see people as people. It's effortless when you view them as livestock.

No friends? They see no benefit in being with you. Even playing together should at least relieve stress. Many friends? They're with you because there are benefits.

That's all there is to it.

True friendship comes only from true benefit.

'At least I won't lose anything being with this person.'

I grinned.

"President. Want to be friends?"

The president snorted.

"After I get elected as the student council president. Your speech is good, but needs a bit more refining. I'm working hard to get the others to accept your apology. If I don't get elected, it's all for nothing."

"Got it! Okay. I'll write an amazing speech! I'll cry and snot while apologizing! I, Hwang Eun-Seo, will burn myself to make you, our president, the pride of Shinseo High!"

"Yes, understood. I'm counting on you, Mr. Eun-Seo."

We chuckled together.

Chapter 146: Friend (2)

"Wow, there's no rule that says you have to just sit around and die!"

Turning misfortune into a blessing.

Entering high school, this might be the first time I've truly felt what friendship is.

"They say a real friend is one who extends a hand in tough times."

Right. Let's reflect. I've been too arrogant.

People make mistakes in life. I trusted the kids too much! I never considered the possibility that one of my friends could leak the recording to get back at me.

"It's okay. There are still many days left to live."

I'm just a second-year high school student. I have more than 60 years ahead of me. There will be mistakes in the future, and times of despair with each mistake.

"But there's always a chance for a turnaround."

So let's not be easily disappointed. Don't give up too soon. Believe in myself. Believe in my friends! Unlike those livestock-like trash, I am strong! A strong human being.

"Life is about experiences."

Let's consider this a "good experience."

"It's better to experience this before entering society. Yes, let's think of it that way. It's not like I've failed in business or been caught by the police. It's just a bit of ostracism from the kids, right? And that will be resolved after the election anyway."

It's really a good experience.

"I'll also sneak in an apology to my girlfriend in the apology letter. Mentioning it directly would upset her, so I'll make it subtle so only those who know will understand."

Hmm. I should also apologize to the clients for the trouble I've caused.

"The ones I truly need to apologize to are actually the clients, not Kim Yul. Whether Kim Yul accepts my apology or not, it ends there, but the clients could become my clients again anytime. I should apologize sincerely."

On the day of the student council election—

I finally completed a masterpiece.

+

Hello, everyone.

I am Hwang Eun-Seo from Class 2-5.

(Bows in greeting.)

The reason I'm standing here today, even though I'm not running in the election, is that I have something to confess to all of you.

Students of Shinseo High School!

I have made a terrifying mistake.

I, Hwang Eun-Seo, participated in ostracizing a classmate.

(Pauses for 2 seconds.)

I did nothing when I saw a classmate being bullied. Not only did I not intervene, but I also joined in the bullying, claiming it was just 'playful teasing.' I hit him, cursed at him, and laughed at him, calling it 'just a joke.'

(Pause.)

Students of Shinseo High School.

Until now, I didn't realize that was wrong. I thought it was just playful teasing and jokes among friends. But one should never hurt someone under the guise of 'teasing,' nor laugh at someone under the guise of 'jokes.'

Not knowing it was wrong.

Causing hurt and laughter, unknowingly.

That is my greatest mistake.

A candidate in this student council election made me realize my mistake. I kept asking, 'What did I do wrong? It's just a joke, just some teasing,' and didn't listen to the candidate. But the candidate stayed after school for two weeks to talk to me.

'You need to apologize.'

'You can apologize.'

'If you sincerely apologize, you can be forgiven by your friend....'

Thank you.

(Bows towards the president.)

Thanks to the candidate's efforts and encouragement, today I am able to confess my mistakes in front of all the students, in front of my classmate.

Of course, the hurt my classmate received won't disappear just because I apologize today.

(Looks around the auditorium.)

Not only did I hurt my classmate, but I also caused trouble for other friends and many people in the school. I spoke and acted thoughtlessly. I believe many of you were disappointed in me.

(Bows to the audience.)

I was wrong.

(Bows and speaks.)

I'm sorry.

(From here, the speech goes off-script.)

(Speak with genuine emotion! Don't read the speech!)

(Memorize every line! Important!!)

From now on, I won't 'tease' or 'joke' lightly.

I will always think and rethink.

Not from my perspective, but from my friends', from others' perspectives.

(Enhance storytelling. Bring attention to surroundings.)

The friend I ostracized went to the school's animal pen early every morning. He cared for the neglected chicks and rabbits there.

He is a diligent and really good friend.

I deeply regret bullying such a diligent and kind friend.

(Make a tangible promise that feels realistic.)

Starting today, I will take care of the animal pen, not just in his stead, but with him.

Every morning at 6:30, I will go to school to take care of the pen. I won't miss a single day until graduation, not even on weekends or holidays.

(Why? A plausible reason.)

This is not only to apologize to my friend, but to remind myself every day of the grave mistake I made.

(Chuckle.)

A single apology here doesn't erase the wrong. Nor should it. Students of Shinseo High School! If I miss even a day, please criticize me.

I haven't changed yet. But I want to change. I thank Candidate No. 2, who helped me change myself.

(It might be better to mention the number rather than the name??)

Students of Shinseo High School.

Candidate No. 2 made it possible for me to stand here today. Persuaded me. Spent two weeks just to convince one student.

(Emphasize No. 2.)

I believe this isn't just 'talking' communication, but true 'communication.' Communication is effort. It takes time. It changes the people around you.

(Absolutely don't read the speech. Speak naturally.)

(Look each person in the eye.)

Candidate No. 2 is a candidate who makes efforts.

A candidate who spends time on you.

A candidate who changes the friends around you.

(Conclude.)

I don't know how you will remember your school days.

But I hope you remember them happily and joyfully.
However, for all of us to be happy and joyful, none of us should suffer, even a little.

For a slightly better school life.

For a slightly more joyful school experience.

I ask for your vote for Candidate No. 2.

(Steps away from the microphone.)

(Shouts in a loud, clear voice.)

Kim Yul!

I'm really sorry for everything!

I truly regret it!

I hope we can be good to each other from now on!

(Bows in apology and greeting.)

(Exits.)

+

Perfect.

"Hmm. Good..."

The president read my apology letter and commented. Good? Is this just good? Are you blind? Thoroughly blind. This isn't just good, it's a masterpiece. Do you have any idea how much psychological technique is in here and you can't recognize it!

I need to be forgiving. Phew.

"Can you remember all the parts you need to say by heart?"

"Of course. I stayed up all night memorizing it. I can do it with my eyes closed."

"Reliable, Hwang Eun-Seo. I'm glad I chose you as a friend."

The president patted my shoulder. Brat.

"Let's check the rehearsal first..."

The president planned to use a PPT for his manifesto and vision. For that, the hall had to be darkened. Luckily, just pressing a button and waiting a bit would automatically move the curtains, darkening the hall quite a bit.

During the rehearsal, I accidentally made eye contact with my girlfriend.

".....Hmm."

My girlfriend pretended not to know me. But I deliberately bowed my head. I assumed an apologetic posture toward her. Then, unexpectedly, she looked surprised.

'Wait.'

I smiled inwardly.

'Today is Hwang Eun-Seo's comeback day.'

The time for the election speech approached.

The entire school gathered in the hall. It was bustling. My girlfriend seemed anxious, walking back and forth in the back of the hall.

In contrast, the president was calm. She sat upright in her chair, seemingly unaffected by nerves. Even I was a bit nervous, but what's with her iron heart?

"Hey. Aren't you nervous?"

"Not at all."

The president murmured softly.

"Nerves are for those who are unprepared. How much have I... How much have I prepared for today? How many times have I imagined this stage, this day? There's no way I'd let nerves ruin it."

Her voice was cold.

"....."

For a moment, I felt a chill down my spine. Her voice was so rational. Though we spent after-school hours together for the past few days, this was the first time I heard such a tone from her.

‘What? You’re acting differently too.’

Feeling somewhat rebuked, I stood awkwardly when someone approached us.

"Uh, excuse me."

A familiar face.

"It's time to start... Could you submit your USB...?"

The broadcast head, who had tried to blackmail me not long ago, approached timidly. As our eyes met, the director shrank back. Ha. He probably feels too guilty for being harsh on me.

"Sure, here."

The president handed the USB to the broadcast head.

The broadcast head's hands trembled as he received the USB.

"Is t-this the file I should display...?"

"Yes. Just do it like the [rehearsal]."

"Like the rehearsal... T-Then..."

"Then your job is done."

The president stared sharply at the broadcast head.

"Why? Do you think there's more to see?"

"No! Uh, no! I was just asking. Sorry! Thanks for your effort!"

The broadcast head scurried down to the podium, clutching the USB. Below the podium was a collection of broadcasting equipment, including laptops and projectors, a dizzying array to behold.

‘...What's this?’

The broadcast head's behavior seemed very suspicious. He was always a bit strange, but he wasn't usually this stuttering.

"Now, we will have a speech from the principal."

But there was no time now to delve into the odd behavior. The principal and the chairman of the election committee (last year's student council president) successively unrolled their speeches. The hall, initially noisy with the entire school gathered, soon quietened.

"Would candidate number 1 please come forward."

My girlfriend spoke first.

As the president predicted, she bombarded with promises. Each pledge required money. However, she was rich enough to keep these extravagant promises, and most students were well aware of it.

'Simple, yet powerful.'

She exited to thunderous applause.

'It's okay. As long as I act well, we will win. No, the president doesn't even need to win. I just have to do well. The important thing is to apologize to Kim Yul in front of the whole school. Then, [that's enough] will be what everyone thinks...'

I took a deep breath.

"Would candidate number 2 please come forward."

"....."

I looked back.

The president was watching me.

She nodded at me.

'Good.'

Let's go.

'Give it everything in the performance.'

I ascended the podium. With each step, the weight of gazes clinging to my body increased. Thump. Thump. I desperately suppressed the pounding of my heart.

Whoosh-

Thick curtains moved to block the sunlight. The hall was enveloped in dark shadows. The broadcast head adjusted the projector, and clear light shone on the stage. Dust particles twinkled in the light passing through the air.

Hundreds of gazes.

Hundreds of breaths.

"Hello, everyone."

I.

Slowly opened my mouth.

"I am Hwang Eun-Seo from Class 2-5."

And then.

"The reason I'm standing here today, even though I'm not running in the election, is that I have something to confess to all of you."

A truly memorable speech followed.

'Oh.'

Once I caught the rhythm, the tension washed away. No. The tension was still there, but the thrill of performing overwhelmed it, freely guiding my tongue.

'It's working.'

My voice naturally rose and fell.

'It's working!'

The expressions weren't awkward.

I could feel my facial muscles moving naturally.

'Damn! It's actually working!'

Thinking about it, I had filmed countless videos. Pretending to be a producer, I orchestrated Kim Yul's play. That was also a stage, a production. I had become the most skilled in acting in Shinseo Middle and High School.

"Students of Shinseo High School! Until now, I didn't realize that was wrong....!"

The provocative topic of bullying, coupled with my acting skills, even attracted the attention of disinterested third-year students.

"I was wrong."

All the students were looking at me.

"I'm sorry."

Their breaths felt like a tangible flow in my hand.

"I haven't changed yet. But I want to change!"

Look at me. Look at Hwang Eun-Seo. He's not dead yet. He won't die.

Silly as it was to leak the recording, it was a mistake. Such mistakes can be covered up in this splendid way. I'm a great human being. Turning my head, even my girlfriend was staring at me in shock!

"I ask for your vote for Candidate No. 2."

I stepped back from the microphone and shouted.

"Kim Yul!"

Confident of victory.

"I'm really sorry for everything!"

I bowed towards where the students of Class 2-5 were gathered.

"I hope we can be good to each other from now on!"

Silence.

What broke the silence in the hall was a faint sound.

Clap,

From the direction I bowed, applause started.

Clap clap, clap, clap.

Kim Yul stood up, clapping his hands. Yes, it was Kim Yul. The very person I apologized to, the one who should forgive me, was giving a standing ovation. Although Kim Yul's expression was cold, and the applause wasn't enthusiastic, a standing ovation had only one meaning.

Forgiveness!

Following Kim Yul's lead, other students also started clapping. Applause easily spread. As if they had seen a great show, as if saying, "That's enough," the students clapped. Even the teachers joined in.

‘Sob...!’

Tears welled up in my eyes.

‘Thank you!’

Not because Kim Yul forgave me. What use is it if recycled trash forgives me or not? It's because I did it. I fell into hell but managed to recover on my own. That's what makes me proud.

‘Thank you, me! Thank you for not giving up! Well done!’

Clap clap clap clap-

‘Thank you all!’

Clap clap, clap, clap clap-.

‘Thank you for being swept away by the mood! Thank you! Keep being livestock! Even after I graduate, go into society, become an adult, forever remain as livestock!’

I was grateful for everything in this world.

-Hey.

A sound flowed from the speakers installed in the hall.

-Senior.

The sound of applause did not subside easily. At first, the sound from the speakers was drowned out by the noise. But as the broadcast head adjusted the volume, the sound gained strength.

-Is it okay to film this?

I wiped away tears. Uncertain, but it seemed the broadcast head had played some video. Turning around, a video was projected on the dark wall of the hall.

-Don't worry.

A familiar face appeared in the video.

-I'll just share it with a few people and then delete it.

It was me.

"....."

Huh?

-Hello, clients. Kim Yul TV is back again today. Ah, I received many notes saying Kim Yul TV sounds cheesy. I agree!

An unrealistic scene flowed.

In the video, I was holding a camcorder, filming my face and Kim Yul. It was before the [game] had officially started. The kids were casually poking Kim Yul as a joke.

-But I have no sense of naming. Haha. If you, clients! Could name the series through notes, I would appreciate it!

Wait, what?

-So, let's keep the introduction short. Today, how will we play with Kim Yul! Many of you have participated. Among those who participated today, the lucky winner is... Ta, ta, ta, ta-ra.

The entire school gathered in the hall buzzed.

-Queen!

The teachers looked at the video.

-Congratulations! Ah, let's quickly announce Queen's request. Speed up. Quickly. Ah, prepare two banana milks. In one, blend a centipede, and in the other...

My mind went blank.

“Hwang Eun-Seo, you crazy bastard!”

Someone shouted.

My girlfriend's voice.

Having finished the speech and returned to my place, my girlfriend stood, shouting.

“You crazy bastard! Psychopath! You, you damn dog----”

I couldn't hear my girlfriend's voice clearly.

I was just dazed.

I instinctively turned my head to look at the broadcast head.

"....."

The broadcast head was slumped, clutching the mouse connected to the laptop.

I turned my gaze again.

This time towards the president.

"....."

The president was smiling.

"....."

A very kind smile.

Chapter 147: Friend (3)

The president's smile was perfect.

The corners of her mouth lifted just the right amount. Her lips were neatly curved. Her eyes gently drooped, without any exaggeration. Thus, when the corners of his mouth dropped and her eyes lifted, returning to her usual expressionless face, I felt almost enchanted.

The president ascended the podium.

Leaving me standing there, dazed and confused, he grabbed the microphone.

"Students of Shinseo High School."

His voice spread through the buzzing hall.

"The video you are now seeing shows Hwang Eun-Seo, a student of Class 2-5, collectively bullying fellow student Kim Yul. This is not a staged scene. It's an actual act of violence."

The president didn't hold a speech in his hand. It was a completely different speech from the rehearsal, one I had never heard before.

"Thanks to an anonymous informant, I have obtained such materials. Yes, materials. The criminal acts committed by Hwang Eun-Seo of Class 2-5 are documented in 103 audio files, 311 videos, and 30,790 photos."

Criminal acts?

Videos?

Photos?

"Broadcast head, please switch to the PPT."

"Yes, y-yes..."

The projector shone on the hall's wall, displaying the photos. Although the quality wasn't great, it was evident that everyone was wearing our school uniform.

"Today, after this announcement, we will formally report Hwang Eun-Seo, a student of Class 2-5. Of course, the victim, Kim Yul from the same class, will also sue Hwang Eun-Seo."

Report? Sue?

"I want to ask the teachers working at Shinseo High School: did anyone know about such violence? ...No one, I see. Yes, that's right. Despite the repetitive criminal acts over the past year, the teachers responsible for school life have taken no action. This is the reality of Shinseo High School."

The teachers' reactions weren't much different from mine. Everyone was stunned. A few teachers whispered urgently to their colleagues, and one of the head teachers stood up.

"Wait a minute. Wait! Hey, come down! What are you doing now...!"

"I believe the teachers will also promptly join in the report. I am informing you of the actual situation of school violence."

"No, if we handle it this way..."

"Everyone. Please note that my presentation is currently being recorded as video footage. The materials have already been sent to some media outlets this morning. Please be aware of this."

"....."

The head teacher, in the midst of standing up, looked at the principal. All the teachers were looking at the principal. The principal glanced at his phone, mumbling, 'Just a moment, please. Wait a moment.' Whether he was making or receiving a call, he started talking to someone, head bowed.

This attitude temporarily paralyzed the faculty.

"It's a lie!"

I yelled into the microphone I held.

"These are all fabricated photos! They're fake!"

But my voice didn't carry through the speakers. I realized too late that the broadcast head had turned off my mic.

"Please look at the student Hwang Eun-Seo standing here."

Only the president's voice resounded in the hall.

"Do you remember what Hwang Eun-Seo just said in his apology? He said, [I saw a classmate being bullied and did nothing]. [I even joined in with the others and participated in the bullying]. Do you remember?"

The students murmured.

"He tried to excuse himself by saying he was just 'involved' in the violence. That he wasn't the main culprit. Despite organizing the violent group himself, filming, and distributing the videos, Hwang Eun-Seo never admitted his wrongdoing until the end. He feigned sincerity in his apology to all of you."

All the students stared at me.

"Look at Hwang Eun-Seo's face. Remember his expression."

Yes.

It was the president.

"Remember Hwang Eun-Seo's logic. Remember his methods. Witness exactly how this person led the violence and tried to escape."

He was the one who plotted to hunt me down.

"....."

The president lowered the microphone. Wrapping his right hand around the mic, he turned to me and spoke in a voice only I could hear.

"Ah. That was exhausting."

His voice was so calm that I almost lost touch with reality.

"Anyway, Hwang Eun-Seo, your life is over. You'd be surprised at how many charges you've committed. Though you can't be locked up for your entire life since you're a minor, it's okay. We'll just socially annihilate you."

"You, you....."

"I had a hard time pretending to be your friend."

The president sighed.

"Really. I was too emotional in my younger days. Talking to you made me feel nauseous. It's good that my back doesn't hurt, but still, the world is too soft... Well, that's why I ended up in that college."

The president grumbled.

"Do you know? To serve society, you need a lot of money. Whatever you do, it's money, money. Planting trees or going to disaster areas, even caring for teachers, it all costs money. If I had known this during my school days, I would have..."

"You fucking bitch! What nonsense are you spouting!!"

I screamed, furious. Immediately after, I realized my shout echoed too loudly in the hall. I hesitated. Unlike the president's whispered nonsense, my outcry resonated powerfully.

"Yeah."

The president smiled.

"I said that nonsense so you would shout. Kid, you really took the bait."

Seeing him smile again, my head went blank once more.

"Probably right now, you think your connections... Hah."

The president covered her mouth with her left hand and chuckled.

"Ah, sorry. It's just funny."

This guy.

“Anyway, your connections won’t help you. Your girlfriend, was it? We negotiated various things in exchange for deleting videos involving her. Your ‘clients’ are all negotiating. Remember this. Those from well-off families don’t care about you. Their only concern is [not being mentioned in the case].”

Meanwhile, the broadcast head continued flipping through the PPT. The photos continued. The students went from murmuring to buzzing, and reactions like ‘fuck’ and ‘is he crazy?’ emerged from all over the hall.

“I’m sorry to Kim Yul, but... with my current status, this is my limit. It can’t be helped. Haven’t I always told you, Gong-Ja?”

The president smiled politely with his lips.

"People should do what they can."

At that smile, I snapped.

"Ah. If I leave this guy alone, the world will become dirtier. There will come a time when you meet such a person. If you meet such a person, don't regret it later, get rid of them quickly. It's better to act when you can, without regrets."

I screamed and rushed at the president. She didn't resist, instead slightly chuckling.

“Anyway. This is why you should raise children well, so your later years are comfortable...”

I swung my fist. I knocked down the president and pinned her. Screams came from behind, but I didn't stop. Bitch. You bitch! Because of you! How dare you do this to me! My life!

“Hey, Hwang Eun-Seo! Calm down! Teachers! Stop him!”

“Broadcast head! Stop it! Can't you stop filming right now?!”

“But, but yelling at me... I have to do this...”

My life!

[Clear conditions met.]

[Considering the peculiarities of this stage, a judgment is requested.]

I did my best... I may not have lived the best life, but I really did my best! Who here has worked harder than me! Who has tried to live life as earnestly as me!

[Judgment complete.]

[The Master of All Lives acknowledges 'Stage Clear'.]

No!

[However, 'Story of the City of Ascension - Side Story' will not be incorporated into the original history.]

No!

[Stage Clear.]

I can't accept it! I won't accept it! This is fraud! It's unjust! It's not right! Yes, it's wrong! It's about human rights! Everyone has the right to a fair trial... I'm a human too! This is wrong!

[Today, the 29th floor has been cleared.]

I feel wronged.

Pity me... Quick. Pity me, quick.

[The Master of All Lives announces on behalf of the tower.]

I...

[You've worked hard, everyone.]

I did nothing wrong.

[Although I may have been a bit biased towards you, it's nothing that other children wouldn't overlook. I'm more lenient with those who struggle.]

No wrongdoing at all.

[May fortune be with you.]

.

.

.

.

.

.

.

That was my first defeat.

".....!"

I quickly inhaled and sat up abruptly with a "huff!" My heart pounded furiously. Although this wasn't the first time I had completely immersed myself in a character, it was still hard to get used to the pain in my heart when returning to my senses.

Looking around, I found myself in a corner of the Great Library.

"Uhhh...."

"Ughh....."

The Constellation Killer and the Director also slowly sat up. For a while, the three of us just caught our breath. We didn't have the energy to do anything else. My mind was a tangled mess.

“Gong-Ja....”

It was only after more than 10 minutes that the Director murmured.

“Yes?”

“Come here for a moment....”

The Director weakly beckoned me with her finger. Something felt ominous. It reminded me of the fierce look in her eyes when we kids used to fight at the orphanage. I obediently went to the Director and knelt before him.

“Here I am....”

“In the ancient Spring and Autumn Period, there lived a man called Renzi Gu.”

I grew even more anxious.

The Director has a habit of beating around the bush when scolding us. She always gives us time to think after asking a question and takes her time to start when she's angry. As far as I remember, the story of 'Renzi Gu' was considered an S-tier warning among us.

“Yes....”

“You must remember the story I told you many times. He was the man who dug up the corpse of his family's murderer and whipped the bones until they turned to dust. But think about it.”

“Yes....”

“What if Renzi Gu was about to dig up the grave for revenge, and suddenly someone comes along and digs the grave for him, leaving the coffin outside? Would Renzi Gu be thankful for someone digging the grave for him, or would he be angry for someone touching the tomb he was planning to avenge?”

“Um....”

“Half of his revenge remained missing*, didn’t it?”

*The director says that half of the characters of the 4-character idiom, also known as a Chengyu, are missing (Chunmyo missing from Chunmyomun). This one in particular means to exhume a body for public flogging.

I stammered, confused.

“D-Director.”

“Go ahead, speak.”

“Am I in trouble because I tried too hard? Did I choose a method that was too self-sacrificing? Like, why don’t you take care of your own body...?”

“Gong-Ja, you’re an adult now. You should manage your own body, why should I interfere? Wasn’t it hard enough raising you? Do I have to worry about your upbringing too?”

The Director spoke harshly. It was remarkable. Remarkable in that the Director nonchalantly spoke like this, and my memory was remarkable for momentarily forgetting that she was always like this.

“I raised you to grow up strong. Pity is like a gift that feels good occasionally, but if you keep receiving it without discretion, it drains your energy and makes you weak. Gong-Ja, I don’t pity your life at all. Live as you wish to.”

-Indeed...

The Guardian Spirit muttered from the side.

-Seeing how this zombie brat turned out, he's been well trained right from the sapling...

Suddenly, I became curious about the current status of my orphanage mates. Han Feizi became a congressman, right? If I search online, will I find some dog videos?

“Gong-Ja.”

“Yes, yes.”

“If you hadn't given me the audio files or videos, I would have worked hard to... sorry, no need to apologize. You're an adult now. Right. I would have worked hard to screw over Hwang Eunseo. Why are you meddling with the revenge? Want to be scolded?”

No, I couldn't be scolded at this age! Especially not in front of the Guardian Spirit and Shiny!

“No. But I had to do something... I entered the stage a year earlier than you, Director. And, I was at 95% immersion. Doesn't that make a person a bit hasty and desperate?”

"....."

Hesitation.

The Director hesitated for a moment after hearing the words 'one year' and '95%'. Yes! As expected of the Director! He pretends not to, but he really considers others. I've grown up too!

"That's right, Director. You told us, you told me, to live as we want. When I fell into the stage, I did what I wanted. I followed your teachings."

-Indeed...

The Guardian Spirit muttered again.

-This kid's tongue must have been trained well. He's been trained to be shameless right from the sapling...

Then,

“Hm.”

The Constellation Killer stood up. Like someone who had a nightmare and shed tears, his eyes were moist.

"King of Death. You have made me understand and feel [Kim Yul]. I remember now. I learned a lot, but there's one thing I want to ask you."

The Constellation Killer looked directly at me, not wiping away the tears.

"What do you wish for me to do now?"

"....."

I opened my mouth.

"Kim Yul was a victim. He was murdered. And in his final moments, he left a will."

The one responsible for my death is you.

Don't forget.

You killed me.

+

Three sentences forming a grudge.

It was a scream left behind so that the murderers, the beasts, would never forget what they did. To suffer endlessly, forever.

"But."

I took a handkerchief out of my pocket and clenched it.

"You forgot."

The Constellation Killer tilted his head.

"What do you mean?"

"The lives sacrificed because you killed the Constellations. Countless humans from numerous worlds."

"You forgot."

The 50th floor achieved through a loophole.

There, the Constellation Killer had said,

『I suffer from amnesia, stranger.』

Not remembering the deeds committed.

『My mistake lies in two things. First, I didn't consider the possibility of new constellations being born in worlds where constellations disappeared. Second, I underestimated the fact that a dead constellation could curse the world.』

『The same error won't happen again.』

『I expressed my gratitude for this advice by offering a compensation.』

I clenched the handkerchief again.

"A crime committed unknowingly. Not intentional. Then you forget it, live on as if nothing happened. Did [Kim Yul] think the beasts who mauled him should forget him?"

"....."

"Those who tore Kim Yul apart are the worst scumbags. Constellation Killer. But your sins don't change because of that."

What I want is.

"Don't make the same excuses as those beasts."

For you to change.

To return from being a puppet.

To become a human, if possible.

"Look at those who wronged you. And those whose lives you wronged. Face them directly."

"....."

"Make your decision here. If you don't want to, I will never summon you again through Ghoul Reincarnation. And someday, I will find and destroy all your puppets. But if..."

"If..."

The Constellation Killer looked at me.

His blue eyes trembled.

"If I decide to face it, what happens?"

Whether it was traces left by someone who had been in class 2-5 at Shinseo High School or the Constellation Killer's own emotions, I couldn't tell.

So I asked.

"What would Kim Yul have done?"

"What do you want to do?"

The Constellation Killer opened his mouth.

"I want..."

Chapter 148:

Prologue (1)

Great Library of All Knowledge.

The shadows cast by the bookshelves intertwined, forming a complex web.

"I do not know."

The Constellation Killer's voice wandered through them.

"It's difficult. Hard to comprehend. Did I really kill that many lives? Are there really that many lives lost because of me? It's impossible to be responsible even for a single death, yet alone the people living in so many worlds..."

The Constellation Killer fumbled to pull out an old diary.

Like Kim Yul became a trace of the Constellation Killer, the Constellation Killer kept a diary even as his memories faded.

"Goddess of Protection, The Old Man from the Deep, The Follower of the Distant Eyes."

These were the Constellations the Constellation Killer had slain.

He softly recited the names, marked in red and lined across the pages.

"The Great Serpent Nurtured in the Seven Sounds, The Stork Roaming the Universe, The Witch who Perished in the Frosty Dawn, The Lion Dreaming of Annihilation, The Corpse Poison Flower, The Moon Engulfed in the Last Quarter, The Golden Dragon of the Great River..."

Names flowed on. The recitation seemed endless.

After naming hundreds of Constellations, the Constellation Killer slowly turned to face me.

".....I do not know. I cannot understand. But entering Kim Yul's body, feeling his resentment and curses upon the world, I empathized with Kim Yul. I agreed. Kim Yul wanted revenge on those who pushed him to this end."

The Constellation Killer paused for a moment.

"So it is."

He muttered.

"I, too, must be subject to the vengeance of those worlds."

Thud.

He closed the diary.

"Even if I end my life, it wouldn't be sufficient atonement. Eternal suffering. The worlds would only wish for me to suffer eternally. But suffering alone lacks meaning... How can I apologize to the lives already lost through mere suffering?"

I nodded.

"Librarian."

At my call, the Holed-Up Head Librarian peeked out from the bookshelf, his cheeks flushed red.

"Welcome! Unlike the previous Apocalypses, I couldn't directly observe your journey this time. I've just rushed through the newly added side story of [City of Ascension]. Ah, really..."

"Enough of that. Come here."

"King of Death, you grow stricter with me each day..."

The Head Librarian fluttered over.

"Here I am. What would you have me do? If you wish, I can..."

"Hand me the [Leafanta Aegim's Epic]."

"Ah... even though I said I would, do you know? The books in my possession are all my sacred relics. Only I can create such precious works in this world of All Knowledge. Treating these priceless books as if they are simply there for the taking is problematic..."

"Of course, I'll give it to you", he said, handing me the book.

"Constellation Killer."

"Hmm."

"This book contains your story. From when you first fell into another world, met the Goddess of Protection, became Leafanta Aegim, and then the Constellation Killer. Your entire life is recorded here."

"....."

"You may have lost your memories, but they aren't gone forever. Again. Regain them."

Silence fell in the library. The Constellation Killer wordlessly looked at [Leafanta Aegim's Epic]. The Head Librarian let out a small sigh, observing us both.

He immediately understood the meaning of my words.

The Constellation Killer did not.

"Again, you say."

"Yes. Just like we glimpsed into Kim Yul's past."

".....From the beginning?"

"From the beginning."

"To peer again into my life, spanning hundreds of years, from the very start."

"What you did, what you thought, the worlds you trampled, and the lives that existed in those worlds."

"....."

"The first step to everything is remembering. 'Do not forget.' That's what Kim Yul insisted with his life. You too, should stake your life on it."

Silence.

"I understand."

Silence.

"I judge it to be the right thing to do."

And more silence.

"....."

The Constellation Killer took [Leafanta Aegim's Epic] from me. To receive it, he had to put back his diary. Instead of the diary, filled with pages of day-by-day life, he now held the book that detailed his entire existence from start to finish.

"Indeed."

The Constellation Killer muttered, holding the book.

"Just repeating one's life is enough to turn the world into a simple hell. Does each person carry their own hell?"

He turned his head. There sat the director.

"Class President."

The director, called by this name, couldn't immediately respond. She just couldn't. In that silence lay decades of separation.

".....Yes. Kim Yul."

The Constellation Killer, called as Kim Yul, also couldn't immediately respond. He just couldn't. In that silence lay centuries of distance.

Decades endured by one, and centuries discarded by another, settled in the quiet air of the library.

"Kim Yul thought he wanted to forgive you."

The Constellation Killer spoke.

"And I, too, share the same thought as Kim Yul."

"I want you to be forgiven."

The director closed her lips.

The director closed her eyes. But can it be said 'the director closed her eyes'? Perhaps not. By then, the director could no longer control her body. It wasn't that she closed her lips, but her lips closed themselves; it wasn't that she closed her eyes, but her eyes closed on their own.

".....,"

A sigh close to a breath slipped through the director's lips. 'Thank you.' She could've said that. 'I'm sorry.' She must've wanted to say that. But the director held back all words. The unheld words flowed out as sighs.

".....I..."

The sigh was not words but fragments.

But somehow, I knew what picture those fragments wished to paint.

"I... just a little more..."

If I had lived just a little better.

If I had just a little more power.

If I was just a little smarter in my childhood.

".....!"

At that moment, I realized. A lightning-like tremor pierced through my entire body. The director's tightly closed lips, closed eyes, and the backs of her hands resting on the floor. The aged skin on her arms. The trembling of her whole stooped body. Seeing all this, I realized something.

'Ah.'

The director was screaming in agony.

'What I must prove.'

There are people in this world screaming in pain.

'What I want to prove.'

Among the chaos of beasts and humans, there are people, like isolated islands, whose screams occasionally reach my ears, whose suffering catches my eyes.

I just want to prove these screams.

'There are people here.'

My Demonic Heaven.

'There are people living here.'

The one who first wove the pattern of Demonic Heavenly God Art, the one who first preached the doctrine of shadows, must have felt the emotion I'm feeling now.

He was angry. He was sad. Seeing the starving, the thirsty, observing the nine paths of life and nine types of death, he must have felt the need to 'prove it.'

"....."

I want to prove it.

I want to tell everyone.

I want to etch into the world the existence of these people, that they cannot be erased.

'Do not forget.'

I want to encapsulate the director's current state in my

Demonic Heaven.

But not just that.

The dance of the children who laughed at me in the Hellfire Mansion, the wails of the Preta embracing the corpses of a mother and children in the center of the village, the figure of the master slashing away in the snow-wiped plain. Raviel. Raviel as well.

'Do not forget.'

The first form of Demonic Heavenly God Art encapsulated hunger.

'Now, it's time to encapsulate my Demonic Heaven.'

The first form with the children's dance.

The second form with Preta's lament.

The third form with the master's sword.

The fourth form with Raviel's sacrifice.

The fifth form with the director's silence.

'I want to encapsulate it.'

Can I do it? Can I encapsulate not just one person's life, but many?

'Even if it takes my entire life.'

Determination.

A purpose has been established in my life.

'Let's prove that people lived here. That people died here. Let's prove how they lived and how they died. Let's encapsulate the noise of the beasts and the screams of the people. Even if he laughed, let's capture the vibration of that laughter.'

But.

'Not yet.'

I still have things to finish here. Many things. Redefining the forms of Demonic Heavenly God Art from scratch is not fitting for my level, and it would take an enormous amount of mental strength and effort to possibly achieve it.

'...Yes. Let's not rush. Let's do what I can for now.'

I turned my head.

And looked at our observer.

"Librarian. No, Hamusutra."

The Head Librarian shivered, making noises and looking at the Constellation Killer and the director. Startled by my call, he flinched.

"Calling me by my real name. How embarrassing! Please call me by my alias."

"Allow the Constellation Killer to read [Leafanta Aegim's Epic] whenever he wishes. It doesn't need to be in the form of a stage strategy. Just like you observe the world, let the Constellation Killer do the same."

"Ah. Um. Hmm."

The Head Librarian panted heavily and pondered laboriously.

"For that, I'd have to share my authority... Perhaps appoint him as an Apostle. Hmm. While some Constellations create Apostles without hesitation, for me, it's... not really my style or preference..."

Of course, a character like the Head Librarian, known as the Holed-Up Head Librarian, wouldn't have followers or friends. Only strange servants like the Bookmark Maid.

"Don't you want to?"

"It's not that I don't want to..."

"Even though I gathered him as a ghoul, the other Constellation Killer is just a copy of the puppets from [Puppeteer's Parade]. What's the difference?"

"Hmm, well. There's no difference, but..."

"You decide."

"Decide, you say...?"

"You've loved the story of the Constellation Killer until now. But following your own words, there's now a fork in the road for the Constellation Killer. Two paths have emerged."

"A fork."

"Yes."

I met the Head Librarian's eyes.

"Route 1. In this route, the Constellation Killer never met me. There's no memory of it. He stays on the 50th floor as usual. Every week, when his memories accumulate, he goes out to hunt Constellations."

The Puppet Route.

The route where the Constellation Killer forever stages [Puppeteer's Parade].

"Route 2."

And the Constellation Killer who met me is here.

"Now, the Constellation Killer knows about Kim Yul. He has remembered. Starting from Kim Yul, he will slowly retrace the life of Leafanta Aegim."

It will be hard.

"He will reincarnate into the book, walking the path he has walked over hundreds of years, once again."

It will be painful.

"But in that route, I will be there, and the director will be there too. He doesn't need to swallow his entire life from the beginning. Slowly. Just as much as he can digest, one bite at a time. It's okay to rest along the way."

But that's the Constellation Killer's life.

Eventually something that will become Kim Yul's life.

"You choose the route for the Constellation Killer."

"....."

The Head Librarian looked at the Constellation Killer.

The silence of the Constellation didn't last long.

"Constellation Killer. And the nurturer of the King of Death."

The Head Librarian smiled and stretched his arms towards the Constellation Killer and the director.

That day, someone's epilogue might have ended.

"Would you be interested in working as a librarian?"

And someone's prologue began.

Chapter 149:

Prologue (2)

Now, let's talk about someone's prologue.

"Ah! It was a joyous and happy time."

In the Forbidden Book section of the Great Library of All Knowledge. After the other hunters had left, it was just me and the Head Librarian.

It seemed the Head Librarian wanted to bid me a personal farewell. Standing beneath the bookshelves that built walls like bricks of old hardcover books, he looked infinitely small.

"Do you know, King of Death?"

"What?"

"Happiness evaporates quickly."

The Head Librarian smiled.

"Happiness is loving this moment. Being helpless against the charm of the moment. Oh, the great nature of it. Moments are like a continuously flowing stream, floating my happiness like a fallen leaf on the water, bound to drift away."

The Head Librarian leisurely swirled his left arm.

Several volumes of Apocalypses flew together and gathered in one place.

Among them were Apocalypses I had conquered and others conquered by different hunters.

+

22nd Floor: The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon
(Genre: Martial Arts, Fusion)

23rd Floor: Chronicles of the Space Iron Knight (Genre: SF)

24th Floor: Daybreak Mountain Hut Diary (Genre: Mystery, History)

25th Floor: Tales of the Sormewin Academy (Genre: Romance, Fantasy)

26th Floor: Festival City Apocalypse (Genre: Sports)

27th Floor: Epic of Bakery Street (Genre: Cooking, Management)

28th Floor: Me and Our Scapegoat (Genre: Fairy Tale)

29th Floor: City of Ascension - Side Story (Genre: School)

+

“Wow, how beautiful... Not a bad [Book List] at all. Though not without its faults, compared to the book lists completed by warriors from other worlds. No, incomparably excellent.

Almost too precious to give as a gift.”

The Head Librarian's eyes sparkled like a child's.

Everyone seeks their own treasure in childhood. A fake gem made of transparent plastic, a red or black BB pellet among the white ones, or a crude but delicately fingered doll.

We always needed our secret treasures. The Head Librarian was admiring his own treasure.

"How were the hunters from other worlds?"

"Well, they usually picked one of two paths. Either choosing Apocalypses that were easy to conquer or those that would benefit the tower."

"Technically, we belong to the latter."

"Hehe."

The Head Librarian covered his mouth with his sleeve.

"You're being too modest. If it was just about clearing the floor, there was no need to solve the grudge of the Heavenly Demon. Do you know the simplest strategy?"

"What was it?"

"Hiding in a remote cave."

The Head Librarian lightly touched the Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon.

Suddenly, the surroundings changed. Whoosh! Light enveloped us. I closed my eyes briefly and when I opened them, the library had vanished. Instead, we were floating amidst a snowstorm on a snowy mountain.

-Just wait until those creatures die.

Unknown hunters were hiding in a cave on the snowy mountain. Wearing entirely different attire, I realized they were hunters from another world.

-It's not that hard. Just be careful of the zombies roaming around.

-Great! Let's all hang in there!

The Head Librarian looked down at them and said:

"A record from the distant past. Hunters who once challenged the Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon. They were from a tower in a world different from yours. They chose to hide until the Heavenly Demon and the Head of the Martial Alliance died."

"....."

"After 10 days from the start, the Head of the Martial Alliance dies. The Heavenly Demon goes mad. In her madness, she scatters her vital energy until she dies. Ta-da! Cleared!"

The Head Librarian playfully moved his fingers.

"Well, they had a bad location and got attacked by zombies and died. But the strategy itself wasn't wrong. Just waiting was enough to clear the Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon. The only things to prepare for were countermeasures against the cold, food supply, and the ability to stealthily avoid zombies and the Heavenly Demon. A suitable B-grade difficulty, isn't it?"

"....."

"But, King of Death, you didn't do that."

The Head Librarian looked at me.

Beyond his shoulder, a blizzard from the old days shimmered like a hologram.

"You always treated the characters as human beings. You did your best. You were angry and also saddened. You took the story of the Apocalypses as your own."

The Head Librarian moved his left hand and touched the Tales of the Sormewin Academy. Whoosh! The snowy scene vanished.

Now we were in the basement of the residence where Raviel stayed.

Raviel was standing there, and an unnamed man was kneeling, chained.

-This is a scam! It's a fraud!

The man was bloody, seemingly tortured.

-According to the strategy guide, you like white flowers! Why doesn't your favorability increase when I give you flowers every day, make your favorite food, and have pleasant conversations?! It's a scam! This ending makes no sense!

-Tsk.

Raviel clicked her tongue in disgust.

-Pathetic. Are all the apostles of the Constellations like this?

-Just fall for me! You're just a petty Constellation! Fall for me!

-...Is my world considered the universe's trash can by the Constellations? Throwing their garbage here one by one. Oh dear. It's hard enough to care for my people, and life is getting harder as days go by.

Raviel lightly poured poison on the man's head. His scalp began to dissolve.

-Aaaaahhh! Ahhhhh!

The man writhed in agony from the deadly poison. Raviel sighed deeply and left the basement. Boom. The door closed, and the scream stopped.

“This is also one of the things that happened in the past.”

The Head Librarian shrugged.

“It's difficult for a human to treat another human as a human. You accomplished that difficult task. I salute you for that. Although we might never meet again... always remember that I support you.”

“Won't we meet again?”

"Ah! I must now welcome warriors from other worlds."

The Head Librarian giggled.

"I can't always look after just you. The world is infinite, and towers are countless. Just like you, numerous warriors are climbing the tower right now! I must welcome them as agreed with the Master of All Lives... Ah, sorry. I can't say any more."

The Head Librarian extended his right hand.

"Well done."

He smiled gently.

"Now that I've shaken hands with my favorite character and recruited another as a librarian... oh?"

His words trailed off for a reason.

Squeeze.

The Head Librarian tried to release the handshake, but I didn't let go.

"King of Death?"

The Head Librarian tilted his head.

"Regretting parting with me? I'm flattered, but you've already conquered from the 21st to the 30th floors. Ah, a rest area will also be created on the 30th floor. There's a Revelation called [Resort City Story]. A paradise-like resort will be there, and I'll provide it as a service..."

I looked expressionlessly down at the Constellation.

"....."

The Head Librarian grew quieter.

"King of Death...?"

According to the Head Librarian's favorite expression.

"Why? I'm a bit scared..."

Today was the day Kim Yul and the director ended their long prologue and finally started the main story.

"Head Librarian."

But that's not all.

"There's something I want to ask before we part."

"What is it...?"

"You."

Since conquering the Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon.

"Do you have no meaning in life anymore?"

I've been waiting for this moment.

